We do not recall a period within our lifetime when people seemed so responsive to the gospel as they are now. We are in the midst of unrest such as we have never known before; but there is an underlying current of seriousness that is turning the hearts of people toward the sure things of faith. We hear of great congregations that are coming together to study the Word; genuine revivals seem easier to hold than for many years; every week we learn that scores and hundreds of people have united with the church; Sunday schools are making unprecedented gains; religious matters are being discussed in the secular press, and great leaders of industry are laying emphasis upon religion as the hope of the world. We shall be trifling with the greatest opportunity that has come to us in a generation if we fail to preach the gospel under such conditions as these. If we interpret the attitude of the people aright, they do not care for discussions of the problems of unrest from the pulpit, but they are hungry for messages from a gospel of reconciliation. If we preach the gospel, there are many who will hear gladly and yield themselves to the will of Him who alone is able to save.

HARD TO GET AROUND FACTS.

If those who are opposed to the Eighteenth Amendment and the enforcement of the Volstead Act could eliminate facts, they might be able to make a pretty good argument against the effectiveness of prohibition, but the facts are against them. Take Louisiana, for example; a gentleman who is in position to know whereof he speaks told us not long ago that the records of the courts show such a remarkable decrease in crime within the past year that it is altogether probable that the Constitutional Convention will be able to effect a considerable saving to the people by the reduction of the number of officials charged with the prosecution of crime. Thus it is that theory falls down before facts. Some "hard boiled" anti-prohibitionists will say, of course, that the decrease is not due to the elimination of liquor, but to some other cause; let them make out their case if they can. We are thoroughly convinced that a great deal of the opposition to prohibition that flaunts itself in our faces through the public press is a deliberate propaganda by the brewers and their friends to make possible a nullification of the law. The evident advantages of prohibition, both moral and economic, are too great to be denied or camouflaged. We can afford to stand by our guns and fight our opponents to the last ditch—and we will do it.

THE TYRANNY OF FORCE

We do not profess to be able to make good, at this distance, the merits of the controversy between the British miners and the Government which threatens to result in the greatest strike England has ever known; but we do profess to understand the merits of the controversy, the use of force by 20,000 workers to compel the Government to accede to their demands is a menace to the industrial life of the whole nation and is not to be justified on any principle of ethics that we know anything about. If men choose not to work, that is their affair; but if they deliberately undertake to stop all the wheels of industry, regardless of the untold suffering that will result to millions of innocent people, to gain their own ends, they have only exemplified the tyranny against which they claim to protest. Since all other means have failed to bring about co-operation between capital and labor, it is high time that the ethics of Jesus be tried. It seems to be more evident than ever that it is Christ or chaos."

THE CHURCHES STILL COUNT.

We sometimes hear the statement that the church has lost its power as an influence for righteousness in the life of the world today—and some people are silly enough to believe that the statement expresses a truth. To all such we commend the following editorial uttered in the New York Evening Post of March 10: "More than $3,000,000 has been given to the starving Chinese by the American churches. The church is decadent, we are told, but the first thought of any one who represents some pressing public need is to enlist the church's strength. 'Why Smith Doesn't Attend Church' is an inexhaustible theme for magazine symposia, but men who want to interest Smith in China or Poland do not rest until the churches call a Save China Sunday, or Help Poland Sunday. Materialism is supposed to be corroding the fine self-abnegation of an earlier day. But, after the church treasures stand up and show that home missions, foreign missions, freedmen's aid societies, children's societies, temperance boards, Bible funds, and a dozen other activities survive and grow, there comes a long list of announcements like that of the $3,000,000 gift to China. The Christian denominations, with 12,000,000 members, are the greatest single group of organizations in America. Their membership includes in nearly all communities the most public spirited and benevolent citizenship. Whatever the perils threatening church strength, the churches still play a notable role in charitable endeavors."

BISHOP PAINE'S "McKENDREE."

By Payton A. Sowell.

When age and actual superannuation finally came, and home and desk were extinct, in the old form, then one way and another the books scattered into the hands of preachers, white and colored, in Tennessee, Alabama, Florida and Louisiana. One day this winter, looking at the dust-covered fragments, my eye lighted on Paine's "McKendree."

Turning my thoughts backward, I asked, "How long has it been since you read those volumes?" I took them down, and blew the dust from them, and, looking at the back fly leaves, I read, written with my own hand, "Culleoka, Jan. 17, 1877," and "Feb. 2, 1878." Turning to the fly leaves of the front of Vol. I, I read, "Jo. M. Sowell's book, bought of Rev. Robert Paine Gray in 1870—May 8th." Rev. Robert Paine Gray was the son of Rev. Mark W. Gray, one of Tennessee's sturdiest mediocre preachers; and young Gray was a nephew of Rev. Robert J. Harp, one of the charter members of the Louisiana Conference at its organization seventy-five years ago. All these are gone "behind the sunset." Eighteen hundred and seventy was the year I enlisted in the itinerant career.

I realized that it was a possibility that I had not read these volumes for forty-three years; at least, there was no record to the contrary. Then I asked in my mind, "How many preachers are there who have been itinerants for thirty years who have never read Paine's 'McKendree' at all?" And I asked in my mind one more question: "How many (or how few) preachers have sold as good a book to a Methodist—a local preacher—in twenty years?" Rev. Robert Paine Gray was our circuit rider, and he brought this book to my father in his saddle-bags. He was my pastor when I applied for admission on trial at Pulaski, in 1870.

Who of our members—or local preachers—for twenty years know anything of Paine's "McKendree?" or of McKendree at all? Baptists are Baptists wherever you find them; if any difference, more so now than twenty years ago. A friend of mine, a Methodist editor, remarked to me: "A gentleman said, 'I had decided to leave the Methodist Church for another, convinced that Methodism stood for very little; by chance, I found McTyeire's History: I was charmed with surprise at its heroic achievements—I remained a Methodist.'"

When I opened Vol. I, my eyes focalized on the engraving cut. Though all my life I have been accustomed to look on the picture of McKendree, and for years have had hung on the walls of my place of dwelling remarkable portraits of Asbury and McKendree, painted on wood somewhere in England—yet it appeared to me as I looked with my old "Methodist" eyes—eyes and Methodism inherited from my grandfather, a North Carolina local preacher—McKendree's face never appeared half so attractive. The large eyes, softened by the devout spirit within him, the overhanging brow, the soft hair, the benignant face, seemed to have caught a new charm.

Then I read Bishop Paine's dedication of this wonderful story of a more wonderful man. How appropriate! "To the Methodists in America this volume is respectfully dedicated." How few of the ten millions of Methodists in America, in 1921, have ever read this story, or really know anything of the remarkable man—America's first gift to the Episcopacy? I have heard men, scarcely known through the borders of their native State, speak in depreciating terms of the ability of Asbury and McKendree, as men "out of date." So men sometimes thus speak of Grant and Lee.

If these papers induce some young Methodist preacher to ask some old superannuate to lend him Paine's "McKendree," I shall be repaid. What a rich treasure Methodists have in their history and biography! Alas, how few of us dig into these mines! Whatever we in our time have come to, there is ground to cover our faces and realize a sense of shame, if we do not appreciate the record made by Methodism from 1784 to the time McKendree died.

At the time the great heart of Asbury asked of God for the continent of America, there then were six hundred Methodists; when his great soul broke out of his tired and worn body there were two hundred thousand. They were won in his lifetime, at the cost of his riding on horseback and in cumbersome conveyances three hundred thousand miles, and preaching over eighty thousand sermons. Who would not count it an honor to belong to the church he gathered as sheep from the wilderness?

Much of our interest centers in the times and circumstances in the midst of which the achievements were wrought. To cross the continent in an airplane, or walk on foot, are quite different matters. The hero of whom Bishop Paine wrote was born in King William County, Virginia, in the country about forty miles from Richmond, July 6, 1757—one hundred and sixty-four years ago. Not a foot of railroad, not an inch of telegraph, not a steam-propelled vessel, not a yard of telephone wire! His father moved to Sumner County, Tennessee, in 1810—one hundred and eleven years ago. It is easier to go round the world now than it was for John McKendree and his son James, and the other children, to reach Sumner County.

William McKendree began the life of an itinerant preacher in the Methodist Church in 1789—one hundred and thirty-two years ago. The Revolutionary War had been fought and young McKendree had made a brave soldier under Washington. The largest cities of that time would be counted only as towns now. The populations of the East Coast country were peering over the tops of the Allegheny and Cumberland Mountains towards the rich wilderness of the limitless West. They must move over roads that would be called paths now. Few were the comfortable homes, from Virginia to Illinois, in which the Methodist preacher could find food and shelter. If these physical athletes had no higher task, the mere traversing of the boundaries of the settled regions of the United States was a stupendous undertaking, up to the ascension of McKendree on March 5, 1835. How much more when it is considered that Asbury crossed the Allegheny Mountains sixty-two times! McKendree must have crossed them even oftener. But the physical was the least of their great service. I often find myself asking in my spirit: "Do our bishops to-day, as they sleep on comfortable berths on highly finished and furnished Pullmans, dream of these two feeble heroes who paved the way and laid wide and deep the foundations of Methodism, while they cross these same mountains at twenty-five miles an hour?" Perhaps they, like many a well-paid preacher, with handsome church and comfortable parsonage, put up a piteous complaint of over-work and weariness. We forget the toil and weariness of Asbury and McKendree, so feeble and frail they must often be lifted from their horses and placed upon them by others; yet riding on until disease and exhaustion set them on the "pale horse with his rider."

McKendree's first sermon was in the residence of Robert Venable, of Prince Edwards County, Virginia; through the forty-seven years of his ministry many hundreds of residences were used as churches, and scores of them were the log-houses of the early settlers.

We not infrequently flatter ourselves by saying: "Those times were times of physical stress only. There were no great problems, no great issues; there was no modern infidelity; there were none of the 'isms'; all that was required of preachers then was, to be good horsemen, have good digestion, relish hard fare, endure bodily strain, be good swimmers, excel in loud exhortation." How we miss the mark! They were men of faith; they were men of mental poise; they knew what argument was; they had an experience that was real and as positive as it was real; they spoke with a voice whose tones ranged from the soft pathos of a lute to the ring and volume and startle of the trumpet; they set up the Methodist Church over the destruction of the infidelity of Tom Paine; they won to Christ the rustic and hardened (hardened by the very environments) pioneers of the wilderness. All disposition to discredit the mental ability of the preachers of that day, including McKendree, falls flat in the face of the facts. They were welcomed and heard in New York, Baltimore, Richmond, and many of the largest cities of that period. More, they prepared and wrote papers on the most vital questions of the church. They grasped in their minds and defined and defended the great facts and doctrines of the Scriptures. They were men among men.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION.

By Rev. J. Tillery Lewis.

There are but two kinds of education: 1. Christian; 2. Pagan. I will describe pagan education, first, then describe Christian education.

Pagan Education.

Pagan education is altogether materialistic and selfish in its nature. It is projected upon the basis of evolution, rather than upon the basis of faith in God. I mean by evolution, here, the teaching of certain schools that all things visible were evolved, of themselves, from protoplasm, or something else quite as absurd. The devotees of this teaching boast of the monkeys as their ancestors. To teachers of this class, there is no God save Nature.

The inevitable philosophy of life gotten from teaching of this kind is the doctrine of the "survival of the fittest." With them, "might is right, and the end justifies the means." It is, "Every man for himself, and the devil get the hindmost." Of course this class of teachers desire to discover and teach the laws governing in the natural world. But their policy is always to use said knowledge in the business of furthering their own interest, with that of their friends, to the exclusion of all others. Even this class of reprobates recognize the superiority of brain, or mind, over matter, hence their desire to establish and maintain schools.

Since the teaching of Germany for the past forty years has been of this pagan type, it is no wonder that they were altogether conscientious in their deeds of crime committed against civilization during the great world war. Many of us, who have been taught under Christian education, were amazed at the doings of the Germans, and could not understand how alleged civilized people could act that way. To them their deeds were right before their God, for they have no God save the God of force. There is the same difference in thought, as to right, between the man trained in Christian and pagan teaching as there is between the thought controlling the mind of the law-abiding citizen over against the thought of the hardened criminal. The hardened criminal believes he has as much right to the fruit of your labors as have you. If he can outwit you, or overpower you, he believes he has that right. The only thing he has to dread is the law of the State. He does not believe in the existence of an invisible moral government, at the head of which is an omnipotent, omniscient and omnipresent God, to whom he must at last give an account of the deeds done in the body. If he can escape the hand of civil law, he believes he has a moral right to rob, steal, murder, or do anything else that he wills to do. Germany is that kind of nation, therefore Germany thinks she is being sinned against because she is expected to pay for the damage she has done to mankind. And, too, the pity of it is, Germany is honest in that thought. Her whole trouble lies in the fact that her education was pagan rather than Christian. Of course, any person who would say that all Germans are pagans, and that none of them are Christians, would necessarily brand himself as either a knave or a fool. So, too, any who say that all Methodists are Christians are either knaves or fools. We have Methodists, many of them in our colleges, who are pagans. Of course no teaching can emanate from any human being save that kind of which he is himself the living exponent; therefore all our Methodist colleges that have pagans in their faculties, are, to that extent, destroying the work of Christian education.

Christian Education.

Christian education begins, continues and ends in faith in God, through Jesus Christ, by the power of the Holy Spirit. Christians believe that within certain limits God used the law of evolution, just as he uses other laws, the law of gravitation for instance. But Christians see and believe in a personal, living, loving God, our Heavenly Father, as the first great cause of everything visible and invisible. This God of the Christian is a personal God. He has personal attributes, some of which are omnipotence, wisdom, omnipresence, love, righteousness, etc.

Christians believe that the Bible is the revealed word of God and that man is the distinct work of God's hands. Christians believe that man was made as pure as are the angels of light, but that through the temptation of the devil Adam sinned and, with Eve, was cast out of the Garden of Eden. Christians believe in the teaching of Scripture as to the history of redemption, and the history of Israel, from the curse pronounced upon Adam, Eve and Satan down through the fulfilling of prophecy to the end of time. Christians believe in the total depravity of the race and that no man can be saved only through faith in Jesus Christ by the power of the Holy Spirit.

Christians believe in the doctrine and teaching of the law of love. Christians practice that greatest of all laws: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy soul, with all thy mind and with all thy might, and thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." The thirteenth chapter of I Corinthians is the law by which the life of Christians is controlled.

Since the foregoing is true, it is not strange that the Allies showed themselves more humane, more kindly in thought, and more horrified at the awful atrocities of the war than did the Germans. There are more people in England, France and the U. S. A., by far, who are Christians than there are Christians in Germany.

Christian education looks to acquainting the pupils with the laws governing in God's material world, all right, but it does more than this. It also looks toward helping all students get a firm hold upon God through faith in Jesus Christ. God is ever held out to the students as mankind's great benefactor and loving Father, but the student is made to know that God's favor can be looked for only upon the ground of obedience to material and spiritual laws. He is made to realize that if he has made a mistake by projecting his life upon the basis of violation of God's laws, there is forgiveness for him through Jesus Christ, and that in Jesus God will give him another opportunity.

Necessarily the doctrine of "self-sacrifice" has a large place in the teaching and lives of Christians. A Christian college teaches that all Christians owe to God a life of service. I, nor any other man, owes the world a life of service. All Christians, however, owe a life of service TO GOD. Christian education keeps that fact before the mind of those who are under her instruction. All that God requires of us, in return for the great redemption Christ purchased for us, is that we present our bodies as living sacrifices, holy, acceptable unto Him. When we do that thing, God will keep us unto everlasting life and use us where our service will count the most for His glory. The service rendered to God by Christians is in this world and to humanity all right, but it is rendered by Christians in the name, and for the glory of Jesus Christ. For it is Christ who worketh in us both to know and to do the will of God.

MEMORIAL SERVICE AT MERIDIAN, MISS., IN HONOR OF REV. H. B. WATKINS.

Dear Brother Carley: I am sending you herein the program of the union memorial service held in honor of our departed Brother H. B. Watkins, who passed away between 4 and 5 o'clock last Friday morning. The end came suddenly, but he was fully ready. I suppose you have had a full account of the funeral Saturday, at 10 a.m., conducted by Rev. J. T. Leggett and Dr. D. C. Hull, with the Methodist preachers of the city acting as pallbearers with four of the stewards of Central Church. The rest of the official board and ministers of other denominations were honorary pallbearers.

A large audience of citizens from all walks of life, both Saturday and Sunday, attested the high esteem in which Herbert B. Watkins was held. Great quantities of lovely flowers voiced the love of many friends and organizations. The body was carried to Jackson for interment to be near many of his kindred. We, his fellow-pastors in Meridian, have suffered an irremediable loss. He was our Great-heart, whose memory will linger with us till we meet on the other shore. The union memorial service was held at 3:30 p.m., Sunday, and was attended by a great throng of people. Bishop W. F. McMurry presided and paid a beautiful tribute to Brother Watkins. All Meridian is mourning the loss of this noble man.

JAMES L. SELLS.

Following is the program of the union memorial service in honor of Rev. H. B. Watkins, held Saturday, April 2, at Central Church, Meridian, Miss., Bishop W. F. McMurry presiding:

Hymn 593—"Servant of God, Well Done."

Prayer by Dr. A. A. Little, First Presbyterian Church.

Scripture reading by Dr. E. J. Willis, President of the Ministers' Association.

Address by Bishop W. F. McMurry, followed by short addresses by Dr. E. J. Willis, of the Christian Church; Dr. R. J. Bateman, of the First Baptist Church; Dr. A. A. Little, of the First Presbyterian Church; Dr. J. H. Boosey, of the Episcopal Church, and Rev. J. H. Mallard, of the Presbyterian, U. S. A.

Song—"Shall We Meet Beyond the River?"

Rev. J. L. Sells spoke briefly for the Methodist preachers.

Doxology and benediction by Bishop McMurry.

HOW BROTHER ROBINSON, OF ROSEDALE, DID IT.

The following letter reached the office of the Methodist Orphanage promptly. Brother Robinson, our pastor at Rosedale, is the district agent of the Greenville District, and one of our most enthusiastic Orphanage workers. Last year his pastoral charge refurnished the nursery, and through his efforts the Greenville District raised between $1000 and $1200 to refurnish the little girls' dormitory. His plan for an Easter offering was most unique. We wish to give it to the public.

B. F. LEWIS, Sup't.

Rosedale, Miss.,

March 21, 1921.

Rev. B. F. Lewis,
Jackson, Miss.

Dear Brother Lewis: I am so elated over the success of our Easter offering that I am writing you the full details, and if you can find space in "Our Home," I would appreciate its being published, as well as an article to the Advocate. While it may not be as large as some contributions that you will receive at this time, still, when you take into consideration the size of our Sunday school, I think it is remarkable.

You will remember that our Sunday school lesson of a month ago was taken from the parable of the "talents," so I decided that I would give each member of the Sunday school a talent according to their respective ages.

I gave to the Primary class, ten cents a pupil, to the boys' class, otherwise known as the "Ford Class," twenty cents and to the adult classes fifty cents, and told them to invest these talents, bringing in the increase on the Sunday as our offering to the Home.

To the ladies' class, Mrs. Lord, teacher, I gave $5.00 and from that they brought in $10.00.

To the Ford Boys' class, I gave $1.25 and their increase was $12.75. Mrs. Robertson, teacher.

To the girls' class, Miss Tille, Montgomery, teacher, there was given 50c and their increase was $11.52.

To the primary class, Mrs. Austin, teacher, there was given 50c and their increase was $9.95.

To the primary class, Mrs. Caldwell, teacher, 60c was given and their increase was $5.17.

We depended on the Senior Bible class to furnish their own talent and they brought in $17.70, making a total of $102.77 increase in their talents for the whole Sunday school of 71 members, all departments counted.

One little fellow of seven years and ten cents, which he invested in shoe polish and told that he realized $1.35 by shining shoes; he told all his patrons that he was "shining" for the Home.

There are other instances of pluck and perseverance, but if I should enumerate them all it would require too much of your time and space. I thought you might be interested in this plan. I have listed each pupil's talent and increase and will announce the results of each respective class on next Sunday.

Our offering from the morning preaching service was $29.50, making a total of $132.27, for which amount I am enclosing my personal check.

Trusting that there will come an abundant offering from other churches and Sunday schools in the district and Conferences, and wishing you many returns of the Easter tide, I am

Yours for the Home,

JNO. W. ROBERTSON.

THE GENERAL MINUTES FOR 1920—A RECORD OF ACHIEVEMENT.

By Curtis B. Haley, Assistant to the Book Editor.

The 1920 volume of the General Minutes of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is now on the press. The editors of this annual register of the church have done everything in their power to expedite its publication, but some of the Annual Conference secretaries are slow to hold the law of the Discipline (paragraph 61) and thereby greatly delay the work on the Minutes. We remind them of their duty in various ways by letter, sometimes by word of mouth, and occasionally by wire—but, in spite of all this, the last two reports for the General Minutes of this year did not reach this office until February 22, four months after the adjournment of one of the Southern Missions and three months after the adjournment of one of the important Annual Conferences. This copy was sent to the printers the same day that I was received. We take occasion of this writing to exhort all secretaries of Annual Conferences to forward to this office, on the blanks provided by order of the General Conference, the full returns of their several bodies immediately on the adjournment thereof. We deplore the fact that some of the secretaries wait for the printing of their own minutes, which, aside from the great probability of typographical errors in printing the statistical tables, is not in conformity with the law, and causes serious and unnecessary delay in the central statistical office, where all membership and other statistics are verified on adding machines before going to the printer. If the secretaries of Annual-Conferences will promptly furnish the material, the editors will promise to have the complete copy of the General Minutes in the hands of the Publishing Agents early in the month of January of every year.

We are very happy to announce that the General Minutes indicate an advance along many lines. The exact increase in the membership of the church, including ministers, is $2,605, the total being 2,267,117. The pastoral charges number 172 more this year than last, with 190 more houses of worship. While there is a decrease of 135 in the number of Sunday schools reported, there is an increase of 2,854 Sunday school officers and teachers and 90,201 Sunday school scholars. We have 686 more Epworth Leagues, with 26,782 more members. Our Woman's Work shows an increase of 784 societies, 28,479 members, and $644,615 in collections, the total amount contributed by the women being $2,048,862. There is an increase of nearly $18,000,000 in the value of church edifices and parsonages. There were 127 deaths among the traveling preachers, while 264 were admitted on trial. There was an increase of 33 effective preachers and a loss of exactly 100 local preachers. There was a gain of $71,147 in the contributions for Conference Claimants and the Superannuate Endowment Fund, but we regret to note that there was a decrease in all of the other benevolent contributions. This decrease is to be attributed to the Centenary Collections, which are not reported through this office. However, as the Centenary money goes into the various channels of the different church boards, it can hardly be asserted that there is an actual falling off in any of the benevolences. There was an increase of $1,378,639 in the amounts paid pastors and of $116,168 in those paid presiding elders—an increase of practically twenty per cent for the entire church, or an average increase over the year 1919 of approximately $220 for each effective preacher. By reference to the General Minutes for 1894 (the first time the figures on the support of the ministry were tabulated) it appears that the average salary was then only $436, whereas it is now $1,403. There was contributed for all purposes the sum of $33,825,970.

Let us thank God and take courage. The increase in the membership of the church is the largest in our history. Shall we be content with a smaller increase than one hundred thousand for the year 1921? United and sustained effort should be directed to the attainment of this most desirable end.

This volume of the General Minutes contains 349 pages and is replete with information concerning all of the Conferences and Missions of the church. There are memoirs of the preachers who died during the year, tributes to Bishop Key, the names and addresses of all the Bishops, Editors, Agents, Secretaries, and Superintendents of the various Boards and Departments of the church; also a complete directory of the traveling preachers and local preachers serving as supplies, arranged alphabetically by Conferences. All statistics are given in condensed tables and compared with the grand totals of the previous year. Every presiding elder, many of the preachers, and all active stewards should invest $1 in a copy of this permanent history of the church for the year 1920.

A NOTE FROM REV. J. M. MORSE.

Dear Brother Carley: We have held four district setting-up meetings this week—one in the Meridian District, two in the Seashore District, and one in the Hattiesburg District. Interest in the Christian Education Movement is increasing. The presiding elders are under the work, the laymen are interested, and the matter is getting on the hearts of the people. I am under obligations to all.

Rev. H. J. Moore and Rev. L. Carley showed me especial favors—I enjoyed my stay in the parsonage at Ellisville. Jack insisted that when he went to school to me, I could beat him at the game of marbles; Jack beat himself when he married.

At Seminary I preached three times for Brother

Westbrook. He and his good wife know how to take care of a tired secretary.

Brother Watkins, at Quitman, is interested and is working for a complete victory for the Education Movement. It was a great pleasure to be in his home. Friday night and Saturday were spent with him.

Two services were held the Sunday I spent on the Matherville charge with Brother Yeager. He has his work at heart and will go over the top.

Monday night I was with Brother H. A. Wood, at Quitman. He is on the alert, ready for the conflict. No one who knows Wood doubts that he will succeed.

I had a conference with Ferguson, Hays, and Lavis, three of our preachers in Meridian; also with Rev. P. D. Hardin, the presiding elder. They are planning to bring Meridian to the front in the work, and knowing them, as I do, to be thoroughgoing men and preachers of ability to do things, I do not feel uneasy. I was in the home of Brother Hardin, and am rejoiced that he is so far recovered as to take up his work on the district. It makes me more determined to live close to my Lord as I meet with these brethren and others who assure me that they are praying for me and the work. May God bless them all.

J. M. MORSE,
Educational Secretary.

CENTRAL CHURCH.

Central Church at Meridian has had its twentieth pastor, seventeen of whom have gone by the inexorable law of death into the beyond, and we now as a church and people in the midst of the deeply felt loss of our pastor, Rev. Herbert B. Watkins, wait with Methodist loyalty and Christian fidelity the appointment by our Bishop of one who is to succeed him.

In the many gone years, during the administration of the various preachers, each with his own peculiar temperament and individuality, there have been epochs and natural demands that have required prayer, sanctified common sense and adaptability. The lives and labors of each have all gone into the fabric and have helped to make Meridian Methodism as it now stands.

Little did Central Church's first pastor, Rev. O. B. Thomas, dream, when he had the oxen to haul from the hillside then in the country (its main timbers all being hewn lumber) the old frame church, that that building was to be the progenitor and is in fact the mother of all the five Meridian Methodist churches of to-day. That old first Central Church, with its large belfry and great bell, was in its day not only a thing of admiration, but its very walls were resonant with an air of sanctity and sacredness.

In the long list of pastors are to be found young men, middle-aged, and old men, each having wrought during his pastorate as he, under divinely sought guidance, deemed for the best. Brother Herbert B. Watkins came at a markedly epochal time. The church planned, projected, finished and paid for under the pastorate of Rev. Warren C. Black, which was acknowledged at that time among the first, if not the first, in our Conference in point of architecture and finish, was in ashes.

From the time of its burning, other pastors had wisely thought it an inexpedient time to attempt the erection of a new church building. After patient waiting and careful surveying and prayerful planning, Brother Watkins, despite the war, high cost of labor, and all material, decided to build, and that at once, a new, modern, up-to-date edifice. The building stands to-day in its completion a result of that bold, determined daring. In great unanimity as a church, and in fact as an entire city, the Bishop and Annual Conference were petitioned to give Brother Watkins back to us for the sixth year. His aim, hope and energies were concentrated in clearing its indebtedness, and during the year to free it from all encumbrances, and to see it finally dedicated.

The record of his five years stands upon our local and Conference Journals second to none. With emphasis, it will ever be said he wrought well. We plan, but God orders. The call to come up higher has been heard and answered.

When a young man I stood by the bedside of what seemed the real translation of his grandfather, Dr. W. H. Watkins. With all below the line of his heart benumbed or paralyzed, he said: "The mind, the immortal part, is unclouded. In my Father's house are many habitations, homes. I am kept here finishing the character. He builds the home. He lets me linger here in this bodily stress in order that my character may be the better rounded. It may be I have been an impatient man."

A precious legacy has ever been the love and friendship shown to me as a boy and young man by Dr. Watkins. He requested me to "kiss his brow," and then gave to me words of cheer, and just a little later, with a glorified countenance, he went home, and I am sure has waited through the long years for Brother Herbert Watkins, and they are together now, each in his specially prepared character mansion.

Eulogies from churches, civic organizations, intimate friends, brethren, and even strangers to him are to be heard on every hand.

At a largely attended meeting of the church officials, just held, with a loss too keenly felt for words to be called into usage, a resolution was unanimously adopted:

"With prayerful submission and Methodist loyalty, we do leave the selection of his successor to the presiding bishop, pledging our faithful support to whomever he may send us."

To the wife, children and loved ones of Brother Herbert Watkins, down in the heart's oratory, where only God can enter, I will ever hold his memory, and there, in communion with Him as the best I may, will ask for the divine protection and guidance of each one and a final passage to the home where he has gone.

In love, prayer, and sympathy,

L. P. BROWN.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Brother Carley: Will you kindly say in the Christian Advocate that we have felt it necessary to withdraw the date for the Christian Workers' Conference, to have been held at Grenada College just after the Commencement exercises? We are doing this regretfully, but have been urged thereto from a number of considerations.

A number of the brethren have suggested the wisdom of not having the meeting this year, and we believe our action will be approved by all the brethren who usually attend the meeting. And we think the Board authorizing the payment of the necessary expenses will be pleased with the action.

R. A. TUCKER,
J. T. LEWIS,
W. W. WOOLYARD,

THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE STANDARD TEACHER TRAINING SCHOOL.

To Brookhaven, Rev. W. H. Lewis, pastor, J. M. Wood, superintendent, belongs the honor of electing the first representative to the Standard Teacher Training School, to be held in Jackson, Miss., June 7-14. The Teacher Training Class, Miss Bigham, teacher, will send Miss Maggie Flowers to this school, paying the enrollment and board fee of ten dollars, and all railroad fares. Thanks to Brookhaven.

Let others do likewise.

B. F. LEWIS, Secretary.

MERIDIAN DISTRICT CONFERENCE NOTICE.

The preachers of the district have noted the time for this conference, May 3-4, in the Advocate Directory. This is written to ask for election of delegates and for their names promptly. Shubuta anticipates your coming, and will make you welcome. Send in the names as fast as elected, and your homes will be ready when you come.

W. H. HUNTLEY.

Shubuta, Miss.

WAITING

Millions Are Waiting For Death—or Your Aid

China is now in the grip of the world's greatest famine. Six million lives must perish before July 1st unless aid reaches them from America. Tragedy eclipsing anything seen during the World War now stalks the length and breadth of the five most populous provinces of North China. Thousands are dying every day, amid scenes of unspeakable suffering.

AMERICA'S OPPORTUNITY

The Church of Christ in America was never presented with such an opportunity for exemplifying the spirit of Christ. For many years we have been sending the Word of God to the people of China, and that Word says:

"Whoso hath this world's goods, and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him? My little children, let us not love in word, neither in tongue; but in deed and in truth."

WHAT YOUR PENNIES CAN DO:

- 1 cent buys a meal.
- 3 cents saves a life for a day.
- $1.00 saves a life for a month.
- $2.00 saves a mother and baby a month.
- $5.00 saves a family for a month.
- $10.00 saves a mother and babe till harvest.
- $25.00 saves a family till harvest.

YOU MUST HELP

This message comes direct to you. As a Christian man or woman, living comfortably amid plenty, knowing nothing of the pangs of hunger nor lack of food, the Word of the Lord comes directly to you in this moment of China's supreme need.

It has not been given to you, as it has been to Bishop W. R. Lambuth, to see the actual suffering. The bishop saw, and his message to American Christians is:

"China famine situation entering the acute stage. Crisis comes last of April. Thousands dying. Manchuria can furnish food and Chinese government transportation. Reliable committees distribute relief. The imperative need is money. Exchange is in our favor; one dollar will now save a life. America has saved millions already. Prompt action will save two million more. Missionaries, merchants and Chinese are working together. They will do their part if we do ours. God calls; humanity appeals. It is up to us to finish the task. We must do it in the next sixty days."

Let no man or woman who professes to love God fail to heed this cry of a people in the last throes of distress.

What Does Education Cost?

Higher education costs three times as much as the student pays for it. That is, to each dollar which the student pays in fees, the college adds two in paying the actual money cost of his instruction. Thus every educated person owes two-thirds of his education to other people.

The Church cannot afford to change this arrangement. To ask our boys and girls to pay the full cost of their training would make education the exclusive possession of the rich. It would slam the door of opportunity in the faces of unnumbered thousands of our very best. In one generation the Church would be without preachers and missionaries and the world without great leaders.

Large Endowments or Certain Death

This means that all the educational institutions of the Church must be heavily endowed--that the income from permanent funds may enable them to train the youth of the land. If they are forced to depend upon uncertain and precarious gifts, which may be reduced or swept away at any moment, they cannot be great and permanent.

Columbia University each year serves more students than all the schools and colleges of the M. E. Church, South, in America combined, because it has the largest endowment in America; because its endowment alone is greater than the total endowments, buildings, grounds, and equipment of all the 90 institutions of the Church combined.

For educational permanency, influence, service, and greatness we must endow.

A TRUE FAIRY TALK.

Did you know of the house
Where the ginger-snaps grow?
Where tarts for us children
March out in a row?
Where wishing is having?
Where— isn't it grand?—
Just up in the garret
Is real Fairyland?
Where youngsters can caper
And romp and halloo,
For they always do right
Whatever they do?
You don't know the house?
Then, O, deary me,
I'm sorry for you;
Why it's grandma's, you see!

BOB'S APRIL FOOL

This is the true story of how our Bob April-Fooled Uncle Ted. Bob isn't a boy, as you might think from the name. He's a little fox terrier, with one brown ear and a brown tip to his tail. Bob is a very bright dog. We think he's the brightest dog in town, but I'll tell you the story and you can judge for yourself.

Uncle Ted is a lawyer. Maybe that's the reason he's so hard to fool. Anyway, we three boys each tried it and none of us could catch him. When I say "we three," I mean Joe and Jimmie and myself. I'm Jack. Uncle Ted calls us "the Three Jays," because he says we chatter so. Uncle Ted likes to tease, but we don't mind, for he's the jolliest kind of an uncle. Mother says that's because he hasn't forgotten what it means to be a boy. Some men do forget, she says.

But about our jokes! I tried mine first. Uncle Ted always eats an orange for his breakfast. April Fool morning I picked out a nice-big one and cut it in two, scraped out the inside and put the empty halves together so carefully that you could hardly see where they came together. I put it at Uncle Ted's place as Nora always does, then we boys waited.

When Uncle Ted came in he said good-morning to us, then he unfolded his napkin and took up his fruit knife. We boys were watching all the time. Then he laid down the knife and took out his watch.

"I'm a little late," he said. "Please bring my cereal, Nora. I think I won't have any fruit this morning."

His face was just as sober, only his eyes were dancing. Then he passed the plate over to me, holding it very carefully.

"You better try it, Jack," he said. "It looks like a juicy one."

"I guess I'll have a banana," I said; then everybody laughed and Joe hollered out: "April Fool yourself, Jack!"

He needn't have been so quick to laugh at me, for he had no better luck himself. As it was Saturday we didn't have to go to school. Along about ten o'clock, when we were sure Uncle Ted would be in the office, Joe went over to the telephone in the hall. Jimmie and I stood right by him to see how he would come out. He was going to pretend he was Miss Lucy Grey calling up Uncle Ted. He had been practising so that his voice sounded almost like a girl's.

He called, "1250, please."

Sure enough, Uncle Ted answered.

"Is this Mr. Burroughs?" said Joe.

He started in all right, but just at the end, his voice went up in a kind of comical squeak. He said afterwards that it was because Jimmie and I laughed, but I think it was because he was excited.

We heard Uncle Ted say: "Yes. This is Mr. Burroughs. How are you, Joe? Pleasant day for the first of April, isn't it?" And before Joe could say another word, he had hung up the receiver.

Jimmie and I danced up and down and yelled "April Fool! April Fool!" Joe didn't like it very well. It's strange how much different you feel when the joke is on you than when it's on other people. Mother says that's human nature.

Jimmie is only four, so we had to plan something simple for him. This was it. The Herald boy comes about half-past five every night, just after Uncle Ted gets up from the office. Jimmie usually runs out into the hall to get the paper, for he likes Petey Evans, the boy who brings it. We planned to have Jimmie bring in a week-old Herald.

It all happened just right. Uncle Ted had settled himself in a big chair before the fireplace. Nora had turned on the lights but hadn't pulled down the curtains yet, because, though you couldn't see to read inside, it was still quite light out-of-doors. The bell rang and we heard the boy call out, "Herald!" Jimmie went to the door, and in a minute he came running in with a paper that we had left on the hall rack.

He went up to Uncle Ted and said in his cunning little voice, "Here's your paper, Uncle Ted."

Uncle Ted started to hold out his hand. It looked almost as if he were going to be caught at last, and we had our mouths all open to say "April Fool." I think he was kind of sorry to disappoint Jimmie, but he looked at Joe and me, then he said: "Thanks, old man, but I read the paper coming up on the car."

Then he picked up Jimmie and swung him to his shoulder. Joe and I made a dive for them both and we had a regular frolic.

After a time we settled down. Jimmie lay on the rug, and Joe and I curled up at opposite ends of the big settle by the big fireplace. Uncle Ted lay back in his chair, with his legs stretched out to the fire—Uncle Ted's legs are pretty long.

Suddenly Bob trotted in from the kitchen, where Nora had been giving him his supper early. Bob has a particular chair in every room, and in the living room it happened to be the one Uncle Ted was sitting in. Bob came up in front of him, sat down on his hind legs, and looked at him appealingly; then he wagged his tail, but Uncle Ted didn't stir. Then Bob gave a little whine, but still Uncle Ted paid no attention. At last Bob gave it up and went over to the hearth rug, where he snuggled up to Jimmie. Every once in a while he would look up kind of wistfully at Uncle Ted.

Suddenly he jumped up and seemed to be listening to something, then he gave a sharp little bark and made a bee-line for the window. He put his front paws on the sill and began to bark furiously. He barked and barked and barked and barked. Jimmie ran to the window to see what the matter was. Finally Joe and I both got up and Uncle Ted followed us.

"What in creation is he barking at?" he said. "It must be Ross Johnson's bulldog."

When we had all reached the window, all at once Bob dropped down, turned like a flash, and before any one of us could say "Jack Robinson," he was across the room and up in Uncle Ted's chair. We all stared for a minute, then Joe sang out, "Why, he was just April-fooling Uncle Ted."

Then we all clapped our hands and yelled, "April Fool!" as loud as we could.

Uncle Ted laughed louder than any of us. "The little tyke!" he said. "Well, he beat you boys, anyhow."

But we didn't care, because Uncle Ted had been fooled, and we were beginning to be afraid he wouldn't be.

Bob just twisted around and put his head down on his paws just as he always does, then he opened one eye kind of slow-like and winked at Uncle Ted. He really did. We all saw him.

Uncle Ted laughed again and said to Jimmie: "Jimmiekins, run out into the hall and bring in a package you'll find in my overcoat. There's no April Fool about that."

There wasn't either, for it was a box of candy, the kind mother lets us eat. We all had some, even Bob, for he likes candy, too.—Mary Wells, in The Christian Register.

THE CHESTNUT BOYS.

In a warm little bed, in a little green house, Mother Nature had to let three baby boys safely away for a long sleep.

The house was not like the one we live in, for it had one tiny room, with no windows, and the door was fastened so tightly that no one could get in or out.

For many, many bright sunny days the little boys were sleeping, and all this time they were growing a little larger and a little larger, just as you are growing.

But by and by the days began to grow cooler. The green leaves put on their autumn dresses of red and yellow, and came rustling down from the tree to play with the wind.

Then the babies stirred in their little bed, for the Wind was busy painting in brown their green house, and he whistled so loudly at his work that they heard him in his dreams. Close behind the Wind came his friend Jack Frost, a rough little fellow. Gently he knocked at the door of the house, and softly he whispered, "Come out, little boys; come out and play with me!"

But Mother Nature only tucked her babies more snugly into bed, and answered: "No, not yet, dear little ones; sleep a little longer."

Then Jack Frost went away to play with the red and yellow leaves; but soon he came flying back, calling, "Come out for a frolic with me, boys; come out for a frolic!" And again Mother Nature answered, "Not yet, not yet! my children!"

Again came Jack Frost and knocked very loudly at the door; "Come out! Come out!" he called. And the little brothers cried: "Yes, yes, dear mother; let us go and play with Jack Frost and the Wind!"

Then the mother answered: "Yes, for you have grown to be big boys now and it is time for you to go!" So she unlatched the door and opened it wide, and out the three hurried. But soon they found that the big world was not at all like their warm, soft little house. The Wind blew and whistled around them and made them shiver; and Jack Frost was a rough playfellow, though he meant to be kind, and they soon grew weary and called to their mother: "Dear Mother Nature, we are tired, put us to sleep again!"

Then the mother spread over them, where they lay on the ground, a warm covering of "red, and yellow and faded brown."

By and by she heard their sleepy voices: "Kind mother, we are cold!"

Then Mother Nature sent a soft white covering of snow, and wrapped them in it so nicely that they hardly had time to murmur "Thank you, good mother," before they were fast asleep.

And there they will stay, till the warm sun and the gentle breezes and the soft rain wake them in the sweet springtime.

Can you guess who the little brothers were, in their snug, warm house?

They were the Chestnut boys, and the brown hurr is their little house—Helen Louise Towne, in the Kindergarten Magazine.

North Mississippi Conference—Rev. J. H. Felts, Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, Rev. J. W. Dorman.

DIRECTIONS.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after three or four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise, use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least an inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

Editorial

"WHEN CROSSROADS CROSS AGAIN."

If any of our readers have not yet seen "When Crossroads Cross Again," we hope they will write at once to the Board of Finance, 510-13 Security Building, St. Louis, Mo., for a copy—it will be sent free of charge.

"When Crossroads Cross Again" is a story which appeared in Collier's National Weekly, January 29, written by Rupert Hughes, without any thought, so far as we know, of the work our church is trying to do toward making adequate provision for the support of our superannuated preachers and the widows and dependent children of deceased preachers; yet, if Mr. Hughes were officially related to that work, he could not have written more powerfully or more appealingly. So clear is its presentation of the need of so many of these veterans of the Cross, that Dr. Luther E. Todd, Secretary of the Board of Finance, sought and received generous permission from the publishers of Collier's to reprint the story in pamphlet form under the auspices of the Board. It is a good story—worth reading for the story-interest alone—but it is more: it is a challenge to the sense of justice of every member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Get a copy of the story and read it.

THE NEW ORLEANS DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The New Orleans District Conference met in Bogalusa, La., on Thursday and Friday of last week. The report of the secretary, Rev. A. J. Gearheard, will appear in due time, but we cannot refrain from making brief mention of so delightful an occasion. The entertainment was perfect, from the time the railroad officials had the train stop at Fourth Street for the convenience of the delegates on arrival, till the parting word was said by the pastor at the station on Friday afternoon. The entire membership of the church in Bogalusa seemed to have a part in the generous hospitality that was extended, and the meals, which were served in the beautiful Y. W. C. A. building, were a succession of banquets.

The attendance, both clerical and lay, was good, and the program, under the efficient direction of the presiding elder, Rev. J. G. Snelling, was carried through without a hitch. Inspiring sermons were preached by Rev. W. L. Duren, Rev. E. N. Evans, and Rev. R. H. Harper. The reports from the pastoral charges were all encouraging, marked progress being indicated in all lines of church activity.

Rev. A. J. Gearheard was elected for the tenth year in succession as secretary of the conference. We venture the assertion that there is no better secretary in the connection; and appropriate resolutions were passed in recognition of the service he has rendered in this capacity for such length of time.

Delegates were elected to the Annual Conference as follows: G. W. Rowbotham, Edward Alvis, Mrs. J. A. Alford, S. H. Meyer, W. L. Ellis, W. H. Jennings, K. I. Bean, and Mrs. J. D. Rumph. It would be hard for any district to choose a stronger delegation.

Slidell was chosen as the next place of meeting, Covington, Parker Memorial, and Felicity also being placed in nomination.

IN DUE TIME.

The pressure upon our space during the progress of the Christian Education Movement is so great that we find it impossible to publish communications in hand as promptly as we should like to do; in due time, however, we hope to find space for them. We are doing the best we can under the circumstances.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. J. C. Jackson has been placed in charge of the Campiti charge, Alexandria District, Louisiana Conference. He is on the ground and at work.

Rev. J. T. Abney writes from Gallman, Miss.: "We have here a very fine people to serve. The outlook for a prosperous year is encouraging."

"Things are moving excellently with us at Hermanville," writes Rev. C. Y. Higginbotham, of Hermanville, Miss.

The First Methodist Church of West Monroe, La., Rev. H. W. Ledbetter, pastor, issues a monthly bulletin, which is full of interesting information.

The Easter services at Franklin, La., where Rev. Jno. F. Foster is pastor, were attended by an unusually large congregation. The offering for the Orphanage amounted to $312.

A post card from Rev. C. P. Jones, our pastor at Fayette, Miss., dated Chicago, April 4, brings the information that Brother Jones has enjoyed his visit to that great city.

Rev. H. J. Maddox, of Silver Creek, Miss., has a pretty heavy work—seven appointments stretching sixty-five miles from north to south—but he reports that everything is moving along well.

A son was born to Rev. and Mrs. J. Cude Rousseaux, of Spring Hill, La., on March 29. He has been named Ralph Asa. May God's richest blessing rest upon the little one!

Dr. F. M. Parker, of the Louisiana Conference, dean of Emory University, is giving all his spare time to work in the interest of the Christian Education Movement. Dr. Parker is one of the great men of the church.

A note from Rev. Chas. D. McGehee, our pastor at Fredericktown, Mo., informs us that one thousand people were present at the service on Sunday, April 3, which was observed as "Student Volunteer Day."

The people of the Trout and Goodpine charge, Louisiana Conference, are right up to date with their payments for the support of the ministry on a largely increased assessment. Rev. A. M. Shaw is the popular pastor.

Rev. Hilary S. Westbrook, of Seminary, Miss., writes that the work of his charge is moving along well, with constantly growing congregations. On April 3, Rev. J. M. Morse, Conference Secretary of Education, was with him and delivered three inspiring addresses.

We learn through her pastor, Rev. Leon I. McCain, that Sister J. W. Birch, of Hammond, La., has been reading the Advocate for more than sixty-five years, and that she values it highly as a means of grace. May the blessings of heaven rest upon her!

The general officers of the National W. C. T. U. have issued an absolute denial of the charge that there is any plan to launch a campaign against tobacco or in favor of Sunday "blue laws." The only campaign which is being waged by the organization at this time is one for membership, the goal being a doubled membership this year.

Our work at Oakdale, La., where Rev. J. L. Evans is pastor, is in fine shape. Finances for preacher and presiding elder are reported in full to date. The Sunday school, under the superintendency of Brother Collier, is doing good work. A large Bible class, taught by the pastor, has three Chinese members.

There has been marked progress on the Seashore District, Mississippi Conference, this year. There have been nearly two hundred accessions to the church since Conference, pastors' salaries have been increased $3000 or more, three churches have been painted, and several thousand dollars have been raised for churches and parsonages.

The Jackson District Conference, Mississippi Conference will convene at Brandon, at 9 a.m., May 10. It is the editor's fault that this announcement has not been made sooner, the efficient presiding elder, Rev. M. L. Burton, having furnished us the information some weeks ago. By some mishap, the letter containing the information found a place in the wrong pigeonhole in our desk. We make due apologies to all concerned.

Rev. Leon I. McCain recently assisted Rev. R. M. Brown in a good meeting at Pickering, La. Rev. R. T. Ware, of Mooringsport, La., led the singing and held the children's services. Among other results of the meeting, eighteen people entered into the tithing covenant, and eight family altars were established. Brother McCain states that Brother Brown is doing an unusually fine work on the Zwolle charge.

The Commission on Relations with Religious Bodies in Europe, of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, desires to receive information regarding ministers, officials and laymen representing our churches who expect to be in Europe during the present year. This information should be sent to Rev. Charles S. Macfarland, General Secretary, 105 East Twenty-second Street, New York City.

Rev. James H. Felts, presiding elder of the Greenville District, North Mississippi Conference, informs us that Rev. Julian S. Duncan, who has been pursuing a course of study at Emory University, has been appointed pastor of the Duncan and Hillhouse charge, and that he will be on the ground as soon as the school year closes. Brother Duncan is a choice young man, the charge is a splendid one, and this appointment is a very happy arrangement.

Rev. N. E. Joyner, pastor of First Church, Baton Rouge, La., paid the Advocate office an appreciated call last week while the editor was attending the New Orleans District Conference. He was in the city to be with his son, Calvin, during a slight surgical operation. This splendid son of a noble father, after graduation from Tulane University this year, will go to China as the representative of the Board of Missions to supervise as civil engineer the great amount of construction work being done in that mission field. His headquarters will be at Soochow.

We learn with great sorrow of the death of Mr. John T. Atkinson, at Dinuba, Calif., on March 28. He was a younger brother of Rev. C. D. Atkinson, pastor of Parker Memorial Church, this city. Born in Senola, Ga., he moved with his parents to Ruston, La., in 1885. In 1890 he moved to Goliad, Texas. Later, he married Miss Lilla Taylor. Their home was blessed with three sons and four daughters. Mr. Atkinson was a faithful member of the church. He went to California recently for the benefit of his health. The immediate cause of his death was influenza. We extend sincere sympathy to the sorrowing members of his family.

Dr. R. A. Meek, of Sardis, Miss., writes: "In my article entitled 'The Neglected Man of Methodism,' carried in your excellent paper of April 7, there appears the expression, 'Satan must be depended upon,' etc., when it should have been, 'Satan may be depended upon,' etc. The use of the former auxiliary affects the meaning of the sentence. Otherwise, I should not bother you with this correction. Few journals are freer from typographical errors than the Advocate." We thank Dr. Meek for calling attention to this error. His "copy" was perfectly plain—but some strange things happen sometimes with the types, and the proof reader misses some very evident errors. We appreciate, too, his commendation of the general typographical excellence of the Advocate.

An event of unusual interest to all those connected with the Advocate office, as well as to many others, is the approaching consecration of Miss Clara Chalmers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. O. Chalmers, to missionary work at the meeting of the Woman's Missionary Council now in session at Richmond, Va. Miss Chalmers, after graduating from the high school in New Orleans, was employed in the Advocate office for several years. She is a graduate of Athens College, Athens, Ala., and of Searritt Bible and Training School, Kansas City, Mo. For two years she has been teaching at Whitworth College, Brookhaven, Miss. She is thus splendidly equipped, not only by character, but also by training, for the noble work to which she has devoted her life. Brother Chalmers has gone to Richmond to be present at the consecration service on next Monday.

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: Rev. A. A. Simms, Johns, Miss., 4; Rev. W. M. Young, Leland, Miss., 2; Rev. J. O. Bennett, Colfax, La., 2; Rev. J. E. Cunningham, Aberdeen, Miss., 2; Rev. H. J. Maddox, Silver Creek, Miss., 2; Rev. M. A. Massey, Fannin, Miss., 4; Rev. P. O. Lowrey, Indian Bayou, La., 2;

A STATEMENT BY THE COMMISSION ON WESTERN ASSEMBLY.

Commissioners representing the Annual Conferences of Missouri, Oklahoma, Texas, Louisiana, and Arkansas met in Ft. Smith, Ark., March 17, and effected a temporary organization with Rev. T. F. Sessions as chairman and Rev. J. B. Swinney as secretary.

After informal discussion it was unanimously decided that it was desirable that an Assembly west of the Mississippi River should be established for the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in these States, and that the Assembly should provide for the promotion and co-ordination of the recreational and cultural summer activities of our Sunday school, Epworth League, Missionary and Educational organizations on a large scale and in such a manner that the popular needs of the greatest possible number may be met.

It was agreed that an investment of a half million or even a million dollars would ultimately be necessary and that development should depend on the funds that may become available, and, while the early establishment of the institution is desirable, that all propositions should be carefully considered and the financial interests of the church fully safeguarded.

As it is known that many communities desire to secure the Assembly and are expecting to submit propositions for the location, the following tentative requirements are suggested:

1. A suitable site for permanent buildings is necessary, and additional land for residences, encampment and development is desirable. A large body of land is preferred and it should be so situated that it may be completely under control and free from questionable or unfavorable environment.

2. First-class sanitary and climatic conditions are necessary, and attractive scenery and opportunities for proper summer sports and recreations are highly desirable.

3. Accessibility and railroad and turnpike advantages will be considerations, as well as pledges of co-operation by railroads and other transportation organizations.

4. An abundant supply of pure drinking water is necessary, and water for bathing, boating, and fishing is desirable. The possibilities of developing a lake and water-power will be considered.

5. Provision for light and electric power will be considerations.

6. Local facilities for buildings for assembly and housing will be considerations, and it should be understood that the cost of living is an important question, as it is desired to bring the benefits of the Assembly within the reach of all good people.

7. Bonuses of land and cash will be considered, and, other things being equal, will have much weight.

8. The exact methods of financing the enterprise will be carefully worked out and submitted to the patronizing Conferences for approval.

Permanent organization was effected by the election of Rev. A. C. Millar as president, Rev. T. F. Sessions as vice president, and Rev. J. R. Abernathy as secretary-treasurer, and these officers, with Rev. George S. Sexton and Rev. J. B. Swinney, were constituted an executive committee and instructed to publish this statement, receive propositions, secure all necessary information, visit locations, and at such time as may seem proper submit these propositions and details to the Commission, with the understanding that the Commission will then take up the whole question of location and financing the enterprise.

Five type-written copies of each proposition should be sent to A. C. Millar, 200 E. 6th Street, Little Rock, Arkansas. As it is desired that the Executive Committee should meet in June, propositions should be in by May 15, 1921.

It was the belief of the Commissioners that by wise management this enterprise may be made the greatest of its kind in all the Southwest, and it is desired that every opportunity be given to each interested community to present its advantages so that the best possible place may be selected.

The following Commissioners were present: Rev. J. W. Sims, Chickasha, Okla.; Rev. G. S. Sexton, Shreveport, La.; Rev. D. H. Hotchkiss, Navasoto, Texas; Rev. T. F. Sessions, Georgetown, Texas; Rev. J. B. Swinney, Windsor, Mo.; Mr. L. D. Murrell, Marshall, Mo.; Rev. J. H. Ball, Shawnee, Okla.; Rev. J. R. Abernathy, Okmulgee, Okla.; Rev. F. S. H. Johnston, Conway, Ark.; Rev. A. C. Millar, Little Rock, Ark.; and Mr. G. C. Hardin, Ft. Smith, Ark.

A. C. MILLAR, President.

JACKSON DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Jackson District Conference will convene in Brandon, Miss., at nine o'clock a.m., Tuesday, May 10. The first day will be devoted to the general business of the district, the second day to Christian Education and the Sunday school work, and the third day to missions and the laymen's work.

The brethren are requested to elect their delegates and forward their names to Rev. J. G. Galloway, Brandon, Miss., and to the undersigned, at 126 Adams Street, Jackson, Miss.

M. L. BURTON, P. E.

HOUMA DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Houma District Conference will convene at St. Martinsville on May 6, as you have noticed in the last issue of the Advocate. Will all the pastors kindly send me the names of delegates from each charge not later than the 25th, as this will facilitate the work of our committee on entertainment? I hope we shall have a good delegation from each charge. Come to old St. Martinsville and enjoy yourselves!

A. J. MARTIN, Pastor.

TO THE PASTORS OF THE SEASHORE DISTRICT.

Dear Brethren: It is just two weeks till district conference. If you have not done so, please elect your delegates. Send names to me, and to Rev. L. L. Roberts, at Columbia, Miss.

Committees are as follows: License to Preach, and Recommendation for Admission on Trial—J. D. Ellis, H. J. Moore, and E. J. Coker; for Deacon's and Elder's Orders—B. E. Mlegs, C. M. Chapman, and H. C. Castles. Other committees will be announced at the Conference.

Brethren, bring your Quarterly Conference records for examination.

FANNING THE FLAMES OF PREJUDICE.

By Robert B. Eleazer.

Any effort among us to fan the ready fires of race prejudice cannot be too greatly deplored or too vigorously discouraged. It is un-Christian, un-democratic and un-American, short-sighted and discreditable to the last degree.

We fear that the recently revived Ku Klux Klan is distinctly of this unfortunate character. Certainly, however lofty its purpose, it is fraught with great danger. As a secret organization, operating under cover, it suggests too much the methods of the mob that sets aside legal guarantees and processes, and metes out justice according to its own ideas. Even though it should never take a questionable step itself, its very existence affords a convenient shield for terrorism and crime on the part of any who may be looking for the opportunity. We are told that the name of the organization has been used more than once for purposes of intimidation and that in one case dynamitings followed shortly afterward. The Klan insists that it had nothing to do with these occurrences. In that case somebody used it as a convenient cover for crime.

Thus, giving the Klan credit for only the best intentions and the most scrupulous regard for law, it must still be evident that its very existence constitutes a peril.

There have been conditions under which the "vigilance committee" performed a valuable service. Where there existed no machinery of government, no constituted authority for the preservation of order, the citizen's committee organized for public protection is a beneficent necessity. It is hardly to be believed, however, that the organizers of the Ku Klux Klan will discredit the South by alleging that such a condition exists here to-day.

Besides, the "vigilance committee" operated publicly and in broad daylight. Conditions that justified it at all, justified it fully. When the time came when it could not longer go openly about its work, its mission was ended, because a higher authority had come into existence. As we see it, the very fact that the modern Ku Klux Klan appears to function largely in secret, under cover of masks and darkness, is evidence enough that it is not needed—that there is a higher authority which is all sufficient, if properly supported.

It would seem, too, that any organization devoted to the preservation of law and order might find it a worthy and sufficient mission to supply the needed support openly and in the sight of all men. Thus would it accomplish its high purpose, and at the same time avoid the obvious perils involved in clandestine operations.

ANNIE NELL PATRICK, the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Patrick, of Johns, Miss., was born Jan. 6, 1916, and departed this life Feb. 2, 1921. Her death brought great sorrow, not only to the home, but to the community at large. Though young, by her cheerfulness and loving disposition she had won her way into the hearts of the people and was much loved by all who knew her. She loved the church and wanted to go to church, even during her illness. We will see her no more, in this world; but we think of her quite often and only as the ideal, for she was so good, sweet and pure. Weep not, loved ones, as those who have no hope, for it will not be long until you can join her with the happy throng, in Heaven above where all is peace and love. Her precious little body was laid to rest in John's Cemetery, in the presence of a large company of people; and the grave was covered with flowers as an expression of love for her. May God bless and comfort the loved ones.

RESOLUTIONS.

Mrs. J. H. Singletary, of Florence, Miss., died Feb. 12, 1921, after a short illness. The following resolutions were unanimously adopted by the Missionary Society of the Marvin Methodist Church, Florence, Miss.:

Whereas our greatly beloved sister and fellow-worker has been called to her everlasting home. Resolved that we bow in humble submission to the will of our Heavenly Father who doeth all things well. We testify to the beautiful Christian character of our sister and her faithfulness to duty; That we extend to her family our deepest sympathy in this time of their grief; That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon our record and one sent to the family.

"EFFICIENCY WEEK."

The Whole Church in Training For Christian Service.

By Rev. W. P. Gordon, Clay, Ky.

In January, 1920, I became deeply conscious of the need of more intelligent consecration on the part of myself and the congregation I serve. The great themes of prayer, stewardship and life service kept impressing themselves upon me until I began casting about for a method of bringing them to the attention of the church. The thought occurred to me: We have revivals to reach the unchurched; why not have one for the church?

With that idea in mind I began building a program covering a week, to be called "Efficiency Week." The first three days were given to the subject of prayer. The speaker was a very fortunate selection and gave us a series of sermons so helpful that the congregation was greatly moved. The following two days were devoted to stewardship, and the last three days of the week to life service, the speaker in each case being signally successful in presenting his theme. Tracts were distributed at each meeting bearing on the subject treated, and cards were given to those who desired to sign for stewardship, prayer covenant, or life service. Many signed for stewardship and prayer, and a number spoke to me about life service.

Throughout the week two services were held daily—afternoon and evening. Forty minutes before the hour for the evening lecture six mission study classes were conducted—one for each principal group in the church. The men studied "Christian Americanization;" the women, "Money, the Acid Test;" the League, "Ancient People at New Tasks;" the Intermediates, "An African Trail;" the Juniors, "Called to the Colors;" and the primaries had "Mook" read to them. In these classes we had an average daily attendance of one hundred. Each class chose sides and conducted an attendance contest, which augmented the enthusiasm by the spirit of generous rivalry.

A great deal of advertising was done in advance by means of posters, form letters, post cards and handbills, and on Friday before our first session, we gave a banquet where all of the congregation came together. When the "eats" and toasts were disposed of, "Efficiency Week" was laid on the hearts of all present and an urgent invitation given.

We were highly pleased with the results. In fact, we were so pleased that we put on a similar program the latter part of October, but on a larger scale. The program called for a larger outlay of labor, money and speakers, but it was more than worth it. In this program we tried to find an objective for the consecrated purposes engendered by the previous program and chose such subjects as Christian literature, woman's activities, the Sunday school and the church, Christian citizenship, the public school and the church, activities of young people, and brotherhood. We were again very fortunate in the selection of speakers, for each was thoroughly familiar with his theme and every message reached the heart.

I am offering my presiding elder a plan to have eight programs like this going at different places in the district at the same time and have our speakers come on the Chautauqua plan and thereby save expense and secure better speakers. With a competent director for the district and the support of the pastors, there seems to me no reason why the plan would not be a success.—The Missionary Voice.

A COLLEGE RALLY AT MOORHEAD, MISS.

The Red Cross room of the beautiful new Methodist church in Moorhead, Miss., was the scene of a very delightful banquet Thursday evening from 6:30 to 8 o'clock. The banquet was given by the Methodist people of Moorhead, together with the help of their loyal friends. It was given for the Millsaps and Grenada college graduates and ex-students who reside in the western half of the Greenwood District.

These college boys and girls congregated in Moorhead for a college rally in behalf of the Christian Education Movement of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. These rallies are being held all over Southern Methodism, that spirited enthusiasm may be aroused for their Alma Maters and that the successful conclusion may be the raising of $33,000,000 for Christian education.

There was a splendid attendance upon the rally in Moorhead, and from the very beginning to the last minute every one seemed to be in the highest spirit, no one sounding a discouraging note as to the raising of the $33,000,000.

The following guests at the banquet registered: Mmes. L. N. Townsend, J. J. Breland, Vanlandingham, J. D. Wroten, L. B. Flannery, A. L. Seals, W. L. Graves, C. A. Davenport; Misses Etta Mae Jones, Katherine Tucker, Martha Duberry, Hely Ray Holsler, Lorce Atkinson, Edith Watkins, Whitford Price, Nannie Pearl Scroggins, Manette Harris, Mary Wright, Eva G. Sanders, Eva Bright, Onnie Bright, Ruth Graves, Annie Mac Patterson, Powell, and Ruby Nail; Messrs. S. H. Caffey, N. J. Golding, J. S. Savage, J. T. Lockhart, J. C. Wasson, Thomas House, Bob Pisacery, Ira Morgan, Joseph Pennebaker, C. A. Davenport, Austin Tackett, Vaughn Harrison, J. D. Wroten, W. E. Hobbs, J. J. Henry, W. L. Graves and Elbert Henry; Drs. W. R. Bourne, field agent for Alabama and Mississippi in the Movement; J. R. Countiss, president of Grenada College; D. M. Key, of Millsaps College; J. S. Vanderver, superintendent of the Sunflower County Agricultural High School of Moorhead, and U. S. Wasson.

The following program was rendered, being interspersed with jokes, toasts, etc.: Word of welcome on behalf of the Methodist Church, J. D. Wroten, toastmaster for the occasion; welcome on behalf of the town, Dr. U. S. Wasson, leading physician of Moorhead; Response, Hon. J. S. Savage, prominent lawyer of Belzoni; vocal solo, Miss Mary Henry, of Moorhead; an address by Miss Onnie Bright, district director for Grenada College. Miss Bright showed that her heart was in the Movement, and her work is showing up in the district, and will no doubt result in the lining up of all the Grenada College girls in this district for the Christian Education Movement. One of the inspiring talks at the banquet was given by Prof. J. S. Vanderver, superintendent of the Sunflower County Agricultural High School in Moorhead. Prof. Vanderver discussed "The Right and Wrong Kind of Education," showing that we must have Christian education. No wonder that our county school is making such strides in this thriving little city when such a man is at its head. The senior class of his school was present at the banquet, and by their words showed that they had, in their school course, caught his spirit as to education.

From the banquet the guests went to the main auditorium, where the public had gathered in great numbers, and before that splendid audience addresses were delivered on Christian Education by Drs. Key, of Millsaps College; J. R. Countiss, of Grenada College, and W. R. Bourne, of Birmingham, Ala. Their speeches were clear-cut, spirited, right length, and very optimistic.

Between these speeches, Misses Katherine Tucker and Martha Duberry, both popular students in Grenada College, furnished vocal and instrumental music for the audience.

Owing to the good that came both to Moorhead and the visitors on account of this rally, owing to the splendid high school here, and to the convenient location of Moorhead for this half of the Greenwood District, it was voted that this get-together meeting be made an annual event. In good spirit, the meeting ended with the benediction by Rev. W. L. Graves, of Sunflower, Miss.—Commercial Appeal.

FROM COLLINS, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: This is to let you know that we are in the midst of a great revival here at the Methodist church in Collins. Rev. Jas. V. Bennett, our efficient Conference evangelist, is doing the preaching. We had an overflow crowd out last night for two weeks.

Let me incidentally tell you, we had about 250 out at prayer meeting the other Wednesday night.

Pray for us that we may have the greatest year in the history of our ministry this year.

Epworth League.

THE EPWORTH LEAGUE AS A TRAINING SCHOOL FOR YOUNG PEOPLE FOR DEFINITE SERVICE.

When we look over the statistics of the church, and see the number of young men and women who have volunteered for life service through the Epworth League, we can not help but believe the League is an excellent training school.

In the League we learn to speak in public, which factor is needed at one time or another in a person's life. We also learn to pray in public. If a person does not learn to pray in public when young, he seldom learns when old. We ascertain how to give systematically, and by so doing never regret what we have given. We discover the needs of the world and how to meet them, in the study of missions, and in social service, which makes us more willing to help. Once the Epworth League of a certain college organized a mission study class, and from that class five of the seniors were called for definite service.

Any one who has been trained in public speaking and praying and in giving systematically, and one who studies a mission study book is in an attitude in which God may call him. —Carrie McKay, in Arkansas Methodist.

ing the malls reminding the males of the day and hour. Our Woman's Missionary Society entertained the brethren at the Jefferson Cafe. Mr. J. A. Anders, son of Rev. Geo. D. Anders, was appointed minute man, and Mrs. J. J. Davidson, likewise, church director. Both are capable and convincing in their methods of approach, which insures that the Education Movement will be given fair play and a square deal in our local church.

John G. Wooley, LL.D., came, talked, and collected for the Anti-Saloon League.

Mrs. J. B. Williams, manager of our Epworth League, is a delightful discovery. The young and old rally around her, and Sunday nights she crowds the church to hear the programs the League renders. Her series of talks on the Holy Land grip the popular mind with thrilling interest concerning the Land and the Book. We have never heard any missionary who could equal her in telling what they have seen or heard in our mission lands.

The quarterly conference ordered a movement for a new church begin, and appointed a building committee, composed of J. J. Davidson, Paul M. Wain, A. B. Denlo, C. D. Caffery and Mrs. Crow Girard, to take such steps as may be necessary.

A church conference, after presentation of the matter and prayer, voted solidly, 45 votes—no adverse votes—in favor of the new church. The Epworth League, with a full church, voted unanimously. The pastor, therefore, began the organization of the womanhood of the church into six circles, with chairmen, secretaries and treasurers, and 120 women have so been organized to create sentiment and to raise funds for the new church. It is surprising how the ladies of other churches are eager to join these circles and help raise funds. The present church is too small, leaks badly, is in a poor location, is not arranged for modern class room work, and makes large class room work practically null and void. It is standing room only, when the closing exercises are conducted.

The choir, under the direction of Mrs. R. C. Cunningham, a gifted musician, is not second to the best in this section.

The record of Mrs. Crow Girard as Treasurer of the Centenary Fund is a brilliant success, and deserves front line mention.

Our church treasurer, J. J. Davidson, is the most valuable all-around man to the pastor we have had any experience with as the years have gone by.

Here I must stop, for there are so many other individuals who are such valuable assistants that it would be an injustice not to give them all honorable mention.

GREAT ENDINGS.

Have you ever noticed how often, when reading, one or two words, or a whole sentence, will make an impression on the mind, and keep recurring long after the rest of the book is a memory? And have you ever noticed how often in a week one or more happenings, totally different in aspect, will convey the same impression? The words "great endings" have been much in our thoughts during the week just passed. No matter where we happened to be, or how busy with the work of the office, those words stood out prominently in our mind and almost demanded that we give them attention. They even invaded our dreams.

It was to a sympathetic audience that the world-famous singer, Tetraz-zini, gave her programme, and the clear, flute-like notes will ring in the ears of her listeners for many a day. But it was the endings of her numbers that created the greatest impression on us. From the first note to the last of each selection the performance was wonderful, but at the finish the quality seemed to be sweeter and the tone fuller. They were, indeed, great endings.

John Drinkwater's play, "Abraham Lincoln," we could never attempt to describe. It left an impression on the minds of the audiences that we do not think will ever be effaced. However, when in time the play becomes a rather dim memory, the endings of the scenes will still stand out clearly. They were not elaborate endings. Rather they were simple, so simple that only a great playwright could conceive them, and in effect they were overwhelming.

And as with the artists, we followed the life of that great-hearted, simple, and lonely man, we saw him take responsibilities that seemed almost too great for one man to bear, and carry them through to the end—a great end.

To undertake a thing and work it out to the very best of our ability, striving to make the end a great one—surely this is a worth-while ambition that, once achieved, will bring its own reward.—The Christian Guardian.

A NEW DOCTRINE OF HELL.

If the followers of Jesus Christ could realize for a moment what the future has in store for humanity there would be a manifest girding up of faith. If they could see the warning words that have been written over the portals of to-morrow and understand the inevitable thing we are facing they would not think we are talking in alarming temper and are not working under a hallucination when we claim that the future is either "Christ or chaos." If the ministry could bring men to see that, while the doctrine of hell is sadly neglected and gets no reaction, we are still facing something just as fearful; for what is "chaos" but hell with the fires extinguished? What would it mean to fall into a "red chaos"? Would that hell filled with angry, violent, wild, ruthless, demonized men be something fearful beyond description? Would that hell filled with smashing guns, gleaming daggers and thrusting bayonets, where the streets run red with blood and death stalks abroad morning, noon and night, be something that would congeal the blood of men? Would that hell, with its outraging of innocence and its merciless murderings and slaughters, with its starvations, where children cry in the streets for bread, where women scream in wild mania over the suffering of the violation of virtue, be something that will furnish a delineation of torture that will awaken the souls of men to their peril? Our fathers laid the foundations of the American church on the gospel, "It is either Christ or hell." Their sons to-day should find just as powerful a gospel in the call to the men of this age, "It is either Christ or chaos." In this conception lies the dynamic for the preaching of a doctrine of a present-day hell.—Western Christian Advocate.

Loss of Appetite is also loss of vitality, vigor, tone. To recover appetite and the rest take Hood's Sarsaparilla.—that strengthens the stomach, perfects digestion, makes eating a pleasure. It also makes the blood rich and pure, and steadies the nerves.—Adv.

LESSON FOR APRIL 17.

Lesson Topic: Labor Problems.

Scripture Lesson: Mark 6:1-3; John 5:17; II Thessalonians 3:7-10; Deuteronomy 24:14-15; James 5:4-5.

Golden Text: "Not slothful in business; fervent in spirit; serving the Lord." Romans 12:11.

Home Readings: Monday, Jesus the Carpenter, Mark 6:1-6; Tuesday, Earning a Livelihood, II Thessalonians 3:6-13; Wednesday, God Puts Man to Work, Genesis 2:4-15; Thursday, The Builders, Nehemiah 2:16-23; Friday, The Worker and the Staggard, Proverbs 24:27-34; Saturday, The Home-maker, Proverbs 31:10-20; Sunday, Strength for Labor, Psalm 121:1-3.

Teaching Points.

1. A fundamental requirement of the Christian life is activity; that means work. A lazy man cannot be a good Christian.
2. Since work is necessary for earning a livelihood, all men have a right to work under favorable conditions, and to receive a fair return for their toil.
3. A spirit of selfishness that would oppress the laborer or withhold from him fair remuneration is not only un-Christian—it is anti-Christian.
4. The Kingdom of God cannot come on earth until the spirit of Christ pervades the industrial world.

FRECKLES

Now Is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots.

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as Othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots. Simply get an ounce of Othine—double strength—from your druggist, and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is said that more than one ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful clear complexion. Be sure to ask for the double strength Othine as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

Cutting a Wide Swath

"Cutting a wide swath" in any walk of life means that you must have good blood, steady nerves and strength in reserve.

Chatham, Va.—"I was so weak and run-down last spring that I could not work two hours without sitting down in the field and resting. I sent and got a bottle of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, it did me so much good that I sent for three more bottles. After taking them I felt like a new man. I do believe that if it had not been for this medicine I would have had to give up work."—J. R. TATE, R. F. D. 3.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE NOTES.

The New Orleans District Conference was a most successful meeting. The presiding elder, Rev. J. G. Snelling, carried on the business in a pleasing way and with dispatch.

The Sunday schools of the district made excellent reports, and showed a fine increase in numbers as well as in efficiency. The brethren and delegates made the Field Secretary welcome.

Bogalusa Methodists and their able pastor, Rev. A. J. Gearheard, are most generous hosts.

The Shreveport Sunday school workers will please plan to be at Shreveport Sunday school meeting Tuesday afternoon, April 19, 2 to 2:30 o'clock.

ALONZO EARLY,
S. S. Field Secretary.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Brother Clark reports the organization of a Sunday school at Lintonia last Sunday. This is fine. Rev. R. T. Hollingsworth is the pastor of this charge. Brother Clark is out this week with the illustrated lecture. I have spent the last ten days with the illustrated lecture. This is a mighty fine lecture and it is doing good wherever it is put on.

We had the privilege of starting the Sharon Sunday school off last week. They start well. Brother Porter is very happy in his work there, and the good people are responding to his efforts.

The Camden Sunday school is in a flourishing condition—18 in their Bible class Easter Sunday. Fine for Camden!

Rev. W. L. Blackwell, of the Vaughan charge, reports the organization of two Sunday schools on his charge. This is fine work indeed.

The Gulfport Sunday school reports 38 out of 39 teachers present Easter, and 22 out of 29 classes perfect in attendance. This is the finest report I know anything about at all.

Sunday School Day is April 24. If you have not received your Programs, please let me know. About one-seventh of the charges did not observe Sunday School Day last year. Will you not help us to make it unanimous this year? Programs have been sent to each pastor. If you do not receive them, notify the Field Secretary.

If you are interested in Children's Week, I will be happy to put the material in your hands. Let me hear from you.

Final plans have been made for the Standard Training School. Your expenses for board and lodging and books will be $10; so it will cost you $10, plus your railroad fare, to take in the Training School, June 7-14. Plan for it. Write me for further information. Let us make a desperate effort to make this the biggest success of all.

Pray for the work and the workers. God bless and keep each of you.

Your friend and brother,
JNO. C. CHAMBERS,
Field Secretary.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Up to the present I have ordered 5630 programs for the observance of Sunday School Day for 208 schools. This is about fifty per cent of the number that could observe the day. Why not have it 100 per cent and be done with it?

Greenwood proposes to contribute $50.00 on Sunday School Day and hopes to make it $100.00. So does Greenville propose to do likewise. Read the Advocate and you will see some of our large schools contribute on one Sunday for their local expenses three times as much as they propose to give for the extension of our work for the entire year. Such schools need help.

Brother Luther McKeown writes that two-thirds of the population of Merigold is in Sunday school. That is great. Our aim is to get every man, woman, and child into the Sunday school or take the school to them. That can be done if the Home Department and Cradle Roll are worked to the limit. Every individual feeds the body with some regularity daily; why not get them to realize their need for feeding the poor, neglected soul once a week? Who will be the first to do that?

The twenty-five young people received into the church Easter morning at Greenville, on profession of faith, came from the Sunday school. Was that an accident? We would do well to invest ten times the amount we are putting into religious education. Some day we will get our eyes opened.

It is a settled fact that we are to hold our first federation of Intermediate, Senior, Young People's, and Adult Wesley Bible Classes at Grenada, June 17-19. Mark the date and get ready. This is to be a gathering of our laymen and women who are working in the organized classes.

Do you want any help or advice as to the course you are to study at Grenada during the Training School, June 20-25? Decide upon your course, send for your textbook and begin to get familiar with it. Make it your business to tell every teacher you see about this school.

Forty have enrolled to take the teacher-training course on the Vardaman circuit. Only four of the seven churches have been heard from. When Brother Murff makes the rounds he will get ten more to make it fifty. This class is to be taught the latter part of June.

THE HATTIESBURG DISTRICT SET-UP MEETING.

The set-up meeting of the Christian Education Movement for the Hattiesburg District was held in Main Street Church, Hattiesburg, on Thursday of last week. The morning session was opened with devotional exercises by Rev. C. M. Dunaway, one of our general evangelists, who is holding a meeting in one of the churches in Hattiesburg. Rev. W. W. Graves, presiding elder of the district, presided. Mr. C. C. Harvey acted as secretary in the morning and Rev. J. M. Lewis in the afternoon.

All the pastors of the district were present except one. There was also a light sprinkling of laymen and laywomen. Of course, Rev. J. M. Morse, the Mississippi Conference Educational Secretary, was there. His executive ability is of a high order, his energy and enthusiasm are contagious, and it becomes more and more evident that no mistake was made when he was placed in charge of this enterprise. Rev. J. W. Broom, who is serving as financial director for the Mississippi Conference, was present. He is the assistant State superintendent of education, but is giving the entire month of April without salary to the financial directorship of the Conference in this work. Prof. G. G. Hurst, of the Normal College at Hattiesburg, is director of the Hattiesburg District, and rendered valuable service in the meeting. Rev. W. M. Sullivan, presiding elder of the Seashore District, Rev. M. L. Burton, presiding elder of the Jackson District, and Dr. C. M. Chapman, pastor of the Poplarville charge in the Seashore District, were present and were much interested in the proceedings.

The outstanding feature of the morning session was an address by Bishop W. F. McMurry, of Louisville, Ky., who has charge of the Episcopal District composed of the two Mississippi Conferences and the Louisiana Conference. His speech was a strong presentation of the subject of Christian education and greatly delighted his audience.

During the noon hour luncheon was served all present at the Masonic Temple. A good, square meal was followed by after-dinner speeches by Rev. M. L. Burton, Rev. W. M. Williams and others, each of which was richly enjoyed.

At the afternoon session, the plan of initiating the work in the various pastoral charges was explained, so that every pastor was supposed to understand thoroughly what he is expected to do. This was the vital part of the set-up meeting. The Bishop was asked to speak again, but declined, saying that he hardly ever talked unless he had something to say. He said he had nothing to say, and did not feel anything coming. He could have talked on indefinitely this morning, he said, but had rounded in to port and was still there. Mrs. H. L. McCleskey, a resident of Hattiesburg, and the Mississippi Conference corresponding secretary of the Woman's Missionary Society, was asked to speak and responded most effectively in her inimitable style, which is always interesting and instructive. Rev. J. E. Williams, pastor of Broad Street Church in Hattiesburg, was also called out and delivered a speech that elicited complimentary remarks from the Bishop and others.

The meeting was a profitable one, and was much enjoyed by all present. A high degree of enthusiasm was kindled, the necessity of the movement was realized, and a spirit of optimism as to the outcome seemed to pervade the entire body when adjournment came at 4 o'clock.

REVIVAL AT MACON, MISS.

We have just closed one of the greatest revivals that Macon has experienced in years. Rev. W. A. Wilson, Conference evangelist for the North Mississippi Conference, did the preaching, and did it well. No more forceful preacher or consecrated Christian gentleman can be found anywhere.

As a result of the meeting, the Methodist Church received seventeen members, eleven on profession of faith, and the remainder by letter. Two others were converted and presented themselves for membership in other churches. The atmosphere of the whole town is different on account of the meeting. Many church members who have been indifferent are now anxious to do something for the Lord, and people are talking about the meeting on every hand. We are happy in the Lord's work. Pray for us.

REVIVAL AT KOSCIUSKO, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: I have with me Rev. W. M. McIntosh, general evangelist, and his singer, R. L. Cooper, Aberdeen, in one of the greatest meetings in the history of the town. There have been 100 conversions and reclamations to date and the meeting will continue several days yet.

The pastors and churches of the city are co-operating and we had to change from church to court house to accommodate the crowds.

I received 48 people into the church last Sunday morning and several joined the other churches at the same hour as a result of the meeting.

It may seem worthy of mention, that in the number received at our church, there were 4 whole families (father and mother and children) and a large class of young men and young women above 20 years of age.

We are emphasizing "Tithing," "Christian Advocate" and the educational needs as we pass along. More later.

McIntosh is second to none—sound, sane, constructive.

Cordially,

E. H. CUNNINGHAM.

"STORY OF THE PENNIES."

Mrs. B. R. De Lebar, a widow, sent to the Centenary Treasurer of Hawkins Memorial Church, Meridian, Miss. (of which she is a member), a pickle jar containing three hundred and ninety pennies, and asked if he would accept them as a payment on her Centenary Pledge. The Treasurer sent her word that he appreciated her payment more than any payment he had received, because he knew that as she dropped the pennies in the jar day by day, she was thinking and praying for the Centenary, and those who are trying to make it succeed in every way.

She subscribed $10 and has already paid $8.90 of this amount. If the same interest manifested and sacrifice made by her were shown by all the other subscribers to the Centenary, there would be no trouble in making our motto, "NO SHRINKAGE BUT AN INCREASE," a reality. All our plans would be carried out, and the Gospel given to the "Ends of the Earth."

May the story of the pennies inspire

RESOLUTIONS.

Resolutions of respect and sympathy at the news of the death of Rev. H. B. Watkins, pastor of Central Church, Meridian, and formerly pastor of this church, adopted by the second Quarterly Conference, Jefferson Street Church, Natchez, Miss.:

Resolved, first, That this official board and whole congregation are profoundly moved with great sorrow at the news of the death of our former and much beloved pastor, Rev. H. B. Watkins, pastor of Central Church, Meridian; that we feel that we have sustained a great loss as a congregation; the Mississippi Annual Conference has lost one of its most valuable leaders and preachers; that the church at large has sustained a loss that will be hard to replace; and that righteousness, and the cause of humanity in general, a champion of fearless and great ability.

Resolved, second, That we sympathize with the great family of which he was an honorable member; that most especially do we extend our sympathies to his immediate family, the wife and three children, and commend them to the keeping of the Heavenly Father.

Resolved, third, That a copy of these resolutions be spread on the minutes of this meeting, that a copy be furnished the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication, and that a copy be sent to the family of our brother.

REVIVAL NOTES FROM OPELOUSAS, LA.

On last Monday we closed a fifteen-day campaign in our church, with the Kelly brothers leading one of the most successful revivals held in Southwest Louisiana in many years. The old negro mammy who has lived just back of our church property for over fifty years said, "Opelousas never was stirred like this before; she's turned upside down and the right side up." In my twenty-one years of ministry, I have never seen better fruit of the Holy Spirit in that short space of time, in an old, declining church in South Louisiana. Those who know the conditions will appreciate the fact when I say 60 members were added to our church on profession of faith, among whom were some of the most substantial people of the community. If these brethren could have remained twenty-one days, we would have seen the whole city seeking God. Brother Kelly is giving to the church a sane and constructive evangelism. He is wholly on the altar for God and humanity.

The Methodist Church has been operating in Opelousas about one hundred years. The Louisiana Annual Conference was organized here in the fall of 1846, Bishop Soule presiding, and again it convened here in 1877, Bishop Robert Paine presiding. We hope in the near future to be able to build a modern church and parsonage, and invite the Conference to come back to this old, historic city.

There were nearly one hundred who pledged to hold prayer meeting or any service for the church. We have received in all 73 members since Conference, and baptized 7 infants and 11 adults.

WE KNOW NO REMEDY.

Dear Brother Carley: Am I out of tune with the spirit of Methodism when I contend that a preacher should issue church letters at once when a brother pastor requests it? There may be ex-terminating circumstances, making delay excusable, but certainly the request at least should be answered. I have right now a number of letters out requesting church certificates that are unanswered. It is my custom always to inclose return postage. Yet I was forced to receive a member at the altar not long ago and notify the presiding elder to have the entry made on the church book at the charge when he should go again. I did get action from another pastor after writing his presiding elder to see if the man were dead or dismissed, and then the preacher wrote me a letter of such tenor as under ordinary circumstances should be resented.

To be honest, Brother Carley, I think that when a preacher fails to look after the spiritual welfare of his people he has ceased to function as a minister. It is certainly proper to see to it that a man's church letter follows him and that he be encouraged to continue in the church. Do you know of any way to develop a conscience on this matter of answering letters? Have you a remedy to offer that will cure the brethren of the habit of freezing on to a church letter as if it were something never to let go? You are an editor, and sit at the center of the great machine and hear the buzzing of all the works. Have you heard so much as a plan whereby a preacher who has professed his call to the ministry and who has been entrusted with the roll of a church can be induced to answer a friendly request for the certificate of a former member of his congregation?

Yours truly,

A. J. GEARHEARD.

Bogalusa, La.

SPARE NOT YOURSELF.

As a bridegroom rejoices over his bride, so does Christ rejoice over you, and nothing but the bride's surrender will satisfy him. He has given you all, and he asks for all in return. The slightest reserve will grieve him to the heart. He spared not himself, and how can you spare yourself? For your sake he poured out in lavish abandonment all that he had, and for his sake you must pour out all that you have without stint or measure.

O, be generous in your self-surrender! Meet his measureless devotion for you with a measureless devotion. Be glad and eager to throw yourself unreservedly into his loving arms, and to hand over the reins of government to him. Whatever there is of you, let him have it all. Give up forever everything that is separate from him. Consent to resign from this time forward all liberty of choice, and glory in the blessed nearness of union which makes this enthusiasm of devotedness not only possible, but necessary.—H. W. Smith.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Soon to be Our Missionary.

At this present meeting of the Council, Miss Clara Chalmers, one of our own Louisiana girls, is to be dedicated to the missionary work. Cuba has been mentioned as the field to which she will likely be sent. Miss Chalmers attended the recent annual meeting at Baton Rouge. It seemed to many of us the most sacred hour of the Conference when she stood before us asking our prayers and saying good-by. Our hearts were filled with love and sincere gratitude for her consecration. Following this appears a talk given by Miss Chalmers during one of the sessions of the Conference.

Student Volunteer Movement.

"Regardless of the fact that some psychologists believe the contrary, the play instinct is always with us, and as truly every one likes a story that begins, 'Once upon a time'; so, once upon a time, a former editor said to me, 'Miss Clara, did you know that 90 per cent of the people in the world are crazy?' I looked my surprise, but he simply said, 'Think about it.' And the more I have thought the more inclined I am to believe he is correct.

If there is any one subject I am 'crazy' on, it is Student Volunteers!

"Whom shall I send and who will go for me?" Ever since Isaiah first heard this call, many thousands of years ago, it has been ringing through the ages, and it has come down to us; and as our blessings have increased the call has become more urgent.

"One of the great organizations that is sounding this need of the Master is the Woman's Missionary Council. Young people and adults, you could not be engaged in a greater work! But there is another organization working with you; it is the Student Volunteer Movement. This movement is both national and international; it does not send out missionaries, but enlists volunteers in the colleges of our country for the various mission boards or societies. The headquarters of this Movement is in New York City, and every four years the central officers hold a great missionary conference. The last conference was held just last year at Des Moines, Iowa. There is also a State organization of the Movement, organized by representatives of the local boards in the various colleges and normal schools of the State. Not all of our States are organized, but they ought to be. Louisiana ought to organize! If you get down to hard work and earnest prayer, Volunteers, you can organize.

"Last but not least, but perhaps really on the top, is the local student volunteer band in the colleges. Only those who have signed the Student Volunteer pledge card and are therefore registered in the New York office can become members of this band. The band organization is very simple, having only a leader and a secretary. If necessary; its members meet once a week for prayer and devotions. This meeting is a source of power.

"Friends, college boys and girls are serious, and they are thinking folk. The average college student wants to do something worth while when he or she leaves college. Life work is oftenest chosen during the college years. It is college men and women our mission boards need.

"Women of the Louisiana Conference Woman's Missionary Society, will you not hold up these local volunteer bands with your prayers? Pray for courage for our volunteers, and pray that they may be given power to constrain many others from among their classmates to answer the call of the Student Volunteer Movement. 'Whom shall I send, and who will go for me?'"

Felicity Missionary Society, New Orleans.

On the evening of March 25th (Good Friday) the Woman's Missionary Society of Felicity Church held a special prayer meeting for volunteer workers for home and foreign fields. A very interesting program was enjoyed by a large congregation. Miss Willie Zuber, Felicity's little volunteer for foreign service, gave a talk that was quite instructive.

Rev. H. N. Harrison, the pastor, made a great appeal to the young people, showing how full the present time is with opportunity for service, and how the great church of God needs lives dedicated to God's work.

Earnest prayer was made for volunteers.

MRS. JOHN APPLEBY,
Supt. Publicity.

Parker Memorial, New Orleans.

Looking back over the past three months, the first quarter of 1921, I have to wonder at the way in which days have flown by, on wings as it were: like the aeroplane that flies over our heads each day, we hear the buzzing sound, then a roar; one upward look, and it is out of sight and hearing—so are the days. Yet time, measured in minutes, hours, days and weeks, is the same to-day as when called into creation, and when "the morning and the evening were the first day"—and so on. But these thousands of years have changed the way of living. We are so busy in these days that one day is not long enough to allow us to put into it all that we want to do. So to the busy people time actually flies. Parker Memorial Missionary Society belongs in this class. We did not quite realize how busy we had been these past ninety days until Tuesday 29th, when the officers met to take up the first quarter's report. Then, as the work was summed up, in facts and figures, we saw what had really been accomplished, and we just felt that the days had been made to count for something worth while. I am going to take opportunity to again invite the women of our church to meet with us next Tuesday, April 5, at 2:45 o'clock, in the parlor of the church, and help make our second quarter's report even better than the first, or become a member of the Bible Study Class. These meetings are held on every second Tuesday in the homes of members, and after study hour we have sewing, and a real social time together. The lessons are so instructive and the meetings so altogether delightful that you can not help but enjoy them. With this branch of the work there are no dues to be paid. It is just a matter of faithfulness and the study of God's Word. I am sure there is not one of us but will acknowledge our need of such study.

JOY BROUGHT INTO HOME

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, Restoring Mrs. Benz to Health

Altoona, Pa.—"I am writing to tell you what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. We have had six children die almost at birth. From one hour to nineteen days is all they have lived. As I was going to have another, I took a dozen bottles of your Vegetable Compound and I can say that it is the greatest medicine on earth, for this baby is now four months old and a healthier baby you would not want. I am sending you a picture of her. Everybody says, 'That is some healthy looking baby.' You have my consent to show this letter."—Mrs. C. W. Benz, 101 Cedar Ave., Altoona, Pa.

No woman can realize the joy and happiness this healthy babe brought into the home of Mrs. Benz, unless they have had a like experience.

Every woman who suffers from any ailments peculiar to her sex, as indicated by backaches, headaches, bearing-down pains, irregularities, nervousness and "the blues" should not rest until they have given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial.

God's call consecrates us, but our services seals the consecration.—Selected.

BISHOP McMURRY AT EAST END, MERIDIAN.

The East End Methodist Church was greatly blessed last Sunday, April 3, by the coming of our Bishop W. F. McMurry and the excellent sermons that he preached that day. He came at the request of myself and our building committee, to inspect the new church building and advise with us as to our plans for future progress. Not only did he greatly help us by his sermons, but by taking subscriptions on the building fund at each service and securing over $12,000 in pledges. In addition, he hopes to secure for us a loan from the Parent Board of Church Extension that will greatly help us. It will be pleasing news to the former pastors of East End and many others interested in the work here to know that the lower story is practically complete, and that we are now worshipping in it.

Easter Sunday was a great day with us, having over 600 in the Sunday school and a cash offering of $136.00. That, of course, is far above the normal, but the Sunday school is growing rapidly and we hope soon to have one of the best schools in the State. The new building will have 18 separate class rooms and can seat on the main floor about 800 people. There are few churches that have more loyal and faithful people than those of East End and fortunate is the pastor who is called to serve them. It will not be amiss to say in this connection that Rev. Paul D. Hardin, our loved providing elder, is gaining in health and strength, and hopes soon to be able to be out over the district. He will have a warm welcome.

DIVERSIFIED HAPPINESS.

The above caption is as near as I can come to satisfying my mind relative to some late happenings at Gloster. In a former communication I mentioned the Sunday school, prayer meeting, and Missionary Society. The work done and the substantial progress made by all three of these arms of the church causes part of the diversified happiness of the pastor these days. But some other things contribute to it also. We took one Sunday morning here at Gloster for a church conference, and it was the most interesting I ever attended. They found that the Missionary Society had pledged the largest amount that it had pledged at any time for several years; found it easy to collect money to pay for lumber and work for some repair of the parsonage; found some ready and eager for a young people's organization. Some of the young people had approached the pastor and asked for an organization for their social and religious development; said they would be willing to take any part in its organization and work. This was a special occasion for happiness. The preaching services are fairly well attended. I am finding strong men who voluntarily approach the subject of their soul's salvation and seek earnest prayer for same. Old-time conviction is resting upon some. Oh! for it to be deep and pungent, heaven-born, so terrific and constant, that many shall be brought to genuine old-time repentance! Such conviction must be before we can have a revival.

On Thursday night, March 23, this pastor and family were as much surprised as they, perhaps, ever were. You have heard of the "grocer shower?" Well, we had a "grocer downpour!" A Baptist was among the crowd, and he said it was his first attendance at a Methodist "pounding." I told him just to take a look and see how the Methodists did it—"good measure, pressed down, shaken together, and running over." My wife says I have one member that should develop. I exercise will cause such—the tongue, but, this was one time my tongue used to act. I just simply could not find words even to faintly express my feelings haven't found them yet! Numbers 6: 21-26 and Eph. 3: 16-21 come as near expressing my feelings toward all the crowd as I have found. Fifty-seven were in attendance. Many things contributing towards the general progress of the general church work. I feel very sure, will come from this "downpour" of good feeling and table comforts. So you see many things are causing me to be happy—diversified happiness. Less than the least.

MERIDIAN DISTRICT SET-UP MEETING.

The Financial Setting-Up Meeting for the Meridian District was held at Central Church at 10:00 a.m., April 4, and was most enthusiastic throughout.

Devotions for the morning session were conducted by Rev. P. D. Hardin, after which the meeting was turned over to J. Cliff Watts, the District Financial Director. Mr. Watts called upon Rev. J. M. Morse, Conference Director, to state the object of the meeting and to preside. J. B. Holland was elected secretary. Brother Morse, after outlining the purpose of the meeting, called upon Bishop W. F. McMurry, who addressed the meeting in his clear, practical and inspiring way on the "Objective of the Christian Education Movement." Bishop McMurry was followed by Prof. J. W. B. H. Conference Financial Director, who spoke enthusiastically on the "Financial Organization" as outlined in the Method Book, which was followed by the reading of the instructions.

At this time the conference took a recess for luncheon, which proved to be a very delightful occasion, in the basement of the church.

The conference reconvened at 1:30, with devotion led by Rev. A. J. Davis. The Rev. J. M. Morse suggested that the District be divided into groups for the convenience of the workers, and, on motion of Dr. H. W. Featherston, three groups were organized as follows: Southern, Middle and Northern, the chair appointing Dr. H. W. Featherston, W. A. Hays and Rev. M. L. White, Group Directors, respectively. In addition to interesting talks by Rev. J. E. Williams, of Hattiesburg, and J. W. Broom, of Jackson, short talks were made by practically every pastor and layman present, the general tone being of the most optimistic nature.

J. B. HOLLAND, Sec'y.

SHREVEPORT DISTRICT NOTES.

Dr. W. W. Drake, at the recent quarterly conference of the Noel Memorial Church, reported that by accurate count, there had been within the past year an increase of at least 60 per cent in attendance upon all the services of the church.

On Easter Sunday, the Methodist Sunday Schools of Shreveport had an attendance of 2510. First Church alone registering 1280.

The Texas Avenue Church, of which Rev. R. S. Walton is the efficient pastor, is making substantial progress in all departments of its work.

The church in Logansport, of which Rev. Leland Clegg is pastor, is prospering greatly. All financial claims have been paid in full to date, congregations are large, there have been thirty-two additions to the church since Conference, and a new church building is in prospect.

At a recent gathering under the auspices of the Woman's Department Club of Shreveport, a notable lecture on education was delivered by Dr. Richard Barton, Professor of English in the University of Minnesota, which incidentally furnished telling arguments for the Christian Education Movement. He greatly deplored the decline in cultural education, and declared after many years of observation and experience, it was his deliberate conviction that the small private college furnished a far better opportunity for true education than the great university.

There are four country churches in the Shreveport District named "Bethel," two "Wesleys," and two "Ebenezers."

There are a number of distinguished preachers in the district, among whom are Patrick Henry, Andrew Jackson and Thomas Jefferson.

"AS A MAN THINKETH."

Every day we are becoming more like our thoughts. If they are mean and selfish, we cannot prevent ourselves from becoming so; if they are unclean and evil, our character and conduct will inevitably be shaped by them. It is true that "as a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." As Charles Kingsley says: "Think about yourself—about what you want, what you like, what respect people ought to pay you—and then to you nothing will be pure. You will spoil everything you touch; you make sin and misery for yourself out of everything which God sends you; you will be as wretched as you choose, on earth or in heaven, either." And, on the other hand, loving thoughts will produce loving acts; and a generous, kindly way of regarding others in our own minds will bring us to a generous, kindly treatment of them in daily life. —Selected.

Who Threw The Bomb in Wall Street?

The police were baffled, the newspapers puzzled, the public confused when the roar of a deadly engine of destruction shook the financial center of America. It dealt death to many persons. It threw a panic into the heart of the nation.

It represented the policy of organized Bolshevism. It was the outcropping of materialism, anarchy, atheism, and avarice. It was the flaming up of the spirit of destruction which smoulders in the hearts of radicals whose stock in trade is agitation and anarchy.

This spirit is blasting at the foundations of Society.

Its Roots in Moral Illiteracy

We do not know who threw the bomb. But we do know how to put an end to the bomb-throwing business and to banish the bomb-throwers—anarchists, Bolsheviks and red revolutionists.

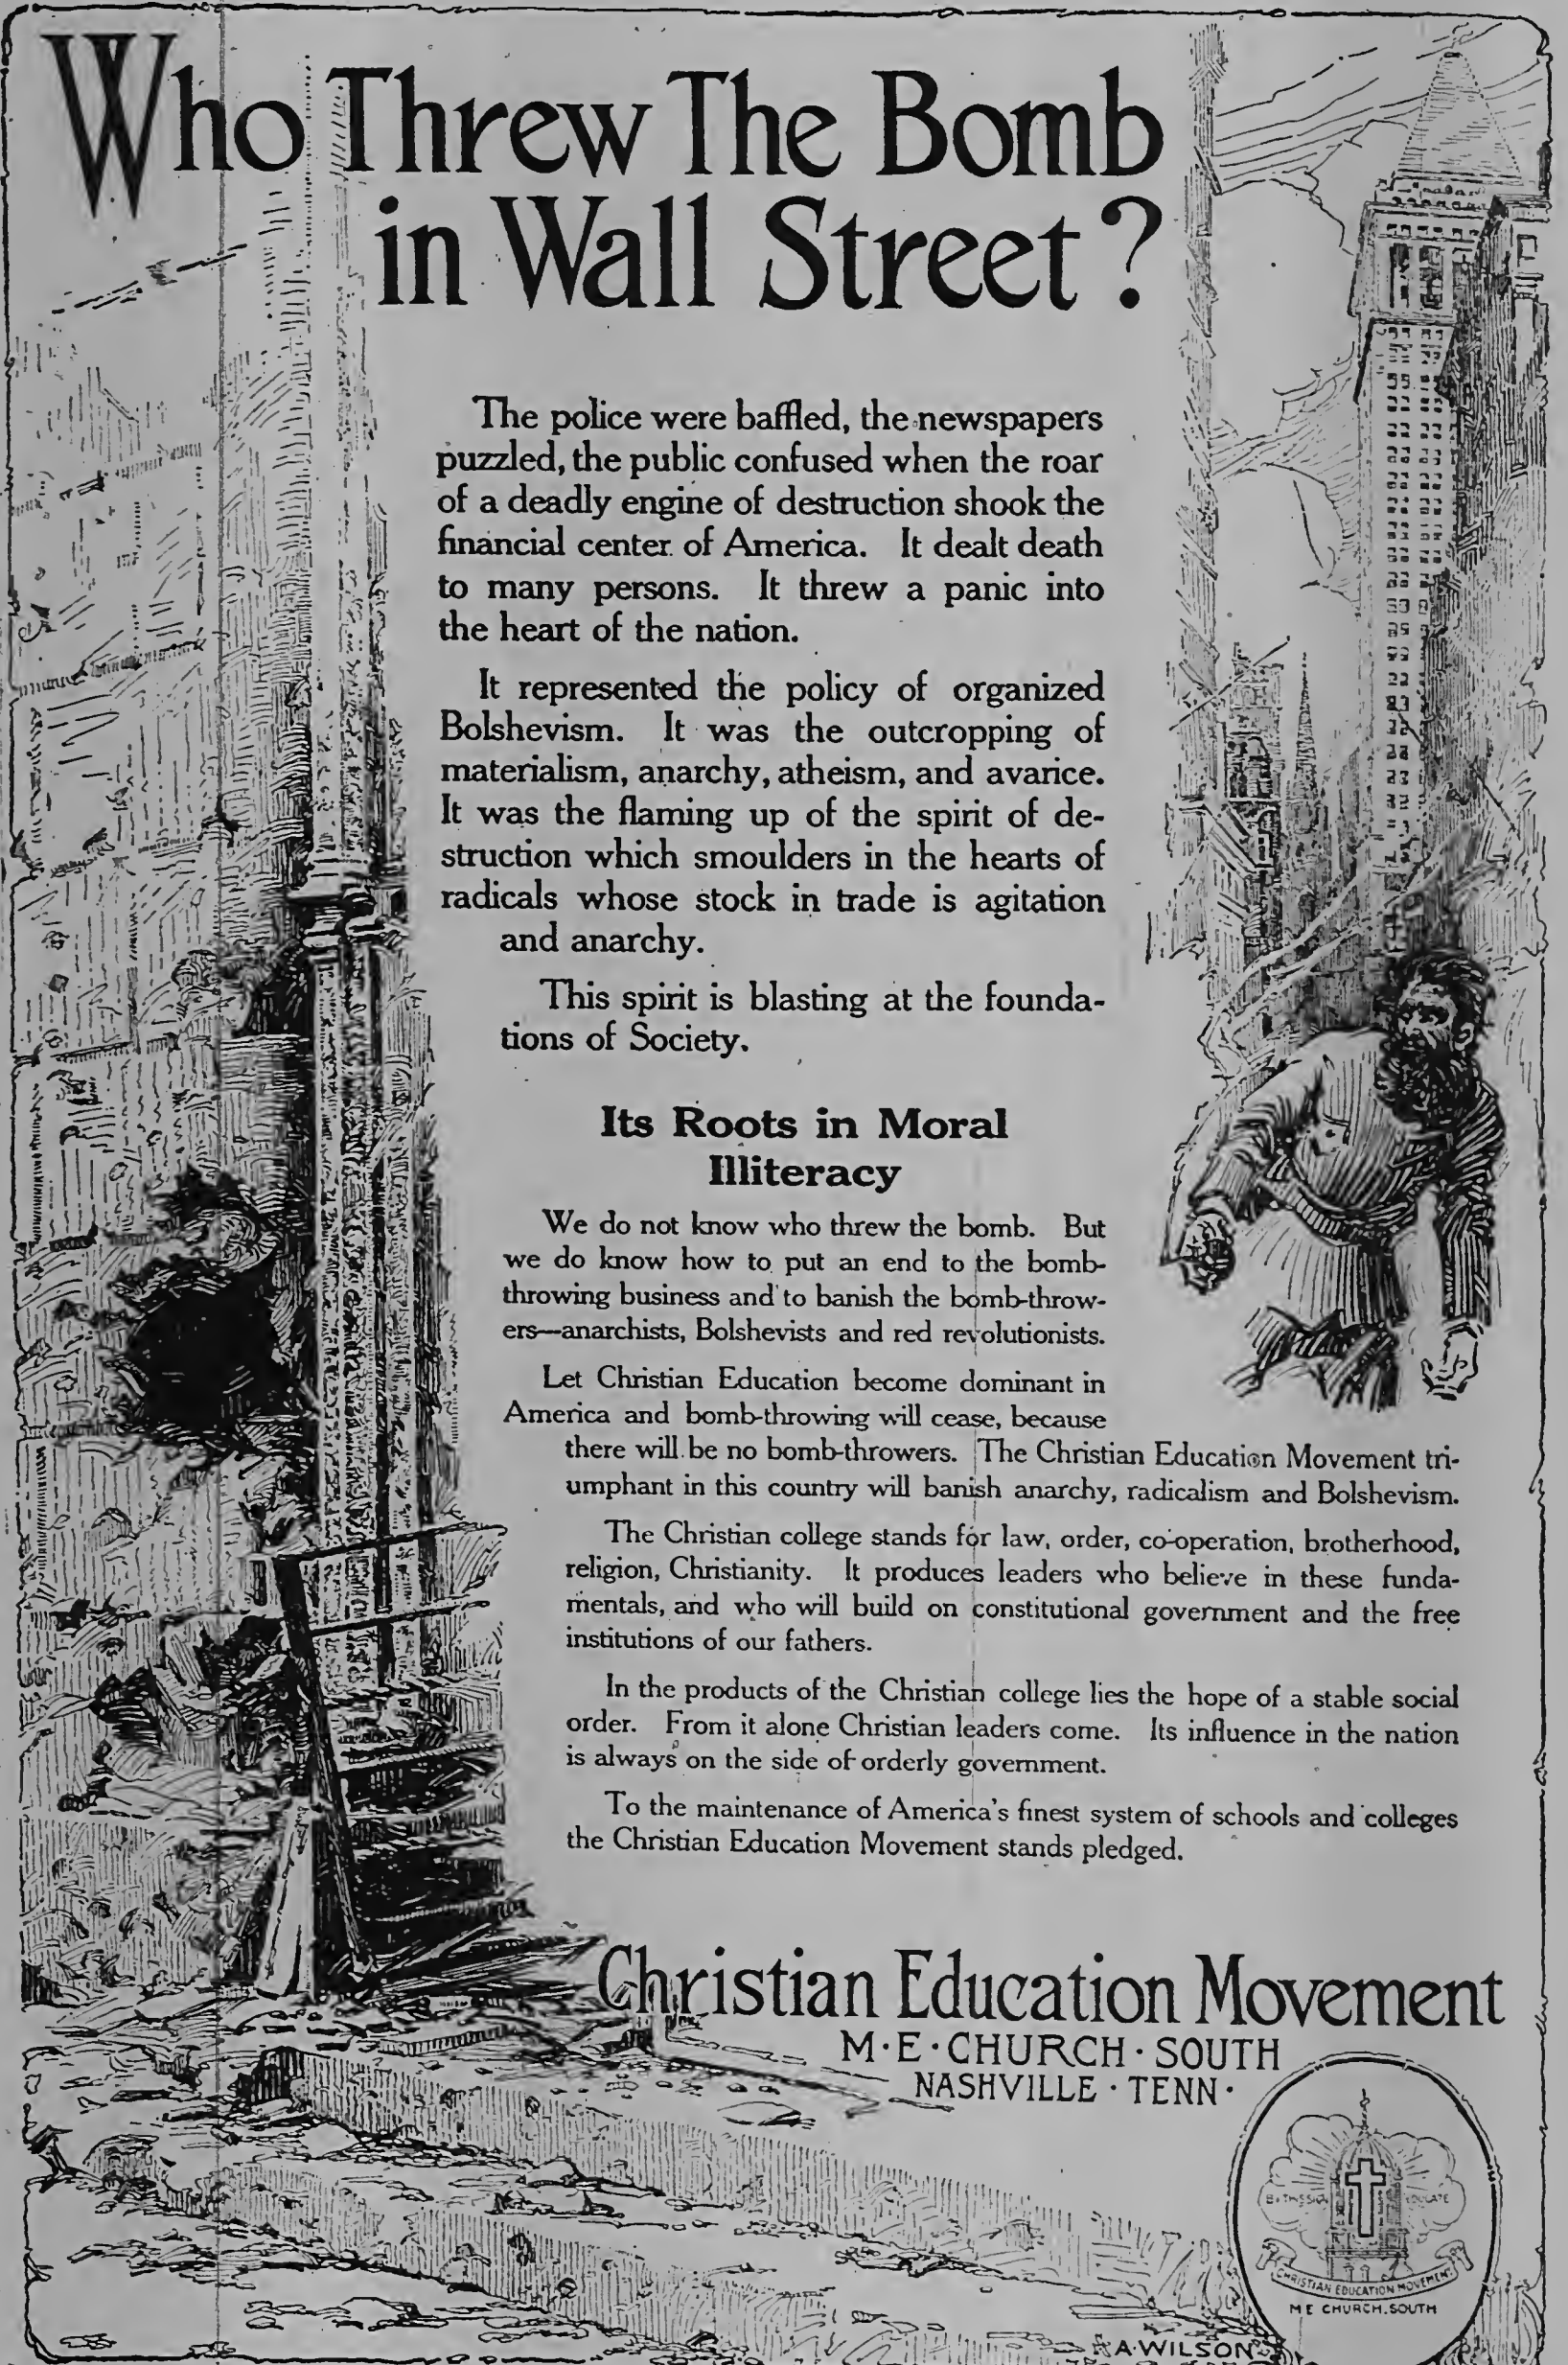

Let Christian Education become dominant in America and bomb-throwing will cease, because there will be no bomb-throwers. The Christian Education Movement triumphant in this country will banish anarchy, radicalism and Bolshevism.

The Christian college stands for law, order, co-operation, brotherhood, religion, Christianity. It produces leaders who believe in these fundamentals, and who will build on constitutional government and the free institutions of our fathers.

In the products of the Christian college lies the hope of a stable social order. From it alone Christian leaders come. Its influence in the nation is always on the side of orderly government.

To the maintenance of America's finest system of schools and colleges the Christian Education Movement stands pledged.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

WHAT THE DOCTORS THINK OF IT.

We suppose the legal authorities of the country are well within the bounds of their technical ramparts when they rule that beer may be sold in large amounts for medicinal purposes; but, with all respect for their legal acumen, it is hard to believe that they know what they are talking about. If any fact of science has been demonstrated beyond question, it is the fact that alcohol has no exclusive medicinal value. It serves no medical purpose which cannot be satisfactorily met in other ways, and malt liquors have never been listed in the United States Pharmacopoeia as official remedies. Our attention has recently been called to a petition signed by more than one hundred of the most eminent physicians of the United States, protesting against the sale of such liquors for medicinal purposes. These physicians may not know much about law, but taken together, they know about all that has ever been learned about medicine. If the druggists of the country allow their stores to become beer emporiums, they will invite the suspicion that they are highly susceptible to the influence of "easy money"—and they will forfeit the confidence of a large part of the business community. We know some mighty good doctors who never think of prescribing beer for any ailment.

LIKE A MEDICINE.

While the rain was falling in torrents and the wind was blowing with almost hurricane force a few days ago, the postman brought us a letter from a friend that made us forget that the sun was not shining and the birds were not singing. Why? Because the letter itself radiated sunshine, and, running through it, was a strain which we knew was the echo of a melody that was making music in the writer's own heart. That writer is not one of the men who have nothing to do but enjoy themselves; he is charged with heavy responsibilities, and he has his share of the ups and downs that fall to the lot of most of us. But he refuses to let the disappointments of life rob him of its happinesses. Who would not feel better after reading a sentiment like this?—"Happy is the man who can smile even in the face of misfortune. I know, for I am a happy man despite the occasional uneven breaks." Blessings upon him!—and upon all who make the world a better place to live in by reason of their faith and unfailing optimism! It is a true saying that "a cheerful heart doeth good like a medicine."

DRIVE THE TRUTH HOME.

We are willing to admit that times are hard and money is scarce; that industry is unsettled and business generally is bad; that the financial depression has made people more or less despondent concerning the present and fearful of the future. But we are not willing to admit that any of these things, or all of them, are enough to make us indifferent to the fact that the foundations of society are at stake in the program of reconstruction now under way. The things we have mentioned are of temporary duration—times will get better, money will come back into circulation, business will improve, and the sunshine will follow the storm so far as material prosperity is concerned; but the character of our civilization for years to come will be determined for better or for worse by our attitude toward the movements that have to do with the shaping of the ideals and aspirations of our young people. "Good times" will avail nothing unless we provide for a generation of good people to guide the world through the perils of prosperity. The man who refuses to support the Christian Education Movement because he thinks it is "untimely," is like unto the man who would turn the fire hose on his chicken coop while his house is burning. We are not merely trying to raise $33,000,000—we are trying to save the world. As somebody has said, it is passing strange that we could finance a great war for years and years, and yet plead bankruptcy when we are asked to finance a program of peace. We need to drive this truth home: So far as the church is concerned, it is "educate or abdicate."

TAKING CARE OF WHAT WE GET.

We have heard a great deal in the past two or three years about thrift, especially with reference to the proper use of money after it has been acquired. That is an important matter, and it deserves more attention, perhaps, than we have given it; but there is another kind of thrift that we urgently need to practice at the present time. Reports show that there is a remarkable turning to the church in these days—it is not unusual to read of scores and even hundreds of accessions to the membership in the meetings that are being held. What are we going to do with these new members as they take their places in our congregations? It is one thing to hold a great "revival;" it is altogether another thing to train the new converts in the principles of Christian living, nurture them in their newly-found faith, and develop them into active agents for the promotion of the Kingdom of God in the community. If we succeed in the one and fail in the other, we have left our work more than half undone. We would not suggest that we are devoting too much time and energy to our revival campaign, but we would call attention to the imperative duty of looking after the spiritual welfare of those who have been added to the church through these campaigns. Every member added to a church ought to make a perceptible difference in the ability of that church to do the work that it is expected to do in hastening the coming of the Kingdom. If these new members are not properly developed, they are likely to become a liability rather than an asset.

HE KNOWS MORE THAN AGRICULTURE.

According to all accounts, Mr. Henry C. Wallace, the Secretary of Agriculture in President Harding's cabinet, is about as well fitted, by theory and by practice, as a man could be for the position he occupies. But we are especially interested for the moment in his views on another subject. In an article in a recent number of The Farmer's Dispatch, quoted in the Literary Digest, the writer gives a close-up view of the home life of the Secretary. Among other things, he says: "I remember asking Henry once what he considered the best rule for raising a family. His eyes twinkled from under their shaggy red brows as he said: 'Well, Mrs. Wallace knows more about raising a family right than I do—she raised ours; but I would say next to a good mother, take God and good books into the scheme.'" It is refreshing to get such a simple statement of a profound truth from one whose position in public life gives him an influence as wide as the nation. We have great respect for the psychologists and the other experts who have written elaborate treatises on how to rear children; but we submit that it is hard to improve upon this simple suggestion—a good mother, God, and good books.

A POOR ARGUMENT.

The argument that the prohibition law should be repealed or modified because it cannot be enforced, is just as sensible as would be the contention that the law against murder should be repealed because it cannot be enforced. If the argument itself is puerile, what shall we say of supposedly sensible men, claiming to be good citizens, who allow their names to be used as supporters of a movement to repeal the law on such grounds? We should hate to appear before the public in such an anarchistic attitude.

EDUCATION WITHOUT THE ELEMENT OF SELF-SACRIFICE.

By Bishop Warren A. Candler.

Some years ago Hon. Bird S. Coler, of New York, published a very striking volume under the title of "TWO AND TWO MAKE FOUR," in which he called attention to the failure of American education to do the good expected of it. He said:

"The public schools in this country are not making for righteousness. There is not an educator of any note in this country who has not admitted this. The metropolis of this country is thug-ridden. It has developed a new type of criminal, a conscienceless, fearless young brute who murders for hire, and recognizes no moral accountability and no social obligation. Gun-men and murder-procurers have had their activity exposed in court. There is a similar state of affairs in Paris. Probably it is a little worse there. This is 'two.' In Paris and New York there are godless schools. Paris is a little more bold, a little more positive, than New York. This also is 'two.'

The relationship of the godless school to the growing viciousness among our people did not come to me as a religious man. As a practical man, a public official administering a municipal office, I was called upon by my official duties to pass upon expenditures of public money for charitable purposes. I found, as a matter of cold fact, that the mortality rate in State institutions for the care of the weak and helpless was terribly high, while in similar institutions under the care of religious bodies it was quite low. This interested me, and an inquiry resulted, which revealed the truth that in the care of the helpless those who have the service of God at heart are more efficient than those who are mere servants of the State. If this were true of founding asylums, why not of schools? Quite by accident the obvious relationship between the godlessness of the public school and the poor moral and mental character of its products forced itself on my attention."

Since Mr. Coler wrote this book, things have been getting worse in New York, and throughout the country. Wave after wave of crime flows over the land while increasing appropriations are made to enlighten the people, and thereby diminish crime. Vice and popular intelligence seem to increase together.

Is it not what might reasonably be expected? "Knowledge is power," said Sir Francis Bacon, who was justly called the "wisest and meanest of mankind." But power may be good or bad, and education which increases power without strengthening the conscience and inspiring self-sacrifice must by its very nature produce evil results of skillful selfishness and unscrupulous ingenuity.

Long before Mr. Coler perceived the relationship between godless education and public immorality, Sir Archibald Alison, the illustrious author of "The History of Europe During the French Revolution" pointed out the same fact. Noting the increase of depravity with the spread of knowledge in France, he said: "It is not simply knowledge, it is knowledge detached from religion that produces the fatal result. The reason of its corrupting tendency in morals is evident—when do detached it multiplies the desires and passions of the heart without an increase to its regulating principles; it augments the attacking forces without strengthening the resisting powers, and thence the disorder and license it spreads through society. The invariable characteristic of a declining and corrupt state of society is a progressive increase in the force of passion and a progressive decline in the influence of duty."

This characteristic of a declining and corrupt state of society is now evident in every part of our country, and popular education is not only doing nothing to arrest the evil current, but it is contributing to its volume and velocity.

The reason is not far to seek. The element of self-sacrifice is being more and more eliminated from popular education, and self-indulgence is being more and more injected into it.

Apart from the religious question involved, are methods of education, all but universally accepted, which promote self-indulgence and destroy self-denial. These methods proceed on the false theory that everything hard must be taken out of the tasks of students, and that their pursuit of knowledge must be made a pursuit of pleasure. Teachers who hold this false view tell us most seriously, as if it were an axiom of pedagogy, that children must be amused while being taught so that they may learn without knowing that they are learning and find themselves educated before they know it. Nothing could be more vicious in theory or injurious in practice.

Years ago this pedagogical heresy was pointed out by Amiel in these words: "Amusement, instruction, morals, are distinct genres. They may no doubt be mingled and combined, but if we wish to obtain direct and simple effects, we shall do best to keep them apart. The well-disposed child, besides, does not like mixtures which have something of artifice and deception in them. Duty claims obedience; study requires application; for amusement nothing is wanted but good temper. To convert obedience and application into means of amusement is to weaken the will and the intelligence."

What a weakening of will and enfeebling of intelligence much of our education, so called, is bringing to pass! School children are being trained to avoid every tedious task, and to put pleasure above duty. They demand to be amused at all cost. For what serious role in life can such spurious education qualify a boy or girl? The dull round of duty in the domestic circle they cannot endure, and when the glamor of marriage is gone the piquant release of the divorce court is sought, or some worse form of self-indulgence, if there be any, is adopted without hesitation or shame.

And if any such pupils, who have been taught by amusement in grammar schools or high schools, are sent to college, they demand games and athletic sports and eschew strenuous duty in the way of study as an intolerable barbarism. Inter-collegiate athletics is a fungus growth springing out of unsound education dying, at the top.

Along with this wretched method of instruction by self-indulgence, some teachers set before their pupils a false idea of the object of education; they declare the object of education is to obtain the means of living with the least possible output of effort. Thus they teach their pupils to devote their intellects to the gratification of their appetites. No thought of self-sacrifice, self-denial or service is inculcated by them. Such teachers sow the seeds of greed and selfishness and uproot every germ of goodness in the souls of the children who are committed to them for instruction.

All these pernicious methods must be excluded from the processes of education, and the spirit of self-sacrifice must be inspired in the breasts of the students, or our work of education will result in the most degrading and demoralizing types of life. Already, as Mr. Bird S. Coler shows, bad consequences have issued from our system of education, and but for the efforts of the churches and the influences of the religious schools, which have done much to arrest the evil tendencies, worse evils would have followed. The Christian churches and the Christian schools of our country have been as trees of healing that have sweetened the bitter waters of the Marsh of secular and selfish education. (Exodus xv:23-25). They must do more, or the nation suffer the worst disasters.

The element of self-sacrifice cannot be left out of education without the most hurtful consequences following, and the noblest self-sacrifice is the first fruit of faith in Christ.

It is the veriest nonsense to suppose that any sort of education is bound to do good. The deification of education, coupled with the de-thronement of God, is a most baneful superstition, and this cult of godless culture is all too prevalent.

One of the most hopeful facts in the history of our country in recent years is found in the great campaigns of the churches to strengthen their educational institutions. For this high purpose they are proposing to raise more than three hundred millions of dollars during the next five years. Much of this large sum has already been raised.

These efforts have not been put forth too soon, nor is the amount to be raised greater than is needed.

Until the outbreak of the war between the States the higher education of the United States was in the main in the hands of the churches. They began the work in the Colonial times, before there were colleges and universities by the States or by any other secular agency, and they continued to do most of it until 1860. William and Mary College, from which Thomas Jefferson came, Princeton, in which Madison was educated, Harvard, out of which came the Adamsses, Dartmouth, in which Webster was trained, and Yale, the Alma Mater of Calhoun, were one and all denominational institutions when these mighty men studied in their halls and worshiped at their altars. The Republic was framed and founded by men educated in the schools of the churches, and it is well that such was the case.

Less than thirty Presidents have served the Nation as its Chief Executive, nineteen of whom have been college-bred men, and seventeen of the nineteen were educated in denominational institutions of learning.

Having reaped so much good from Christian education, can the Nation now trust the education of secularism? Can culture, from which self-sacrifice has been eliminated, safeguard our political and social institutions? Has it not shown already its powerlessness for good and its perilous tendencies? Mr. Coler shows it as plain as "two and two make four" that godless education is not "making for righteousness" in our country or any other country. It cannot.

The appalling increase of vice and crime in the land is conclusive evidence of the utter failure of secularized education to promote morality or safeguard the State. It has done worse than fail; it has augmented the forces which attack virtue while diminishing the strength of conscience and enfeebling the sense of duty.

The great French philosopher, Victor Cousin, said, "Any system of education which sharpens and strengthens the intellectual powers without at the same time affording a source of restraint and counter check to their tendency of evil, is a curse rather than a blessing."

The American people will do well to lay to heart what this French philosopher states so clearly and cogently. Their large appropriations to public education will purchase for them much painful disorder, if from education is eliminated the element of religion, which, and which only, inspires and nourishes the spirit of self-sacrifice required for the preservation of a republican form of government.

"SOME GOOD THINGS."

By Rev. Jno. W. Boswell, D.D.

Dear Brother Carley: I put the head of my letter in quotation marks because I took it from Brother Jacob's article in the Advocate of March 21. He seems to be a finder of good things, or is fortunate in stumbling upon them, I don't know which. At any rate, what he has seen and heard and experienced in the way of good things furnished him occasion for writing a good word for the edification of the brethren and sisters. I liked it. One statement particularly struck me. It was this: "I will have two new illustrated speeches soon." The emphasis is on the "new." Thereby hangs a tale: Many years ago we had in Arkansas a set-fast presiding elder—one who knew how to hold on and did it. He was in some respects an active man, but a man of limited education; and his mental ability was as little as his learning. Naturally his sermons were few. They were repeated and repeated until the people got tired of them—mighty tired. When he was appointed to a certain district the first year of a second or third quadrennium, it was not at all agreeable to some of the leading brethren. At the first quarterly meeting when Question 8 was asked, one of the stewards moved that "the whole amount collected for the support of the ministry during the quarter be appropriated to the preacher-in-charge," and gave his reasons for the move. "To my certain knowledge," said he, "our presiding elder has been preaching the same sermons to us for the last twenty years, and I'm tired of them. I do not intend to pay for them any longer." Whether the chair ruled the motion out of order as he should have done, I do not know, but after the next quarterly visitation the preacher-in-charge wrote me word that the presiding elder "preached a new sermon," but added: "Such a sermon!" The new was no improvement over the old.

I wonder if Brother Jaco feels that the people are getting tired of his old speeches. I sympathize with him. I know how hard it is for a "connectional man" to be at ease when telling the same things in the same words for the twentieth time. But he has promised both himself and the people relief in two directions—new speeches and something to look at instead of the speaker. That reminds me: Talking with a Mississippi lady a few days ago our conversation turned on "looks." I told her I was known as "the ugliest man in three States." Instantly she replied, "except Brother Jaco." I didn't agree with her, and told her there was another Mississippi man uglier than either of us. That's saying some. But bless Brother Jaco—I don't know how the new speeches compare with the old—it makes no difference so long as he is finding good things and doing good things.

There were other good things in last week's Advocate. I try to find them all. Two of them are two of your front-page editorials devoted to Romanism—the vast amount of space given by the daily papers to the late Cardinal Gibbons, and the efforts of the Roman Catholic Church to establish diplomatic relations with the United States. It is easy to account for the attention paid to the Cardinal's memory. He was "a Prince of the Church," and men, like children, are fond of the spectacular. The worship paid such princes is not because they are great or good, or because they have been more than ordinarily useful in saving souls, but because they occupy high positions. Then, so far as Cardinal Gibbons was concerned, being at the head of the Roman Catholic hierarchy in the United States, he exercised more influence than any other man in his church, and, as I believe, exercised more influence by virtue of his position, in affairs of government than was his due.

Rome has been trying for a generation or more to establish an embassy at Washington. It was expected she would undertake it again at the beginning of a new administration. If I am not mistaken, she has had a representative in Washington for several years, but he has no official standing—not likely to have. Diplomatic relations with the Vatican are about as far off as ever. No matter what Rome claims, she long since lost her temporal power and rules over nothing except the Roman Catholic Church. It is perfectly incongruous to think of a republican government so entirely separate and independent of the church as is the United States, establishing diplomatic relations with a purely ecclesiastical organization. To do so would be an insult to Italy, one of our allies, which fifty years ago broke forever the temporal power of the Pope. And would it not be ridiculous for the great United States to send a dignified ambassador to the spiritual court of a State prisoner, such as the holy father holds himself to be?

Again, the last Advocate was valuable and interesting by reason of the fact that it brings to light a bit of history that seems to have been forgotten—indeed, that was never generally known. I allude to the fact that the first chartered institution in the world for the education of women—one authorized to confer degrees—was founded and conducted in the town of Washington, Mississippi—the Elizabeth Female College. More than one institution has claimed that honor. I have done my best, in both church and secular papers, to help establish the fact that the honor belongs to the Wesleyan Female College at Macon, Georgia. But according to this history the Elizabeth College was turning out graduates before the Wesleyan was started. From now on, as occasion may require, I am going to contend that the first place belongs to Mississippi. And I shall glory somewhat in the fact that the Elizabeth College was a Methodist institution.

But did you ever stop to think, Brother Carley, how many "first things" belong to Mississippi, and in how many things Mississippi was "first?" Preachers of the very first rank were Mississippians: Galloway, Winans and Wheat. So were politicians and statesmen: Jefferson Davis, Justice Lamar and Benton. The latter was about the age of Lamar; his rival, and opponent in politics. He opposed secession to the last, but when war was declared he drew his sword and was first in the fight, and among the first to fall in battle. Better blood was never shed on Southern soil. And to-day I do not know a man of a brighter intellect than John Sharp Williams of Mississippi. Besides, Mississippi was among the first States of the Union to adopt and enforce prohibition, and the very first to adopt the Eighteenth Constitutional Amendment. So far there is no discount on the record of Mississippi.

Is there any discount at all? I am sorry to say there is. Mississippi, so far as the two Conferences of our church in the State are concerned, is among the most backward of all the States in Sunday school enterprise, judging by the number of Sunday school members enrolled in all departments. There are in the Mississippi Conference 60,479 church members, and only 34,764 members in the Sunday school. In the North Mississippi Conference there are 62,547 church members, and only 34,609 members in the Sunday school. The difference between the church membership and Sunday school enrollment is too great to be healthy. Where is the trouble and how can it be remedied? The larger towns, especially in the bounds of the North Mississippi Conference, are mightily stirred, and are active. What are the country Sunday schools doing? Let us hear from them.

THE NEW ORLEANS DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The New Orleans District Conference adjourned Friday, April 8, at 1 p.m., after having enjoyed the hospitality of Bogalusa, and the membership of the First Methodist Church of that place, for two days. Letters received by the pastor there since adjournment indicate that Bogalusa made a fine impression on her guests, and the preachers and delegates left believing that Bogalusa has a live church composed of live people. Some of the preachers went so far as to suggest that a change of pastors at Bogalusa might help (them) some, providing they were appointed in the present pastor's stead.

Rev. J. G. Snelling, the presiding elder, was on the job, prompt with all business, ready with all information, with every detail under his thumb, and a wholesome interest in the work of every charge. Rev. Alonzo Early, our Sunday school man, was ready with songs as well as Sunday school subjects, and with Rev. W. D. Kleinschmidt at the piano the delegates enjoyed spirited singing. The secretary was elected for the tenth time in succession. Committees were appointed and the opening session was on the way. Dr. W. L. Duren, of Rayne Memorial, preached the opening sermon. Other sermons were preached by the presiding elder on Wednesday night, Rev. E. N. Evans on Thursday night, and Rev. R. H. Harper on Friday morning. All the sermons were such good feasts as to warrant the saying that all enjoyed the conference.

Samuel L. Reilly, of the Louisiana Avenue congregation, was elected district lay leader. The following were elected as delegates to the Annual Conference: C. W. Koylerham, L. Myers, S. H. Meyer, Mrs. J. A. Miford, Mrs. J. L. Runk, all of New Orleans, W. L. Ellis of Shreveport, W. H. Jennings and K. L. Johnson of Bogalusa, W. P. Thompson, H. W. James of New Orleans, C. D. Watson, all of New Orleans, were elected alternate delegates.

The pastors' report showed 221 added into the church by baptism and 14,000 total enrollment in all departments of the Sunday school of 3,557, 20 organized Bible classes, 162 members of the Epworth League, 10 members of the Woman's Missionary Society, and 14 volunteers for the service. Seven of the churches on the district showed 100 members up to date, while others reported numbers behind. In all, the reports showed a spirit of hope.

One of the features of the conference was the fine fellowship that prevailed from the beginning to the end. The three main dinners were held in the spacious parlors of the Y. W. C. A., which is the finest building of the kind in the city. One of the banquets at that building was used by the ladies for the reception of the delegates and Bogalusan friends. All dining together, and song and laughter and many other good things filled the hours between eating. In all, we had a good time.

CHINA FAMINE SITUATION DESPERATE.

By Bishop Walter R. Lambuth.

The latest news from the famine district through the correspondence of the Christian Herald is cabled as follows:

"Famine situation desperate; Herald Relief promptly requests one million dollars before April. Three dollars for each starving saves a life."

While we have already reached the month of April the famine is still on, and thousands of lives can yet be saved during the next eight weeks. There should, therefore, be no letting up in our efforts.

It is gratifying to note from the letter of Mr. W. H. Robinson of the American Board at Pekingfu that the Chinese Government is doing all in its power to help the relief work. It has put a surtax on mail matter, on railroad tickets and other sources of revenue. It has given free passes on its railroads and free transportation of food stuffs. There can be no doubt about the fact that this combined effort to save the millions of people in the famine region has been one of the greatest unifying forces China has known. The co-operation of those representing various nationalities, creeds, and classes is also very gratifying. Business men, officials, students, college professors and missionaries are giving their time and strength without stint. Mention is made of one committee made up of a French priest, an Italian priest, and one from Holland; English missionaries representing the China Inland Mission, a Swede of the Salvation Army, and two Americans. In addition to these, there are representatives respectively from the Standard Oil Company of New York, and of the British and American Tobacco Company. They are all working together animated by one purpose.

A unique feature of relief work is that of gathering the children together in village schools. The teachers are out of employment and can be utilized for this work since they themselves must be fed. Mr. Robinson writes: "These schools will be centers from which other relief work may be carried on. The children who attend these schools are chosen from the most needy families, without regard to religious affiliation, to purchase enough grain to keep body and soul together."

At the time of writing, the cold was intense. The ground was covered with snow, the temperature was below zero, it was almost impossible to get fuel from the fields or to dig up the young wheat sprouts which many have been living on, in the absence of any other kind of food. The situation is desperate and further relief must be given and in generous measure without delay or we will be too late.

The Christian Herald is to be congratulated upon its China famine fund, having reached a figure which approximated five hundred thousand dollars; but we must all redouble our efforts.

Since writing the above Rev. R. T. Henry writes me: "It would delight you to see the spirit the Chinese Christians have manifested in helping the famine district. The Christians of Soochow secured more than seven thousand garments in one week to send to the famine district, as well as additional contributions."

SOME UNIQUE EXPERIENCES.

By Rev. T. W. Adams.

In all particulars a Methodist pastor's life is anything but dull and insipid. It is true that many of his duties are of daily performance, and, if there were no variations from his regular work, it might become irksome and perfunctory. But there is a great variety of happenings that gives a bright color to his life. He and his family are often entertained at dinings and social gatherings in the homes of his parishioners and friends. If he has the finer qualities of intelligence and good fellowship, his many friends add greatly to his comfort and cheer.

Besides these gracious social courtesies, his life is enlivened by unique experiences that come only to a preacher. Some of these are not so pleasant at the time, but become memories as the years pass that give him great pleasure. A Methodist preacher's life, as a rule, is far from being monotonous and dull. Some such experiences have come my way. I regard a number of them as unique. The recollection of them once in a while gives me pleasurable merriment. There was no fun in them, however, to brag of when they occurred. Isn't it wonderful, how mellowing is the influence of the passing years? We sometimes laugh at the recollection of things that made us cry in the long ago.

I was suffering very much last night, and while lying abed seeking a surcease of misery I gave full reins to my memory to meander among the early years of my ministerial life. Incidents came up readily and made me almost forget my bodily distress.

I recalled the day I was licensed to preach, and the unusual personal influence at work on that occasion. The quarterly conference was held at Lone Pine, Madison County. Rev. H. H. Montgomery, of precious memory, a great preacher, was the presiding elder; Rev. A. T. Tidwell was the pastor, and George W. Galloway, uncle of Bishop Galloway, was the secretary. That was to me a great conference. Its influences have continued with me through the many years that have passed.

Looking back to that day, I can see the Spirit's leadings in everything that touched me. In the early morning my father said to me, "You are going to the quarterly conference?" I answered, "Yes," scarcely realizing that I had any choice in the matter. It seemed the suggested answer from above. After the sermon the pastor said to me, "You want license to preach, don't you?" I said, "Yes." I seemed to have no mind of my own. The Spirit was prompting questions and answers that settled things. In my earliest years of intelligent study I knew I was called to preach. There was no doubt of it in my mind, but I was unwilling to assume the responsibilities of the holy calling. I was strangely led into it on that October day in 1874. Did any other preacher ever come in just that way?

Before the day closed, Brother Tidwell made me promise to preach at Madisonville, about two weeks off. I was there on time, and was met by a good congregation. The services were by no means satisfactory to me. The singing was mighty poor, the Bible was exasperatingly mutilated—one lesson I had chosen to read was entirely gone, the second was partly gone. I had a most disconcerting time finding proper Scripture readings, and my text was entirely too altitudinous—I just couldn't measure up to its scope. It was, "Never man spake like this man." Was there ever another gospel fledgling who dared to take such a pretentious text? It is not probable. The text was too big for me, and, of course, I made a humiliating failure.

It was a good sermon, Henry; I had written it with great care; it fairly bristled with fine points; it was finely embellished; it sparkled with beautiful poetry and choice rhetoric. Feeling that my future largely depended upon a strikingly hopeful beginning, I gave vigorous care to its preparation. For sure it was some sermon! My great mistake was that I did not thoroughly memorize it. I was sure it would not do to read it. I forgot it in the excitement of delivery—I got all mixed up—I got last things first, and first things last. That experience cured me of writing sermons—I have never written one since for pulpit use. I have never used notes even from that day to this.

My second sermon was preached at Sharon, about two Sundays later. In that short time I had developed a considerable amount of common sense. I used a very suitable text for my age and acquirements in the ministry—"Behold the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world." I felt like I was improving mighty fast.

In 1887 I held a meeting in my church at Magnolia, doing my own preaching in the first part of it. At one night service there was a fine congregation and a good deal of seriousness. "If we confess our sins, He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins," was the text. With great earnestness, I urged the necessity of humble confession as a prerequisite to pardon. I was incisive and emphatic. A large man, a typical German, sat in front of me about midway the church. In great excitement he arose and advanced towards the pulpit, shaking his hand at me, and said, "I see you point your finger at me every time." His intent was to do some violent thing, manifestly. The town marshal, sitting in the front pew, seeing him threateningly advance on me, sprang upon him and, aided by several men of the congregation, threw him on the floor and covered him. There was a lively mix-up. That was the most unique and exciting experience I have ever had while conducting a service. Has any preacher ever had anything to beat it?

Many local preachers are good and useful men. Such are great helpers to the pastors. But occasionally we find some who are supersensitive, and they embarrass and hinder the leaders. I had one of this kind in my early pastoral life. He was a religious and zealous worker, but was aged and sensitive. He had a miserably cracked voice. It was painful to hear him preach. Nobody wanted to hear him. He had an exalted opinion of his preaching ability and took it unkindly when not called on.

I held a meeting at his home church in the summer of 1884. Fortunately, I had a visiting preacher with me until near the close of the meeting. I was by myself the last day, and the old brother saw a chance to preach. I knew if I did not call on him, he would get mad, and if I did call on him, it would be fatal to the meeting. After prayerfully considering the matter, I decided to commend the old brother to the tender mercies of the Lord and do the preaching myself. In the afternoon service the Lord was present in great convicting power, and the altar was full of penitents seeking salvation. It was a great hour. Unfortunately, I called on the old preacher to lead the prayer. He began by thanking the Lord that what the preacher had said in the sermon was not true. He argued the matter with the Lord while he was on his knees, and showed that he was satisfied that he had demolished his pastor by proving that his sermon was pure heresy. What a damper on the meeting! Of course, nobody could be saved under such a prayer. Isn't it bad for a preacher to have such a case of "feelings?" It occurred to me that it would have been better for the old brother to pass unnoticed any lapse his young brother might have made.

Laughing and whispering during preaching services is intolerably naughty and bad. It always got on my nerves. Such behavior is an unreasonable breach of social proprieties, to say nothing of the profanity of it. I have wondered that the Lord's wrath did not destroy such offenders. It is not so frequent now as it once was. I have urged the church leaders to put a stop to it—telling them to use the law to protect the worshipers. But I have found great unwillingness on their part to take action. They were afraid of making somebody mad. They would allow the cause of God to suffer rather than have their personal relations disturbed. I never liked that attitude.

This passive attitude of the leaders forced me to deal with the matter. At first I dealt in caustic and violent rebukes—I made the offenders hot and mad. This not only drove people from me, but utterly unfitted me for preaching. I have been so mad in the pulpit that I felt more like fighting than preaching. I found that way was not good, and changed my tactics—I found a better way.

In a service at a country church, I was greatly disturbed by a man in the rear of the church trying to swap horses with a man sitting by him. He persisted in his course; I finally called the congregation to prayer. The offender became viciously mad and said that I had insulted him.

In the church of one of our best towns, at a night service, I was grievously disturbed by the young people. Some of them were teachers, who acted as if they were at a circus. I begged them to behave but to no avail. It grew worse rather than better. Finally I said, "I cannot preach and will not try, let us pray." After prayer I told them that I knew the guilty ones, and if they did not stop and be done with such flagrant and wicked behavior, I would see that every one of them should be sent to the county farm. "If you don't believe I mean what I say, come to me to-morrow morning and I will convince you." Monday morning explanations and apologies poured in on me. That episode broke up lawlessness in that church.

In the best church I ever served, a couple of young courting people acted very ugly at a night service. They became so absorbed in talking to each other that they lost all sense of their whereabouts. They were insensible of the fact that their voices were heard all over the church. I stopped talking, leaned my elbow on the book-board, chin in my hand, with eyes fastened on the couple. My eyes directed all eyes to them. It was possibly two minutes of this awful silence before they became aware that the only ones talking were themselves. They were painfully humiliated and became furiously mad at me. I had not said a word to them nor about them. The rebuke, though silent, was terrific. I found this way to be best in correcting disturbance of public worship.

REV. J. LOYD DECELL APPOINTED TO CENTRAL CHURCH, MERIDIAN, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: A telegram recently received from Bishop McMurtry announces the transfer of Rev. J. Loyd Decell, of Fresno, Calif., from the Pacific to the Mississippi Conference, and his appointment to Central M. E. Church, South, Meridian, Miss. Brother Decell expects to reach here on May 1, and will enter at once upon the duties of his important charge.

PAUL D. HARDIN, P. E.

TO THE PREACHERS OF THE JACKSON DISTRICT.

Please send me at once names of delegates to the District Conference. Try to find out how many will attend and let me know, and greatly oblige.

Three Cents Saves a Life for a Day!

Think of it! For this paltry sum, just a fraction more than letter postage, a human life can be sustained from sun to sun in a land where FAMINE stalks rampant and men are dying by the thousands every twenty-four hours.

Think of it, you well nourished, well clothed American Christian, as you sit in your protected home that probably has never felt the pinch of necessity!

Did three cents ever seem so small or mean so much as in this hour of China's supreme need? Do you know of any investment where returns are so large?

A penny will buy a meal—a dollar will sustain a life for a month—five dollars saves a family.

Buy China Life Saving Stamps

If you buy liberally, who knows but that you may save some babe from being drowned by its frantic mother to end its sufferings, or that you may prevent the sale of some young girl into servitude to provide food for the rest of the family, or that you may preserve some youth to grow into a great force for righteousness in a heathen land?

Your missionary societies should have them on sale. They should be obtainable at every church and Sunday school in the South. If your society does not have them, the secretary should write at once for a supply to MISS DAISY DAVIES, Stamp Sales Director, Southern Committee, China Famine Fund, 502 Candler Building, Atlanta, Georgia.

DO NOT LET THE PURCHASE OF THESE STAMPS KEEP YOU FROM MAKING LARGER CONTRIBUTIONS TO THE FUND IF YOU ARE ABLE TO MAKE A SUBSTANTIAL DONATION IN THIS HOUR OF SUFFERING.

What Your Pennies Can Do:

- 1 cent buys a meal.
- 3 cents saves a life for a day.
- $1.00 saves a life for a month.
- $2.00 saves a mother and baby a month.
- $5.00 saves a family for a month.
- $10.00 saves a mother and babe till harvest.
- $25.00 saves a family till harvest.

The stamps are intended to afford the poor, the little children, and those who count their possessions in pennies to have a part in this Christian cause. It will defeat the object of the stamp sale for any one who should give ten, twenty-five or a hundred dollars to be satisfied with buying a few stamps. Give in proportion to your possessions!

Where To Send Your Contribution

If the Southern Committee for China Famine Fund has no representative in your community, give your contribution to your bank or send it to Vernon Munroe, Treasurer, China Famine Fund, Bible House, New York City.

Education for Wisdom

WE do not read of the three ignorant men from the East who came and saw the star and worshiped at Bethlehem.

They were not simply the three educated men. Some kinds of education are more dangerous than ignorance.

Wisdom is the fulfillment of the complete man, not simply the sharpening of his intellect or the training of his hands. It includes the will and the emotions, the ideals and motive in life.

The Christian College develops all sides of the student. Its product is wisdom, not knowledge. Its students follow the star.

TALKING IN THEIR SLEEP.

"You think I am dead,"
The apple tree said,
"Because I have never a leaf to show—
Because I stoop,
And my branches droop,
And the dull gray mosses over me grow!
But I'm alive in trunk and shoot;
The buds of next May
I fold away—
But I pity the withered grass at my foot."

"You think I am dead,"
The quick grass said,
"Because I have parted with stem and blade!
But under the ground
I am safe and sound,
With the snow's thick blanket over me laid.
I'm all alive, and ready to shoot
Should the spring of the year
Come dancing here—
But I pity the flowers without branch or root."

"You think I am dead,"
A soft voice said,
"Because not a branch or root I own!
I never have died,
But close I hide
In a plummy seed that the wind has sown.
Patient I wait through the long winter hours;
You will see me again—
I shall laugh at you then,
Out of the eyes of a hundred flowers!"

THE NEW GAME.

By Willie C. Page.

"Aunt Ruth!" cried Lynn Weston as she ran into the living room and banged the door behind her. "Miss Joyce, our music teacher, told the class this afternoon that Annie Humphries was the most lovable girl she knew." Lynn laughed lightly as she made a ball of her tam and sweater and tossed them across the room to the davenport. "Do, please tell me exactly what she meant, for I would like to be a lovable girl myself, if I only knew how."

"My opinion of a lovable girl," said Aunt Ruth, as she folded the tea-cloth she was embroidering and sat restfully back in her chair, "is, first, she is true and sincere; she does not fret or repine over reverses that come to all, or if she can't have her way; she is a good sister—will sew buttons on Fred's overcoat without scolding him all the while for being careless and rude; she will brush little sister's hair and not jerk and pull until the child cries out with pain."

Lynn blushed, but said nothing, for she had done these only this morning.

"A lovable girl," continued Aunt Ruth, "is always willing to help others. If Nell's shoe-string is in a hard knot, she with deft fingers will come to the rescue without threatening to dislocate the little girl's limbs. She will entertain the little ones in loving consideration of her tired mother. She is neat and tidy; she has a place for everything."

"O, Aunt Ruth, it is so hard to remember all these little things and have a good time," said Lynn, looking about the disordered room—her tennis racket on a chair, her books scattered on the floor, her muddy overshoes under the library-table.

"Lynn, the foundation of every girl's life is laid while she is young. Acts formed then become habits; soon she will perform them naturally. If every girl could be made to realize the importance of this, her life and others would be immeasurably benefited and enriched."

Lynn got up and began vigorously to put the room in perfect order.

"Go on," she said earnestly.

"Dear," said Aunt Ruth, softly, "every girl was intended to be lovely and lovable, just as a rose-bud is fair and fragrant; but if she is selfish, ill-natured, the atmosphere she creates will be anything but sweet. Every girl can be lovable if she will only try hard enough; or she can be just the contrary.

"Let her be helpful, cheery, tactful, unselfish, refusing to fret over her disappointments, doing all in her power to make others happy. This, Lynn, is what Miss Joyce meant by saying Annie was a lovable girl. It is not difficult, if you begin early to form kindly, lovable thoughts and habits, for they grow with your growth."

From that day, Lynn began to play the new game of being lovable. Dear children, won't you try, too?

A CHILD'S GARDEN.

By May H. Foster.

"God the first garden made, and the first city, Cain."

A child's garden and a garden for a child may be separate things. Every child should have a garden all his own, which he himself has made. We must not make it for him if we want him really and truly to love it.

Get the ground ready for him, but allow him to help even in this preliminary work. He will require tools fitted for his small hands, and a wheelbarrow in which to cart away stones and trash. Valuable lessons in horticulture can be given even before the ground is broken. Have patience, infinite patience. Let your purpose be the education of the child rather than the raising of flowers.

Give him seeds of the common annuals that "grow all by themselves," with a corner, perhaps, for perennials. A few vegetable seeds will be appreciated, too; and, as no small gardener can get along without a water-pot, it will be well to choose the shadiest place for the raising of lettuce, and to place no restriction upon the amount of water used in that spot. The lesson that some flowers need more and others less water, is now being taught; also that some things grow better in the shade and others in the sun.

When the little one pulls up a plant to see how the root looks, don't scold him. How else shall he learn? Tenderly place the flower back in the earth, expressing your opinion concerning the probability of its destruction, but also the hope that it may survive. The opportunity for a valuable lesson relating to the transplanting of flowers is now given, in which is hidden the moral that a good gardener scarcely ever seizes a plant by the top and forcibly removes it from the ground when he desires it to live after being replanted.

Flowers are doubly dear when they are the product of our own love and care, yet a half-dozen pansy plants purchased at the greenhouse will add pleasure while waiting for the other things to grow, and prove much more satisfactory than the pansies that we raise from the slow-growing seed.

Teach the child how to pick the blossoms without injuring the plants—a lesson that some adults have not yet learned. Have a vine, perhaps a morning-glory, that will run up on the wall, or fence, or over a heap of stones, and another that runs on the ground. A cucumber vine will answer for the latter. Have something that will bear its fruit under the earth, like radishes, and something else, like beans or peas, that fruits above the earth.

The training of a little gardener develops inventiveness and skill; it gives him occupation, a physical and mental development, and amusement. Give to one child overalls, bare feet, garden tools, a watering-pot, and a back yard; give to another a nurse, daily outings in the city parks, which must be reached by walking over hot flagstones, and a stock of toys in the nursery. Both are well-cared-for children, both may be equally well physically, but the back-yard boy will be the happier.

O you unfortunate parents of still more unfortunate children, who have no back yard; who live in apartment houses where the janitors would not let your children play in the yard if there were one—what are you going to do? Even the sandpile may be denied to you; but why not move where you can have at least a sandpile for the children? It makes a fairly satisfactory substitute for a garden. Combined with small shovels, rakes, and pails, it contains infinite possibilities. Ponds, and even mountains, have been builded from it; caves so large that a Teddy-bear can actually be hidden therein have been dug in it; imitations of gardens and parks have been raked down and laid off from it—and health has sprung out of it.

Clean, sun-kissed sand is the very next best thing to a back-yard garden; the difference is largely in a lack, in the sandpile, of the esthetic service and education that are gleaned in the work of caring for flowers that are real. For flowers are living entities, and when one cares for them he is doing a little of the world's work. The sandpile, however, trains the imagination, gives the child employment out-of-doors, and strengthens the physical forces; therefore it, too, is valuable. Zion's Herald.

"TIME OUT."

The Modern Way.

Father: "Have you made up your mind to stay in?"

Daughter: "No, I've made up my face to go out."—The Lawrentian.

They Do, Indeed.

"Pickles and charlotte russe, hey? These women give some queer orders, don't they?" "Yes, sir," asserted the waiter. "What's yours?" "Piece of hot mince pie with two portions of ice cream on it."—Exchange.

The Country's Need.

The visitor to the capitol at Washington was accompanied by his small son. The little boy watched from the gallery when the House came to order.

"Why did he minister pray for all those men, father?" he questioned.

"He didn't. He looked them over and prayed for the country," was the answer.

Coming Back.

The other day a man dashed into the Grand Central Station with just one minute to catch the Twentieth Century. He made the ticket window in two jerks.

"Quick; give me a round trip ticket!" he gasped.

"Where to?"

"B-b-back here, you fool!"—Awgwan.

Looking To the Future.

"Now Willie," said the generous father as he and his little son were gazing into a tailor's shop window, "I am going to buy you a new pair of trousers, and you shall choose them. Which pair do you want?"

After a moment's hesitation, Willie said:

"Please, father, may I have the pair marked 'Cannot be beaten'?"—Examiner.

Fair Enough.

They wanted him badly at the college, but unfortunately there was an entrance examination from which not even the most promising of Rugby three-quarters could claim complete exemption. It was only an oral questioning—and yet one had to get fifty per cent to pass. The matter was left in the hands of a sporting young don, and his protegee got through. Later on it appeared that only two questions had been asked. "The first," said the examiner, "was the date of Trafalgar; he got that wrong. Then I asked him what the chemical formula for sulphuric acid was. He said, 'I don't know—really I don't. Well, that was right, for it was obvious that he didn't know. So I passed him with fifty per cent.'"—London Morning Post.

DIRECTIONS.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after three or four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise, use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least an inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

Editorial

WE APPRECIATE THE RESPONSE.

We gratefully record our appreciation of the response that has been made by many of our pastors to our recent appeal in behalf of the circulation of the Advocate. We are not unmindful of the fact that our preachers are busy men; all the more, therefore, do we commend those who have found time to put the church paper into the homes of their people. We are earnestly hoping that those who have not yet given attention to this important matter will do so at the earliest possible moment. We firmly believe that it is possible for us to have a minimum circulation of one-tenth of the membership in every pastoral charge if the effort is diligently made; and we are encouraged to believe that all our preachers are going to make the effort. Blessings upon them!

FORWARD MOVEMENTS CONFER WITH ONE ANOTHER.

We learn from an official communication from the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America that representatives of practically all the forward movements of the various denominations met in conference on Saturday, March 19, in New York, at the invitation of the Federal Council, to consider their common problems and to learn from one another's experience. The program of the conference centered around the following five topics:

1. A report from each movement as to its origin and results and lessons learned from its experience.
2. A discussion of the methods by which the larger giving of the people, stimulated by these movements, may be made permanent.
3. Consideration of the various problems which have arisen and which are now before the movements for solution.
4. The question of the future of these movements and their relationship to the other agencies of their denominations.
5. How these movements can be most helpful to one another through future conference or in other appropriate ways.

A committee on findings was appointed to present an analysis of the present situation in the forward movements as disclosed by the discussions of the day and to consider the whole question as to the desirability of future relationships to one another. This committee on findings is to report at another conference to be held some time within the next few months.

The following organizations were represented at the conference at the office of the Federal Council:

The Committee on Conservation and Advance of the Council of the Boards of Benevolence of the Methodist Episcopal Church; the Centenary Movement of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South; the Congregational World Movement; the New World Movement of the Northern Baptist Convention; the New Era Movement of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A.; the Nation-wide Campaign of the Protestant Episcopal Church; the New World Movement of the United Presbyterian Church; the Forward Movement of the Reformed Church in the United States; the Progress Campaign of the Reformed Church in America; the Forward Movement of the Friends; the United Enlistment Movement of the Church of the United Brethren; the Larger Life Movement of the Moravian Church.

THE REVIEW FOR APRIL.

The April number of the Methodist Quarterly Review has reached our desk. We have not had time yet to read it, but we have glanced through it enough to know that some good things are ahead of us. One feature of the Review under its present editorial management commends itself to us very strongly—the number of articles appearing in it from the pens of writers in our own church. It is well supplied, however, with contributions that reflect the best thought of the world at large. It is a publication of which we may well be proud, though our pride certainly is not reflected in the number of our people who read it. It is worth a good deal more than it costs to the thinking man.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. G. L. McNeece requests us to state that his post office address is Morton, Miss., instead of Trenton, Miss.

Rev. W. F. Rogers, of Coffeeville, Miss. is greatly pleased with the progress of the work in his charge. He serves a fine people.

At the recent session of the Baltimore Conference, Rev. N. B. Harmon, Jr., was appointed to the Rockville charge, Washington District.

Rev. A. L. Davenport, of Lambert, Miss., writes that all indications point to a great year on that charge. He is diligently getting ready for the Educational Campaign.

Dr. J. T. Sawyer preached at the Westwego Presbyterian church on a recent Sunday afternoon. He reports that the congregation was large and the services delightful.

Bishop W. F. McMurry was announced to preach at the First Methodist Church, Greenville, Miss., last Sunday. The good Bishop is active in forwarding the interests of his episcopal district.

Good reports come to us of the work at Franklin, La., where Rev. Jno. F. Foster is pastor. The congregations are good, and the finances are up to date.

We learn through a friend who is familiar with the facts, that Rev. A. Joe Beasley and Rev. L. F. Alford are doing fine work at West End and Kingston, Laurel, Miss., respectively.

Rev. and Mrs. L. H. Floyd, of Horn Lake, Miss., announce the birth of a daughter on March 31. The Advocate extends congratulations, and prays that Heaven's richest blessing may rest upon the little one.

The Cole Lectures at Vanderbilt University for this year were delivered by Rev. John Kelman, D. D., pastor of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, New York City, on the subject, "The Foundations of Faith."

Everything is moving along smoothly at Bucatunna, Miss. The pastor, Rev. John W. Ramsey, is active in every good work. He has recently been invited to preach the closing sermon for the Bucatunna High School, and he will preach the Commencement sermon for the Wayne County Agricultural High School on April 24.

A note from E. T. McKee, of Wisner, La., who was licensed as a local preacher two years ago, informs us that he is doing such work as he finds opportunity to do, and that he is happy in the service.

A note from Rev. J. S. Maxey, Ethel, Miss., informs us that he is conducting a revival meeting at that place. When he wrote, he had just closed a great meeting at Zama, in which he was assisted by Brother Wilson.

We regret that the report of our Sunday school at Amory, Miss., did not reach us in time for insertion in the Advocate last week. It was as follows: Nine Plus Class—attendance, 60, offering, $5.21; total attendance, 368, total offering, $30.16.

We learn from the "Big Brother" that Rev. W. C. Galceran, our pastor at Indianola, Miss., recently underwent a serious operation at the King's Daughters' Hospital at Greenville, Miss. We rejoice to know that his recovery has been rapid.

Miss Susie M. Juden, a valued member of the staff of the Louisiana Sunday School Association, has been lent to the International Sunday School Association for a year to do missionary Sunday school work in Cuba and South America, under the support of the Louisiana Association.

The Lewis Brothers' Quartet, composed of Rev. B. W. Lewis, of Eden, Miss., Rev. H. P. Lewis, of Pontotoc, Miss., Rev. J. M. Lewis, of Collins, Miss., and Rev. O. S. Lewis, of Laurel, Miss., will assist Rev. A. Joe Beasley in a meeting at West End, Laurel, beginning next Sunday.

Brother J. H. Ramsey, of Thorn, Miss., in renewing his subscription to the Advocate states that he has been a subscriber to it for 31 years—a fine record. Brother Ramsey takes occasion to speak very highly of the services of his pastor, Rev. B. F. Bullard.

Rev. W. H. Giles, our pastor at Slidell, La., is conducting a meeting this week, in which he is being assisted by Rev. L. R. Sparks of Covington, and Rev. J. E. Selfe, of Epworth, New Orleans. Brother Sparks is doing the preaching, and Brother Selfe leading the singing.

The Life Service Department of the Christian Education Movement reports that between three and four thousand Life Service cards have already been sent into the office. The cards are still coming in large numbers, so it is expected that many more than $5,000, the goal set by the Commission, will be received.

The Greenville District, North Mississippi Conference, is making a fine showing in its finances, in spite of the prevailing financial depression. Many of the charges increased their assessments for the support of the ministry this year—and they are paying promptly. Some of the charges are up to date with their benevolent collections. Rev. James H. Felts is the presiding elder.

Rev. T. L. Oakes, of Cockrum, Miss., writes that he is devoting much attention to the Educational Campaign, and is trying to get everything ready for the subscription period, May 29-June 5. The Sunday schools of his charge have shown a marked increase in attendance since the beginning of the second quarter. Other departments are showing up well.

Rev. A. T. McIlwain, presiding elder of the Columbus District, North Mississippi Conference, has prepared a most attractive program for the 55th annual session of the Columbus District Conference to be held at Weir, Miss., April 22-24, a copy of which he has kindly sent us. We appreciate his cordial invitation to attend the conference, and wish it were possible for us to accept it.

"The Methodist Clubman," the official magazine of the Methodist Men's Club, has just been issued in the form of a beautiful magazine, with cover in three colors. Pastors can secure sample copies for their laymen by sending the names and addresses of their prominent laymen to The Methodist Clubman, 808 Murchison Bldg., Wilmington, N. C. Rev. Geo. Stanley Frazer, D. D., is the General Secretary and Treasurer of the organization.

A special Laymen's Week program at Lake Junaluska is being planned for this summer by a committee of the Southern Assembly, consisting of Bishop James Cannon, Jr., John R. Pepper, and W. H. Stockham. A program is being planned for the week of August 8-13 which is expected to bring to Lake Junaluska enough laymen from all parts of the connection to tax the Assembly's capacity. The outstanding national figures in the business, the religious, and the political fields are being invited to speak during this week. The program and speakers will be ready for announcement soon. Full information can be secured by addressing the Southern Assembly, Lake Junaluska, N. C.

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: Rev. W. M. Williams, Purvis, Miss., 3; Rev. T. G. Adair, Marietta, Miss., 3; Rev. J. J. Garner, Sidon, Miss., 33 (29 at Cruger—"Every Family"); Rev. J. S. Maxey, Ethel, Miss., 2; Mrs. J. C. Summer, Pelahatchie, Miss., 7; Rev. W. C. Beasley, New Albany, Miss., 7; Rev. J. H. Jolly, Heidelberg, Miss., 2; Rev. T. B. Thrower, Mathiston, Miss., 2; Rev. G. L. McNeece, Morton, Miss., 2; Rev. T. L. Oakes, Cockrum, Miss., 4; Rev. W. B. Jones, Crystal Springs, Miss., 5; Rev. C. M. Crossley, Hattiesburg, Miss., 14; Rev. D. R. McDougal, McCool, Miss., 3; Rev. J. E. Selfe, Epworth, New Orleans, 27.

THE MOVEMENT MOVES IN MISSISSIPPI.

Dear Brother Carley: Since writing you last, I have held the Newton District Set-Up Meeting in which we had 100 per cent present. Brother Hopkins, the District Financial Director, and J. A. Moore, the presiding elder, had planned well and the people came. The meeting was a success.

At McComb City we had a rainy day, but quite a number of the preachers and lay leaders were present. Drs. Cooper and Ellis have this work well in hand and are making it go.

The Brookhaven District received the challenge of the Jackson District to put the matter over, and I am sure that the contest will be watched with interest.

The Vicksburg District was the last of the number. While it was a disagreeable day, our attendance was about fifty in number. Dr. Rolfe Hunt, the Financial Director, has the work well in hand and he is desperately in earnest. Brother Jones is leading the district with his usual zeal and earnestness and they are expecting a great victory.

The Secretary is under special obligations to Dr. Jones, of Newton, Rev. G. H. Thompson, of McComb, of whom we have heard so much praise, and Rev. Robt. Selby, of Vicksburg, of whom his presiding elder said there was no more efficient man in the Conference. I should have mentioned the name of J. L. Smith, of Mendenhall, who is looking forward not only to carrying the Educational Campaign to success, but is building a new church at D'Lo. He and his wife entertained the Secretary and made him feel at home. Happy is the traveler who falls into this delightful home.

This is the close of our District Set-Up Meetings. The work now goes to each pastor's charge. I earnestly feel that with the loyalty of our preachers and laymen we will carry this work to a successful ending.

J. M. MORSE,

Educational Secretary.

CORINTH DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

Rev. W. M. McIntosh, one of our general evangelists, will preach Tuesday night, at 7:30.

What?—A royal welcome, Christian hospitality, a full program, a good time. A full attendance is very much desired. Let pastors send in names of those who will attend, to Rev. W. W. Jones, Gun-town, or to W. C. McCay, Baldwyn, Miss.

The Editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate is specially invited.

J. B. RANDOLPH, P. E.

THE BATON ROUGE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Baton Rouge District Conference will meet at Amite, May 25-26, opening for work at 9 o'clock a.m., Wednesday. It will be necessary for preachers and delegates on the Y. & M. V. Ry., to leave Baton Rouge via the Hammond and Eastern at 2:45 p.m., Tuesday, to be on hand for the opening of the conference.

Rev. N. E. Joyner, pastor of First Church, Baton Rouge, will preach the opening sermon, Tuesday, May 24, at 7:30 p.m. Let all the preachers and delegates who can, be present for the opening sermon.

Begin at once to elect your delegates and send names to me and to Rev. L. N. Hoffpauir, of Amite City.

Committees are as follows: For License to Preach and Recommendation for Admission—J. W. Booth, L. W. Cain and T. D. Lipscomb; for Orders—L. I. McCain, F. B. Hill and A. J. Coburn.

Please bring your Quarterly Conference Records for examination.

Brethren, let us pray for a great conference. Coming as it does just before the time set for the canvass for the funds for education, this conference should get a great inspiration among us all for the important work before us. Bishop McMurry will drop in on us and help us out if he can possibly get to us.

J. W. LEE, P. E.

NOTICE.

To the Pastors in Sardis District.

Dear Brethren: Please send me names of all delegates, and members of District Conference who will attend the District Conference, to be held in Senatobia, May 3-5.

This is important, so please be prompt in sending me names.

Cordially,

R. O. BROWN.

TO THE PASTORS OF THE GREENWOOD DISTRICT.

Dear Brethren: As you all know, our District Conference will convene May 10 to 13. If you have not done so, please elect your delegates and send names to me as soon as you can.

A. L. DAVENPORT,

Lambert, Miss.

FRENCH MISSION DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The French Mission District Conference will convene at St. Martinsville, La., May 6-8. Those delegates planning to attend please note that trains No. 5 coming from New Orleans, and No. 6 from Houston, are the only trains that make connection at Cade Station with the St. Martinsville Branch.

M. HEBERT, P. E.

GRENADA DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Grenada District Conference will meet in Coffeeville, Miss., at 2:30 o'clock p. m., on May 4, and will continue through the afternoon session, May 6. All members are urged to come prepared to remain throughout the entire time. Committee to examine applicants for license to preach: W. M. Langley, T. M. Bradley, W. R. Lott.

R. A. TUCKER, P. E.

TO THE PASTORS AND SUPERINTENDENTS, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Brethren: The Sunday School Board is undertaking to do the best work in its history this year. The work is moving nicely. We need your help. The time is nearly here for Sunday School Day. We are asking for a liberal offering this time, for we greatly need it to do our best work. Our funds will be exhausted by June. Before, we have been able to borrow money to tide us over, but times are such that the banks have not the money to advance us as they have. Will you please have your Sunday School Day promptly and let me have the collection at once? This will help us out greatly. I am going to count on you.

J. E. STEPHENS, Treasurer,

New Albany, Miss.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI SUNDAY SCHOOL CONTEST.

We have received the following reports for the North Mississippi Sunday school contest for April 17:

Greenwood: Men's Bible Class—attendance, 94; total attendance, 394, total offering, $26.17.

West Point: Clisby Class—attendance, 51, offering, $2.45; remainder of school—attendance, 227, offering, $5.38.

By Roger W. Babson.

(Mr. W. E. Brock, of Chattanooga, one of the most active laymen of the Holston Conference, wrote recently to his friend, Mr. Roger W. Babson, for a statement concerning the value of Christian education. Mr. Babson is perhaps the best known statistician in America, a man whose opinions and conclusions are given high rating in America's world of business and finance. His statements, here given, are worthy of the consideration of all church people, of all patriotic American citizens).

The need of the hour is not more factories or materials, not more railroads or steamships, not more armies or more navies, but rather more Christian education. The prosperity of our country depends on the motives and purposes of the people. These motives and purposes are directed in the right course only through religion. Legislation, bounties, or force, are of no avail in determining man's attitude toward life.

Religion, like everything else of value, must be taught. It is possible to get more religion in industry and business only through the development of Christian education. With the forces of evil, backed by men and money, systematically organized to destroy, we must back with men and money, all campaigns for Christian education.

We are willing to give our property and even our lives when our country calls in time of war. Yet the call of Christian education is to-day of even greater importance than was ever the call of the army and navy. I say this because we shall never live to see America attacked from without, but we may at any time see our best institutions attacked from within.

I am not offering Christian education as a protector of property. Nearly all the great progressive and liberal movements of history have been born in the hearts of Christian educators. I do, however, insist that the safety of our sons and daughters, as they go out on the street this very night, is due to the influence of the preachers and the teachers rather than to the influence of the policemen and law makers. Yes, the safety of our nations, including all groups, depends on Christian education. Furthermore, at no time in our history has it been more greatly needed.

We insure our homes and factories, our automobiles, and our business through mutual and stock insurance companies. But the same amount of money invested in Christian education would give far greater results. Besides, Christian education can insure what no corporation can insure, namely, prosperity.

As the great life insurance companies are spending huge sums on doctors, scientific investigations, and district nurses to improve the health of the nation, so we business men should spend huge sums to develop those fundamental religious qualities of integrity, industry, faith and service, which make for true prosperity. I repeat, the need of the hour is not more factories or materials; not more railroads or steamships; not more armies or navies—but rather more Christian education.

$1.00 spent for developing a water power or reducing a railroad grade lasts 5 generations.

$1.00 spent in the service of God lasts for eternity.

JAMES H. HARRIS was born in Hardeman County, Tennessee, November 1, 1863. He came to Tunica County when he was four years of age, and lived here till death removed him from among us. He was married to Miss Anna Black, and to this happy union were born six children, three of whom preceded him to the Great Beyond. His wife and three children survive him. Brother Harris' 53 years of citizenship in Tunica County made him a familiar figure to every man, woman, and child, perhaps, in the County and even beyond. His familiarity was no greater than his popularity. He was not a great public man, but in his quiet and unassuming manner won for himself a permanent place in the heart of every acquaintance. It was my happy privilege to receive Brother Harris into the church by faith and baptism. He proved his faith by his works. On March 24, 1921, the soul of James H. Harris left the church militant to join the church triumphant. Peace to his ashes!

RESOLUTIONS ON THE DEATH OF REV. H. B. WATKINS.

Be it resolved by the Board of Stewards of Central Methodist Church, Meridian, Miss., that whereas the Heavenly Father in his wisdom has seen fit to remove our beloved pastor, Rev. Herbert B. Watkins by death;

And whereas, Central Methodist Church has been greatly blessed throughout his entire ministry, not only in a material but in a spiritual way;

And whereas, the church has sustained a very great loss in the death of Brother Watkins, as he was a very positive factor for good in all organized forms of church work;

And whereas, the community as a whole, as well as the surrounding communities, have known and felt his wonderful influence in the advancement of the Kingdom of Heaven on earth;

And whereas, this Board, as well as all other organizations of our church, have looked to and found in Brother Watkins a friend, an adviser and an ideal leader in all times of need;

And whereas, by his unselfish devotion to the cause which he represented he has attempted and successfully accomplished more than his frail body was able to support, especially in the planning, construction and completion of a most magnificent house of worship for his congregation, which had been without a home for many years;

And whereas, in all and through all, he was directed by the Holy Spirit, was modest, never boastful nor wise in his own conceit;

And whereas, he was not only devoted to his work immediately in hand, but was ever ready, able and willing to serve in every cause looking to the betterment of his community and the happiness of the people generally;

Therefore be it Resolved, That his precious memory be enshrined in our hearts throughout all eternity and that we endeavor by devotion to the cause for which he spent his life to strive to emulate the example of his most useful life and thereby show our appreciation for the blessings bestowed upon us by the Heavenly Father's sending him to us and permitting him to remain until his final summons;

Be it further resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be furnished the Nashville and New Orleans Christian Advocates, the local papers, and also a copy furnished the family of our deceased brother; and that a copy of same be spread upon the minutes of the Board.

RESOLUTIONS ON THE DEATH OF REV. H. B. WATKINS.

To-day our hearts are bowed in deepest sorrow over the going away of our beloved pastor, Rev. H. B. Watkins. God has called him from his labors here among us, where he had labored so earnestly for nearly six years. He was always ready and so gladly helped us when we sought his advice in our many problems.

Through his advice and help our Society has grown in usefulness and greatly in spirituality. He was our guide and counsellor always.

We are thankful that, in the providence of an always good, kind Heavenly Father that Brother Watkins was sent to us to lead and teach us the great truths he stood for every day of his life.

Now in our weakness and sorrow we bow our heads and hearts before our Father's will. Knowing He doeth all things for the best, we say, "Thy will be done." We have a legacy left to us in the life and work of our departed leader that we may always have before us to help us do greater work for the Master's Kingdom and the church he loved so well.

Let us emulate his character. May it be a beacon light to us when the storms of life seem to gather, and clouds darken our pathway. May we, as he, look to Jesus, the Author and Finisher of every good and perfect gift, for the light of the blessed sun that will clear the mists away.

"A savior of humanity at rest!"

A gentle spirit gone to its reward; Another soul in Heaven's realm is blessed.

Another body lies in earthly sward, There to await the last eternal day; Oh, friends, weep not for him; in other spheres He still looks down and gives his blessings sweet.

His tender voice still bids you dry your tears,

And labor for the future joy complete, When life is over in this world away. In Heaven's realm, our dear one, daily pray

That we may join you in your home above,

When all eternity will be a day,

And every moment filled with purest love."

Therefore, be it resolved that while the Young Woman's Missionary Society of Central Methodist Church feel deeply our great loss, we bow humbly to the will of our Heavenly Father;

That we as a Society try to follow in our work the example set us by our beloved pastor.

That we spread these resolutions on the books of our Society, and that we send a copy to his beloved wife and his family; also to the church papers.

Signed by: Mrs. R. S. Porter, Mrs. W. R. McGee, Ella Wayne Ormond, Madge Stuart, Mrs. Mary B. Burroughs, Committee.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, God in His infinite wisdom has called from our midst our beloved friend and brother, J. H. Harris;

Now, therefore, be it resolved by the Baraca Class of the Tunica Methodist Sunday school, that in the death of Brother Harris the class and the church have lost a faithful and loyal member; the county a citizen, clean, upright and honest, respected by all; his family, a true, affectionate and dutiful husband and father;

That we as a class mourn the death of our departed brother, and extend to his bereaved family our sincere and deepest sympathy in their great loss.

Resolved, further, That a copy of these resolutions be handed to the bereaved family, and that a copy be sent to Tunica Times and New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

Signed by: Baraca Class, W. G. Jaquess, D. W. Coker, W. P. Warfield, J. F. Robinson, Committee.

A LETTER FROM SOOCHOW, CHINA.

Dear Brother Carley: There are various matters of interest out here about which I might write at length, but for this time I will only make brief mention of the dreadful famine in North China which threatens the lives of about 40,000,000 of people. Already many have become the victims of starvation, while millions have become easy prey of disease. In their dire distress and poverty, some have even become so desperate as to sell their children for a small sum of money; others have pulled down their houses, the timber from which they have sold as fuel; still others, too proud to beg or become the objects of charity, have committed suicide.

Among the forces that have been salvaging and who have ministered to their piteous needs, none have been so heroic and unselfish as the missionaries. Without the personal supervision and assistance which some are giving and the generous financial help which all are giving and have induced others to contribute, the plight of the famine sufferers would be considerably worse than it now is.

The Chinese are always slow to get into action, but once they are convinced of the urgency of the need they usually make a reasonable response. Unfortunately they have been woefully lethargic in coming to the rescue of their countrymen. This has partly been due to the superstitions of the Chinese. Some believe that the famine has been sent upon this certain area as a curse from the gods, and that it would be irreverent for them to interfere and try to save life. But their hesitancy has been largely due to the lack of trust that they have in each other, and especially any belonging to the official class. They seem to have the utmost confidence in the missionaries and are quite willing to have their funds dispensed through them. At present a nation-wide campaign is being waged for the raising of adequate funds.

As a rule, our church members are people of very moderate means. You would be greatly impressed with the spirit of concern which they have manifested, denying themselves that they might be able to give, making garments, sending food, etc.

Oh, that we had many more such Kingdom-builders in needy China! If we did have, it would be comparatively easy to cope with even a famine situation.

With every good wish, I am,
Fraternally yours,
R. G. MOORE.

ANNIVERSARY DAY—LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Look! Our Discipline of 1918, Paragraphs 384 and 404, sets apart the second Sunday in May as Epworth League Anniversary Day or Young People's Day throughout all the borders of Southern Methodism, making provisions for a Special Offering to be taken for the promotion of Young People's Work within our church.

A special program for the occasion, with songs and talks, has been prepared by Central Office, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn., and can be had at the small cost of 35c per dozen or $2 per hundred.

Louisiana Conference is counting on this being a banner day.

With the co-operation of pastor and Leaguer we can make it so. Order at least 12 programs at once. Have a big union evening service, May 8.

Send the entire offering, without delay, direct to the State Treasurer, Miss Grace Cook, 614 N. Fourth Street, Monroe, La., with report of your service.

All together—five hundred our goal!

NEW LEAGUES ON THE UNION CHARGE, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

On April 3, an Epworth League was organized at Union by our capable and efficient Epworth League Conference President, Mr. W. D. Hawkins, of Meridian. The young people entered this work with great enthusiasm and thirty-six were enrolled as charter members.

The newly elected Epworth Era agent got busy and secured the necessary subscriptions to place them on

THIS GIRL IS A WONDER.

Do you want more money than you ever possessed? If so, learn to make out and fruit bonbons—the business will net you $90.00 to $300.00 per month. You can work from your own home; all who sample your bonbons become regular customers. You start by investing less than $10.00 for supplies. Mary Elizabeth started her candy kitchen with $5.00, and has made a fortune. Cannot you do likewise? I will tell you all about the business and help you start, so you can become independent. Now is the psychological time to make big money, as sugar is cheaper and fine bonbons command phenomenal prices. Write to-day. Isabelle Ives, 344 Morewood Building, Pittsburgh, Pa.

On this same charge, on the next day, another League was organized at Beech Springs with forty-one members, and a splendid body of officers were elected for the coming year. The Epworth Era agent at this place went to work and secured the necessary numbers of subscriptions to the Era to make that point on the Standard of Excellence.

There is another church on this charge, at Little Rock, and plans are being made to organize a League there, and that will make Union charge 100 per cent on Epworth Leagues.

LOUISIANA NEEDS A PROHIBITION ENFORCEMENT LAW.

Dear Brother Carley: The enclosed clipping from the Philadelphia North American gives some idea as to where Louisiana stands in the list of States that are exercising their rights of concurrent power for enforcing the 18th Amendment. Louisiana seems to be at the bottom of the list.

Now, Mr. Editor, if the Governor of Louisiana will provide for the introduction of an enforcement code, something like the Volstead Law when the Legislature meets in special session following the Constitutional Convention, we will pass it this year and not be the last State to enact such a law. New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania have just passed such a law, and Rhode Island has a bill pending in her general assembly at this time.

The Supreme Court of Louisiana, Justice O'Neal, organ of the court, has recently decided our local option laws in Louisiana are repealed by the Volstead Law, so in Louisiana we have only the Federal Courts to enforce the prohibition law, and their crowded calendars and small penalties, such as have been imposed to date, will never stop the "wild-catter" and the "bootlegger."

We must have a State law just as soon as possible, so all of our city and district courts can get busy enforcing the law that already exists as a Federal law.

Let every man and woman who reads this article, get busy at once and make an urgent, respectful request of Governor John M. Parker to provide for the Louisiana Legislature, when it meets this year, to consider a bill to enforce the 18th Amendment in Louisiana. Governor Parker seems to be willing to listen to the people and I hope that you will not defer action on this matter, but do it now. Then prepare to go or send a delegation to the Legislature when it meets, that you may assist in getting the bill passed this year.

I appeal to every pastor to bring this matter before his people at once. We must have relief from present conditions. Yours to serve,

A. W. TURNER.

State Supt. La. Anti-Saloon League.

FROM VAUGHAN CIRCUIT.

I am glad to say, Brother Carley, we are moving along nicely on this charge. I am told the attendance on the part of the membership is above the average—not so much because of my efforts in preaching, but because of the earnest praying and working of some of our members. Our membership is being increased in numbers and the prospects are brightening all the time for a good year.

We have organized two Sunday schools and are planning to organize another, which will make a total of five on the work.

So, Mr. Editor, you see we are busying ourselves about the Master's work. More to come.

Yours truly,

W. L. BLACKWELL.

How Coca-Cola Resembles Tea

If you could take about one-third of a glass of tea, add two-thirds glass of carbonated water, then remove the tea flavor and add a little lemon juice, phosphoric acid, sugar, caramel and certain flavors in the correct proportion, you would have an almost perfect glass of Coca-Cola.

In fact, Coca-Cola may be fairly described as "a carbonated, flavored counterpart of tea, of approximately one-third the stimulating strength of the average cup of tea."

The following analyses, made and confirmed by the leading chemists throughout America, show the comparative stimulating strength of tea and Coca-Cola stated in terms of the quantity of caffeine contained in each:

Black tea—1 cupful.....	1.54 gr.
(hot) (5 fl. oz.)
Green tea—1 glassful.....	2.02 gr.
(cold) (8 fl. oz., exclusive of ice)
Coca-Cola—1 drink, 8 fl. oz.....	.61 gr.
(prepared with 1 fl. oz. of syrup)

Of all the plants which Nature has provided for man's use and enjoyment, none surpasses tea in its refreshing, wholesome and helpful qualities. This explains its almost universal popularity.

The Coca-Cola Company has issued a booklet giving detailed analysis of its recipe. A copy will be mailed free on request to anyone who is interested. Address:

LESSON FOR APRIL 24.

Topic: Problems of Poverty and Wealth.

Scripture Lesson: Isaiah 5:8-10; Amos 8:4-7; I Timothy 6:6-10; Deuteronomy 24:10-13.

Golden Text: "Where your treasure is, there will your heart be also." Luke 12:34.

Home Readings: Monday, The Dispositions of Wealth, Isaiah 5:8-16; Tuesday, God's Vengeance on the Oppressors, Amos 8:4-12; Wednesday, The Rich Man and Lazarus, Luke 16:19-31; Thursday, Earthly and Heavenly Treasures, Matt. 6:19-24; Friday, Jesus's Cure for Anxiety, Matt. 6:25-34; Saturday, Jesus's Teaching about Riches, Mark 10:17-31; Sunday, God's Ownership, Psalm 1:7-15.

Teaching Points.

1. The subject of wealth is an important one; hence the Bible devotes much attention to it.
2. Jesus does not condemn wealth as such—only the misuse of it.
3. Unless wealth is used to bless the world, it is misused.
4. The possession of wealth gives its possessor untold opportunity for usefulness.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

It is not too late to order your Sunday School Day programs. By failing to do this you rob the children of their rights. Of course you do not mean to do this, rob the children, but it has the same effect as if you did mean to rob them.

Have you drawn a circle around June 19-25 on your calendar? Do this and see how many people will ask you questions. This is one way of making known our Conference Training School to be held at Grenada.

The attendance upon any of our services can be increased materially by intelligent advertising. The question is asked in one of our books in the training course, "What service activities can juniors render?" One thing they can do is to make posters for advertising Sunday School Day, Children's Week, the Standard Training School at Grenada. Use paper or blackboard. Do something to let all the people know what the church is trying to do to save the world.

The men and women in charge of the Training School are as follows: Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Director; Rev. E. S. Lewis, Rev. J. E. Stephens, Rev.

Now Is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots.

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as Othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots. Simply get an ounce of Othine—double strength—from your druggist, and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is said that more than one ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful clear complexion. Be sure to ask for the double strength Othine as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Mr. H. L. Clark reports a good week. I did not get his itemized report. Most of his time was spent with the illustrated lecture. This lecture is accomplishing much good and wherever it is shown is creating interest in the work.

I have had a very successful trip in many respects.

Rev. J. M. Smith, at Union, is certainly on the job. He and his loyal people are attempting the building of a brick church at Union. This will mean more than words can tell for the advancement of the cause there.

Brother Purcell reports twenty-five received into the church on profession of faith this year, which I think is mighty fine.

Brother Selby, at Deemer, is happy in his work and his people seem to be unusually appreciative of him.

The preachers in Meridian are planning big things. The Meridian District Institute was set for September 28-29.

Don't forget Sunday School Day! Don't forget the Conference Training School, June 7-14!

Let the Sunday School Board help you. Write us your needs. Pray for the work and the workers.

Yours in the work,

JNO. C. CHAMBERS.

MEETING AT KOSCIUSKO, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: Our meeting closed last evening with a total of 106 conversions and reclamations, 80 having united with the churches of the town during the meeting—60 with the Methodist and about 20 with the Baptist and Presbyterian. There will be others.

A tither's club of over 100, a family altar league of 53, with telling blows for the Christian Education Movement are among the constructive things accomplished. The whole town was lifted to a higher conception of Christian living, and pledged themselves to a deeper consecration, or rather to do the things that lead to a deepening of their spiritual lives. The business firms all closed for the services of the meeting, the school released the pupils for the hour, and even the two picture shows closed.

Of the 60 who united with the Methodist Church, the majority were adults—business and professional men of the town and young men and girls above 20. In at least a half dozen cases whole families joined; father, mother and all their children (some of these "grown ups").

The Presbyterian and Baptist pastors and their people co-operated in the meeting. The Conference and general organ received attention. Rev. W. M. McIntosh, one of our general evangelists, and his singer, Robert Cooper, were with us about three weeks. We would not omit to mention that the first three evening sermons of the meeting were preached by Rev. W. L. Stormont, our pastor at Ackerman. It is needless to say that Brother Stormont's messages were timely, deeply spiritual, and uplifting.

Kosciusko has never had a meeting that was more far-reaching in its results for good and that carried with it a more fundamental constructive work than this. The Lord was with us indeed. It was a meeting for the whole town. The large auditorium of our church (largest church auditorium in town) would not accommodate the crowds and we went to the Court House for some of the services, though we began and closed in the church.

We gave Brother McIntosh and his singer $600, as a free will offering. The finances came with little effort.
E. H. CUNNINGHAM.

OUT OF THE SCHOOL THEY COME.

The reports concerning decisions for Christian life service during Life Service Month of the Christian Education Movement are most encouraging. Especially is this true as touching the reports from Methodist schools. While these reports are in no measure complete, many schools not having sent to Nashville statements concerning results secured, the following are of special interest:

Trinity College, 108; Southern Methodist University, 94; Southern College, 25; Wesley College, 15; Centenary (La.) College, 14; Hixvassee College, 13; Martha Washington College, 12; Whitworth College, 12; Southwestern University, 7; Brevard Institute, 35; Sue Bennett Memorial School, 21; Ferrum Training School, 32; Vashiti Industrial Institute, 57.

It is doubtless true that there are other schools that are able to make showings as good as any in the above list. These other schools should send their reports to the Life Service Department, at Nashville.

This showing is a splendid one, especially in comparison with the churches. More than four hundred Life Service decisions in thirteen schools of the church is a record that should strengthen the faith of the church. Should the churches in the home communities do as well, in proportion to the number of young people in those churches, we would have our volunteers by the hundreds of thousands. We must strengthen our schools that they furnish in even larger numbers our preachers and missionaries.

"GRIEVE NOT THE SPIRIT."

By Rev. W. R. Lott.

We are under the leadership of the Holy Spirit if we have accepted Christ as our Savior. Our Father did not purpose to leave us without a guide when He knew where we would have to go, but He made ample provision for us to walk on in Christian living. We are not able to walk in the light of Christ's love unless we be led by the Holy Spirit. This relation between the quickened soul and its guide is very sensitive, more so even than the most delicate instrument. The compass is sensitive to the least extraneous attraction, but no more so than the quickened conscience. We must watch with absorbing attention the relation between our souls and the blessed Spirit.

The Scriptures teach us the general trend of the Christian life, but experience with the gentle leadership of the Spirit is fruitful of light. Good and evil are ever before us, but the Holy Spirit never makes a mistake in designating each according to its character. No doubt every regenerated soul has had some embarrassing experiences with evil and has been forced to go to its closet of prayer humiliated because it had by its actions or thoughts grieved the Spirit. Any uncharitable conversation such as could not be engaged in the presence of the purest; the least bit of jealousy of another's position or success; the first flush of envy in the heart, causes the Spirit to grieve. A love for self that makes one unduly assertive of one's rights; a constant boasting of Christian attainments, breed poverty of humility and weakens the hold of the Spirit. Even the faintest desire for worldly gain for selfish purposes wounds and weakens. The Spirit always points to Christ as the giver of strength and salvation, and a Christian must never consider himself the source of such. The Holy Spirit will lead us to the altar of sacrifice, the closet of prayer, the dust of humility, and fill us with a love for every living soul. Let us not grieve or rebuke our Guide.

IN MEMORY OF REV. FRANCIS D. VAN VALKENGURGH.

There appeared in the Advocate some weeks ago a brief obituary notice of this good man, of which this is intended as merely supplementary. He was born in Steuben County, New York, October 8, 1841, and was the son of William and Emily Alice Van Valkenburgh.

At the early age of eighteen years he became a soldier in the Civil War, during which he received a wound which shattered one of his shoulders, and was made a prisoner. That he made a good soldier no one who knew him well in after life can doubt.

After the war we find him working for a time at a grist mill and country store for his father. Afterward he yielded himself to a call to preach and was admitted into the Little Rock Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in which he served charges in Hot Springs, El Dorado, Monticello, Mineral Springs, and Centerville. He then transferred to the Louisiana Conference, in which he served charges as follows: Keatchie, Winnsboro, Patterson, and Jackson, and was for six years colporteur and book agent for the Conference.

After these years, he transferred his church relationship to the Methodist Episcopal Church, and became a member of the Gulf Conference, in which he served several charges before retiring from the active work.

It is especially to the credit of Brother Van Valkenburgh that in this transfer of church relations, he did not lose sympathy with the church of his earlier years, nor did he lose the love and confidence of the brethren with whom he had wrought. During his last years, while residing at the Seashore Camp Ground, he took a lively interest in all of its religious activities, and, with his good wife, when health would permit he was a constant attendant upon the services of our Main Street Methodist Church, Biloxi, when services were not held on the Camp Ground. It was by his request that his funeral services were conducted by the pastor of this church.

After the retirement of Brother Van Valkenburgh from the active work of the ministry, he spent some time in New England with his son, Rev. W. B. Van Valkenburgh, who is a member of the New England Conference of the M. E. Church. During this time he preached often for his son, as well as at other places in that Conference, to the delight of his audienes.

He had been in declining health for some time before his decease, his constitution having generally weakened. After a serious collapse one evening, of which I heard, I went to see him. He remarked, "I thought last night that I was going to cross over and was glad that I did not have to send for the priest." From this time his general weakness increased so that it was evident to him as well as his friends that he would not be much longer on the earth. He talked frequently about changing worlds with great calmness and joy and in that unique way of his which cannot be reproduced. When roused he was conscious and intelligent to the end, and his last words were words of triumph and praise.

His three sons, coming from afar—one from New England—gathered around his bedside during his last hours, ministering to him very reverently and affectionately, and comforting their mother in her sadness, whose devotion and ministry had never ceased since the day she became his wife. And in the same spirit of reverent tenderness they laid his remains to rest.

AN EYE OPENER.

The trade and traffic in intoxicating beverages was founded on falsehoods, lusts of the flesh, love of money, craving for nerve stimulant, a weak and worthless religion. The autocracy of King Alcohol, and its debauching slaveries, was defended by hired liars and lawyers.

A grand jury made up of highly reputable citizens, meet, transact carefully all the business that the law demands, and request the judge to dismiss them in the afternoon of the same day. Only one true bill found, and the crime alleged not dependent on liquor. The judge, the grand jury, the sheriff's office, the clerk of court's office, the mayor, the police force are delighted at such a record achieved by a sober citizenship—a record never made in this parish before. If this is a legal sample of "prohibition not prohibiting," let it be perpetuated.

It leaves our efficient public servants time to transact all their other business in a manner that commanded the admiration of the grand jury.

Perhaps, these other parishes have not a Monsieur Chargois! My hat off to him!

THE CHURCH PROSPERS DURING "HARD TIMES."

The Southern Presbyterians have made a study of their collections for the past fifty years and have discovered that their collections have been most liberal during the years of financial depression. This study apparently indicates that in years of prosperity men are inclined to attribute their success to the power of the brain and the strength of their arm, but that in years of depression they realize their dependence upon God and contribute more generously to his work.

Bishop Candler reports that the history of Emory College substantiates this conclusion. Every important advance that the college has made, the Bishop says, was made at a time of financial depression.

Bishop Lambuth adds his comment to the effect that the great missionary societies of the country were organized after the Napoleonic wars and during a period of great financial depression.

The strength of our church in the Christian Education Movement is not measured by our income alone, but by our faith and spirit.—Bulletin.

IT DESERVES OUR BEST.

In a letter to the Director General, Mr. John R. Pepper gives his emphatic endorsement of the Christian Education Movement as follows:

"No nation can rise higher than its citizenship. Citizenship cannot rise above the principles and methods governing its life. Great character-making principles are born, fostered and nourished by the institutions of a nation.

"What institution has done half so much for our great nation as the church of God, and what part of the church more than the Christian school and college? Christian education deserves our very best"—Bulletin.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Report of the Committee on Finance at the Recent Annual Meeting.

We, your committee recommend:

1. That Section 2 of the Standing Rules be eliminated.
2. That the Council rule for the division of the $3 dues be followed. This rule is found in back of the Treasurer's book.

3. That office expense of Conference officers and District Secretaries do not exceed $30 each per year, and when extra expense is necessary, it shall be referred to committee of president, corresponding secretary and treasurer.

4. That a maximum of $100 be granted the Conference Superintendents of Young People's and Children's departments, to be used as they shall deem wise for securing the greatest possible result in touching the young life of North Mississippi.

5. That mite boxes be distributed among church members who are not members of auxiliaries, same to be opened quarterly at a social entertainment.

6. That since stewardship is the only Christian basis for an adequate financial policy, auxiliary corresponding secretaries are urged to feel and to discharge their responsibility for the finance of their auxiliaries, by stressing the Christian stewardship of money by every method and means.

SPRING DEBILITY

Loss of Appetite, That Tired Feeling and Sometimes Eruptions.

Thousands take Hood's Sarsaparilla as a spring medicine for that tired feeling, nervous weakness, impure blood and say it makes them feel better, eat and sleep better, and "makes food taste good." Spring debility is a condition in which it is especially hard to combat disease germs, which invade the system here, there and everywhere. The white blood corpuscles, sometimes called "the little soldiers in the blood," because it is their duty to fight disease germs, are too weak to do good service.

Hood's Sarsaparilla strengthens the "little soldiers" and enables them to repel germs of grip, influenza, fevers and other ailments; relieves catarrh and rheumatism. It has given satisfaction to three generations. Get it today, and for a laxative take Hood's Pills.

and that they co-operate in the educational campaign.

7. That in view of the Council's recommendation and example, our auxiliaries are urged to adopt the budget system at the earliest possible date; that in each auxiliary the president, treasurer, and corresponding secretary shall constitute a budget committee to promote the adoption of their financial system during the current Conference year.

8. That we make $28,500 the Conference budget and our financial goal for 1921.

Mrs. W. W. WILBURN, Chair.
Mrs. J. M. WYATT, Sec'y.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Wesson, Mississippi.

Our missionary society is in a fine condition. We feel that prayer is the reason for much of our success. In addition to our dues, we make a regular offering for local work. This society clothes an orphan, helps the hospital at Laurel, and is doing its part for the starving peoples of the East. We are happy in our work together. Mrs. D. F. YOUNGBLOOD, Publicity Agent.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Notes From The Field.

Hammond auxiliary closed its first quarter with a gain of three members and $5.66 average payment per member, in dues, pledges, local work, etc. The mission study class enrolls over two-thirds of the total society membership, which is 39. The ladies served lunch Wednesday, April 6, to seventy laymen and the pastors of the Baton Rouge District, who met in Hammond in the interest of the Christian Education Movement. Rev. A. S. Lutz was in charge of the meeting. Mrs. FRITZ DAROUSE, Publicity Superintendent.

Monroe—The fact that you have not heard from Monroe before is not because we have not been busy. For a long time we have been wanting a "Special," and have of late succeeded in getting two.

We have two scholarships in Holston Institute, Songdo, Korea—this gives us a keener interest in the foreign field.

Our society has five study classes—two taking mission study, and two Bible study. The interest in Bible study seems to be growing.

The most pleasant social meeting of the church, for a long time, was a St. Patrick's apron party given by circle number 3, of the Missionary Society as a benefit for the Ruston Orphanage. Every one had such a good time and over a hundred dollars was realized. Our society as a whole sent an offering of $155 to the Orphanage.

We have been keeping up our local work as usual and have furnished ourselves with dishes, silverware, and tea towels, the latter being the result of a shower.

Our meetings this year have been very interesting and the average attendance has grown.

The Young People's work is progressing nicely and the Junior Society has taken on new life under its new Superintendent, and now has a membership of 20.

The District Conference will be held in Rayville, May 12, and we hope to have a good representation at that meeting.

With best wishes for the success of the work in all its lines.

BLANCHE E. COLLINS,
Superintendent Mission Study and Publicity.

"BIBLES HER BURIAL WREATH."

The women all over Southern Methodism have been distressed to learn of the death of Helen Alfter, our devoted and capable director of Homer Toberman Clinic and Mission, Los Angeles, Cal.

Miss Alfter took cold while delivering Christmas packages in the rain, and, after a brief illness, died January 11.

At her funeral service there came forward twenty-four on profession of faith to complete the work she had already begun, and forty volunteers who desired to help carry on the work of the Master. From a local paper we take the following item printed on the day she was laid to rest:

"Bibles and New Testaments in Spanish, rather than flowers, will be the offerings of friends at the funeral to-day of Miss Helen F. Alfter, special worker for six years with the Homer Toberman Mission and Clinic, 2027 East Seventh Street, who died yesterday at her apartments at 2122 Hollenbeck Court. The tribute of books will be in response to a wish of Miss Alfter before her death and will be distributed to missions in Mexico, in which Miss Alfter took an active interest."—Council Bulletin.

Attention! Auxiliary Officers.

Order supplies from Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb, 810 Broadway.

Order books from Smith & Lamar. The Secretaries are often out of the office and your orders cannot receive the prompt attention they would receive if sent to the Home Base Office or to Smith & Lamar.

In making remittance to the Home Base Office make it by check or two-cent stamps. One-cent stamps are not acceptable to the banks.

Advance in Prices. Young People's Record book now 35 cents per book. 65 cents per set.

Humors Come to the Surface in the spring as in no other season. They don't run themselves all off that way, however, but mostly remain in the system. Hood's Sarsaparilla removes them, wards off danger, makes good health sure.—Adv.

Ousts Rheumatism.

Here it is. Those awful pains of rheumatism so common during the cold rainy weather are completely forgotten, and the rheumatism is expelled from your system by the very simple treatment of taking Renwar Salts which neutralizes the uric acid in the blood, and Renwar attacks the very cause of this malady and expels the uric acid from the system. Renwar is entirely dependable. It does not in any way injure the stomach or affect the heart. It is prescribed by the best physicians, and your money is refunded if Renwar fails to relieve you of rheumatism. Give Renwar a trial and you will never regret it. Mr. Benagh of the Nashville Railway and Light Company says, "Within two or three days after using Renwar my rheumatism disappeared." Price 50c. Ask your druggist for it, or write Warner Drug Company, Nashville, Tenn.—Adv.

SOME BIG GIFTS FROM ARKANSAS.

At a recent meeting of the Board of Trustees of Hendrix College, Conway, Arkansas, four members of the Board pledged a total of $77,000 to the Christian Education Movement. One gift was for $50,000; one for $12,000; one for $10,000; and one for $5,000. Some of the members of the Board were not present at this meeting and it is expected that subscriptions from other Trustees will be announced soon. Most encouraging reports come from Arkansas and the Methodists of that State will make a great record in the support of this enterprise of the church.

In the generous responses of these Trustees of Hendrix College is a call to Methodists in other sections of the church's territory. No other such opportunity has before come to the men and women of our church to make any permanent investments that are really worth while.—Bulletin.

WOMEN OF MIDDLE LIFE

A Dangerous Period Through Which Every Woman Must Pass

Practical Suggestions Given by the Women Whose Letters Follow

Afton, Tenn.—"I want other suffering women to know what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. During the Change of Life I was in bed for eight months and had two good doctors treating me but they did me no good. A friend advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which I did, and in a short time I felt better. I had all kinds of bad spells, but they all left me. Now when I feel weak and nervous I take the Vegetable Compound and it always does me good. I wish all women would try it during the Change of Life for I know it will do them good. If you think it will induce some one to try the Vegetable Compound you may publish this letter."—Mrs. A. KELLER, Afton, Tenn.

Mrs. Mary Lister of Adrian, Mich., adds her testimony to the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to carry women safely through the Change of Life. She says:

"It is with pleasure that I write to you thanking you for what your wonderful medicine has done for me. I was passing through the Change of Life and had a displacement and weakness so that I could not stand on my feet and other annoying symptoms. A friend told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and the first bottle helped me, so I got more. It cured me and I am now doing my housework. Your medicine is certainly woman's friend and you may use this testimonial as you choose."—Mrs. MARY LISTER, 608 Frank Street, Adrian, Mich.

It is said that middle age is the most trying period in a woman's life, and owing to modern methods of living not one woman in a thousand passes through this perfectly natural change without experiencing very annoying symptoms.

Those smothering spells, the dreadful hot flashes that send the blood rushing to the head until it seems as though it would burst, and the faint feeling that follows, as if the heart were going to stop, those sinking or dizzy spells are all symptoms of a nervous condition, and indicate the need for a special medicine.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a root and herb medicine especially adapted to act upon the feminine system. It acts in such a manner as to build up the weakened nervous system and enables a woman to pass this trying period with the least possible annoying symptoms.

Women everywhere should remember that most of the commoner ailments of women are not the surgical ones—they are not caused by serious displacements or growths, although the symptoms may be the same, and that is why so many apparently serious ailments readily yield to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it acts as a natural restorative and often prevents serious troubles.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Private Text-Book upon "Ailments Peculiar to Women" will be sent to you free upon request. Write to The Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Massachusetts. This book contains valuable information.

Mark Hopkins and a Boy on a Log

"A university is a log with a boy on one end and Mark Hopkins on the other."

This old adage meant that the supreme element in education is the personality of the teacher. It states a fundamental truth, but like most epigrams it does not state the whole truth.

There can be no great college without teachers with great personalities, but even such teachers must have more than a log for their boys.

Reinforcing personality there must be buildings, laboratories, libraries, grounds, and the whole array of scientific, literary, and artistic equipment.

And there must be large endowment, for support must be provided for many teachers of personality and for all the paraphernalia which they use.

The Christian College Includes All

The Christian college provides teachers of Christian character. There are no other kind in the schools of the M. E. Church, South. Thus they are men and women of unquestioned integrity---of unusual power. They have personalities through which the Holy Spirit operates.

Such as these are worth infinitely more to the developing character of youth than all knowledge of a purely secular kind.

The Christian Education Movement will provide more of these men and women for all the schools and colleges of the Church. It will secure for them an adequate support. It will furnish them ample equipment for their tasks.

Thus will be maintained for the youth of the Church the finest and most deeply spiritual system of educational institutions in the nation. From them will come trained men and women to do the world's Christian work---and civic leaders who will lead the world aright.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

"IS THE NEGRO FREE?"

Under the above caption, our esteemed contemporary, Zion's Herald, prints a rather lengthy editorial in its issue of April 13, in which it unconsciously, perhaps, but serenely falls into a fallacy of inductive reasoning that even college freshmen are warned against drawing a general conclusion from a particular instance. The editorial referred to begins as follows: "More than fifty years have passed since the emancipation proclamation, but the question 'Is the Negro free?' appears to be pertinent after the lapse of half a century. Even the fact of his complete physical freedom is by no means demonstrable." The distinguished editor then proceeds to give an account of the atrocious crimes for which a plantation owner in Georgia was recently convicted, after which he draws his conclusion in these words: "The whole case is sickening in its revelations of conditions in the South." We much fear that the brilliant writer has allowed his righteous indignation over a peculiarly horrible example of moral degeneracy to unsettle, for the time being, his ability to think clearly and reason cogently. If we were so disposed, we imagine we could compose a very plausible argument to justify a negative answer to the question, "Is New England civilized?"—but we should hate to have to defend the logic of the argument. It is even possible that from the territory contiguous to the sacrosanct city of Boston itself we might cite some instances of barbarous criminality that "ought to make every member of the human race hang his head in shame." But we would not do it—really, we would not. We dare say even Zion's Herald would rebuke our rashness and pillory our presumption. The logic of it apart, though, the editorial in question does full credit to the writer's heart, for it is expressive of just such feeling as has stirred the hearts of the people of the South themselves. As a matter of fact, we have not read anywhere a more vigorous denunciation of the dastardly crime than has appeared in Southern newspapers—even the papers published in Georgia. Only those who are blinded by prejudice, fettered by ignorance, or misled by false statements, believe that the South defends or condones peonage, or that it upholds any policy of racial injustice. Yes, Brother Nortman, the Negro is free—in the South. We have heard some pitiful stories of the treatment he has received in other sections of the country—but we presume they are not true. We are even more fortunate than the editor of Zion's Herald: he has traveled through the South; we have lived in it all our life—a good part of it in the delta section of Mississippi—and we have had a fairly good opportunity of observing the Negro under all kinds of conditions. We, too, know some trained and intelligent Negroes, and we cheerfully give the race full credit for all that it has accomplished. In answer, however, to the question propounded by Zion's Herald, "Why not judge the race by its proved possibilities rather than by its primitive shortcomings?" we propound another, equally pertinent: Why not lay upon children, even in infancy, the responsibilities they will have to bear when they become men and women?

EASY FOR THE JELLYFISH.

We read the following the other day in a trade magazine: "Soft jobs make soft people. We gain strength by overcoming forces that resist us. Things that come easy never add anything to our powers. Men find, as they look back, that it was in solving the hard problems that they developed the ability to handle the big job that came their way later. It's the principle of the carpenter's sandpaper. If soft things took the roughness off the board and transformed it into a smooth, polished desk top, furniture makers would use velvet instead of sandpaper. If soft materials put a fine cutting edge on a dull knife, the grinder would use rubber instead of an emery wheel. Things come easy to a jellyfish. All he has to do is float along in the current of the ocean tides and absorb the food around him. But he never develops a backbone." All of which is a kind of parable to those who have eyes to see and ears to hear.

THE PEOPLE HAVE A RIGHT TO KNOW.

We heard a discerning layman make this remark the other day: "Every Methodist in the connection has a right to know all about the Christian Education Movement." It is just possible that some of our leaders have felt a little hesitancy in carrying out in full the plans of the Educational Commission for fear that they would discourage the people who have already contributed liberally to the appeals of the church, and who are now more or less embarrassed by the financial stringency; they may have felt that the morale of the local congregation, for example, might be lowered if the people were brought face to face with a movement that is expected to culminate in the effort to raise $32,000,000. While there may have been some ground for this feeling, we do not believe it is sufficient excuse for a failure to present fully the plans of the church as adopted by the General Conference and endorsed by all the Annual Conferences. Even if the presentation of the plan were purely optional—which it is not—the responsibility of the church would be equal to the duty of the case. It is our own conduct that the cause of Christian education will win or lose, whatever if it is clearly and properly presented. The people have a right to know what the church is trying to do; if, with the facts before them, they do not lend their support, the responsibility rests upon their own shoulders.

THE WEAKENING (?) PROHIBITION SENTIMENT.

For the benefit of those who entertain the sentiment against prohibition is growing with the actual operation of the Volstead Act in the United States, we desire to call attention to the election last week in the Province of Ontario, Canada. 125,000 majority for "dry" men. The brewers and their friends have a lot to say when it comes to voting, but the common people of the world who are interested in the welfare and moral value of society do not care to cast their ballots for the prohibition of the liquor traffic. We saw this declaration of opinion the other day: "A bartender who will pass drink to his union." He is an old, tried, and true!

"PASSING THE BUCK."

"Passing the buck" is a technical phrase used to express the same process of blaming the blame on the other fellow. According to some investigators, the process began in the Garden of Eden—and it has persisted to this good day. We have been greatly agitated recently by reading in local newspapers the controversy between representatives of those who do the actual work of building houses and those who sell building materials, each side contending that the other is responsible for the high cost of building. This is the same controversy, of course, that is being carried on between wholesalers and retailers, producers and middlemen, etc., etc. The only conclusion we have been able to derive from the rather spirited arguments is in the fact that figures are pretty convenient things—they can be made to support almost any position that a person may undertake to defend. In the meantime, the innocent bystander—the ultimate consumer—continues to pay the freight, and the Government declares that profiteering must be prohibited. So far as we can see, the only permanent solution for the problems that vex us is the development of an individual conscience that will function seven days in the week—in business as well as in religion.

CONGRESS SUPPORTS LAW-ENFORCEMENT.

By Bishop James Cannon, Jr.,
Chairman Legislative Committee, Anti-Saloon League of America.

The predictions of the enemies of the 18th Amendment that the voice of the people at the polls in the Congressional election last November would be echoed in the attitude of Congress toward Prohibition legislation were fulfilled, but not in the way these hostile prophets intended. The people did make themselves heard, and the best interpretation of their language is probably to be found in the action of the present Congress, for while the Congress elected in November has not yet met, the members of the present Congress knew by association with each other what part Prohibition played in the last election, and they knew that the coming Congress is as strongly committed to Prohibition as any Congress that has ever been elected. The predictions that the law would be weakened have all failed. The only serious effort was the Edmonds Bill, to legalize the sale of intoxicants on American ships, which bill never came out of Committee, although the ocean steamship companies and the Shipping Board were for it, and it will probably be re-introduced.

Adequate Appropriations.

The Anti-Saloon League has not asked for any additional legislation during the short session just closed, but it has labored unceasingly to secure adequate appropriations for the Prohibition Enforcement Department. It would seem that there should have been no difficulty in obtaining whatever money is necessary for efficient enforcement of the Constitution, but the one unvarying policy of the enemies of Prohibition, at every stage for forty years, in county, town, State and nation, has been, "Prohibition will not, because it shall not, prohibit." This is the policy which determines the attitude of the real Anti-Prohibitionists in Congress.

The Federal Prohibition Department asked for $7,500,000 for the work of the Department for the coming year, and $1,600,000 for the deficiency for the present year. In view of the fact that this sum is for the entire nation, with its over 3,000,000 square miles of territory, its 110,000,000 people, its thousands of miles of Canadian and Mexican frontier, and of sea coast, its large "wet" cities like New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, St. Louis, Cincinnati, San Francisco, Baltimore, New Orleans, there should have been no hesitation whatever in granting a much larger sum, had it been asked. The "wets" had openly declared that at least $50,000,000 would be required, and this writer does not hesitate to go on record as favoring whatever sum (even $50,000,000) may be necessary to secure efficient enforcement, for the benefits which would follow efficient enforcement would far exceed fifty millions financially, to say nothing of social and moral profit.

"Wets" Fight Appropriation.

But the Anti-Prohibitionists, true to form, attacked the appropriation, not frankly and openly (they never fight fairly) but on the score of economy, and finally succeeded in inducing the House Appropriations Committee to cut the appropriation a clear million dollars, which meant either a reduction of the force of officers nearly one-seventh, when there are barely enough now to cover the nation strategically, or a reduction of salaries paid, which are already unreasonably and illogically small for the kind of work to be done. Only men of proved courage and fidelity should be employed as enforcement officers, and yet the salaries are already so small that it is exceedingly difficult to obtain suitable men who are willing to incur the hardships and real dangers to reputation and life itself which beset those who try to perform their full duty in enforcing the law.

The Anti-Saloon League through its Legislative Committee, under the lead of Dr. Wayne B. Wheeler, made the fight openly, persistently and victoriously on the solid ground that any cut in the required appropriation was really an effort in disguise to weaken the Prohibition Department by impairing its efficiency and a real effort to prove that the 18th Amendment was impossible to enforce. The following results are encouraging and illuminating:

The House Appropriations Committee, over the protest of the League, cut the requested appropriation from $7,500 to $6,500. The fight was promptly carried to the floor of the House, which increased the appropriation $600,000, making $7,100,000. Then the fight was taken up before the Senate Committee, which responded to the appeal of the League for efficiency, and added the additional $400,000 necessary to restore the appropriation to $7,500,000.

The Sundry Civil Bill, as reported to the House, made no appropriation for the Department of Justice for extra help for Prohibition cases, but the House responded to an earnest appeal and added $200,000.

The House Committee again showed its hostility by cutting down the appropriations for deficiency for the present year to $1,000,000. Had this actually prevailed, it would have required the dismissal of over 400 Federal officers, and greatly weakened the Enforcement corps. Another strong appeal was made to the Senate Committee, which replaced the $400,000, and the House of Representatives overruled its own conferees and instructed them to agree to the Senate increase.

Anti-Saloon League Activities.

This recital shows that when the facts are clearly set forth, and the issue squarely drawn, Congress will support proper enforcement by a majority of about two to one. They are illuminating in emphasizing the necessity for the maintenance by the Anti-Saloon League of its strong Legal and Legislative Department in Washington in order that the great constructive legislation which has been embedded in the Constitution and enacted in the Volstead Act may be neither weakened nor nullified by hostile amendments or insufficient appropriations. Never has the work of that Department been more efficient, its opponents themselves being judges, for when the debate was in progress Mr. Good openly and fiercely charged that the House was taking its orders from Mr. Wheeler, and when in the course of the debate on the increase in the appropriation, Congressman Upshaw read a telegram from the undersigned, as chairman of the Legislative Committee, urging the increase, Mr. Good interrupted with much heat, and asked whether the House was to trust its own Committee or take the advice of outsiders. The House showed its confidence in the League by overriding Mr. Good and his Committee majority, and by approving the appropriation advocated by the League workers, who were representing the sober, law-abiding citizens of the nation. As chairman of the Legislative Committee, the writer has been in frequent conference with Mr. Wheeler all during the session, and at its close, he congratulates the League that it has a man in charge of its Legal-Legislative Department who can not only represent the League in church assemblies, but before legislative and congressional committees, and before the United States Supreme Court itself.

Additional Legislation.

When the Congress meets in extra session, the chief work of the League will be to advocate such legislation as has been found necessary to secure honest enforcement of the Volstead Act. A bill should be passed defining clearly misconduct in office by Federal officials, including Federal District Attorneys and Judges, so that individual opponents of the Prohibition Law may not be able to nullify the law in their districts without being called to account for their misconduct.

The flagrant violation of the Prohibition law under the guise of medical treatment calls for legal treatment. Patent and proprietary medicinal preparations are, in many instances, manufactured with the largest percentage of intoxicants as a base, and purchased almost entirely for the "kick" they contain. The Justice Department permits the prescription of whiskey, brandy and wine as medicine, and the possibility of evasion when unscrupulous drinkers and physicians meet is very great. It has been proposed that the law forbid the use of wine or whiskey or anything except alcohol in the manufacture of medicine, and that it prohibit the prescription of wine or beer as medicine. This would doubtless create a great uproar among those who want intoxicating liquors, but it would work no real hardship to sick people. Twenty-four States now prohibit the prescription of all kinds of intoxicants for medicinal use, and thirty-eight prohibit the use of wine and beer. Comparative health statistics of the States which use intoxicants as a medicine and those which do not, doubtless prove that it is not necessary.

Holding Ground Already Won.

There must be the same determination, the same earnestness, the same zeal for the enforcement of the law that there was for its passage. The opposition is of the same general character to-day as in the past. It is blatant, defiant, covetous, even murderous, but it is becoming more localized. Some of the large cities, and some border sections, encouraged by such wet newspapers as the New York World and the Richmond Times-Dispatch, are hotbeds of lawlessness. But there, if the forces of righteousness maintain their active organization, press steadily to cure defects in the law, insist upon adequate appropriations and efficient officers, the destruction of the lawless out-law traffic will follow that of the legalized traffic. There is no possibility of the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment. The duty of the hour is law enforcement, and to stimulate all proper activities to accomplish that great work the Anti-Saloon League is directing the power of its splendid organization. Every law-abiding citizen should support the League in this great work.

Washington, D. C.

FROM THE PELICAN PINES.

By Rev. S. A. Steel, D. D.

Lexington, Virginia, will always be a Mecca of Southern patriotism, for it was the home of Stonewall Jackson and of Gen. R. E. Lee after the war, and is the seat of the two institutions of learning forever associated with their fame, the Virginia Military Institute and the Washington-Lee University. Now I'm a Southerner, double-dyed, in warp and woof, liberal and fraternal, I trust, toward people of every section of our great country; but first and foremost I am for Dixie, her people, her traditions, her altars and her firesides against the world. I have great respect for the Yankees, but unmitigated contempt for the obsequious sentiment that carries favor with them by slighting our past history, and stands, like some of our Commissioners on unification stood at Des Moines on the back-door step, cap in hand, begging to be admitted to the kitchen table! Hurrah for the Northern Methodist Church that wouldn't notice them! I like the ring of their bugle. They are loyal to their ideals. But they are not mine.

So it did not take me long to decide to accept the invitation of Rev. G. G. Martin, our pastor in Lexington, to visit his church and give his people my messages on the Bible. What do you reckon he did? When he knew I was coming he laid in ten dozen eggs, about a dozen a day for the time I would be there, with arrangements for more if needed; and I don't eat eggs! I thought it was too bad not to recognize such thoughtful courtesy, and one day ate two of his eggs, and had the jim jams from indigestion. That is one reason I usually go to a hotel. The first question the waiter asks you is, "How'll you have your aiggs?" and I don't mind telling him, "I don't eat aiggs," and smile as he grins at his eccentric customer. But not to eat "aiggs" after a good woman has provided ten dozen specially for you—O well, it is all in a lifetime. But I enjoyed Brother Martin's home, his and his good wife's considerate care for my comfort, and that blessed little baby, Margaret Lee. O yes, I know babies, have had nine of my own, and have been watching them with interest for sixty years, and think they are the most wonderful pets in the world; and I say that Miss Martha Lee Martin, aged five months, is one of the best babies I ever saw. When I found that my room adjoined hers, I said to myself, "Good-bye, Sammie, no quiet for me here;" but bless your heart, I never knew she was in there, except when I would pass the door, and hear her cooing to herself. Plump as a butter-ball, fair as a lily, good as an angel, I fell in love with the little lady.

Lexington gave me a fine hearing. I was glad to note that the professors in the University and the Institute attended the services, and led in public prayer when called on. Of course, nothing else would be becoming in institutions with the traditions of the University and the Institute once under Lee and Jackson; but it is none the less gratifying to find the spirit of these great Christian men lives in the halls where they taught. That is one reason why I love the old South and its civilization, because it produced such men. Match them if you can, the whole creation round! I recently read a book on the World-War which contained the General Orders of General Pershing when in Europe. I did not see a single reference to God as the author of our victories; I turned to the record of our unhappy strife, and in every place where victory came to our arms both Lee and Jackson gave God the praise. When Jackson was on his death-bed, and Lee sent him his love, and thanks for the great victory due chiefly to his part in the battle in which he lost his life, Jackson said, "General Lee should give God the glory." I will be a better man for my visit to the shrines of these immortal men, and more resolved than ever to stand by the ideals that made them great. It would not do for me to be pastor there, however, for I might spend too much time watching the cadets drill. I almost wished I were young enough to join those ranks, and felt my heart swell with hope as I looked on the fine types of young American manhood assembled there.

We motored from Lexington to Roanoke, Brother Martin taking Mrs. M. and Miss Martha Lee to Mrs. Martin's home in Roanoke for the Baltimore Conference, which was soon to meet, and which I was sorry to miss. My, what a ride! The scenery is enchanting, but it takes the pen of Carleton Harris to paint it. At one place where we stopped for gasoline, I saw an old gray-beard standing by a tree, smoking his pipe. I asked him how long he had lived there; he replied, "Nigh on to seventy-five years." "Were you here during the war?" I asked. He said he was. "How many Yankees did you kill?" "I got 12 that I know of," was his nonchalant reply. Hurrah for the old Johnnies! I got home in time to participate in their annual celebration of the battle of Mansfield, in which they everlastingly ran the Blue Coats through the Pelican Pines.

After a short rest in the home of my son-in-law, Mr. J. H. Creighton, Y. M. C. A. Secretary, in Roanoke, I boarded the Memphis Special for home. All day we sped through the delectable mountains of Southwest Virginia. Around Emory and Abingdon, we passed through a zone redolent with the memories of my youth. I gazed long at old White-top, the Olympus of my sophomore days, behind whose canopy of clouds imagination built its dream-castles, as I looked forth from my room,

"The Owl's Nest," in the old college building, now gone the way of all the earth, like most all of those who made its halls loved forever. It is a sunny road I have been traveling for more than seventy years, with many steep and rocky hills to climb, and many dark valleys, but always ascending and coming out into the sunlight at last. I heard the strains of far-off music as we passed Abingdon, sweet melodies of old, "'Twas within a mile of Edinboro town"—"Comin' through the rye"—"Dinna forget, laddie, dinna forget;" and as I listened, my heart was strangely attracted to the invisible world where my "loved and lost awhile" are awaiting my coming; and as the curtain of night fell on the Great Smoky Mountains, I closed a happy day with the heart singing softly, "There's a land that is fairer than day." My sleep began by the time I stretched out in my berth, and was a long amen. We got to Memphis on the minute. Through the kindness of Mr. Repass, the agent at Roanoke, my berth was ready on the "Sunshine Special." I tumbled in, slept like a rock till waked for Texarkana, stepped from the Missouri Pacific to the Kansas City Southern, called for a table and soon was hitting the little type-writer as we sped over the last leg of the journey, landing in Mansfield on the minute. Some travel, that.

After the kisses and the hugs, I went to see how the garden grows. Weeds? I should say so, and when I asked Sister Steel why she let them get such a headway, she gave me a kiss, and said she knew I would need exercise when I came home! Did you ever? Well, I got it. But we had new potatoes for the first day of April, my corn is knee high, beans blooming, beets growing by leaps, and all is well. I'll take those Irish potatoes off in time to set the ground out in sweet potatoes, get them off in time to plant the same ground in winter cabbage. Hurrah for nature! And strawberry short cake—ah! with real cream, now there is something for you. It beats "aiggs;" and Sister Steel can beat the world making it. Come to think about it, it is fine world to live in, especially Dixie; and it is glorious to help God make it better.

A TENDER TRIBUTE TO THE MEMORY OF REV. H. B. WATKINS.

Dear Mr. Editor: As I looked over the St. Louis Christian Advocate this afternoon and noticed an account of the death of Rev. H. B. Watkins, my soul was engulfed in sorrow. Memory at once recalled the peculiar conditions under which I formed his acquaintance.

It was in August, 1919, when he and his family were guests at Brown's Welis, Mississippi, and I a pantry boy in the kitchen of that hotel, at work for a salary of $15 per month. It so happened that I had been called to take the place of the absent colored bell boy, and had conveyed a picher of water to his door. He made inquiry as to my identity, and then revealed his.

I had been a struggling "First Prep" at Millsaps Preparatory School during the previous session, and was also a local Methodist preacher. The lack of finances to bear the expenses of an educational career had caused me to turn my back to the thoughts of a successful future and a deaf ear to the call of God.

He made no comment at the time of our first acquaintance, but in a few days after his return to Magnolia, Miss., where he was pastor, I received a communication from him stating that the Lampton family of that town would assist me in the prosecution of an education.

It is, therefore, to him that I am indebted for the first lift when I was down and out, and, through him, to the Lampton family of Magnolia. Appreciated beyond the power of words to express is the one who turned the sail of my life toward the sea of success. Peace to his remains. May his spirit live forever in the City of God.

APROPOS OF THE EDUCATIONAL MOVEMENT.

By Rev. John W. Ramsey.

Much is being said and written just now concerning the Educational Movement of the M. E. Church, South, and many meetings, called District Set-up Meetings, are being held throughout the whole church for the threefold purpose of creating enthusiasm, giving information relating to the objectives of the movement, and impressing upon the minds of our people the necessity of adequately equipping our educational institutions so that they may afford our young people the advantages of Christian education.

The literature which is being published and distributed by the Educational Commission on the subject of Christian Education is excellent, and the advertisements being carried by our church periodicals in the interests of the movement are exceptionally fine. For instance, the advertisement conveying the basic thought that any educational process which trains the intellect and at the same time leaves the moral nature undeveloped is dangerous, illustrated by the picture of placing a gun in the hands of a savage, instructing him how to use it, but neglecting to teach him that it is wrong to commit murder; also, another advertisement pregnant with the truth that Christian Education is the only efficient method of giving stability to our present civilization, and the only way to crush out of the world the spirit of Bolshevism which is now blasting at the foundation of all civilized nations, are particularly impressive. However, there is one essential element in Christian education which the Educational Commission seems to have overlooked, so far. At least, if the thought contained in the advertisement illustrative of the need of Christian leaders does not carry the idea to which I have alluded, I have not seen it in any of the published literature.

I refer to the personality of the teacher, which I regard as the most essential and vital element of Christian education because, lacking the Christian personality of a Christian teacher, it is impossible for education to be Christian. A spiritual atmosphere is necessary to Christian education, but the presence of the Christian teacher is essential to generate the atmosphere. In fact, only a moment's consideration should be sufficient to convince any one that the Christian teacher is the one essential factor in Christian education. You may introduce into the school room all the other elements which may be considered as belonging to that educational process known as Christian education, but they all will be ineffective in building Christian character for our sons and daughters unless the personality of the teacher is thoroughly impregnated with the spirit and mind of Jesus Christ. That is, the teacher himself must be a Christian—there is no doubt about that. It is an accepted fact that Christian education must begin in the home, but a dancing teacher or a godless professor in the school can, in a very short while, destroy all the Christian influences of a Christian home and counteract the precepts and example of Christian fathers and mothers. I repeat, therefore, that Christian men and women in the school room are the essential factors in Christian education. Yet, I am sorry to have to say that in some towns and communities in Mississippi to-day the men who compose the school boards are putting into our public schools dancing school "Majams," and in some localities the auditoriums of public school buildings are being converted into dance halls. The latter has occurred in at least one County Agricultural High School, if the press dispatches be true. Leaving out of the question, for a moment, the moral issue involved, I assert that the teacher who goes to the dance two or three nights in the week is neither physically nor mentally fit for the school room. If there is any one who is disposed to question this asseveration, I would be delighted for him to undertake to controvert it. One of the controlling purposes of my life is to be able to give my children an education, but I do not want them to have to receive that education at the hands of dancing school "Marms." Yes, I want my children to have an education to equip them for the service of man and God, but, as Sam Jones once said, "I had rather see my child in heaven learning its A. B. C.'s than in hell reading Latin and Greek;" and I know that a dancing teacher or a godless professor is imperiling the salvation of my child.

Now, as I have stated, dancing school teachers are being put into the public schools of the State, and I affirm that they are neither morally, physically, nor mentally fit to teach the children who come from Christian homes; but what is the remedy for this deplorable situation? First, all ministers of the gospel, as never before in the history of the development of our State system of education, must stress the cause of Christian education and continue to ring the changes upon it till it strikes a responsive cord in the hearts of the citizenship of the State, arousing them to an active discharge of their duty as citizens and to a comprehensive knowledge of the dangers we are facing; secondly, the Christian fathers and mothers who patronize our public schools must awake to a profound sense of their responsibility as parents and elect men as members of the school boards of trustees who are themselves Christians and who, therefore, will see to it that no man or woman who does not know Jesus Christ experimentally enters the school room as a teacher. For a set of men knowingly to elect a dancing school teacher or a crap-shooting professor simply because they have the authority to do so, regardless of the Christian sentiment of the patrons of the school of which they are trustees, is an imposition and should be resented by their removal from the board. As I see it, the time has come when the sentiment of Christian people must demand that our public schools be taught by men and women whose Christian characters are reinforced by Christian living. Only so, can they be examples for our children.

Let no one misunderstand me. This is not a tirade against school teachers as such. I have taught school myself and could do it again, if it became necessary; and if I should do so, I am sure I would be something more than a mere recitation hearer—I would be a teacher in fact as well as in name. No, this is no imprecation pronounced upon teachers. There is an honorable and useful calling. In fact, I regard it as a sacred vocation next to that of the ministry itself, and it has always been my invariable practice to keep in close touch with the teachers because I am certain that their work is very closely related to mine. It is because I place such a high estimate upon the profession of school teaching that I become righteously indignant when a man or woman disgraces the sacred calling by sinful living and wicked practices which are condemned by all the churches. I am glad to believe that the vast majority of our public school teachers are Christians and members of some of the various denominations, and I write these words trusting that something I may have said may strengthen the Christian sentiment of this country against the other kind, whose numbers are on the increase, till they are forced to get out, leaving the school room to those who love God and who are sensible of the great responsibility committed into their hands.

HERBERT WATKINS.

My Dear Brother Carley: Again, death has claimed one of our "Nine of ninety-nine." The announcement of our friend, Herbert Watkins' decease in Saturday's Commercial Appeal came as a great shock to me, though I had seen notice of his weakened physical condition. The account of his weakened physical condition that was carried in the New Orleans Advocate several weeks ago was sad news to me, but I did not dream that he was so seriously ill. When I saw that account I purposed writing to him and expressing words of love and regret. Several times, since then, I have thought of writing, but procrastinated. I know you will allow this little flower of appreciation to be laid to his memory, since our friend has gone from us.

I have never forgotten my first impression of Herbert, when I met him at Millsaps College some twenty-six years ago. We were "preps" together and rivals for the "Prep" scholarship medal. There were five of us in that race that year: Herbert, Harrell, Greenhaw, Hennington, and myself. Hennington carried off the medal, but I have carried thoughts of friendship for each of the contestants from that day to this. During that year Herbert and I were often together. We were pals, Henry, much as you and I were pals during our Senior year. In our Freshman year we drifted apart because of his going into the K. A. fraternity and I into the K. S. fraternity. However, we were friends through our five years in college. The fact that there were but nine of us in our Senior year brought us all close together and made us feel an interest in each other that has followed me to this good day. Not a sorrow has come to any of the nine but that I have been touched thereby, and when advancement has come to any of them I have rejoiced.

Herbert was a fine Christian gentleman who has lived a life of usefulness. When I knew him in college I did not think he would go into the ministry, but thought he would practice law. God, though, laid His hands upon him and Herbert followed. I thank God for the fact that opportunity gave him the privilege of doing a great and lasting work during the last six years of his life. His life was rounded out in a great climax of service for God and mankind.

They say Herbert is dead, but that is not true, he has just been ushered into a larger and more abundant life. God said to him, "It is enough, come up higher," so he has just gone to do service in a larger field of usefulness, perhaps. Let us think so, anyway. His family and friends will miss him, but they can join him in the glorious beyond; therefore, why weep?—We poor humans are much too prone to look at life from the earthly and physical viewpoint, rather than from the spiritual and eternal viewpoint. When we come to be rightly adjusted toward life, we will not be much affected by the passing things of this earthly world, but will tie our affections on to the eternally spiritual things. The thing that was lovable and admirable in Herbert was his spirit. His body was the least of him: That body will return to the dust, whence it came, but his spirit is to live eternally with God and grow more attractive and beautiful throughout all eternity.

Therefore, Henry, while there is a feeling of sadness in my heart because of the untimely taking off of our friend, still I see something of the glorious Easter morn in Herbert's taking away. I am looking forward to the great resurrection morn when he, and all the friends and loved ones I have ever known—who die in the faith—or will ever know, will, together with myself, enter into a state of life abundant where there will be no trouble, sorrow or death. Until we depart this life I pray that we shall have the daily comfort of His presence near, and the strength of His wisdom and power, that we may render acceptable service to Him while we have being upon earth. I thank God for the example of Christian life and service that was expressed through Herbert and pray that God's comforting spirit may sustain his loved ones who are left behind.

AWAKE AT LAST!

By Leonidas Robinson, Ph.D.

One of the most encouraging signs of the times is the awakening interest in the gigantic task of Christianizing our education.

The truth is fast breaking upon patriotic students, officers of the law, and men heading the big businesses of the world that in character building moral integrity must be interwoven if we are to save the State and preserve a world order that makes human life endurable. I have been interested in the recent earnest efforts of Judge Thomas Crain, of the Court of General Sessions, of New York City, to stay the tide that now sets so hard toward materialistic education.

The line that in our early history held religion and education together has broken; and this great judge, who has exceptional opportunity to study the direful results of such a divorce, sees the utter breakdown of our modern civilization, unless, as he says, "We teach with geography, something of the God who made the earth, with botany, something of the God who clothed the flower, and with history, something of the divine providence in human affairs." He has bought out large spaces in New York City papers to argue his thesis that no child is being properly educated if he is not being taught religious faith with his secular instruction. He contends that "religious instruction can be given in the schools without outraging any parent's conviction," of whatever faith he may be.

He is right, too, in his contention that morality without religion will soon sicken and die.

The New York Board of Education, too, must be awake to the situation as they propose that a half-day each week be given over to the different denominations for religious instruction.

The Bible has been ruled out of the public schools, not by the laws of the land; for ten State Supreme Courts in recent years have decided that "Sectarianism should be excluded," but they add: "It does not follow that the Bible should be excluded also." While the minority has intimidated the majority in this matter, it is for good reasons not expedient to make a fight for Bible reading in our public schools.

In the present state of discord between the sects, proper and powerful emphasis could not be placed where it should be placed. We must find a school of freedom, where unfettered, the teacher, loyal to things essential and eternal, can build characters so necessary to the safety of society and the salvation of the world.

That place is found in the home, in the church, and in the church schools. To stem the black tides that so threaten us to-day, we need something more than the formal reading of a few verses of Scripture.

The history of the past must be so taught that the student will recognize in it all the great Unseen Hand. The present must be so interpreted that he will consult a corrected inward monitor in the projection of every program and draw strength for life's duties from an experience based on an organized knowledge of the truth as it is in Christ Jesus.

"Is our nation becoming more pagan?" This is not such a far-fetched question when we study the history of education in America. Great institutions, one after another, have been silently slipping from under the direction of the church, and vacancies in their faculties filled with men who flout the great fundamentals of Christian faith and scoff at those sacred things so essential to the preservation of America's inheritance.

But thank God, we are waking to the danger. The great leaders of practically every church in Christendom have at least come to see what Christ meant when he said: "Go teach."

Through the teaching function and through that only, will the world be saved. Nothing short of that is the purpose of the Christian Education Movement.

CENTENARY STANDING, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

For the first time, our Conference has taken a backward step in our climb to the top in the records of Centenary payments. The report for the month of March shows that we went from fifth place to seventh place, and I am appealing to every one to help that we may regain the place we have lost. May I count on YOU?

Would especially request that the pastors get a Collecting Committee in every church, who will make it their business to "Keep Everlastingly on the Job" until all the pledges have been collected. You will eventually have to do this—why not NOW?

Yours for service,

W. D. HAWKINS.

LEAVES FROM THE LIFE OF DR. JOHN W. BOSWELL.

In the early days of Methodism, and as late as the beginning of my day, the quarterly meeting was a great occasion, and the presiding elder by all odds the most important man in his district. He is still, but only so because of his official position. In these days men are appointed to the position quite as much, if not more, for their ability to transact the church's business as for their ability to preach. In the old days a man who was not a superior preacher was not considered suitable timber for the presiding eldership. The times required a strong man in the pulpit—business was limited and of secondary importance. Methodism was in a formative state, to be shaped and established, which could not have been done without leaders competent to define and defend its doctrines and polity. This the presiding elders were always able to do.

Methodism had enemies—strong and combative. Strong men were needed to meet them, both in public debate and to defend the church against their attacks. For this reason among others, Sunday morning of the quarterly meeting brought together a great congregation—Methodists and members of other churches. They expected a doctrinal sermon and were seldom disappointed—not necessarily a controversial sermon, but certainly one on some great cardinal doctrine from an Arminian standpoint. The opponents of Methodism were almost invariably Calvinists and immersionists. Books and newspapers were few. The only way to indoctrinate the people was from the pulpit. The people enjoyed controversy.

But even in those early days there were a few brethren who did not relish controversy and advised against it. At a certain quarterly meeting, it is said a brother approached the presiding elder and requested him to say nothing against the Presbyterians, informing him that the leading brother of that faith was present; and likewise the deacon of the Baptist church, "a mighty good man; please don't say anything against the Baptists." Several other characters were named with the request that nothing be said against them. "Well," said the presiding elder, "whom shall I preach against?" "Preach against the Campbellites," said he; "there isn't one in ten miles of here." This brother was an exception. Most of the people liked the controversial kind of preaching; they would sit and listen to it from two to three hours on a stretch.

Some of the old-time presiding elders were not exactly "a law unto themselves," but sometimes they made their own rules of procedure, and executed them as rigidly as if they were enactments of the General Conference. Both preachers and people seemed to think it was all right. They had implicit confidence in their judgment and submitted to it. Whenever they could not agree among themselves, they would agree to abide the judgment, or the decision, of the presiding elder. All this made it important to fill the office with men who, if they did not know the law, "knew what Israel ought to do."

My first presiding elder had no reputation as a controversialist or a doctrinal preacher, but he preached long sermons. He had a wonderful way of weaving in doctrinal truths by way of parentheses that were about as effective as set discourses. He was a man of great tact. He knew where to strike. He did not preach his long sermons in town. The country churches got the benefit of them and enjoyed them. They were historical sermons—delineations of some great Bible character, as Abraham, Job, Joseph, David, Daniel, or some outstanding event of Bible history. They were always interesting and made a profound impression. The people never grew tired of Uncle Joe Brooks. For forty years, I suppose, he was the most popular man of his Conference.

Another one of my presiding elders—a good man and a strong preacher—was not a controversialist, but worse—he was a hobbyist. Sanctification was his theme—not the "second blessing." That name had not then come into use, but the preaching was on that line. His sermons became monotonous and tiresome. Of course, nobody objected to sermons on that subject; they were rather welcome, and coming from the presiding elder occasionally, they were well adapted to make helpful impressions; but coming once a quarter, even from the presiding elder, they grew stale and unpalatable. It goes without saying that these sermons were often inopportune. I can not imagine why a man of good sense should destroy his influence on a single theme when there are so many subjects quite as necessary to be preached.

But let us turn back to the presiding elder who administered a few laws of his own making. I was associated with one, but only for a year. I was aware of his character and manner of doing business, and rather expected him to try his self-made laws on me, but for some reason he never undertook it. I was fortunate, or he was, I do not know which. It was not until we came to the election of stewards at the fourth quarterly conference that I saw his hand. I had nominated a full board of stewards and they were elected. The law required then, as it does now, the district steward to be elected from the board of stewards; but for the place the presiding elder nominated and had elected a brother outside of the board. He thus had what lawyers call a "packed jury." This was just one item. Some other things are better illustrated by the record of a quarterly conference in another district.

When the question, "What has been raised for the support of the ministry and how has it been applied?" was asked, the stewards promptly responded; but before the amount was announced the presiding elder turned to the preacher: "Brother B., have you received anything else during the quarter?" "Yes, sir," he replied; "I have received two pairs of socks, and a load of provisions." Whereupon Brother B. deposited the socks on the table. "What are the socks worth, Brother B.?" "About 25 cents a pair, I suppose." The presiding elder replied: "I pay 50 cents a pair for all the socks I get." "Very well, Mr. Secretary, put them down at 50 cents." "And what was the load of provisions worth, Brother B.?" "I could not tell," said Brother B.; "it was worth a good deal to me. There sits Brother J., who sent the load. He can tell." Brother J. replied: "I will charge Brother B. 50 cents for it." Brother J. intended the load as a gift, not as quarterage, but the presiding elder forced him to make a charge. When it came to the distribution of the amount on hand, Brother B. shoved the socks over to the presiding elder, saying, "I never pay more than 25 cents for socks." So the presiding elder paid a dollar for two pairs of socks, while the preacher got a whole load of provisions, worth $25 or $30, for 50 cents. Presiding elders never think of acting after that way to-day. If they did, preachers would have to report their poundings in dollars and cents. They would rebel against such a requirement.

This manner of doing business is easily accounted for. Salaries were small and not always paid in full. The presiding elder received a pro rata share of all that was collected, whether it was cash or provisions. If provisions were paid as part of the salary, the presiding elder was entitled to his share. The preacher, if convenient, could divide them, or pay the pro rata in cash. When I was a presiding elder in Arkansas, I took my part of the pay at one quarterly conference in wheat—ten bushels—and hauled it in my buggy about fifty miles over hilly and rocky roads. All this was right, but the presiding elder in question was without right or law when he required the preacher to hand over to him a part of the money and other things that were intended as gifts. Preachers have been known to refuse money tendered them as a gift with the understanding that no part of it was to go to the presiding elder. In such cases both preacher and presiding elder were minus. In one case, the amount, $10 in gold, was safely lodged in the hands of the preacher's wife. It is not recorded that the presiding elder got any part of it. Some people would call that "whipping the devil around the stump."

Those old-time presiding elders were faithful men. There was no discount on their zeal, self-sacrifice, doctrinal soundness, or devotion to the church. Beside, they were necessary to the successful working of itinerant Methodism.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

Faith and Life! How closely the Master bound the two together! The one the portal, the other the palace. Believing in Him is living for Him. The vast ranges and reaches of life find their rest and goal in the heart of the Son of God. The glory of the Risen Christ brings, with every recurring Easter message, renewed hope and courage to the dying world; for then Faith grasps again the hand of Life and sings anew an immortal anthem. The New Testament teems with lessons of this holy alliance of faith and life. Its very atmosphere is redolent—is suffused with it, Matthew's gospel of power and healing bears its strength and balm; John revels in its marvelous heights and depths; and Paul breaks into ecstatic bursts of eloquence and ministry with the thoughts of it that thrill and uplift him. So the great things of life are realized through faith leading onward from grace to grace. The vast reaches of the star heights of glory can only be attained, as the sometime weary pilgrim presses onward, through faith as his quorden and life eternal his goal.

Publicity, advertising, reporting—sometimes I grow weary of it all. Why the preacher in charge should be called upon to report the state of his church—and its institutions, some six, eight, or ten times during the year is no small tax on a man's time and patience. These reports are then transcribed and put to sleep in some quiet corner and "requisite in pace." It is meet and right and our bounden duty to see that the church register is correct, and for every preacher to know the present status of his charge and hand the same to the secretary of the Annual Conference, and this should be enough.

But the written report of the P. C.—quarterly—save the mark! He rises and reads an exhortation, an explanation a sermonette, signed "respectfully submitted." To whom, pray? Nobody votes for or against the paper; just custom, simply that and nothing more. The blank form, filled, gives all the needed information. I have written one hundred and fifty or more of these delectable papers in the years of my ministry, to say nothing of reports to district conference, et al. Nor have I thereby added anything startling to the great republic of letters nor the general sum of human happiness. These periodical writings may be means of grace to the average P. C., a kind of safety valve to his pent-up feelings, so we will let them stand and still be inflicted on the long-suffering officials and his honor, the P. E., ardently hoping for better things in the future.

"Figures can't lie, but liars can figure." So runs the caption of a recent story in one of the popular magazines. Why a great, big, strong man claims that he is compelled to lie is a puzzle to me. Let's figure on this problem presently. He is either a coward or is lazy—too fearful to face the issue or too indolent to care. If the liar alone were involved in his deception, it would still be bad enough; but he involves others. A lie—a base, mean lie—has more fangs than a rattlesnake, more arms than an octopus. It poisons other lives, entwines its deadly stinging folds about the innocent, and at times pulls them to the black depths. I can bear much from my fellow-man. His peculiar views and idiosyncrasies only amuse me. I have mine and expect to see them in others. But a mean, vicious, lazy, cowardly liar is a child of Satan the sum and substance of evil. It was only a step from the hypocrisy of the Pharisees to the slaying of Christ. And insincerity—hypocrisy—is the vilest form of lying. No casuistic reasoning can ever justify this vice under ordinary circumstances, for here, as in all such cases, the exception proves the rule. The apostle is very blunt and straightforward in his admonition, "Brethren, lie not to one another."

Moral Character or Steel Doors

Which is the better protection for valuables--safety vaults with steel doors or moral character? Roger Babson says that the greatest security for mortgages and bonds is not the physical properties like railroads and factories on which the mortgages or bonds are issued, but in the moral character of the people. He says that when a majority of the people of any nation have bad moral ideals, no investment is safe.

Why are investments in Russia and Mexico not good? Not because of lack of physical property or natural resources. The business men of Europe are nervous about their securities because they fear lest the tragic events of the last six years have disturbed the religious faiths and moral moorings of the people.

The best protection against anarchy, Bolshevism, radicalism, I.W.W'ism, red revolution, is Christian Education. It lays the foundation of society upon the Rock of Ages---upon righteousness, law and order, cooperation and unselfishness.

BOOKS, OUR FRIENDS.

All the world in books we find
And all the fancies of the mind.
We wave our wand, Arcadia's here.
A magic carpet bears us there.
Aladdin's lamp has far less power
To bring to us so rich a dower.

The kings of thought our will obey,
Await our orders night and day;
The wise men of the world bow low
And all their choicest gifts bestow.
The great physicians bring their balm,
The poets come with soothing psalm;
Stern science tells us all he knows;
We speak, proud art subservient grows;
We frown, and all beat quick retreat;
We call—they grovel at our feet.
O Books, our friends where'er we go,
Forgive us that we slight you so!

THE STORY OF PAK-SUNI THE WOOD-CHOPPER.

A Korean Rip Van Winkle.

Pak-suni, the wood-chopper, knocked the ashes out of his pipe, stood up and stretched, pulled his waist-cord tight and deftly knotted it. It was high time he was off to get that load of brushwood or his Xantippe of a wife was like to elout him over the head with a pagaji. 'Tis ever thus, he thinks, the man and master has to slave while lazy women-folk stand about the neighborhood well and gossip.

Reaching backwards with his toe he secures his straw sandal and, shouldering his jig (a sort of pack basket), he saunters up the hill path humming that old strain,

"With shoe on foot and staff in hand,
I'm starting out to view the land.
By mountain, river, glen,
A thousand it will seem but ten."

As he ascends, the low scrub growth thlekens, till he enters a grove of pines every one of which is sacred, because of that round mound over yonder with a flat stone table in front, and a semi-circular bank behind, and half embracing it. To cut down one of those trees would be like cutting off one of the spines in the back of the great dragon that fills the supernatural foreground of the Korean's mental view. So he trudged on over the hill till he reached a secluded dell where no one could hear the ring of his axe. Ho had laid down his axe and deposited his jig on the ground and was in the act of tightening his loin-string again, preparatory to work, when in the distance he spied two old men seated on the ground, beneath a great neut-ti tree, playing chess. This was a curious place to be playing chess; he must go and see what it all meant. He approached the players with a depreatory cough by way of salutation, but as they did not look up or seem to be cognizant of his presence, he sat down with his hands about his knees to watch the progress of the game. It had reached a very critical point and he did not wonder that the players studied long and carefully putting finger to piece.

The bright sun was shining down through the leaves, and the wind was making a soothing murmur, and it was not very long before Pak-suni's head tipped forward on his breast and he fell into a deep sleep. How long he slept he did not know, when one of the players, throwing forward a knight, said in a voice like that of a great bell—"Chang."

Pak-suni woke with a start. He saw that the game had made some progress, and one of the contestants had indeed put the other's king in check. He watched a few moments longer, and then dozed off again. Four times he was aroused by the challenging "Chang" of the players, but at last he slept so soundly that the game went on to the end without his waking.

When at last he opened his eyes and looked about he felt cold and stiff and the sun was setting. He looked at his clothes and wondered whether those chess-players were not, after all, only a pair of raseals who had bewitched him long enough to steal his good clothes and leave these rags in their place.

He got up with difficulty and tottered to the place where he had left his axe and jig. Of the latter nothing remained, but on the ground he found an old axe-head without a handle.

Muttering imprecations against the two old impostors, and trembling at thought of what his wife would say, he made his way homeward. As he entered the once familiar street he seemed to be at a loss to find his bearings. Surely that house by the bridge had not been newly thatched in a single day. The dog, which turned tail, skulked through a hole in the wall and then yapped back at him, was not the right dog for that hole. A knot of neighbors was gathered about the door of the village hostelry, but none of them seemed familiar. They turned and looked at him curiously.

"Whom are you looking for, old gentleman?" asked one, taking his pipe from between his teeth.

"I'm looking for—for—" and he named one of his neighbors.

"He's been dead these fifteen years. His son lives here, but he has gone up to Seoul with a load of ban-cakes."

The bewildered man looked about the group of strange faces and then asked:

"Do any of you know Pak-suni, the wood chopper?"

"Hush!" said one, "don't say that name so loud," and lowering his voice to a whisper, "When I was a boy my mother told me that he went out one day to gather wood and never came back. We believe that he tried to cut down one of the pines up there by the grave and the devils got after him and carried him away."

"I'm Pak-suni."

As if they had heard a word from the grave they leaped back and ran every way, tumbling over and fighting for the first place. The air was full of wooden shoes and curses. Old Pak-suni, for he was no longer young, burst out laughing at the ludicrous sight, which only intensified the horror for the fugitives. In a trice the street was cleared and the forlorn old man stood there alone. But presently down the muddy street came an old toothless woman carrying a bundle of washing on her head. As she passed, the old man said, "Can you tell me where I can find Pak-suni's wife? She's my—ahem—neece." The woman turned and stared.

"I'm not your neece, what do you mean?" He stepped forward so that she could see him clearly.

"Don't you know me? I'm Pak-suni." The aged crone let fall the bundle of clothes and, springing forward, seized her long neglected lord by the remnant of his once luxuriant topknot and hauled him down the street, demanding with each step why he had run away and left her to slave all these years.

He enjoyed this. Here at least was one thing that had not changed, among all the changes. He feared that he had been transported to some other world, but this brought his feet down flat upon the earth. His neighbors lay awake that night, listening with bated breath while she piled him alternately with her tongue and with a clothes paddle.

From that time on, let those who will, believe that life went smoothly for this Korean Rip Van Winkle.—Korea Review.

THE GOLD LOCKET.

By Willie C. Page.

Examinations, commencements with their excitements, pleasures and disappointments were over. Marion Ashville had failed in history and unless she studied during vacation and made up the work, she could not enter the eighth grade the new fall term.

Her mother said: "Marion, I shall expect you to study an hour every morning, and, because it is hot and tiresome, I am going to give you something at the end of the first three weeks. What would you like to have?"

"A gold locket to wear on the chain father gave me Christmas," replied Marion without hesitation.

The next day, Marion began her task, and for the first week she was very studious—went in the library every morning at eight o'clock, coned her lessons over, wrote a list of dates and memorized whole paragraphs. Then she began to grow tired of taking so much pains and working hard. It was so much easier to look through the new magazines, read the stories in the "Our Boys and Girls" page; or to loll about on the cushions; or slip through the French windows into the garden and watch the flowers grow.

At the close of the third week, Marion's mother said not a thing about the locket, and Marion's guilty conscience kept her silent.

Another two weeks passed, when her mother said: "Marion, why do you not wear your locket?"

"Why," cried Marion, in great surprise, "Mother, you have never given it to me. Where is it?"

"More than two weeks ago I put it in an envelope, and slipped it between the leaves of your history. Do you think you deserve it, Marion?"

"No," answered the honest little girl, blushing. "I know that I don't, Mother, I am sorry and ashamed. But if you will keep it two weeks, I will try to earn it by that time."

"Very well," replied her mother, "you shall have another chance."

After this Marion studied so diligently that at the beginning of the new term, she made a fine grade and easily entered the eighth grade.

"TIME OUT."

A Large Association.

"Can you come and help me clean house, Mandy?"

"No'm; can't come. I's fined de 'Sociation ob de Folded Hands."—Life.

Bad For Discipline.

The junior partner was harried.

"I shall have to get another typist," he lamented. "Miss Take is continually interrupting my dictation to ask how to spell a word."

"Dear, dear!" said the senior partner. "That seems a great waste of time."

"It's not that, I mind," responded the other. "But it's so bad for discipline to keep on saying, 'I don't know!'"—Selected.

Then They Understood.

The parson was addressing his religious instruction class in a country public school. "This morning, children, I propose to offer you an epitome of the life of St. Paul. Now, children, can any one tell me what an epitome is?"

There was an awed silence. The word had paralyzed the youngsters. So the good man went on: "Epitome, children, is in its significance synonymous with synopsis!"—Selected.

Pretty Safe.

It was in Paris. The talkative guide was exhibiting to the interested American tourist the tomb of Napoleon with all the customary flourishes of both language and hands. "This immense sarcophagus," declaimed the guide, "weighs forty tons. Inside of that, sir, is a steel receptacle weighing twelve tons, and inside of that is a leaden casket, hermetically sealed, weighing over two tons. Inside of that rests a mahogany coffin containing the remains of a very great man." For a moment the American was silent, as if in deep meditation. Then he said: "It seems to me that you've got him all right. If he ever gets out, cable me at my expense!"—Tit-Bits.

New Orleans Christian Advocate

HENRY T. CARLEY, Editor.

CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Manager.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:

Louisiana Conference—Rev. J. M. Henry, D.D., Rev. J. F. Foster, Rev. S. J. Davies.

Mississippi Conference—Rev. C. W. Crisler, Rev. J. T. Leggett, Rev. J. R. Jones.

North Mississippi Conference—Rev. J. H. Feitz, Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, Rev. J. W. Dorman.

DIRECTIONS.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after three or four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise, use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least an inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

TWO GOOD WAYS.

For the benefit of those pastors who have not yet undertaken to secure the officially adopted quota of one subscription to the Advocate for every ten members of their pastoral charges, we call attention to two methods which are practicable and which are almost certain to result in abundant success.

The first is the plan adopted by Rev. R. W. Tucker, our pastor at Homer, La. For many years Brother Tucker has made it a practice to set apart a definite time early in the Conference year for presenting the claims of the paper to his people. Taking perhaps a week, he goes to them in their homes and places of business and, as religiously as he does his other pastoral work, asks them to subscribe for the paper. That he gets results is evidenced by the fact that he always sends in a good list. For example: This is Brother Tucker's first year at Homer. The membership of our church at that place, according to the Conference Minutes, is 429, the Advocate quota being 43. Recently Brother Tucker sent us a list of 51 subscriptions, more than meeting the quota in that one list.

The second is the plan adopted by Rev. J. E. Selfe, our pastor at Epworth, this city. The membership of Epworth, according to the Conference Minutes, is 192, making the Advocate quota 19. Recently Brother Selfe appointed a committee, with Mr. R. H. Nestler, a recent addition to the church, as chairman, to solicit the membership for subscriptions. Result: Just a week or two ago Mr. Nestler handed us a list of 27 subscriptions. This list brought the total number of subscriptions going to the Epworth membership to 31—almost twice the quota.

The above are only two of the various plans that may be used in putting the Advocate into the homes of our people. There are others that are just as effective, and we commend all of them. The point we want to make here is that the work really can be done. Why not do it?

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

"My work moves along well," writes Rev. R. H. Clegg, of Raleigh, Miss.

A note from Rev. J. W. Price, of Walnut Grove, Miss., informs us that the work of the church is moving along well.

Mrs. Hattie McDonald, of Conehatta, Miss., in renewing her subscription to the Advocate, speaks of it as a loved friend from her childhood.

Rev. E. M. Shaw began a meeting at Houston, Miss., on April 17, in which he was assisted by Rev. W. A. Wilson. A great revival was in prospect.

Among the great Sunday schools of the country, is that of the First Baptist Church, of Houston, Texas, which had 1756 people present on a recent Sunday.

A business note from Rev. J. J. Golden, of El Paso, Texas, formerly of the Mississippi Conference, brings cheering news from that faithful preacher and companionable friend.

Rev. W. L. Linfield, our efficient pastor at Gulfport, Miss., paid the Advocate office an appreciated call on Friday of last week. The editor regrets that he happened not to be in at the time.

Mrs. Eliza Rowzee, one of the oldest and most devout members of our church at Pontotoc, Miss., passed to her reward from the home of her nieces, the Misses Brougner, in Jackson, Miss., on March 26.

The Nine Plus Class of our Sunday school at Amory, Miss., had an attendance of 55 last Sunday, with an offering of $3.21. The total attendance of the school was 371, and the total offering, $16.59.

For last Sunday the Clisby Class of our Sunday school at West Point, Miss., reports an attendance of 60, and an offering of $4.55. The total attendance of the school was 277, and the total offering, $11.82.

San Antonio, Texas, was selected as the next meeting place of the Woman's Missionary Council at its recent meeting in Richmond, Va. Mobile, Ala., received a good vote for the honor of entertaining this great assembly.

"The preachers on the district are facing the depressed conditions with heroic and determined efforts—I am confidently expecting a great year," writes Rev. K. W. Dodson, presiding elder of the Monroe-Ruston, District, Louisiana Conference.

Rev. Ben L. Sutherland, formerly of the Mississippi Conference, but now pastor at Kingsburg, Calif., in renewing his subscription to the Advocate speaks very kindly of its weekly visits. He gives a good account of the progress of the work at Kingsburg.

We learn from the Midland Methodist that Dr. T. W. Lewis, of Memphis, Tenn., recently had to spend nearly three weeks in a Memphis hospital. We are rejoiced to know that he is able to be at home again, though it will be some time before he is able to do full work.

An Epworth League of about twenty-five members was recently organized at Mooringsport, La. A "school of instruction" was conducted by Rev. J. B. Grambling for five days preceding the organization, and the new chapter begins under the most favorable auspices.

Rev. Joseph A. Smith, formerly of the Mississippi Conference and now pastor of our Fitzgerald Memorial Church, San Francisco, Calif., has just concluded a gracious revival in his church, which resulted in a general spiritual uplift and the addition of twenty members.

Brother R. H. Nestler, who was instrumental in securing a fine list of subscriptions to the Advocate from Epworth Church, this city, recently, is a splendid young man who has responded to the call for life service, and will enter college next fall to prepare for the work of the ministry.

A note from Brother W. F. Collier, superintendent of our Sunday school at Oakdale, La., informs us that that school stands next to the top in the amount of the Easter offering contributed by the Sunday schools of the State for the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage at Ruston, La.

Mr. B. A. Williamson, of Greenwood, Miss., in renewing his subscription to the Advocate, says: "I have been both a reader and subscriber of the paper since early boyhood, and now, since I have a family of my own, it is an indispensable part of my regular family literature." Would that all Methodists felt the same!

The Seashore Divinity School, which meets this year from June 14 to June 23, has secured a list of speakers that is hard to beat—Bishop W. F. McMurtry, Bishop James Cannon, Jr., Bishop W. A. Quayle, and Dr. Geo. L. Robinson. We almost envy those who will have the privilege of attending throughout the session.

The Protestant church membership of Sacramento, Calif., increased during the year ending with Easter, 1921, at least 2.99 times more rapidly than the city's population. This gain is attributed largely to the influence of the Sacramento Church Federation, which is engaged in a five-year evangelistic campaign.

Bishop W. F. McMurtry authorizes us to announce the transfer of Rev. J. Loyd Decell from the Pacific Conference to the Mississippi Conference, and his appointment to Central Church, Meridian. Brother Decell will be cordially welcomed back to his home State by his many friends throughout the Conference.

Rev. James H. Felt, presiding elder of the Greenville District, North Mississippi Conference, has had printed an attractive program for the district conference, which meets at Gunnison, April 28-May 1. The program is especially attractive to us in that it provides for an unusual number of preaching services.

The work at Gibson Memorial Church, Vicksburg, Miss., is making splendid progress under the pastorate of Rev. T. B. Cottrell. The congregations are large, the prayer meetings are well attended, and the Sunday school is growing, an attendance of 194 having been reached this month. Twenty-eight members have been added to the church since Conference.

The Methodist Hospital at Memphis, Tenn., will soon be open for business. There will be opening for a class of seventy-five young women to be trained for scientific nursing, and applications will be received now. Those who contemplate entering this noble profession may secure full information by writing to Mr. Joseph Purvis, 855 Union Avenue, Memphis, Tenn.

The Sunday school contest in the North Mississippi Conference, which aroused so much interest and accomplished so much good, has been brought to a close, according to an announcement by Rev. E. S. Lewis, of Greenville, who was the originator of the contest. We are sure many of our readers have followed the contest each week with great interest, and have rejoiced to see the remarkable growth that has taken place.

At a meeting of the Board of Trustees of Birmingham-Southern College, held on April 14, Dr. G. E. Snively, at present dean and financial agent of Converse College, Spartanburg, S. C., was elected president of Birmingham-Southern. Dr. Snively received his A.B. and Ph.D. degrees from Johns Hopkins University, has done research work abroad, and is well-known in the educational world. He succeeds Dr. C. C. Daniel, who resigned several months ago.

Rev. J. B. Grambling, of Shreveport, La., president of the Louisiana Conference Epworth League, paid the Advocate office an appreciated call on Monday of this week. He was just in from Franklinton, La., where a splendid League rally was held, and was on his way to Rayne, La., to attend the Lake Charles District Conference. He stated that present indications point to the largest attendance at the State League Assembly at Mansfield, June 7-11, in its history.

Judge John W. Kyle, of Sardis, who has lately been appointed Circuit Judge of the Seventeenth District of Mississippi, is a lawyer of unusually high attainments and character. He graduated at the University of Mississippi with the first honors in both the Literary and the Law Departments, and later studied law at Oxford University, England, as a Cecil Rhodes Scholar. He has an analytical mind, possesses to a remarkable degree the judicial temperament, and is fitted in every respect to adorn the bench. Judge Kyle has for several years been the efficient superintendent of our Sunday school at Sardis.

Rev. Walter Jones, the wide-awake and efficient pastor of the Guntown and Baldwin charge, North Mississippi Conference, is planning a systematic effort to extend the circulation of religious literature within the bounds of his charge. He has appointed the following committees to assist in the good work: Miss Troy Bonds and Mrs. Reba Mauldin, Baldwin; Miss Emma Epling and Mrs. Ashby Green, Guntown; Miss Ruby Wren and Mrs. Maude Jones, Sallito; Mr. Bonnie McCarley and Miss Ica Watson, Guntown. We earnestly pray that all these workers may meet with abundant success in this important undertaking.

Mr. A. G. Gainey, who for some years has been the principal of the Tate County Agricultural High School at Senatobia, Miss., and who has made that institution widely known, has recently been chosen Executive Secretary of the Mississippi State Board of Education. He is a man of attractive personality and a speaker of fluency and force, and may be counted upon to do a great work in the new position to which he has been called. He is a Millsaps man, and is the teacher of the fine Men's Bible Class at Senatobia, which has nearly a hundred members. Mr. Gainey will move to Jackson, Miss., about June 1.

THE CHINA FAMINE RELIEF FUND.

On December 8, 1920, Bishop Lambuth cabled of the distressing conditions prevailing on account of the famine in North China. He had just returned from a visit to that region and spoke from personal observation. He asked the Board of Missions for immediate action to secure contributions from our church for relief. The Board was called in session December 15, and voted to send out an appeal, and also to cable Bishop Lambuth to draw on the Treasurer of the Board for twenty-five thousand dollars for instant use in China. On December 16, Bishop Lambuth sold his draft on the Board for forty-six thousand five hundred dollars ($46,500) Mexican currency and put it to work through the organized commission in China, of which the American Minister is Chairman. Mr. C. C. Nieh, President of the Shanghai Chamber of Commerce, a Christian Chinaman and member of our church, is also on this Commission. In answer to the full page appeal through the church papers, contributions came in large numbers and in most generous amounts, and after twenty days we cabled authority to draw for an additional twenty-five thousand dollars. It is gratifying to state that our contribution was the first to reach China from an American organization. The Sunday School Board generously called on all the schools of the church to devote one day in March to an offering for the China Relief Fund, which has had a most liberal response in sums of from five hundred dollars down to one dollar.

On December 15, when the Board authorized the appeal to the church, if a capitalist had offered one hundred thousand dollars cash for our "expectation," he would have had many "takers." At this date, April 20, $215,000 have been received and cabled to China. Thus the Lord has been better to us than our fears and rewarded us above the measure of our faith. In due time the contributions will be tabulated showing total amounts from churches, Sunday schools, Epworth Leagues and individuals, by States.

In addition to the contributions for the China Fund, $9,700 for the Near East Relief and $1,257 for the European Relief Fund have been received at this office and sent to the Relief Commissions in New York. Also $18,963 in cash for Polish Relief to be used by this Board.

CHURCH ARCHITECTURE.

By Rev. J. A. Baylor,

Architectural Secretary, Board of Church Extension.

Provide for the Sunday School.

One of the most vital matters to consider in planning the new church is to provide for a modern Sunday school plant. This is not such a simple matter as it may seem to some who will read these lines. Despite all that has been said and printed concerning the graded Sunday school with departmental arrangement, there are many of our members, and some pastors, who have very hazy ideas on the subject. In planning the new church the committee should have clear and accurate information concerning adequate equipment for a Sunday school of such size as may reasonably be expected to occupy the building. The General Sunday School Board or the Board of Church Extension will supply such information on request, and will cheerfully co-operate with a local architect in working out the plans.

For many reasons it is advisable to communicate directly with the Architectural Department of the Board in the beginning of an enterprise and before plans are made. Proper advice and suggestion at this time will often save much time and unnecessary work. Sometimes a building committee will engage an architect and allow him to complete the plans for a church building before asking for any suggestions, only to discover later that in some features the plan is not what it should be. This means a great deal of misspent labor on the part of the architect's office, and loss of time for the committee if the mistakes are corrected. What sometimes really occurs is that because of the time and trouble involved in making changes, the plans are carried out as drawn, and the mistakes perpetuated. If the committee is advised in the beginning, it is just as easy to have the plans drawn correctly.

Having planned adequately for the Sunday school, see that this part of the work is carried out in entirety before the work is stopped. There is often a tendency to grow weary under the burden of a building enterprise, especially if, as is often the case, the cost is greater than at first contemplated. The committee begins to let down, cheapen the construction, and leave off certain features of the original plan. Nearly always it is the Sunday school that suffers most by this letting down. The plant may be of the two-unit type, and the church auditorium is undertaken first, but by the time it is completed, the Sunday school building is indefinitely postponed, or the installation of class rooms and necessary equipment is left out. This is a great mistake unless absolutely necessary. It is always easier to finish a job while the people are interested and organized for it than to make a new beginning at a later time. "Do it now" is a wise saying in this instance. The writer remembers seeing the house of a farmer rotting down with the front porch unfinished. The work was stopped on this porch with the intention of completing the job as soon as the pressure of the harvest season was passed, but the porch remained unfinished for years.

In planning for the Sunday school, do not let some one organization or class in the Sunday school monopolize relatively too much space, as this is detrimental to a symmetrical and well-balanced arrangement. Many churches and Sunday schools are lopsided in their development. Some particularly active individual or organization may desire to exploit some one activity, regardless of what is demanded by the all-around development of the church. It may be a particularly active "Men's class," "Ladies' class," "Men's club," etc.

Generally speaking, the corner pulpit is a thing of the past. It originated in planning for the "Combination" church. It is almost impossible to secure a symmetrical arrangement of the plan with the corner pulpit, and from the standpoint of acoustics it is the worst possible place for the speaker to stand.

If at any future time a pipe organ is to be used, have ample space arranged for it in building the church. A pipe organ can be so arranged as to contribute much to the appearance of the auditorium. If the architect is advised beforehand, he will allow sufficient room for it. The writer has seen a number of churches where the pipe organ seems to have come as an after-thought, and the organ and choir have crowded the preacher off the platform.

As a general thing, the arrangement of pulpit and choir space should be such as to allow easy communication between the minister and the singers. The song service is such an essential part of the worship, that it should be directly under the control of the one who must plan and be responsible for the entire service.

Do not put art glass in the windows of your Sunday school building. This is not only needless expense, but really detracts from your Sunday school equipment. In the Sunday school, as in the public school, plenty of light is needed. Use Florentine or ribbed glass. This is not transparent, but is a pure white glass, and will admit all the light.

Finally, remember that the grounds about the building have almost as much to do with its finished appearance as the building itself. Do not consider the work done until the grading is done, the walks and curbing all complete, grass, flowers and shrubs planted. The most attractive building makes but a sorry appearance if surrounded by tumbled heaps of brick and scraps of lumber.

REV. J. A. BAYLOR,

Architectural Secretary, Board of Church Extension.

MERIDIAN DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

Notice From Shubuta.

The brothers will of course forward names of delegates this week. Add names of local preachers.

To date 7 pastors have reports in, with aggregate of 48 officials under obligation to attend the Conference. If you will pardon me for a suggestion, designed to get definite information on the number to expect, if you will arrange for two delegates to the charge, certain to attend—two at least—we can manage to arrange more easily than with a possible hundred delegates which our district is legally entitled to send. Many of these will probably not attend—but we cannot know this. Naturally we are providing for the 100 delegates, the 22 pastors, the college men and Secretaries for Centenary and Education.

Rev. J. W. Ramsey has helpfully marked with a cross the names of delegates from State Line or Buckatunna charge who will be present. This helps us with its definiteness.

W. H. HUNTLEY.

THE MERIDIAN DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The District Conference of the Meridian District of the Mississippi Conference will convene at Shubuta, Miss., at 9 a.m., Tuesday, May 3. A preliminary sermon will be preached by Rev. H. G. Hawkins, of Enterprise, on Monday night.

Dr. Huntley and his hospitable people are making ample preparations for our entertainment. If any pastor has failed to send in a list of delegates, let him do it by the next mail.

Let the local preachers of the district be present or have written reports, according to the requirement of the Discipline.

Let the pastors see that the quarterly conference records are presented for examination.

Brethren representing special interests of the church are cordially invited to be present and address the conference. We would be especially pleased to have the editor of the Advocate with us.

Above all things, brethren, let us pray earnestly for the presence and leadership of the Holy Spirit in our conference.

PAUL D. HARDIN, P. E.

Meridian, Miss.

DISTRICT SUNDAY SCHOOL INSTITUTE AND DISTRICT CONFERENCE FOR THE NEWTON DISTRICT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE, AT PHILADELPHIA.

Following the District Sunday School Institute beginning at nine o'clock on the 3d of May, the opening sermon of the District Conference will be preached in the evening of May 3. At nine o'clock, a.m., May 4, the Conference will be organized for the transaction of business.

The following committees are announced:

License to Preach—B. F. Jones, R. E. Rutledge, W. W. Hopper.

Admission and Re-Admission—J. S. Purcell, O. S. Lewis, J. W. Chisholm.

Deacon's and Elder's Orders—E. L. Alford, A. A. Simms, J. W. Price.

Brethren representing the Boards and special interests of the Conference are invited to attend.

Let this be a cordial invitation to you, Mr. Editor.

J. A. MOORE, P. E.

MEETING OF THE BOARD OF MISSIONS.

The Board of Missions will hold its annual session in Nashville, as usual, this year, beginning on May 4, at 9:30 a.m. There will be a large amount of important business before the Board at this session. The Board is now handling three times as great an amount of money as formerly. The extent and variety of the work the Board is doing has been greatly increased by the results of the Centenary. New lines of work and new fields are being entered. The enlarged responsibility thus given to the Board calls for care and time for the proper consideration of its business. It is hoped that a full meeting of the Board will come prepared to stay until the business has been transacted. The reports of the Secretaries this year will form a chapter of fine progress and a prophecy of great encouragement for the future.

W. W. PINSON.

Another noble life has passed on to its reward. Mrs. C. DIEHL, born in Pittsburg, Pa., November 18, 1887, passed to her reward March 18, 1921. She joined the Methodist Church in early childhood and remained a very faithful and consistent member to the end. We are glad that Jesus said, "By their fruits ye shall know them," for her deep Christian piety, her strong faith in God, and her beautiful Christian life were not in vain. Like many a noble Christian mother, she has been repaid a thousand times, for God has rewarded her with the most remarkable family that we have ever known. We are talking about things that will save our nation, and that will redeem society, but I am persuaded that if we could only be blessed with a greater per cent of Christian mothers such as Grandma Diehl was, we would have no trouble in reaching the ideal for which the best of men and women have been striving. The most beautiful tribute that can be paid to any one can be seen in the lives of her children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren. She died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. T. N. Baker. While loved ones stood by her side, she apparently fell asleep and went home to God to await us in that land of pure delight. Our lives have been made better by having known her.

Her pastor, L. HOFFPAUIR.

As the news spread through Byhalia and vicinity that Mrs. LAURA STEPHENS had died suddenly, a feeling of sorrow and grief permeated the hearts of all whose pleasure it had been to know and claim her as a friend. In her early childhood she had united with the Methodist Church, since which time she had been a consistent, abiding, faithful, and appreciated member. As a mother, wife, and home comforter, she was as kind, gentle and cheerful as an angel. To speak a kind word or lend a helping hand to any in distress, seemed to be one of her greatest earthly pleasures. Aunt Laura, as she was lovingly known and called by her friends, was 78 years old. She is survived by two children, Mrs. A. N. Stevens, of Byhalia, Miss., and Mrs. Frank Harris, of Clarksdale, Miss., to whom we extend our deepest sympathy. And when we tell you that we have heard many citizens say that your loving mother was one of the best Christian women they had ever known, it should fill your hearts with a mingled feeling of sorrow and joy—sorrow when you think of the vacant chair at home, and joy when you think that some day you will join her on that other shore where peace, happiness, and love will reign forever. A friend,

W. I. SPEARS.

RESOLUTIONS.

In as much as death has claimed Dr. Herbert B. Watkins, the universally beloved pastor of Central Methodist Church of Meridian, Miss., and an untiring Christian worker; and

In as much as he was one of the most faithful and diligent promoters of the organization of the Young Woman's Christian Association in Meridian, Miss., during the days of trial in its beginnings, and continued to be its loyal friend and supporter:

Be it resolved by the Young Woman's Christian Association of this city. First, That we acknowledge a deep sense of grief in the going away of Dr. Watkins.

Second, That we have lost a most willing and valuable helper in all things pertaining to the welfare of his Association.

Third, That we will keenly miss his vital interest, his spiritual contributions, and his wise counsel.

Fourth, That we extend the loving sympathy of the Young Woman's Christian Association to the bereaved wife and children.

Fifth, That a copy of these resolutions be sent his family, a copy be sent the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication, and a copy spread upon the minutes of the Board of Directors of the Young Woman's Christian Association of this city.

Signed by: Mrs. E. J. Willis, Chairman; Miss Sue F. Hamm, Miss Nell V. Bullock, Committee.

A GOOD DISTRICT SET-UP MEETING.

The Christian Education Set-up Meeting for the Brookhaven District met in Centenary Church, McComb, April 13, at 10 a.m., and optimism was the cheering note throughout. The forenoon session was opened with devotional exercises by Rev. J. T. Abney, our pastor at Gallman, Miss. Dr. I. W. Cooper, president of Whitworth College, presided. Mr. Tom E. Enochs acted as secretary for both morning and afternoon sessions. All the pastors of the district were present except three, and one of these charges had a representative layman leading well its interest. Most of the charges were represented by laymen and lay women, who were heard to speak encouragingly of the Christian Education Movement. Rev. J. M. Morse gave a clear, thoughtful and inspiring address on the "Objective of the Movement."

Rev. H. M. Ellis, presiding elder of the district, gave a strong presentation of the subject of Christian Education, and delighted the brethren by announcing the "Flying-Squadron Plan" for future cultivation in the district work.

Prof. J. W. Broom's bright stirring-up talk was profitable to all present. Following his talk he read and explained from the Method Book so as to make every pastor and layman understand what is expected of all.

Dr. I. W. Cooper, District Director, spoke as few can of the necessity of Christian Education. Surely such intelligent leadership as our Conference is using will, with the help of the Lord, push us over the top.

At this time the meeting adjourned for luncheon, which was served all present at McColgan Hotel, and a most delightful fellowship enjoyed.

The meeting reconvened at 2 o'clock, with devotions. Inspiring talks were made, and the vital part of the Set-up meeting given further explanation. Short talks were made by every pastor and layman present, and enthusiasm reached a high mark as some spoke of God's leading in this work of highest education.

REPORTER.

GRACIOUS REVIVAL AT COURT STREET, HATTIESBURG, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: April 6 marked the closing of one of the greatest meetings in the history of the Court Street Church. Rev. C. M. Dunnaway, one of our general evangelists, did the preaching. Dunnaway's preaching grips the hearts of men like hooks of steel, bringing the unsaved to repentance, the backslider back to God, and the true and faithful to deeper and richer experience of grace. Brother C. E. Edwards, of Barlow, Kentucky, led the singing. Edwards knows how to make the other fellow sing, always keeping the singing at high tide.

Some of the visible results are: one hundred or more prayed through to real victory; forty-six united with the church; forty-two family altars pledged, twenty-two of these at one service. One young lady gave herself for the mission fields, and is now arranging to attend our training school at Kansas City, Missouri. There were no card-signing, hold-up-your-hand converts, but sinners were called in the old-time way to the altar, where they prayed through, and their shining faces indicated that they had heard from heaven.

It was a great sight to see whole families converted and brought into the church. Every department of the church received new life. On Easter Sunday there were four hundred and forty at Sunday school. We have set for our goal five hundred on Mothers' Day.

"Surely God hath done great things for us, whereof we are glad."

Fraternally,

C. M. CROSSLEY.

FROM LOUISVILLE, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: On last Tuesday night, A. T. McIlwain, the young and efficient presiding elder of the Columbus District, was with us and held our second quarterly conference. His preaching and presidency were greatly enjoyed by our people. He is showing thorough qualification for the work which, in the providence of God, he has been appointed to do. We have already learned to trust his judgment and to appreciate his spirit in this important position.

It will probably be an item of interest to many people to know that at the time of the conference mentioned above, we had on hand for inspection, duly cancelled, all the claims against our elegant church building. The church was erected during the pastorate of the Rev. W. C. Carlisle, whose intelligent industry made it possible. It is of buff pressed brick. It consists of eighteen rooms trimmed in mahogany and is well adapted to Sunday school and church services. We are happy in being out of debt.

Fraternally yours,

J. W. DORMAN.

IS IT TOO MUCH TO ASK?

The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is asked to invest $33,000,000 in its educational institutions. It is a large sum as compared with investments until now, but no large amount when we take into account our resources.

We are asked to make an investment of $15 per member, and that in five annual payments. To do less than this is to confess we are not worthy of the chance that God has given us in this day of world need, is to repudiate our high obligation to have some larger share in the building of the Kingdom.

And let us not deceive ourselves in the thought that we have been making large investments in Christian education through the past twenty years. On regular assessments for education we were paying in 1900 eight cents per member, and by 1920 we had come to eighteen cents per member. During the past fifteen years we have added $16,000,000 to our permanent investments—buildings, endowments, equipment. This represents a per capita investment of about sixty-five cents a year.

Will the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, let that record stand?—Bulletin.

Epworth League.

TO THE PASTORS AND PRESIDENTS OF EPWORTH LEAGUES, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Please arrange to observe "Epworth League Anniversary Day" the second Sunday in May (May 8). Where possible, use the regular hour for evening service. Plan your meeting well, and thoroughly advertise it. You can get the programs from Smith & Lamar at 35c per dozen, the title of which is, "Methodism's Efficiency Factory."

Be sure to take an offering that will represent the interest the church has in young people, and send the entire amount to Rev. L. F. Alford, Laurel, Miss.

If you have not a League, preach a sermon to the young people—with the organization of a League in view.

Remember, Conference, Hattiesburg, Miss., June 7-10. Yours sincerely,
W. D. HAWKINS.

NEWTON DISTRICT EPWORTH LEAGUE INSTITUTE.

The Epworth League Institute of the Newton District convened at Bay Springs, March 28 and 29. The first service was held on the evening of the 28th, at 7 o'clock, Rev. M. R. Jones, of Rose Hill, leading the devotions.

Brother L. F. Alford, District Secretary pro tem., then introduced Mr. E. O. Harbin, one of our Field Secretaries from Nashville, Tenn., who gave the Institute an interesting address, subject, "Vision of Life."

Brother W. D. Hawkins, our Mississippi Conference Epworth League President, then gave a lecture, with the pictures, showing the work which we are doing in Africa.

The morning session was opened at 9 o'clock with the devotions conducted by Rev. J. M. Smith.

The Institute went into the work of the day by first enrolling the Leagues and delegates, also pastors, present.

Mr. Harbin addressed the Institute on the "Standard League." Mrs. J. M. Smith, addressed the Institute on the "Standard Junior League." Mr. Harbin came again with an inspiring address on the subject of "Social Service" in the League. Rev. O. S. Lewis, of First Church, Laurel, also gave us an interesting address on "Soul Winning."

The devotional service at the opening of the afternoon session was led by Rev. R. H. Clegg, from Raleigh charge. Miss Stanton, of the League of First Church, Laurel, addressed the Institute in a very helpful way on the First Department, which is the Devotional Department of the League. Mr. Harbin came again, using the blackboard, illustrating the work of the Recreation and Culture Department of the League.

A letter from Rev. W. W. Moore, pastor of Wesley Memorial charge, was presented by Rev. J. A. Moore and read by Brother Alford, in which Brother Moore was asking the Leagues to do a certain part of the work on a church which he is building in Back Bay Mission on his charge, and, without discussion, the Institute subscribed twice the amount asked for.

The devotions for the evening session were led by the writer. Brother Harbin favored the Institute, with several of his beautiful solos. After one of Brother Harbin's messages in solo, Brother W. D. Hawkins addressed the Conference on the subject, "The Victorious Life," after which he gave a lecture on the Centenary, with the pictures showing the work of the Centenary in the foreign fields, especially that of Europe.

There was a splendid attendance at this Institute and there were present more than half of the pastors of the district.

We had a very successful Institute, and as a result of this work there have been three new Leagues organized since in the district.

Brother Hawkins is not only a successful Missionary Secretary of our Conference, but one of the best friends to the young people of our church we know, especially in the Epworth League work, and we are hoping that churches, through their pastors, parents, and League Chapters, will send a large number to the Conference in Hattiesburg, June 7-10.

H. R. McKEE, Secretary.

GETTING READY FOR THE LEAGUE CONFERENCE AT HATTIESBURG.

Arrangements are being made for the annual Epworth League Conference to be held in Hattiesburg, June 7-10, 1921. Already, a number of excellent speakers and assistants have been secured and this bids fair to be the biggest and finest Conference we have ever had. Our representative from the Central Office at Nashville will be Professor Garfield Evans, a man who always makes things go. Mrs. F. S. Love, of North Carolina, will have charge of the Junior and Intermediate Departments. Rev. M. L. Burton will conduct the Bible periods, and Dr. B. E. Mitchell, of Millsaps College, will have charge of the music.

Our own new missionaries to Africa, Miss Willie G. Hall and Rev. S. F. Harkey, will be with us, filled with the enthusiasm which comes with going into a new field of action.

Hattiesburg is expecting us in full force. They are preparing for even larger numbers than attended the Conference at Vicksburg and I am quite sure that they shall not be disappointed. Dear young persons all over the Conference, this meeting is for you whether you are an Epworth Leaguer or not. Are you going to be one of the many in attendance?

Sincerely yours,

ERMA M. KILE,
Conference Secretary.

A Warning—to feel tired before exertion is not laziness—it's a sign that the system lacks vitality, and needs the tonic effect of Hood's Sarsaparilla. Sufferers should not delay. Get rid of that tired feeling by beginning to take Hood's Sarsaparilla to-day.—Adv.

THE GREAT NEED OF THE SOUTH.

Mr. Charles H. Ireland, a big business man of Greensboro, N. C., makes this strong statement concerning the Christian Education Movement:

"It is without hesitation at all that I give my unqualified endorsement to the movement for the advancement of Christian Education.

"The only mistake that we have made about it is that we have deferred it too long. If we had done this twenty years ago, we would have been in a much stronger position than we are to-day, for time is lost that we can never recover; but that is no reason why we should not try to improve as much of our lost opportunity as is possible. Consequently, I am urging every one to give the heartiest endorsement and active participation to the campaign which we now have in our church, believing that unless the church awakens to a sense of its obligations and fortifies itself at its weak point, namely, its educational position, we shall suffer incalculable loss during the years to come.

"Every State is now pouring money into its institutions, all of which is a source of gratification to any liberty-loving American, but church and State have been decreed as separate institutions, and the State can move only within its own realm. If we leave the education of our young people wholly to the State, it means the secularizing of education, and we all know what secularization of education has done for Germany. The hope for America is a Christian conscience in our schools, and to keep that fully alive the church schools will have to keep abreast with the very best of State institutions. I hope that the present campaign will result not only in strengthening our smaller institutions, but in giving us some universities in the South that will not have to take off their hats to any other institution anywhere. It is the crying need of the South, and I hope our people will respond to this thing liberally in the present campaign."

THE RURAL CHURCH.

By Rev. R. T. Pickett.

Much is being done and talked of being done for the rural sections of our church. In a very short while the minute men will be going out from churches in the stronger centers to fill appointments in the interest of the Educational Movement. This is well and good. This should be a permanent organization. Very fundamental to Christian education is the Sunday school, Epworth League, Christian literature, etc., and these are hard to maintain in many places. It is stated, reiterated, demonstrated and confirmed that our best people come from the country; then the centers of culture and wealth owe a great deal to these country sections.

Our Church Extension Board, while doing a great deal, is not able to help near all the calls; then why not District and City Boards, whereby help can be rendered for the erection of better rural churches and parsonages? Acts 8:4—"They that were scattered abroad went every where preaching the Word."

Oloh, Miss.

FINISHED, OR ONLY STARTED?

By J. J. Stowe.

A great many pastors responded heartily to the church's request to make March the month for special emphasis upon Christian stewardship and tithing. They did this because of their loyalty and because of their own deep personal conviction of the importance of this work.

Does this effort to arouse the church automatically close with March? Have we finished, or only begun? We have only started.

To change the attitude of multiplied thousands of Methodists from the pagan position of absolute individual ownership of property to the Christian position of trusteeship or stewardship of property, is a task that cannot be achieved in a month. So, the work must continue according to the conscience and judgment of the pastor and others deeply concerned regarding this vital subject.

We have no right to stop, and should have no desire to cease our efforts until the church comes to the actual and whole-hearted acceptance of the doctrine Christ preached with such emphasis.

Many pastors were hindered by special services or peculiar conditions, from getting the March program fully across. Where that is the case, these pastors should go right on and sign up as many as possible of their members as tithing stewards.

In every case, pastors should retain for cultivation a list of all tithers and the signed cards should be promptly sent to the central office in Nashville. Those who signed the tithing pledge card a year ago should not be asked to sign again, if those cards were sent to the Nashville office and certificates received by the signer. Where any one signed the tithing pledge card and did not receive a certificate, his pledge card for some reason failed to reach the central office, and he should sign again, that the records may be complete, and that he may receive the certificate and follow-up literature.

God has wonderfully blessed the stewardship and tithing movement in our church. In His name, let us "Carry on."

Search Your Attic For Fortunes in Old Confederate Envelopes

Among the old letters of many Southern families are hundreds of very rare stamps and envelopes. Many have been found and sold for small fortunes. Single envelopes have been sold for as high as $700.00. Many have brought upwards of $50.00 each. It sounds "fishy," but it's true. They are valuable because they are rare. They are rare, not because there are only a few, for there are many of them, but simply because most of them are forgotten, being stored away in old trunks and closets.

The most valuable stamps and envelopes are found among those mailed throughout the South from April to November, 1861. Not all of these are especially rare, but many are of great rarity and among the latter are those which were issued by Postmasters in about fifty towns and villages. In April, 1861, just after the war was declared and before the Confederacy had time to make their regular issues of stamps, many local offices were allowed to make Provisional Issues. Some of these were gummed stamps, made similar to any stamp except that they were not perforated, but had to be separated with shears instead of torn apart. Others instead of stamps, were franked envelopes, the "stamps" being printed on the envelopes, but nearly all of them bearing the name of the town and also that of the Postmaster.

These local issues were discontinued in November, 1861, at which time all offices were supplied with the National issue of stamps bearing portraits of Davis and Jefferson. Later others were issued bearing portraits of Washington, Jackson and Calhoun. None of these 1861-1865 National issues are rare, although some of them command a fair price. The rare ones are the local issues used from April to November, 1861.

Make a thorough search through your attic for these old war letters. Fortunes in rare stamps have been found in old safes which no one ever dreamed contained anything of value. Many an old trunk or chest contains letters that may bring the finder a profitable reward. Send these to Mr. Harold Brooks, Marshall, Michigan, and he will immediately write you stating whether they are of value and, if so, will offer you full value for them. He is a private collector of rare stamps and envelopes and will pay more for those he is seeking than a dealer.

The Advertising Manager of the N. O. Christian Advocate has known Mr. Brooks for many years and you may place fullest confidence in his integrity. He will advise you frankly, offering what he regards the envelopes as worth to him and in case the envelopes are not satisfactory they will be returned to the sender.

As so many stamps are similar in appearance Mr. Brooks cannot quote values from written descriptions, but must see the envelopes. Furthermore, the condition of a stamp or envelope has an important bearing on its value.

If envelopes are sent in a bunch they should be very carefully wrapped—if possible between cardboard to protect them from becoming wrinkled or creased. Do not cut the stamps from the envelopes, but send the complete envelopes. Also take care not to tear the stamps or put pins through them. Such damage greatly reduces the value of any stamp. If you have reason to believe your envelopes contain any of great value send them by Registered Mail.

This notice will not be printed again, so make a thorough search now before the address is lost or forgotten. Tell your friends or ask permission to look over their old war letters. Many elderly people have kept hundreds of such letters. Mr. Brooks' address is as follows: HAROLD C. BROOKS, Box 120, Marshall, Michigan.

6:4-13; Tuesday, The Nurture of a Prophet, I Samuel 1:21-28; Wednesday, An Old-time Bible Class, Nehemiah 8:1-8; Thursday, The Worth of Wisdom, Proverbs 3:13-24; Friday, Wisdom and Understanding, Proverbs 4:1-13; Saturday, Growth in Body, Mind, and Spirit, Luke 2:40-52; Sunday, Source and Test of Wisdom, James 1:1-12.

Teaching Points.

1. It is no longer necessary to argue for the value of education in general—the world has shown that it relies upon educated men and women for leadership.

2. It is necessary, however, to give much attention to the kind of education the world needs. There is bad education, as well as good.

3. Any system of education that leaves out of account the moral and spiritual elements, or that is carried on in an atmosphere that is not conducive to the development of the moral and spiritual nature, is dangerous.

4. Christian education—education that recognizes as authoritative the teachings of Christ and that is imparted by teachers who are Christians themselves—is the only kind that can be depended upon to solve the problems that confront the world to-day.

5. The Christian Education Movement of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is the definite effort of our church to meet the educational obligations that rest upon it in this age. It deserves the loyal and liberal support of every member and friend of the church.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Mr. Clark has been tied up at home on account of high water.

I had a very fine visit Sunday to Shiloh and the Finkbine Camps. I was given a royal reception and much work was planned for the future. A circuit-wide school was arranged to meet at the same time as the camp meeting at Shiloh. Course on Pupil Study and Organization and Administration will be given for the Johns circuit.

The District Sunday School Institutes meet at the following times and places:

Newton District, Philadelphia, Miss., May 3, 10 a.m.; Brookhaven District, Topisaw, Miss., May 10, 2:30 p.m.; Jackson District, Brandon, Miss., May 11, 9:30 a.m.; Vicksburg District, Utica, Miss., May 12, 2:30 p.m.; Hattiesburg District, Collins, Miss., May 25, 2:30 p.m.; Meridian District, Meridian, Miss., September 28-29.

Please see that your Sunday school is represented at your Institute.

Many inquiries are coming in in regard to the Standard Training School to be held in Jackson, Miss., June 7-14. Don't forget you will have to bring your own bedding and towels. We are expecting a great school.

Be sure and send your Sunday School Day offering in.

Pray for the work and the workers. God bless and keep you.

Yours in Him,

JNO. C. CHAMBERS,

Sunday School Field Secretary.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Only 28 charges have failed to order Sunday School Day programs: 5 in the Aberdeen District; 2 in the Columbus; 2 in the Corinth; 6 in the Greenville; 7 in the Greenwood; 5 in the Grenada; 1 in the Sardis. Come on, and let's make it 100 per cent for one time.

The first piece of advertising matter for the Training School and Wesley Bible Class Federation will be sent to each pastor and superintendent. The request will go out for the poster to be held up before the school, then posted in a convenient place where it can be seen by all our people. Can any good man think of casting this notice in the waste basket?

The superintendent of the Batesville school proposes to send the teacher from the class that makes the best record during the next two months, to the Training School. This is one good way to bring the school before every teacher. Last year the superintendents of many of our good schools offered to send from one to six teachers and pay all expenses. In a few cases the teachers did not accept this generous proposition. Nothing of the kind will be apt to occur this year.

I had the privilege of teaching a class of fourteen at Courtland this week. The members of the class asked for more time for study. Work was assigned the class and the examination was postponed until the 9th of May.

A class of six was organized by the superintendent at Mount Carmel, in the Corinth District. Books were ordered, test questions were sent to aid the class in profitable study; later, outlines will be sent to further aid in the mastery of the lessons assigned. We are ready to give other classes the same kind of help.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The District Sunday School Meeting of the Shreveport District was largely attended, about 200 delegates being in attendance. Many schools came with three or four representatives, and the reports from schools and classes were enthusiastic.

The District Secretary, C. O. Beauchamp, gave a bright and optimistic outlook for schools of the Shreveport District. The following district officers were elected:

District Secretary, C. O. Beauchamp, Shreveport; Elementary Superintendent, Miss Wilmar Russ, Shreveport; Intermediate-Senior Superintendent, R. J. Russell, Shreveport; Young People and Adult, Mrs. M. D. Bell, Pelicau; Teacher Training Superintendent, R. E. Bobbitt, Mansfield; Missionary Education Superintendent, Miss Lucile Richardson, Grand Cane.

The committee on Sunday school and nominations submitted report urging that district organization be made effective by hearty co-operation.

Dr. R. H. Wynn, the presiding elder, presided over the Conference during the meeting, and gave encouragement to the work. ALONZO EARLY, Field Secretary.

THIRTY DOLLARS PER CAPITA.

Abilene, Texas, with a population of ten to twelve thousand, has given $350,000 to secure for that progressive city the new school to be established by the Northwest Texas Conference—thirty dollars per capita for the location of a Methodist College, and it is a good investment for Abilene.

There are Southern Methodists who believe that an investment of $15 per member—and that for a period of five years—is too much to ask for the educational work of their church. It is a big sum when over against it we place the past record of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, when we take into account the fact that we paid in 1920 on regular assessments for Christian Education 18 cents per member, and the further fact that during the past fifteen years our investments in buildings, grounds and endowments were on the basis of 65 cents per member a year.

Will Southern Methodism let that record stand? If so, let's cease to declare that we believe in Christian education. We are not going to let that record stand—we are going to carry through the program of the Christian Education Movement.—Bulletin.

BIGGER, BETTER and BRIGHTER THAN EVER

The second Sunday in May, which this year is the 5th day of May, is the time to honor the young people of your community. Give them a chance. At this time take an offering for the cause and send it to the Treasurer of the League Conference, Mr. V. H. Stevenson, Booneville, Miss.

Also select your delegates to go to the League Conference to be held at Granada College, June 9, 10, 11.

Program will be announced soon.

FROM HERNANDO, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: As you have heard nothing from the quiet town of Hernando for some time, I write you a word. Relatively to the turmoil raging in most of the world, we in this quiet, well-ordered little place are living in great peace ecclesiastically and socially. This scribe has never had a more considerate and kindly people to serve, nor had, in every respect, quite so pleasant a pastorate.

Of course all our people believe in education, and Christian education at that, and we are hearing some interesting addresses on the subject.

First, on December 5, we had with us our very earnest and energetic Conference Secretary, Brother J. H. Holder, who gave us the origin, outline, needs, and motives of the movement. And then in April, Bishop W. B. Murrah gave us a great educational address replete both with profound philosophy and plain common sense. At 8 p.m. the same day we had the pictured lecture on church education from Brother B. D. Battle. On last Sunday, at 11 a.m., Brother R. H. B. Gladney showed us how education could be ably discussed in a deeply religious way. On next Sunday, April 24, we are promised an address by our District Director, Prof. A. G. Gainer, and later on, we are promised an address by the Conference Director, Brother J. G. Houston. Our people will do all they can for this cause.

It is rumored in this quarter that the North American Commission on Unification have made overtures to our Commission for a resumption of negotiations. If this be true, it seems to me that the tremendous interest and importance of this question demand that the chairman of our Commission should publish the facts in the case.

Fraternally yours,

N. G. AUGUSTUS.

Hernando, Miss.

THE "METHOD BOOK."

For the Centenary Campaign there was the "Standard Plan" for the financial organization and the "drive." Where the "plan" was met and all of its suggestions and instructions observed, the financial objectives were realized; where the plan was put aside for some other method, there was in well nigh every instance failure to secure the quota.

For the Christian Education Movement there is the "Method Book" for the financial organization and every-member canvass. In the main, it is the Centenary plan, with some amendments, and some improved features. It is the obligation of every pastor and charge leader to use the Method Book-plan of organization. If its directions are followed, all of its instructions observed, and any charge fails to reach its goal, the pastor and charge leader cannot be held responsible for the failure. Study the Method Book. Play the game according to the rules.

SPRING AILMENTS

Impure Blood, Humors.—Relief in a Good Medicine.

Spring ailments are due to impure, thin, de-vitalized blood.

Among them are pimples, boils, other eruptions, catarrh, rheumatism, loss of appetite, that tired feeling, nervousness and "all run-down" conditions.

Hood's Sarsaparilla combines the roots, barks, herbs, berries and other medicinals that have been found in many years of intelligent observation to be most effective in the treatment of these ailments.

Successful physicians prescribe the same ingredients for diseases of the blood, stomach, liver and kidneys, and in cases where alterative and tonic effects are needed.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is the spring medicine that purifies, enriches and revitalizes your blood, increasing power of resistance to disease.

For a laxative take Hood's Pills.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Mansfield.

At the close of the first quarter of the year 1921, the Woman's Missionary Society has proved itself to be doing good work, with Mrs. W. A. Nabors, President. Every officer and circle leader, and in fact all of the women of the various committees, are wide-awake, active and intensely interested in their work.

The society meets on each Monday afternoon of the month: first Monday, business; second, Bible study; third, lesson from the Year Book; fourth, Mission study. The meetings are all very well attended, there being constant competition between the five circles as to which has the largest number present at each meeting. As a general rule it is conceded by any society that the business meetings are the least interesting, but we are proving an exception—the first Monday is our best. We have a membership of 102, nineteen having been enrolled since the first of January.

A new visiting committee is appointed every week, who visit and carry flowers to the sanitariums, and to strangers and to others in need of sympathy. The parsonage committee, Mrs. Maud Woodard, chairman, have planted a lovely bed of cannas, chrysanthemums, Shasta daisies, and violets across in front and down the side of the church. The terrace has been resodded, and a lovely parking place, that will accommodate 75 cars, has been arranged in front. The society is caring for five orphans at Ruston, four by the circles and one by Mrs. McClanahan. The fifth circle is Probably the splendid working order of our society is greatly due to the earnest entreaty of the president to each member to "never say no" and the splendid manner in which each one of the members lives the life she professes.

MRS. J. R. CARROLL,
Asst. Supt. of Study and Publicity.

Report of Superintendent of Young People's Work, 1920.

Number of auxiliaries, 22; number of members (about) 350; number of mission study classes, 14; number of auxiliaries observing Week of Prayer, 10; amount of dues paid, $327.80; amount of pledge paid, $327.47; Week of Prayer offering, $33.96; Scarritt Fund, $4; life members (2), $30; special, $12.50; Retirement and Relief Fund, $11.83; Conference expense fund, $10.80. Total sent Conference Treasurer, $668.28.

The work, as a whole, has made some increase, but not what we had hoped for. In "Number of Auxiliaries" we stand about the same as last year, but financially we have made a good increase, and from the interest manifested in our district rallies I believe the young people realize the obligations and duties that rest upon them, and are willing to take up the work of their Master.

There is but one discouraging note in the whole department, and that is, lack of leaders for our young people. Let us pray daily that our Father may call women to definite work with and for our young people.

Shreveport District reached her goal in having six auxiliaries, all reporting to our Conference Treasurer. This district also held the rally for the Young People as suggested by the committee last year. Monroe District reached her goal in number of auxiliaries, but only two reported to Mrs. Carver, and they did not hold the rally for the young people. On Young People's night Mrs. J. D. Woolworth, District Secretary of the Shreveport District, will be presented with a pin and pennant for the work done in her district, having reached the goal set for her.

Goal For 1921.

Shreveport District, 10 auxiliaries; Alexandria District, 6 auxiliaries; Ruston-Monroe District, 6 auxiliaries; Lake Charles District, 2 auxiliaries; Houma District, 1 auxiliary; Baton Rouge District, 2 auxiliaries; New Orleans District, 4 auxiliaries.

At the annual meeting the Superintendent of Young People's work will present a Y. P. M. S. pin and pennant to the District Secretaries reaching the goal.

It was a great pleasure to have with us in October, Mrs. J. W. Perry, Council Superintendent of Young People's work. She spoke to our young people at the rallies held in New Orleans and Alexandria.

Mission and Bible Study.

There has been an increase in the number of Mission Study Classes. Also greater interest has been shown in Bible Study. I trust all Superintendents of Young People's work will put special emphasis on both Mission Study and the study of the Bible.

Roll of Honor.

Three (3) Auxiliaries are on the Roll of Honor for 1920: Oakdale, Mansfield, and First Church, Shreveport.

Week of Prayer.

Ten Auxiliaries observed the Week of Prayer. I am sorry this falls short of last year's report.

Young People's Rallies.

We regret that only four rallies were held. This was not the fault of your officers; reports came from the District Secretaries, they were unable to find other Adult Auxiliaries willing to co-operate and assist in holding rallies. My prayer for this year is that each Adult Auxiliary will feel a deep responsibility toward the Young People.

The districts holding rallies were: Shreveport District, at Mansfield; Houma District, at Houma; New Orleans District, at New Orleans; Alexandria District, at Alexandria.

Time forbids my telling of the attendance and interest shown, but they were a great blessing and have helped the work of this department.

Volunteers.

While only one signed a First Decision Card under my supervision, quite a number of young people pledged to give themselves to the Lord for him to use in whatever way he chooses.

Adult Auxiliaries, let us not be negligent, and at each and every meeting pray for our young people that we may have a large number of volunteers this year.

Pledge.

Our Pledge for 1920 was $300, and we have paid $327.47. The Young People's Specials for 1921 are Vashiti Industrial School, Thomasville, Ga., for the home field, and the Laura Haygood Normal School, Soochow, China, in the foreign field. Let us make our offering for this year as liberal as possible, that Louisiana may stand higher in the Young People's work for 1921.

MRS. B. F. KEY,

Conf. Supt. of Young People's Work.

Report of Social Service Committee, Annual Meeting at Baton Rouge.

Realizing that this department of our work is growing in importance and believing that it presents to our women most wonderful opportunities for practical Christian service, we, your committee on Social Service, beg to submit the following important recommendations:

1. That these recommendations constitute the working basis for the auxiliaries and that the Social Service Superintendent thoroughly familiarize herself with them, keeping a copy of them conveniently at hand and making a determined effort to carry on the work as herein suggested.

2. That the auxiliary superintendent acquaint herself with the system of reporting and send in all reports promptly to Conference Superintendent of Social Service.

3. That the Social Service programs issued by the Council be presented at the third meeting of each quarter.

4. Payment of poll tax and use of the ballot; also urge organization of local branches of Woman's Legislative Council of Louisiana for the purpose of making our women familiar with the issues which are before the people; that they may intelligently make use of the new trust that has been granted them.

5. That the auxiliaries urge the enforcement of compulsory educational laws, particularly with reference to children of foreigners and Negroes, and that co-operation between parents and school principals and teachers be urged.

6. Realizing as never before our duty to the Negro, we urge a thorough, unprejudiced study of their needs and a determined effort on the part of our women to better their spiritual, moral and physical conditions. For this purpose we urge the organization of Friendship Community Clubs and the use of the splendid programs issued by the Council.

7. That every auxiliary conduct an active and continued campaign of visiting jails, houses of correction and poor farms, having religious services conducted regularly, and looking into the moral and physical conditions of these institutions.

8. Believing the modern dance to be one of the most dangerous evils of the day, we would earnestly and prayerfully call the attention of Christian mothers to this evil, trusting that they will do all in their power to create sentiment against it and urge them to make the social life of the church more attractive to its young people.

9. That the Social Service Committee investigate the needs of the community and co-operate with all other organizations which are looking to the spiritual, moral and social betterment of the people.

FROM HOUMA, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: Since about the first half of the year has passed, I shall take it upon myself to give you a few of the things that have passed this way since Conference.

One very pleasant affair was to have with us the District Set-up Team. Brother Lutz preached for us on Sunday morning, and we received ten members into the church. For this year we have received into the church sixteen members, with a few more on the line.

We have received bids on the new church for the second time, and they are still higher than we can reach, the lowest being $17,500. If the crops are good and the price is right, we shall be able to build this fall. However, we still need a good three thousand dollars, so as to seat the building.

The attendance on Sundays is fine, a large number of men coming out each Sunday to hear the preaching. We now have a membership of 93. Give us a good building and in ten years this will be a self-supporting church. The claims are being met slowly at this time. The pastor is paid to date.

GREENVILLE METHODISM.

Dr. Geo. W. Read, of the North Alabama Conference, preached for us all last week. He is a teacher sent from God. His series of sermons on "The Apostles' Creed" surpassed any similar utterance I ever heard. On Sunday last Bishop McMurphy spoke on the educational movement. A great congregation heard him with the keenest interest.

We recently organized an Epworth League, and are having from 30 to 40 in attendance each Sunday evening.

The pastor has received 71 into the church since the first of December. We are planning to take a number of men into the church on Mother's Day. These are fine people and it is a joy to work with them.

ACTIVITIES ON OAK RIDGE CHARGE.

Dear Brother Carley: We have just closed a splendid meeting at Bovina with the former pastor, J. A. Wells, preaching. The sermons were all of high order and very helpful. The interest and attendance exceeded our expectations and we received by different methods six adults, valuable additions to our church there.

Porter's Chapel church has gone on the "Every Family" list in taking the Advocate. Rev. R. Selby, of Crawford Street, Vicksburg, has preached at this church twice, representing the education movement in a very effective way.

Flower Hill church enjoys the distinction of being one of the leading country churches in paying their Centenary subscription, and the treasurer, Brother J. S. Fox, assures me that the five-year quota will be paid in full.

Prof. J. W. Broom spoke four times on the first Sunday in April on the Education Movement, at Oak Ridge, Flower Hill, and Bovina. His message was much appreciated and resulted in renewed interest in the movement and the establishment of one family altar.

The Education Movement has taken hold of the people in a way that is peculiarly gratifying to me, feeling, as I do, that it is the greatest movement ever undertaken by Southern Methodism. One representative from all five churches was present at the Set-up meeting in Vicksburg. Not a single individual has refused to accept a place in forwarding the Educational Campaign.

Our meeting is planned to begin at Calkin Academy in two weeks with N. B. Bond, a Baptist minister and personal friend of the pastor, to preach. We are scheduled to have Brother G. H. Thompson at Oak Ridge and W. H. Saunders at Flower Hill, both in July; J. O. Ware at Porter's chapel in August, and J. M. Lewis at Bradley Chapel in September.

Pray for us.

SELECTING OUR OWN ANCESTORS

Some have stressed heredity until it has become a straight-jacket fettering every man, and instead of being an inspiration it has become a curse; instead of assisting development it has positively forbidden it. But we have come to see that there is more in life than heredity. We do not wish to dispute its value as a factor in the upward development of man, but we have learned that man is more than his human ancestors; he is not only a son of man, he is also a son of God, and this latter fact makes it possible for him to refuse to obey the dictates of heredity and practically to choose who his ancestors shall be. Prof. Christian Collin, of the University of Christiania, Norway, in a recent article puts it as follows. He says: "As an organic creature, I am the descendent of a fortuitous line of ancestors, limited in endowments and opportunities; but as a child of civilization I am free to select my own ancestry, to become the offspring of Homer and Shakespeare, the scion of a more than royal stock."

There is a world of truth in this to which our age does well to take heed.—The Christian Guardian.

WIFE TAKES HUSBANDS ADVICE

And Is Made Well Again by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Springfield, Mass. — "The doctor told my husband that I had to have an operation, otherwise I would be a sickly woman and could not have any more children on account of my weakened condition. I refused to have the operation. My husband asked me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to see if it would not help me. For the first four months I could do but little work, had to lie down most of the time, was nervous and could eat hardly anything, but my husband was always reminding me to take the Vegetable Compound, which I did. Of my eight children this last one was the easiest birth of all and I am thankful for your Vegetable Compound. I recommend it to my friends when I hear them complaining about their ills."—Mrs. M. NATALE, 72 Fremont St., Springfield, Mass.

Sickly, ailing women make unhappy homes, and after reading Mrs. Natale's letter one can imagine how this home was transformed by her restoration to health. Every woman who suffers from such ailments should give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial. It is surely worth while.

The Scholar of Gamaliel

ST. Paul—the first missionary of Christianity—was an educated man, the greatest of his time. He could repel the attacks of pagan philosophy. He could crush the false systems that opposed his faith. He could hold his own in the cultural centers of the world.

Thus he transmitted Christianity to all the succeeding ages. But for his trained intellect reinforcing his fervent heart, we might be pagans now.

All great missionaries have been trained men.

They met the heathen religions in their own strongholds, and dethroned them. They have translated the Bible into all languages. They have erected and maintained mighty colleges. They have been the advisers of emperors and ministers of state. They have understood the culture of the peoples to whom they ministered.

The Christian College—and no other—gives this type of leader to the Church.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

PUT IT INTO PRACTICE.

The theoretical application of the injunction, "Love thy neighbor," is an easy means of picturing an ideal state of society from which the clashes of conflicting interests have been eliminated; and if this theoretical application could be made to produce results, we should soon have a world in which happiness would reign supreme. But it is practice that makes perfect, and what we need most of all nowadays is the actual practice of loving our fellow-men as we love ourselves. That it is difficult, we have not the least doubt—but it is possible. We are not among those who contend that there is too much preaching to-day—but a good deal of our preaching would be more effective if it were accompanied by an ocular demonstration of the principles we profess.

WE CAN SAVE CHINA.

Our latest information concerning the famine in China is to the effect that 5,000,000 people will perish before the middle of June unless helped by the American people. In order to secure contributions from as many sources as possible and as quickly as possible, this week—May 1-8—has been set apart by proclamation in many cities of the nation as "Sacrifice Week," during which all of us are asked to make at least a small sacrifice by which we may give something to those who are actually starving to death. When we remember that two cents will save a life for a day, it is not extravagant to say that the American people can save China if they will, just for a few days, do without even a few of the things they do not need. We heard a good man say the other day that he could not buy a new suit of clothes while little children in China are dying for just a little bread. Most of us would not have to make a sacrifice to give something to this most appealing cause.

WORTH FIFTY DOLLARS.

Not long ago, a young lady in Chicago, secretary of the local Y. W. C. A., was awarded a prize of fifty dollars, offered by one of the city papers, in a "politeness" campaign. Without revealing his identity, the reporter whose duty it was to award the prize subjected this young lady to a half-hour of questioning in a way that too often evokes impatient and testy answers. This young lady, however, was unflinching in courtesy, in spite of the "fool questions." Courtesy is not usually rewarded with cash, but it has a real value. We knew of a bank which lost a good account because the paying teller failed to be decently courteous to a customer one day. The teller later lost his job.

HOW ABOUT MEN?

The following facts, which we came across recently, may be of interest to some of our readers: "The United States, with only six per cent of the world's population and seven per cent of the world's land, produces 56 per cent of the world's supply of paper; 20 per cent of the world's supply of gold; 25 per cent of the world's supply of wheat; 40 per cent of the world's supply of iron and steel; 40 per cent of the world's supply of lead; 40 per cent of the world's supply of silver; 50 per cent of the world's supply of zinc; 52 per cent of the world's supply of coal; 60 per cent of the world's supply of aluminum; 60 per cent of the world's supply of copper; 60 per cent of the world's supply of cotton; 66 per cent of the world's supply of oil; 75 per cent of the world's supply of corn; 85 per cent of the world's supply of automobiles." It is generally assumed that natural resources are the basis of national prosperity; on this assumption, the United States is incomparably the most prosperous nation on the face of the earth. But another element must be taken into consideration—manhood. A monopoly of natural resources would not enable a nation to become great if it did not, at the same time, have men and women of lofty ideals, pure characters, and intelligent comprehension of the duties of citizenship. If we put our trust in our material resources and neglect our boys and girls, we shall inevitably go down in the pages of history as a nation that was tried and found wanting. If we will utilize our wealth in the production of good men, we shall establish our civilization upon a foundation which can never be shaken. The endowment of colleges and universities is a form of investment that will pay dividends in centuries to come.

READY TO HELP.

That the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is actively engaged in meeting its obligations to the colored people of the South may not be well known to our friends of other ecclesiastical organizations; and our own people may not be aware of the extent to which we are undertaking to minister to those who have a right to expect much of us. A recent statement by Dr. O. E. Goddard in this connection is very illuminating. He calls attention to the fact that we are now helping to support one hundred and two missionaries among the colored people, and that we are spending large sums of money annually for the promotion of educational work among them. In addition to maintaining Paine College for them, our Board of Education is helping at least a dozen other schools which are doing notable work. Through the Colored Methodist Church, organized by our church in 1870, we have a door of approach that is open and inviting. All our missionary work is not being done in foreign lands—we are efficiently busy at home.

BABEL, OR BETHEL?

That the world is in confusion to-day, no observant man can doubt. Industry is disorganized, politics is unsettled, society is in a ferment, and religion is assailed on many sides. Individuals are perplexed as to the outcome of it all, and organizations are uncertain as to the right course to pursue. But a hopeful sign is to be found in the fact that so many good people are earnestly and prayerfully working to find a solution to the many problems that confront us. It could not be otherwise. The divine purpose that order shall prevail runs throughout the whole course of creation, and those who have allied themselves with the Divine must give themselves to the realization of that purpose. We do not profess to know when or how, but we are invincibly fixed in the belief that better things are coming. This tower of confusion which has lifted itself among us will come to naught, and in its place will be builded a house of God in which all the nations of earth may find peace. Blessed is the man who has a part in raising the walls of Bethel!

NOT WHERE YOU CAME FROM, BUT WHERE YOU ARE GOING.

A good friend of ours, in speaking recently of a man who has achieved distinction in his chosen line of work, remarked: "I knew him in his childhood days, away back in the country." In the course of his conversation, we learned that this particular man had been born and reared on a farm, many miles from the railroad, with only such early advantages as might be expected in a rural community. But the boy did not stay where he started—he went somewhere—and that is what counts. It is worth something to begin life under favorable auspices; to have the opportunities that wealth and position are supposed to give; to enter upon life unhandicapped, with a fair road stretching out before; but, as in so many other things, it is not the beginning, but the end that determines whether or not success has been gained. The boy who makes up his mind to go somewhere will get there sooner or later if he heads in the right direction and keeps moving, no matter where he starts from. It is just about as easy to go from Satalia to London as it is to go from London to Satalia.

BISHOP PAINE'S "McKENDREE."

By Payton A. Sowell.

II.

The parents of Wm. McKendree were of the Episcopal Church—at least in their ecclesiastical bent. We have no way of knowing to what extent he was religiously influenced by that church. He says Rev. John Easter, a Methodist circuit rider on the Brunswick circuit, Virginia Conference, was God's instrumentality in his conversion. He considered this—his conversion—a great crisis in his life. It is supposed he was licensed to preach in 1777.

This step was taken soon after he became a believer. At any rate, in nine months after conversion, he attended what he calls the District Conference, at Petersburg, Va., and was assigned as junior preacher, associated with Philip Cox as P. C., on Mecklenburg circuit, James O'Kelly, P. E. From that date to March 5, 1835—forty-seven years—he was the equal of Francis Asbury as an itinerant Methodist preacher. When he was converted, two passions were born in his heart: first, a love for lost sinners; second, to preach Christ's gospel; and they lasted until he closed his eyes in death at Fountain Head, Tenn., forty-seven years afterwards.

The Lord had in waiting this strong young Virginia countryman to take up the work as it fell from the dying fingers of Asbury. A man of McKendree's strength and economical habits could have dug a fortune out of the soil of the great West. A man of his judgment and analytical mind and his influence over men could have made a name and fortune in the legal profession. The Holy Spirit was choosing from among the best of that day when He called Wm. McKendree into the itinerant ministry. He had found a man who could meet the emergency. He began at thirty years old, having no knowledge of the economy of Methodism, and having no school in which to learn, except on a vast circuit, and no tutor except the association of his fellow preachers, and in twenty years he was chosen the first American bishop, when the church had in its ministry such great men as Jesse Lee, Freeborn Garrison, Wm. Burke, John Emory, Logan Douglass, Enoch George, Philip Bruce, John Page, Learner Blackman, and many others of like worth and greatness. He was not a bishop because there were none else. He was bishop because he was the man for the hour.

Really, Methodism is "unique" in ecclesiastical history. John Wesley considered the world his parish. If there was no open door, if he could reach it, he opened one. He was an Englishman, the Colonies were a part of England. He saw these people of the new world; he loved them; among them were an increasing number of his own converts. He sent over, as he could have opportunity, of his lay preachers to be missionaries in America. It was not a church, even in Wesley's mind, but a part of his religious societies.

If it was anything of a church at all, up to the close of the Revolution, it was Wesley's church. When America was no longer a part of England, and since Wesley was no part of America, he saw a new arrangement must be established. He, having loved these societies, loved them to the end.

He sent Coke over, having ordained him—as he believed—through all the orders, into a bishop. He gave him orders to call a conference and ordain an Englishman who was already over in America—who had remained true to America through the seven years of struggle, and was a genuine American. It is remarkable that he never returned to England even on a visit. He came to America in 1771; and on March 31, 1816, after forty-five years, he gathered up his feet and made the last ride on the "pale horse" to the shores eternal.

The Christmas Conference was a hurried call. Freeborn Garrison was the wireless agency to summon the scattered itinerants to Baltimore. At the conference Asbury was ordained. By his conditions, the church severed itself from Mr. Wesley. There appears some doubt among the families of Methodists as to the actual name of this church. As a matter of fact, it was no longer one of Mr. Wesley's societies; it was no longer "the Methodists;" it was a church—the Methodist Church—in or of America. In 1808, again in Baltimore, the church took another full step, and became a constitutional, a connectional church. Perhaps these men who fought under Washington, saw in the newly organized government a beautiful suggestion—the States in a Union. So they made one connected whole out of the several Annual Conferences.

We are able to discover as the years passed the enlarging, and more clearly, the defining of the essentials of this unique ecclesiastical organization. I am not prepared to say what would have been the internal disturbances if Asbury had submitted to ordination without election. It may be that O'Kelly did not have cordial appreciation of his brother presiding elder—Asbury; and Asbury, in using the good judgment he possessed, feared trouble if he accepted Wesley's plan. Perhaps he remembered the bloody battles of the seven years to destroy autocracy. However these things may have been, O'Kelly had evil things to say of Asbury. He conceived or acquiesced in the idea of a Council. This was a move in which Asbury coincided. It was a feeling out after a better adjustment, but was so imperfect and blundering that even O'Kelly sought to kill it. It was top-heavy. The bishops and presiding elders were to be ex-officio members. It did not settle anything—all measures were to go back to the Annual Conferences, and even to the District Conferences (whatever they were), for final adjudication. And therefore there might be as many opinions as there were Annual Conferences, and even district conferences. There was never but one Council. Finally, a delegated Conference was held in 1808 in Baltimore. How Baltimore has been "blessed" with pivotal Methodist Conferences! It looks as if Methodism came in on the ground floor.

Then it was that Connectionalism in Methodism became constitutional. At this "representative" Conference, they put into the constitution—and beyond change by Annual or General Conference except under certain limitations and restrictions—The Articles of Religion; the General Rules; itinerant episcopal form of administration; the rights of preachers and members to trial, restricting the Articles of Religion forever from change. And thus a conference was made of selected delegates, and the church saved from Annual Conference confusion, and a mass—religious mob—assembly.

We often surfeit on the thing we most desire and strive for. American Methodism strove to have a General Superintendency—itinerant superintendency. They were solicitous to make their superintendents responsible for the duties required of them. Yet, strange as it may appear, the movement has surged over a hundred years to destroy in a large sense the itinerant episcopacy and to diminish the resources of their possible responsibility. It came early, in the effort to take out of the power of the bishops the appointment of the presiding elders, making the Conference responsible for the choice of them, and the bishop responsible for their action or administration. The Eastern Conferences led, largely, in this innovation. Many prominent preachers were marshalled on that side—among them, John Emory. Finally it passed the General Conference. At the same session, but before its passage, Joshua Soule was elected a bishop. He declined the office. Even Bishop Roberts thought Soule's declining to accept the office and ordination was insubordination. McKendree took the ground, when the General Conference elected and turned Joshua Soule (or any one) over to the bishops for ordination, he passed beyond the hands of the Conference, and the bishops, and not Joshua Soule, were responsible to the Conference.

The rule to elect presiding elders was suspended, and the bishops were allowed to carry it to the Annual Conferences for their action. The South and West agreed with McKendree; the East sustained the rule, or did not vote. Finally, on May 24, 1824, the rule was nullified, and the bishops continued to select and appoint presiding elders. This General Conference was also at Baltimore. The bishops were given a veto power. Out of this long-vexing question there sprang, perhaps, several non-episcopal, or very restricted episcopal Methodist churches. Episcopalianism has far outstripped the others in growth. And in the South and the West and the Northwest, the growth has been most phenomenal. Without taking sides, I think I can make this general statement: The earlier days of Methodism were days more of men—the power of individual action; the later days in their tendencies, are days of boards—of secretaries. The earlier arena was the pulpit—preaching—the pastoral service; the later days reveal a readiness to leave the strain and obscurity of the pastorate, quit the drudgery of being directed, and with stenographers and office and desk, direct the pastors.

It was the original interpretation of authority that the bishops divide their fields among themselves; the later view is to put this power in a committee, or the General Conference. A Board may have power enough to pass by any general request of the Annual Conferences, even, and carry into enactment its preferences.

Reading Paine's "McKendree," one can not fail to see the high estimate early Methodism put on the man himself, and how these stalwarts wrought.

Of course McKendree is the central figure in all these pages. William McKendree, according to the picture drawn of him by Bishop Paine, deserves a place among the great moral leaders of the history of universal Methodism. He belonged to the great, sturdy middle class. He was in close touch with the surging, hungry-hearted masses. He was not scholarly, but he was a student. He possessed a wonderful discrimination in the choice of the words to make clear his speech. Though not robust, he was symmetrically built, proportioned in body and mind by the best rules. As a preacher, his voice while not of the thunder tones, yet could be distinctly heard, even in the open air, by thousands. He was not a revivalist in the sense of "getting up" a great stir, but his preaching was clear, earnest, and forceful; it uncovered the consciences of men. He held back nothing in his sacrifice for Methodism and Christ. Think of a man seventy years old, afflicted with rheumatism, piles, hernia, asthma, vertigo (high blood pressure—no doubt with sclerosis), on horseback, in spring wagons and gigs riding over the rough roads of ninety years ago, making the circuit of the United States annually! He deserves all the honor the united Methodism of America can bestow.

This man came to the last hour saying, "All is well." He slept for years in solitude near Fountain Head, Tenn.; now on Vanderbilt campus.

WILL THE SOUTH STAND FOR THIS?

Dr. J. H. Reynolds, Director General of the Christian Education Movement, in a recent statement calls attention to some facts that the people of the South need to face. He says:

"Our people must be led to see that the higher educational institutions of the South are shamefully poor. Of sixty colleges and universities in the United States having an endowment of $1,000,000 or over, only five are in the South and one of the five is a colored school, and only one belongs to our church. In 1920, $87,464,203 were contributed to Northern colleges and universities and $250,000 to Southern institutions in gifts of $75,000 or above. (For list see World's Almanac for 1921.)

"Moreover, all of these gifts were by Northern people. Indeed the larger part of the wealth of the five Southern institutions having an endowment of a million, was contributed by people in the North. It is rather humiliating to be told that the endowment of the colleges and universities of Massachusetts alone exceeds the endowments of all colleges and universities in the South, and the census for 1917 shows that Massachusetts, with an area of only 8,266 square miles and a population of only 3,852,356, has property assessed at $4,898,860,299, while the States of Alabama, Mississippi, Georgia, Tennessee, South Carolina, North Carolina, Florida and Virginia together have an area of 326,462 square miles, a population of 16,882,626, and property assessed at only $4,596,783,760. That is to say, eight Southern States with almost forty times the area of Massachusetts and about four and a half times the population, have less wealth than the people of Massachusetts by $302,076,539. It seems to pay the people of Massachusetts to put money into education.

"But the South is not going to continue this neglect. Already throughout the whole section there is an awakened educational consciousness, which is sure to express itself in an aggressive way. One can feel a mood of educational progress in the air and sense the determined purpose of a great and generous people to make immediate amends for past neglect and failure. It may be, therefore, safely predicted that the next ten years will mark an era of extraordinary educational advancement. The all-important question is the kind of education that is to dominate in this period of development—what motives and ideals shall control it. Shall it be Christian or materialistic and pagan? Shall the South remain true to evangelical Christianity or not? That is the issue."—Bulletin.

By Rev. S. Curtis Yates.

Till the launching of the Educational Movement the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, never had a definite, concerted educational programme. Efforts in this direction have been superficial, sporadic, disjointed, and the results attained are incommensurate with what we believe to have been the desire of the Lord regarding the Christian enlightenment of the world. We have been drifting through the years. Cults and schools laying claim to truth and righteousness arose within the past two thousand years; their name is legion. Drifting with no definite, eternal aim in view, they ran, and continued to run, in crowds about the treacherous rocks, leaving not a wake behind. Only the church with an educational programme survives, while all around are religious societies making no effort at Christian education, whose crafts are high and dry upon the reefs pounding to wreckage. The Methodist Church must educate or die, and if it refuses to do so, it ought to die!

I

What Christian Education Is.

This is not a call to the young people of the church to educate; every American has an innate hunger for education—that call exists already. Statutory provisions are made for schools, and there are laws to see that those schools are attended. Christian education means permeating modern education, which savors so much of the materialistic and commercial, with morality and Christianity. The secular theory of education is that it is a tool to help men "to make a living," and so materialistic have colleges become that sixty per cent of the leading professors in American colleges repudiate the doctrine of the soul's immortality and deny the existence of God. Professor Leuba (may his tribe decrease) in his survey showing the spiritual effect of modern education on students says that eighty-five per cent of all students entering secular colleges profess their faith in God and in the immortality of the soul, but only fifty per cent of them have that faith when they graduate. Professor Leuba made this survey to show that atheism is displacing the Christian religion. He is himself an atheist teaching in the greatest woman's college in America, so imagine, if you will, how deeply steeped in religious decay the nation will have become when godless women and godless homes fill the land. Following after Germany, we have kicked the Bible and the Christian religion from the State colleges; we have introduced militarism and Darwinism in its most extreme literalism.

Christian education, the movement in which all the churches are vitally concerned, is an education of the mind that exalts God. It teaches that at the center of the universe and of life is an omnipotent, ineffable God. It is an education that recognizes all the laws of nature, the laws of physical science, the different aspects and processes of matter as manifestations of God's power and will. God has not left us without a witness; he has written his signature across everything he has made. The heavenly bodies that swing in such majesty and rhythm and precision through the limitless spaces move according to design, but there can be no design without designer. The Creation implies a Creator. The most advanced thought cannot be behind the First Cause or "the beginning." He who accepts the dictum, "I will believe only what I know," though he feels as if his forehead is lifted as high as the heavens, and that at every step he knocks out a star, cannot explain the power by which a tree pumps its sap from root to leaf, or why the baby rabbit rejects the grasses that would harm it. Christian education is one that recognizes that back of the moral and the material universe is a Master Mind that revels in the beauty of the order he has established and delights in the works of his fingers.

God is not idle nor withdrawn from the universe. As the Creator he has been functioning since the beginning of history, natural, sacred, and profane. All the great mass movements of the race are paralleled by His footprints; every great movement or reform that has appeared in the earth was a vehicle conveying the voice or bearing the will of God. The upward march of the race has been, and is, a true, unmistakable following the lead of His guiding hand. The theory of Evolution as applied to morals, government, religion, as well as to the rise and development of the species of life, is very generally accepted by the church, but purposing and ordering it all was God. The wisest scientist with the best equipped laboratory in the world has not been able to create the humble protozoa; however accurately he has combined his elements, he has been unable to create the lowest form of life. At every turn is the mystery unfathomable, is God unavoidable, inevitable, without whom there "was not anything made that was made." And far better would it be for education to become forever a lost accomplishment than for it to become paganized as it is becoming to-day in these secular schools, where 60 per cent of the faculty admittedly are devotees of atheism. If your son or daughter is attending a secular college, six out of every ten and three out of every five instructors (Prof. Leuba's survey shows) are atheists poisoning his or her youthful mind with the virus of their abominable doctrine!

II.

Christian Education No New Thing.

The noblest and most sublime characters history affords were men of righteousness who had a definite knowledge of God. Abram was called because he had a clearer conception of God than did any of his contemporaries. Though he dwelt among desert tribes in Midian, Moses, who had been educated in the Egyptian court, had a conscious knowledge of the God of his fathers. Who can forget the picture of little Samuel under the tutorage of venerable Eli as he wakes up and answers the call of God? of Solomon who ruled Israel during the period of her greatest material prosperity? of Daniel and his brethren, who "skillful in all wisdom, and cunning in knowledge, and understanding science," victoriously defied the Chaldean king, and whose adherence to their religious convictions won for the God of Israel a notable victory in Nebuchadnezzar's kingdom? St. Paul, the first great teacher of the Christian religion, was one of the most highly educated men of his day, teaching Jesus Christ to Jew and Gentile and before kings and princes. He expected to see personally the consummation of all things and the return of the Lord, so he gathered disciples about him and taught Jesus Christ to them. Paul made the world his parish. Asia Minor knew his presence; the Syrian stars looked down upon him as he trod those pristine hills where history was thicker than along the Applan Way. This great Christian scholar was easily at home among the intellectuals of learned Greece. Rome heard him and yielded to his faultless logic and persuasive eloquence. Indeed, tradition says that this learned apostle in his passionate zeal for teaching Him who was manifested in the flesh pressed on to the end of the then known world, rallying disciples around the standard of his Lord in distant, rugged, romantic Spain.

Education in things pertaining to God and righteousness is nothing new. It is true that to the State has been given in large measure the task of educating our youths, but the church is the mother of education. In America, 101 of the first 119 colleges established were Christian colleges. Methodism itself is a product of a famous university. All that has been found good in the religions of men, touched by the best scholarship has to offer, accounts for Methodism. The names of John and Charles Wesley, George Whitefield, and Thomas Coke, suggest to us the infant Methodist Church which has grown to be the largest denomination in America, if not in all Protestantism. All of these men were schooled in perhaps the greatest university of that day. The Methodist Church has always believed in Christian education, the first General Conference in America founding Cokesbury College. In fact, it is said, a school was provided for before the first Methodist meeting house was built. The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, maintains ninety-one schools and colleges which have an enrollment of 25,000, but the provisions made are sadly inadequate when we consider the 5000 young men and women, the most of whom are from Methodist homes, all wanting a Christian education, who last year found our schools unable to receive them because of insufficient accommodations. In that army of students we are compelled to turn away each year from our church schools are possible church workers, who, on entering secular institutions, are lost forever to the church, State colleges furnishing practically no religious workers. Those entering other denominational schools are, in many instances, lost to that denomination. Every church has a right to, and ought to, claim the unchurched children of its members, but a recent startling report prepared by the Episcopal Church shows that in a particular jurisdiction of that church the Methodists gave the Episcopal Church more clergymen than the Episcopallians furnished themselves!

That church which fails to make provision for educating its youths will lose them, and it ought to lose them!

In the Educational Movement of the church that is presented to us for our consideration, as in all worthy enterprises whatsoever, the least any one can do is give of his means. The least any man can do in the name of Christianity is to give money; the one who does the work is the one who makes the real sacrifice. William Carey, on sailing for India as a missionary, said to the church: "There is gold to be mined in India; I will go down after it if you will hold the rope." What a little thing, and yet what a big thing it is to hold the rope! The ones who make the sacrifice are the heroes braving the perils, enduring the hardships down in the mines, yet sending up the gold for God.

So with this opportunity challenging us, big not only in the demands made upon us by 5000 young men and women, who, hungering for a Christian education, look up to us unfed, but big in its appeal to men who should rejoice in doing big things—with this opportunity before us, holy in its origin, beautiful in its conception, big with destiny, golden with possibilities, eternal in its worth, let us declare in the face of obstacles by the side of which we may appear as grasshoppers, "It is a goodly land; let us go up at once and possess it"; or resolve as did courageous old King Lear:

"Blow wind! come wrack;

At least we'll die with harness on our back."

When a certain famous American college was established, the early settlers who could do no more, pledged themselves to give a peck of corn yearly. In this movement let not the humblest fail to contribute his mite, and let us carry through to success this $33,000,000 enterprise; by doing which we will meet an obligation to God and to 5000 American youths who every year see our college doors closed to them.

J. J. BECK—A MEMOIR.

John J. Beck was born in Leflore County, Mississippi, Oct. 17, 1857, and died at Drew, Mississippi, Feb. 8, 1921, in the sixty-fourth year of his age. He was married to Miss Elizabeth Marshall, near Ruleville, Miss., in 1887. Their union proved most happy, the more than thirty years of married life being marked by an affection as genuine as it was unfeigned. Nor was their devotion to their children less than to each other. It was the desire of both parents that their children should be "brought up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord," and they sought to have a Christian home of the highest type.

The home of Brother Beck was a preachers' home. The weary itinerant never found warmer welcome nor kindlier treatment than with this happy family where the fireside was an altar, and prayer, song and Bible reading the order of the household. His piety was of the fervent, devotional type and nothing was too small for him to carry to the throne of grace for the blessings of the heavenly Father. He prayed with assurance that God heard and answered.

His fervor in worship did not excel his zeal in service. He was thoughtful and ready in his personal ministries to those in illness or sorrow. Few were more liberal than he in giving to every worthy cause. When he carved his plantation from the cane-brakes of north Sunflower County, there was no church building within a dozen miles, but he joined his neighbors in securing the nearest Methodist preacher for a regular appointment at the local school house. In 1896 he paid nearly one-half the cost of a neat chapel near his home at Sandy Bayou. When this was destroyed by a storm a few years later, he contributed liberally toward the erection of another. He built on his plantation a church for the Negroes. When he removed his family to the growing railroad town of Drew, he gave generously both to the construction of the first frame church building and to the handsome brick building now used by that congregation. The Methodist Hospital, the Superannuate Endowment Fund, and Grenada College were especial objects of his love and benevolence. All his daughters attended Grenada College and he rejoiced in all that was done for its welfare.

For more than twenty-five years, the writer had frequent business dealings with him and he was never found short of careful, scrupulous honesty and integrity. The Lord blessed his labors and he not only provided well for his own household, but lent his credit to numbers of poor, hard working young men of his community so effectively that several of them have become men of character and of means, their success being largely due to his generous confidence and assistance. They will carry on his good work, I am sure, as a tribute to their friend and benefactor.

Brother Beck was never happier than when at a Methodist Conference. For many years he missed few if any sessions of his district conference or of the North Mississippi Annual Conference. He was faithful and efficient as an official in his home church and was for thirty years or more a member of the quarterly conference.

The world is better for his life and work. He spent his time and substance in doing good. There be many who treasure the fragrance of the flowers he gathered for them and many whose hearts are bright with the glad sunshine and cheer he brought. His three sons and three daughters have a greater heritage in his good name than in the property he left. May the heavenly Father comfort them and the devoted wife who waits in patience the joyous day of meeting!

SHREVEPORT DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Shreveport District Conference was opened at 9:30 a.m., Tuesday, April 19, with the service of worship conducted by the presiding elder, Rev. R. H. Wynn. And up to the last moments of the closing session, on Thursday afternoon, the interest and attendance were splendid. Of the thirty-five preachers in charge in the district, only one, Brother G. D. Anders, was absent, and that was on account of sickness, to the regret of all concerned. There was a large number of women delegates present, and practically every charge was represented. It will be evident to every one, and not altogether because of the large size of the district, but because the interest was good, that this was perhaps the best attended conference, and one of the most interesting, in the history of the district. Certainly this is the case in the experience of this writer.

Rev. J. Cude Rousseaux was elected secretary, and Rev. Leland Clegg, assistant.

Two committees, not usually elected by our district conference in this section, were nominated by the Chair, and proved their worth. They were: Committee on Memoirs of Local Preachers, and Committee on Charge Boundaries. These two committees made their reports in due time. The first read the memoirs of Revs. W. R. Caraway, of Logansport, and T. W. Pipes, of Shreveport, two faithful men of God in the local ranks who died at their post of duty, faithful to the end. God give us more of this type of local preachers who will preach and work when asked to do so! The second committee gave helpful suggestions as to the permanent arrangement of the churches on circuits, with the view of lessening the expense of serving them and strengthening them financially.

The Sunday school interests were well cared for by Rev. Alonzo Early and Miss Hess, Elementary Superintendent, in a specially prepared program, the afternoon of the first day. The following district officers were nominated by the committee and duly elected by the conference for the ensuing year: District Secretary, C. O. Beauchamp; Superintendent Elementary Department, Miss Wilmer Russ; Intermediate and Senior, J.

R. Russell; Young People and Adult, Mrs. M. D. Bell; Superintendent Missionary Education, Miss Lucille Richardson. Splendid progress was reported made in Sunday school work, and the conference agreed to thorough district organization.

R. W. Vaughan spoke of the work being done in the Orphanage in daily Bible study, the Gary system having been put in operation there upon the suggestion of Pastor R. H. Wynn. Twelve thousand dollars have been paid to the Home so far this year.

Two local preachers present, besides those who are supplying regular charges, Revs. J. C. Sutton, of Spring Hill, and J. F. Dring, of the Homer Oil Fields, made good reports of their work. The presiding elder was asked by the conference, after due consideration of the committee appointed for that purpose, to raise funds throughout the district for the support of J. C. Sutton, to preach in neglected places, where he has accomplished already a good work, but had to stop for lack of support. A free-will offering, amounting to $66.30, was laid on the table for Brother Sutton.

S. S. Thomas presented the tables he had prepared, showing the payments on Centenary pledges and made an appeal for the famine sufferers of China.

On Wednesday the entire day was given to the setting-up meeting of the educational campaign, with a splendid lay delegation present. No doubt there were those present who for the first time caught the vision of the campaign, and they have returned home to "put it over." Rev. A. S. Lutz conducted the program, making a strong appeal for team organization and work. Mr. R. T. Moore, Conference Director for the Louisiana Conference, made a telling appeal to the laymen; and Rev. Geo. S. Sexton presented his history-making argument, "The Third Line of Battle." To the writer all these speeches seemed cumulative in the evidence they presented; the ground was well covered, and a current of educational interest was generated which will be carried to every member of our church, and to many an outsider friendly to us. Absolutely no opposition was encountered, or reported from any source, but rather, the repeated report was made, "We expect to do it."

B. E. Roberts was elected District Lay Leader.

The Committee on Quarterly Conference Records reported that twelve charges had failed to send their records. I give this here because it seems to be the case that we are growing careless about our church history and records.

The following lay delegates were elected to the Annual Conference: R. T. Moore, J. C. Foster, R. E. Robbitt, Mrs. A. J. Peavy, J. W. Dean, T. D. Connell, A. J. Scott, J. E. Reynolds. Alternates: W. R. Grigsby, Mrs. Briscoe Carter, S. P. Peters, Mrs. Wm. Schuhle.

Rev. J. G. Snelling presented the needs and made an appeal for the Memorial Home in New Orleans.

Dr. A. W. Turner read the report of the Committee on Moral and Social Questions. The conference, as a unit, practically, promised to write to Governor Parker, asking him to include in his call for the special Legislature the necessity of the passage of a State Enforcement Act in harmony with the Volstead Act, as we now have none.

The conference decided to hold an annual Preachers' Institute at Centenary College. The resolution that was presented pledged the district for $600 the first year, and asked that the matter be presented to the Annual Conference for their support.

Of the 92 churches in the district, the following table of results was given by the Committee on State of the Church: Number of Sunday schools, 68; prayer meetings, 36; accessions on

Help Save China's Children

A MOTHER holds in her thin, emaciated arms her starving child. For days she has watched the poor little frame waste away, she has listened to the piteous moans of the sufferer, she has heard the ever weakening voice beseeching her for food, food—WHEN SHE HAD NO FOOD, NOR COULD FIND ANY IN ALL THE LAND. And she knows that the hour is near when the moans will cease and food will no longer be needed.

The mother is one of thousands in China's vast famine district. Six million men, women and children are fated to die of starvation, wracked with the unspeakable pangs of hunger, unless American Christians save them. Dogs, donkeys, grass, even the bark of trees—all have been eaten. And the pitiful part of it is that millions of children, the future hope of the land, are included among the doomed unless relief comes quickly.

In this tragic hour, China stretches forth arms of supplication to America, confident that the love of Christ, whom we have preached to her, will move our hearts to compassion.

This is the hour of Christian opportunity in China. Now is the time of all times to impress upon these people that the love of Christ is something more than a beautiful sentiment. Even a heathen nation like Japan is pouring out relief with a liberal hand, stirred as never before by the overwhelming calamity which has befallen so great a multitude. Surely we can do no less. Surely we shall do much more—and do it immediately—if we are to continue in the profession of service to Him who commanded us to feed the hungry, to shield the weak, and to carry a Living Gospel into all the world, for the salvation of all who may believe.

WHAT YOU CAN DO

1. Give dollars if you can. If you can't, give pennies.
2. Get others to do the same. Enlist rescuers of China in your church, club or office.
3. Take up penny contributions.
4. Find Americans who will adopt a Chinese to feed.
5. Buy Life Saving Stamps.

Christian Education Covers the Whole of Human Life

Christian Education is not the exclusive possession of the college. In its process the home is just as vital. So is the Sunday school, the Church, the various activities in which developing life engages.

It begins in the home---when at the mother's knee the child receives its impressions of God, love, kindness, and duty. It ends only when life ends---it is sealed only in the reaches of eternity.

In this vast scheme of the soul's unfolding all the influences that touch human life are proper agencies of Christian Education. The family Bible is more potent than the college curriculum; prayer may accomplish more than pedagogy. The praying home is the great elementary school of religious education.

Materialism Must Not Prevail

The spirit of irreligion touches life at every point. At every point the Church must insert its counteracting religious influence.

This is the program of the Christian Education Movement

Through the Family Altar in every home, the Sunday school efficient and all-inclusive, the local church an agency of religious education, schools and colleges well equipped and Christian to the core, universities training the leaders for pulpit and mission field---it proposes to embrace the whole of human life in one vast and constant scheme of Christian Education.

In this great enterprise the colleges and the funds for their adequate support are related only as necessary means to a far greater end that looks to the Kingdom's coming---"coming without observation by the rearing of a whole generation of Christians."

MY FATHER.

I like to play close by my father's den,
Where he's at work, and every now and then Ask: "Father, are you there?" He answers back:
"Yes, son." That time I broke my railroad track
All into bits, he stopped his work and came And wiped my tears, and said: "Boy, boy! Be game!"
And then he showed me how to fix it right,
And I took both my arms and hugged him tight.

Once, when I'd asked him if he still was there,
He called me in and ruffled up my hair,
And said: "How much alike are you and I!
When I feel just as boys feel when they cry,
I call to our Big Father, to make sure
That he is there, my childish fears to cure,
And always, just as I to you, 'Yes, son,'
Our Father calls, and all my fret is done!"

A MOTHERS' DAY MEDITATION.

By Charles Dehaven Bulla.

I do not remember when my eyes first looked upon her beautiful face. I have heard that she went down to the valley of deep darkness to bring me from God's everywhere into the here. When I found myself in the country home, she was with me. She drew me close to her warm bosom and spoke gentle words. I have not found those words in my books, but I knew their meaning from the first, and they comforted me.

I soon learned that a low cry brought her to me; and when she came near, hunger and cold and fear vanished. Often when she looked down into my eyes as I lay in the cradle her lips moved, though I heard not a word. Whether baking or sewing or spinning or reading, she was never out of reach of the high chair. It is written: "He shall give his angels charge over thee."

For a long time I was not farther from her than the length of her apron string. It reached to the yard. She watched me from the porch as I played on the carpet of soft grasses and gathered posies and listened to the song birds in the trees that shaded our home.

That narrow strip of gingham reached to the schoolhouse across the bridge. She gave me a basket lunch, and I walked through the snows in little boots with red tops and copper tips. Seated near the teacher's desk, for reasons good to the pedagogue, I looked through the windows of the "Elementary Spelling Book," by Noah Webster,
LL.D., into Wisdom Land.

That apron string stretched out to the village church. When the great bell rang on Sunday morning, she took me to the services. Sometimes as the good man prayed or the people sang she shouted. I did not know why she said "Glory" and "Hallelujah;" but her face was bright, and she said she loved everybody. At such times I thought she might go away into the blue skies and was glad when she became quiet and put her arms about me, saying: "God bless my boy!" She gave me money with which to buy a New Testament. My sister taught me the "Blesseds" by heart; and because she did, I know more about humility and penitence and mercifulness and singleness of purpose, for those gracious words spoken by Jesus on the mount have never left me.

The time came when I heard somebody say:
"A fellow shouldn't always be held by an apron string." I was sorry to hear anybody say that, because at the other end of one apron string was the best friend I ever had. The slightest pull at my end of the string brought her to my side day or night. She bound with soft bandages and balm all my hurts of hand and head and heart.

Later on I heard about a land of gold and sunshine and flowers, beyond the village and the church steeple, on the western sky line. One foggy day when I did not see clearly I slipped my hand from the loop of the apron string and wandered far in that twilight country. I saw many strange and interesting things, yet I was not happy. I had money in my purse, but it did not buy the things I needed. When I prayed, the only answer was a voice, saying: "They love and miss you at home."

Something kept tugging away at my trunk until I started back to the home of my childhood. It was bright and cheery at the old fireside. A new life began to course through my veins. I slipped my hand into the loop of the apron string, to remove it again never, please God. Since then I have journeyed far at the call of duty, but again and again a slight tightening of the apron string has brought me into companionship with the guardian angel of my whole lifetime.

My mother has reached the ninety-ninth milestone on her way to the land of day and song. The Lord has been her sun and shield. He has given her grace. He will give her glory. I shall miss her when she leaves me for that sweet and blessed country, but I shall find her again by the gentle drawing of the apron string of deathless love. I do not forget that my children have a mother.

"A mother is a mother still,
The holiest thing alive."

DOROTHY'S DREAM LESSON.

By Margaret Brown Elms.

Priscilla, the beautiful French doll, opened her eyes and looked around the nursery, where little Dorothy Mayhew had left her the night before.
"My! I'm really the best-looking doll here," she thought, as she admired her beautiful chiffon dress with its tiny pink and blue rosebuds at the neck and waist. She supposed the other dolls were still sleeping, so added aloud, "I'd like to go over and get into bed with that dear little girl, and I would if I were not afraid of mussing my clothes."

"Who's talking and disturbing us all so early in the morning?" a Red Cross nurse inquired.

"Oh, it's the new doll with the curls, Mother Dorothy's latest victim," Ruth, a miserable-looking creature who had been in the family three years, replied. She cuddled under the bedclothes and tried to keep warm, but it was almost impossible. "I do wish Mother Dorothy would put a nightgown on me when she puts me to bed, instead of putting me between these cold sheets without a single thing on!" she exclaimed. "I thought I should freeze last night, and every time I shivered I would think of that little mother of ours, in that nice, warm bed, all fastened in tightly with great big safety-pins. I wonder why she doesn't treat us as her mother treats her."

"Oh, do stop finding fault!" Dorothy Darling, the rag doll, exclaimed. "Mother Dorothy didn't put me to bed at all last night, and I'm not grieveing."

"No wonder! You're always dressed, so what's the difference? Besides, who gets all the rides in the doll-carriage, and who sits at the table every time there is a party? Dorothy Darling, of course," the Red Cross nurse complained. "Why? Because you won't break your neck if you are upset on the hard pavement, and because they can knock you about as they please, and you'll be as good as ever.
But the rest of us are made of different material," she said, as she glanced at poor, forlorn-looking Ruth. She had been a dear little doll with supposed-to-be-unbreakable head and arms, but she was dreadfully scratched and blistered. The end of her nose was missing, all her finger-tips were gone, part of an ear had long since disappeared, and she hadn't a decent-looking article of clothing.

The baby doll, who had slept in the bed-hammock, spoke next: "Since I came home from the hospital the last time, Mother Dorothy has tried very hard to be good to me."

"Hospital!" the French doll exclaimed. "Have you been to a hospital? Tell me about it."

"All right. I've lived with Mother Dorothy three years, and I am still here, or at least my legs are." She heaved a sigh. "One day she let me fall off the couch, and broke my head right open, so I had to be taken to the hospital. I had a new head put on, but it isn't half so pretty as my own. I soon came back to the nursery, thinking I should never have another accident, but what do you suppose happened next? My arms began to crawl right into my body because Mother Dorothy had taken tiny little pieces right out of my body where my arms started to grow. She said I was strung too tightly, but I'm almost sure if she had been more careful, they wouldn't have crawled into me so easily. Before long, my poor, tired body was in a dozen pieces, so I had to have another one made. My nerves were all worn out, too, so they restrung me; and before leaving they decided that I needed new arms. Only think, my poor arms had been bent and straightened and pulled so much, that they said they wouldn't last much longer!"

"Why, what a shame! You really aren't yourself at all, are you? Oh, I hope that little Mayhew girl won't tear my clothes to pieces and comb out my beautiful curls," Priscilla said, as she touched her soft curls and looked down at her beautiful dress.

"Oh, don't worry," Ruth said. "I heard Grandma Mayhew tell Mother Dorothy that you were to be put up in the linen closet until she was older and more careful of her children."

"What! I'd bate to be shut up in that dark closet."

"That can't be compared with being put into a hospital. For my part, I'd sort of enjoy it, as I would get a rest," the much abused Ruth replied.

Mother Dorothy sat up in bed. "My darling, sweet children," she said, "don't you know that good children never say naughty things about their mothers? But you've been talking just terribly about your little mother, and I am ashamed of you, and also ashamed of your mother because she deserves to have all those horrid things said about her." She turned to the poor little naked doll. "I don't know where your nightgown disappeared, but I'll find it this very day." She picked up the Red Cross doll, and noticed that the cross was no longer on her bonnet, and that her dress was much soiled and ripped at the waist. "You aren't a very re-spect-able-looking nurse," she admitted. She glanced at Baby Edna and thought of her many mishaps. "You must not mind Beautiful Priscilla when she says you are not the same doll. Baby Edna, as you are mother's precious lamb, and you still have the legs you were born with, remember. I'm going to take better care of you all in the future, and you, 'Miss Frenchy,' needn't worry about being shut up in that linen-closet, for I'm going to prove to Grandma Mayhew that I know how to care for a nice, obedient family of children."

"Come, darling; aren't you going to get up this glorious morning?"

Dorothy opened her eyes. "Where are my dolls, mother?" she asked.

"Just where you left them, dear," mother replied, as she sadly looked around the nursery.
"I wonder when my little girl will learn to be more careful."

"Oh, mother, I'm going to start right away. I was dreaming about my dolls, and they were all complaining about me, and the way I treated them."

Then she told her mother all about it.

When Dorothy had finished speaking, her mother said: "I guess my little daughter has learned her lesson at last, and hereafter she will be a better little mother." And Grandma Mayhew was right.—Zion's Herald.

THE SEASHORE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

It was our pleasure to make a short visit to the Seashore District Conference in session at Columbia, Miss., last week. We were not there long enough to be able to give a report of its sessions—a report which we hope to have from the secretary in due time—but we were there long enough to be the recipient of appreciated courtesies at the hands of the popular pastor, Rev. L. L. Roberts, and the capable and efficient presiding elder, Rev. W. M. Sullivan. The hospitality in the homes of loved kinsmen was a delightful feature of the visit.

On the afternoon of our arrival, the Sunday School Institute was in session, conducted by the inimitable and irrepressible Conference Sunday School Field Secretary, Rev. J. C. Chambers. That Brother Chambers knows his work and loves it is evident to any one who comes into contact with him; that he is highly efficient is manifest from the fine record the Sunday schools of the Mississippi Conference are making. He is ably assisted by Mr. H. L. Clark, whose knowledge of the work is practical as well as theoretical. It was an especial pleasure to renew an acquaintance with Mr. Clark which began when we were students together at Millsaps College.

The principal feature of the evening session was an address by Rev. J. M. Morse, Conference Secretary of Education. His stirring words, accompanied by the stereopticon pictures of the educational work of our church, struck us as being a peculiarly effective presentation of the Christian Education Movement. That the importance of this Movement is appreciated is evidenced by his announcement that a Mississippi layman has already pledged a contribution of $100,000 to the cause. It is our earnest prayer that many of our men of means will follow the example of this generous friend of Christian education.

We can never learn to like getting up at four o'clock in the morning to catch a train; having to do so was the only unpleasant feature of a delightful visit.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. W. J. Walters, of Daleville, Miss., writes encouragingly of the work on his charge.

"All goes well on the Harriston charge, and the prospects for a good year are encouraging," writes Rev. T. M. Ainsworth, of Lorman, Miss.

We learn from a note from Rev. C. C. Evans, our pastor at Hazlehurst, Miss., that the work is moving nicely in that thriving little city.

The Clisby Class at West Point, Miss., had an attendance of 44 last Sunday, with an offering of $2.45. The Sunday school attendance was 173.

The Advocate next week will be devoted very largely to the interests of the Christian Education Movement. It will contain a great deal of information that ought to be in the hands of every Methodist in our patronizing territory.

Mr. D. S. Bachman, of Cleveland, Miss., in renewing his subscription to the Advocate states that he has been reading it for more than thirty years, and he is kind enough to say that he enjoys even the editorials. Good for him!

A revival meeting was begun at Byhalia, Miss., on last Sunday, the pastor, Rev. C. T. Floyd, being assisted by Rev. W. A. Wilson, Conference evangelist, to do the preaching, and Prof. J. W. Gaines, of Memphis, to conduct the music.

The new home of the New York Bible Society was dedicated with appropriate ceremonies on Monday evening, April 25. The building, located at 5 East 48th Street, is a gift to the Society from the estate of the late James Talcott, and is valued at $250,000.

While at Columbia, Miss., last week, it was our pleasure to meet Rev. H. G. Roberts, of the North Mississippi Conference, a brother of our pastor at Columbia, and to learn that his health is considerably improved, although he is still under the physician's care.

An Epworth League was organized at Gloster, Miss., on the evening of April 29, with thirty-two charter members, fourteen of whom subscribed for the Epworth Era. The new chapter begins with enthusiastic interest on the part of its members. Rev. J. A. Wells is the pastor.

The Advocate has received a check for $15 for the Chinese Famine Fund, sent by Mrs. H. S. Williams, of Shelby, Miss. The amount was promptly forwarded to Mr. J. D. Hamilton, Treasurer of the Board of Missions, Nashville, Tenn., by whom it will be applied to the cause designated.

"The Big Brother" speaks in the highest terms of the recent visit of Bishop W. F. McMurry to Greenville, Miss.

The War Department desires it to be known that every man who was fully inducted into the army and served honorably is entitled to the Victory Medal, whether he went overseas or not. Full information concerning the application for the medal may be secured by writing the Adjutant General's Office, Washington, D. C.

We are authorized to state that the railroads of the Southeastern Division have authorized the sale of round trip tickets at one and one-half fare for all assemblies this summer at Lake Junaluska, N. C., upon presentation at the time of purchase of identification certificates, which may be obtained free by sending a postal card request to the Southern Assembly office at Lake Junaluska.

Dr. John T. Sawyer on last Sunday occupied the pulpit of our St. Mark's Church at the morning hour and preached to a good and appreciative congregation. Arriving while the Sunday school was in session, he was delighted to note that there was a very large attendance of children, and that a number of adults also were present. The teachers are doing a splendid work and the school is growing rapidly.

A note from Rev. J. D. Nesom, of Oak Grove, La., brings a cheering account of the work at that place. The new church, which has twelve Sunday school rooms and a large hall, is filled to capacity. In spite of an acute financial situation, the outlook is most encouraging. Children's Week was observed in that church, and Rev. Alonzo Early, the Louisiana Conference Sunday School Field Secretary, conducted services last Sunday.

The Quillian Lectures for 1921 will be delivered at Emory University during the week of May 9-14 by Bishop Warren A. Candler, Chancellor of the University. The general subject of the lectures will be "The Kingdom of God's Dear Son." The course will comprise six lectures, which will be open to the general public. The previous courses have been delivered by Bishop Charles B. Galloway, Bishop Eugene R. Hendrix, and Dr. James M. Buckley.

It may be worth while to call attention to the fact that the North Mississippi Conference Training School, under the direction of the Sunday School Board, will be held as announced at Grenada College, June 19-25. It was the Efficiency Conference, and not the Training School, that was postponed. This School will furnish a magnificent opportunity for those who are interested in better Sunday schools to equip themselves for more efficient service.

Rev. H. M. Ellis, presiding elder, and Dr. I. W. Cooper, financial director, of the Brookhaven District, have worked out a fine plan for educational rallies in every charge in the district in the interest of the Christian Education Movement. The district has been divided into three sections—Northern, Central, and Southern—and directors appointed for each, as follows: Northern, Rev. C. C. Evans; Central, Rev. W. H. Lewis; Southern, Rev. Geo. H. Thompson.

Mr. A. L. Dietrich, Secretary-Treasurer and Business Manager of the Southern Assembly, Lake Junaluska, N. C., has been called back into the service of the General Sunday School Board. The rapid development of the Lake project during Mr. Dietrich's administration speaks in highest terms of the splendid work he has done. The best wishes of the Directors and Managers of the Assembly, and of his many friends throughout the church, follow Mr. Dietrich in his new position. Mr. J. Dale Stentz has been appointed as Mr. Dietrich's successor in the work of the Assembly.

THE COLUMBUS DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The fifty-first annual session of the Columbus District Conference, North Mississippi Conference, convened in the Methodist Church in Wlet, April 22, 1921. Rev. A. T. McIlwain, presiding elder of the Columbus District, presiding.

Rev. E. H. Cunningham, of Kosciusko, was elected secretary. The roll was called and a goodly representation of lay members was found present. All of the preachers were at the conference with the exception of three who were unable to attend on account of illness.

Rev. W. L. Stormont, pastor-host, Mr. Jim McKinnon, Mr. Jennings Moore, of the entertainment committee, looked well after the comfort of the guests.

The reports of the pastors were most encouraging, both as to revivals and the outlook of the educational campaign in their respective fields.

Revs. J. H. Holder, Conference Missionary Secretary; B. P. Jaco, Missionary Secretary; R. H. B. Gladney, Sunday School Field Secretary; J. G.

Houston and J. H. Johnson, Conference and District Directors of the Educational Movement, respectively, represented their particular phases of the work in well-directed speeches.

Mrs. Kemp Williams, District Secretary of the woman's missionary organization, and Mrs. Dalton and Miss Lucile Weems, of West Point, of the Epworth League, each addressed the conference.

Dr. Key, professor of Greek and Latin in Millsaps College, represented the College.

The Rev. Mr. Childress, Superintendent of City Missions, New Orleans, presented the cause of the Memorial Home of New Orleans.

Mrs. S. F. Riley, Field Secretary of the Methodist Orphanage, Jackson, was present in behalf of the Orphanage. Each representative was given a time and place to speak to the conference by the president, Rev. A. T. McIlwain.

The preaching was all of a high order and was done by Revs. T. H. Lipscomb, pastor of First Church, Columbus; T. M. Brownlee, of Starkville; Guy Ray, of Mashulaville; C. Wesley Baley, of Macon, and Rev. J. W. Dorman, of Louisville. The secretary could not be present on Sunday, having to preach a commencement sermon at another point, but Rev. W. A. Langley was on the program for preaching at the afternoon hour, and we are sure that his message, like the others, was a helpful one.

Macon was selected as the next place of meeting. The following named were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: Dr. N. B. Guerry, J. T. Clardy, Mrs. T. J. Lee, Dr. D. C. Hull, Hon. W. W. Magruder, Hon. W. E. Stokes, B. G. Webb, J. H. McKinnon. The following alternates were elected: J. Lem Seawright, F. S. Jackson, J. R. Snider and J. A. Toler.

Each of the disciplinary questions was called and answered. Every item of business received due consideration. The attendance was good, and the interest fine throughout. Brother McIlwain presided over the conference with that same degree of faithfulness and efficiency that marks his course in everything with which he has to do. Serious illness in his home compelled his return to Columbus on Saturday evening, and in the hours of anxiety he has the prayers of all the people.

A special feature of the committee reports was the reading of the following resolutions, presented by Rev. J. W. Dorman and Hon. W. A. Magruder, which were adopted, with special request for publication in the Advocate:

"Whereas the exhibition of modern moving pictures constitutes a great school in which countless thousands of our children and young people are being educated and impressed with life-ideals and aspirations, its scope, influence and power being constantly enlarged and extended; and whereas the great proportion of the films are unspeakably vile and debased in character, portraying in seductive guise, often with approval, murder, arson, robbery, assault, sex problems, marital infidelity, and every other conceivable form of vice, immorality, depravity and sin; and whereas criminal laws against vicious and wicked pictures are essential in the support of sound moral opinion, it is, therefore, now

"Resolved 1. That this conference declares its condemnation (without reservation) of all films depicting crime, sin, and sex problems and those of suggestive character as evil, vicious and wicked.

"2. That our preachers, Sunday school superintendents, officers and members be urged to exert their influence against such pictures and to explain the danger thereof on every possible opportunity.

"3. That these resolutions be presented to the next session of the Annual Conference as an urgent request for a memorial to the State Legislature for the enactment of statutes against this infamous vice upon which we declare our condemnation.

"Be it also resolved, That we recommend to superintendents of Sunday schools and presidents of Epworth Leagues to refrain from using as teachers and workers people who attend and participate in dancing and card parties, and that we diligently call our people from attendance upon motion picture shows as they are commonly conducted."

The district conference was a great success.

profession of faith, 161; revivals planned, 58; Epworth Leagues, 45; candidates for the ministry or mission fields, 4; new buildings planned, 11; Woman's Missionary Societies, 47.

Resolutions commending the superintendency of Bishop McMurtry over the Louisiana Conference were adopted and a copy of the same ordered sent to the College of Bishops.

Resolutions of thanks to the pastors, churches, ladies of the churches of Shreveport who served dinners each day at First Church; of appreciation of the efficiency and kindness of the presiding elder, and also thanks to the press, were adopted by a rising vote. It was the writer's lot to fall into the good hands of old friends, being entertained royally by Brother P. J. Porter, his wife, and his mother, and made to feel at home by them.

The following licensing committee was selected for the time till Annual Conference: R. E. Smith, R. S. Walton, Briscoe Carter, W. W. Drake, J. M. Brown, C. F. Sheppard.

While much of the time was taken up with the important business of the Conference, the supreme thing of preaching the gospel was not neglected; and the following were drafted for this service, the Lord blessing their efforts as they preached to attentive congregations: H. W. Bowman, J. C. Rousseaux and R. E. Smith, while the presiding elder and J. B. Douglass, G. D. Purcell, Wm. Schuhle and Judge J. E. Reynolds conducted the opening services of worship of the conference.

We noticed the following brethren present from parts elsewhere: Rev. J. M. Henry, P. M. Brown, and J. B. Williams.

Henry Bascom Hines and Dan Frank Anders were recommended to the Annual Conference for admission on trial. These men are both at work at the present time and giving splendid account of themselves. No one was licensed to preach.

Rev. S. J. Davies made an eloquent appeal for the circulation of Christian literature, principally the New Orleans Advocate.

Vivian was selected as the next meeting place of the Conference.

A FORWARD MOVEMENT IN THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

The Sunday School Membership and Evangelistic Campaign conducted during the early part of 1920 was most successful. During the last Conference year there was an increase of 93,055 in Sunday school enrollment, and 88,177 pupils were received into church membership.

The General Sunday School Board has authorized a church-wide campaign during the month of May to increase Sunday school enrollment and to distribute literature on evangelism.

Our pastors and Sunday school leaders well understand the importance of this movement. There are in the United States twenty-seven million children and youth under the age of twenty-five who are not in any Sunday school. We cannot save the people unless we teach them, and we cannot teach them unless we reach them.

Membership Leaflets, Visitation Cards, Wall Charts, and Leaflets on Evangelism will be furnished pastors and superintendents free on application. Address Rev. Charles D. Bulla, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

GREENWOOD DISTRICT CONFERENCE AT LAMBERT, MISS., MAY 10.

The opening sermon of the Greenwood District conference will be preached Tuesday night, May 10, at 7:30 p.m. Dr. S. A. Steel will preach both morning and evening each day of the conference.

Thursday, May 12, will be given to Education and Sunday school interests—Education morning, Sunday school afternoon.

Committees are announced as follows:

License to preach—V. C. Curtis, J. T. Lockhart, J. D. Wroten.

Admission and Readmission—W. S. Shipman, W. M. Campbell, T. E. Sharp.

Orders—W. N. Dodds, J. J. Brooks, O. L. Savage.

VICKSBURG DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Vicksburg District Conference will convene at Utica, at 7:30 p.m., on May 10, with preaching by Rev. Robt. Selby, followed by the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper. Let all pastors, delegates, local preachers and charge lay leaders be present. If possible, at the first service. Pastors will please see that quarterly conference records are on hand for examination. School men and those representing other interests of the church are invited to attend the conference. All committees will be announced at the opening session of the conference, May 11, at 9 a.m. J. R. JONES, P. E.

BACK BAY MISSION CHURCH.

The people of Back Bay are striving to do their part in building the Methodist Church there. The community has already paid $166, and yesterday the Sunday school there paid for the cover on building ten dollars more. The community will give at least $150 in labor. The first six dollars paid on the building at all was paid by an aged man who lives in the community—and he draws a pension to live on. We start the work to-day. We have half the money in hand to cover the building, given by the Sunday schools. We hope the Sunday schools will rush on the other half. We expect the Sunday schools of the Conference to cover this church. WALDO W. MOORE.

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: Rev. Jno. F. Foster, Franklin, La., 2; Rev. N. D. Guerry, Shuford, Miss., 10; Rev.

THERE'S NO PLACE LIKE HOME

The Christian family is the chief agency for training in religion.

Let a child grow up in the atmosphere of a Christian home, where the ladder that rests against the throne of God touches the earth at the hearthstone, where prayers ascend over the golden rungs, and benedictions descend along the shining way, and in after years voices will call and hands will beckon, drawing the life heavenward.

More than anything else we need a revival of hearthstone religion. The Sunday school has a place for every member of every family.

Membership Campaign Leaflets, Visitation Cards, Wall Mottoes, and Leaflets on Evangelism will be furnished free on application. Address Rev. Charles D. Bulla, Corresponding Secretary, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn. General Sunday School Board, Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

LOUISIANA GROUP MEETINGS.

Two Group Meetings were held in the Lake Charles District, one at DeRidder and the other at Lafayette. At both these places the women of the church served most excellent lunches. Mr. R. T. Moore, of Shreveport, the Conference Financial Director, made a profound impression with his able addresses which presented the Christian Education Movement from the standpoint of a business man. Mr. R. J. Wilson, a big business man of Lake Charles, is the enthusiastic director for the Lake Charles District. He and the presiding elder, C. A. Battle, are making a personal canvass of the charges in order to organize them thoroughly.

The New Orleans District Group Meeting was well attended and a most appetizing lunch was served at Kolb's Restaurant. Dr. John A. Rice made a very strong address.

The Monroe-Ruston District Group Meeting was very enthusiastic, with a stirring address by Dr. Geo. S. Sexton. The Young Woman's Auxiliary treated us to a most excellent lunch.

The Alexandria District Group Meeting was well arranged for and Dr. Paul Kern brought us a scholarly message. Mr. J. L. Pitts, the District Director, is very enthusiastic and is making a full survey of his whole district.

The Baton Rouge District Group Meeting held at Hammond was one of the largest ever held in the district. Mr. W. S. Holmes had his district organized 100 per cent. Dr. A. F. Watkins gave us a soul-stirring address on the Christian Education Movement. The ladies of the church served an elegant lunch and we had a large number of enthusiastic "after dinner" speeches.

The Shreveport District Group Meeting reached a high-water mark of enthusiasm. There was a full attendance on the part of preachers and laymen.—R. T. Moore and Dr. Geo. S. Sexton delivered patriotic and searching messages.

The Christian Education Movement is firmly gripping the hearts of our people as they hear the message. We firmly believe the full quota will be met and our colleges will see a new day.

Let every preacher, with his Church Director, put on the full organization and the results will go far beyond their earnest expectation.

ALBERT S. LUTZ.

FROM BOGALUSA, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: The first half of this Conference year has ended and it gives us pleasure to announce that we have received 104 members into the church since Conference. Sixty of these came in by letter and 44 by baptism and vows. We have held no revival meeting, and the above figures represent the steady work of a working church.

Yours truly,

A. J. GEARHEARD, P. C.

ATTENTION, PASTORS.

At a meeting of a committee of relief workers, which met in Braxton, Miss., on Friday, April 29, we, the undersigned, were appointed to call your attention to the desperate need of the people at Braxton. You have doubtless read of the storm which swept it away on April 26. Their homes are no more. In most cases they must begin anew, entirely. The temporary relief is being taken care of by the Red Cross, and Y. M. C. A., but theirs is only temporary. We must help in a more permanent way. If you, and your people, can be of some help to them in this, their hour of need, it will be greatly appreciated. "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." Send contributions to Mr. Mims Williams, Treasurer Relief Committee, Braxton, Miss.

WILLIAM ARNOLD HANNA was born Oct. 15, 1868, in Calhoun County, Ark., where he was reared. He joined the M. E. Church, South, at Old Rondo Church, in Miller County, during the summer of 1904, under the ministry of Rev. James Thomas. On Jan. 1, 1905, he was married to Miss Della Irene Bell, and to this union one daughter was born (Della Bell), the mother dying when her daughter was only a few days old. On Aug. 5, 1906, he was married to Miss Daisy Hodge, of Calhoun, La. To this union three girls were born, Elizabeth, Hallie, and Gladys. Brother Hanna was a charter member of the Methodist church of Peason, La. He was a faithful steward, loyal and true to his pastor in every way. He loved his church, and was a regular attendant as long as he was able to go. He passed to his eternal reward Sept. 23, 1920, at Peason, La. He was a good man. He will be greatly missed in the home, church and community. He was always his pastor's friend, and to me as a father in all things where advice or counsel was needed, and his pastor will ever cherish the memory of his pleasant association with him. He was a true and considerate husband, and kind and affectionate father, useful and influential citizen, a congenial friend, honest and successful business man, faithful and charitable Christian. The funeral services were held at Peason Church on Thursday evening, Sept. 23, 1920. Interment was made in the Cemetery at Texarkana, Ark., Sept. 24, 1920. The pastor was assisted by Rev. F. N. Brewer, of the Fairview Methodist Church. Many and beautiful were the floral offerings, expressive of love and sympathy. We deeply sympathize with the bereaved ones and pray our Father to comfort them and help them to see that "He doeth all things well." His Pastor, FRED L. KRAUSE died Easter morning, March 27, 1921, at "Tanglewood," his parents' home. He passed his twenty-first birthday on Jan. 21, last. He was a member of the M. E. Church, South. A host of relatives and friends mourn his going. Freddie was one whom to know was to love; his kindness of heart and cheery smile opened hearts to him wherever he went.

Fred "has passed on—the loving and the loved

We could not see, for our eyes were dim with tears;

But in some realm from sadness far removed,"

He "wears the beauty of unfolding years.

"With us, with God; unseen, yet near at hand;

Not loving less, for that sweet heavenly birth,"

He "has but joined the glad immortal band

Who do the Master's will in heaven or earth."

Who knows what nobler errands of His grace,

In ways untried, his "eager hands fulfill?"

Or if his "feet, with swift, unwearied pace, Tread the familiar paths before us still?"

When strength is small and courage almost fled,

It may be his to whisper at our side:

"O, faint not! Fear not! since the Master said,

"All power is mine, and I with you abide."

AUNT EMMA.

DAMAGING AND HUMILIATING RESULTS.

Bishop W. A. Candler, in a recent statement sets forth some of the most damaging and humiliating results that have come to the South for the lack of well endowed and adequately equipped institutions of learning. Some of these, as the Bishop states them, are:

"1. Our sons and daughters by the thousands are being educated in other sections, and the characteristics of our Southern civilization are in many cases schooled out of them. If conditions continue as they are, and as they have been for the past fifty years, Southern civilization must inevitably become an extinct and discredited type.

"2. Moreover, for lack of adequately endowed colleges and universities, the South has lost, and must continue to lose, to Northern and Western institutions, many of its strongest educators. Georgia thus lost the LeContes to California, W. A. Keener to Columbia University in New York, and others scarcely less eminent as educators. South Carolina lost to Wisconsin Charles Foster Smith, and Virginia lost Price to Columbia, Dodd to Chicago, and Christian to Harvard.

"Some of the most brilliant men in the faculties of Northern and Western Universities are Southern men. They would prefer to be engaged in the South, if Southern institutions were able to employ them. But our colleges and universities cannot offer them opportunities or salaries such as they find in the institutions of other sections.

"3. We are damaged at home and discredited abroad by our lack of great institutions of learning; for the educated people of other lands must naturally and greatly depreciate a section which is thus feeble in its educational enterprises. What must the foreign visitors, who have visited us during the years of the war, have thought of our educational inferiority? In the North they saw splendidly housed and richly endowed universities, but when they came South no such institutions were to be found."

Not every one that saith, "Brother, brother," but he that liveth for another.—Selected.

THIS GIRL IS A WONDER.

Do you want more money than you ever possessed? If so, learn to make nut and fruit bonbons—the business will net you $30.00 to $300.00 per month. You can work from your own home; all who sample your bonbons become regular customers. You start by investing less than $10.00 for supplies. Mary Elizabeth started her candy kitchen with $5.00, and has made a fortune. Cannot you do likewise? I will tell you all about the business and help you start, so you can become independent. Now is the psychological time to make big money, as sugar is cheaper and fine bonbons command phenomenal prices. Write to-day. Isabelle Inez, 344 Morewood Building, Pittsburgh, Pa.

How Coca-Cola Resembles Tea

If you could take about one-third of a glass of tea, add two-thirds glass of carbonated water, then remove the tea flavor and add a little lemon juice, phosphoric acid, sugar, caramel and certain flavors in the correct proportion, you would have an almost perfect glass of Coca-Cola.

In fact, Coca-Cola may be fairly described as "a carbonated, flavored counterpart of tea, of approximately one-third the stimulating strength of the average cup of tea."

The following analyses, made and confirmed by the leading chemists throughout America, show the comparative stimulating strength of tea and Coca-Cola stated in terms of the quantity of caffeine contained in each:

Black tea—1 cupful.....1.54 gr.
(hot) (5 fl. oz.)

Green tea—1 glassful.....2.02 gr.
(cold) (8 fl. oz., exclusive of ice)

Coca-Cola—1 drink, 8 fl. oz......61 gr.
(prepared with 1 fl. oz. of syrup)

Of all the plants which Nature has provided for man's use and enjoyment, none surpasses tea in its refreshing, wholesome and helpful qualities. This explains its almost universal popularity.

The Coca-Cola Company has issued a booklet giving detailed analysis of its recipe. A copy will be mailed free on request to anyone who is interested. Address:

Epworth League.

NOTICE TO EPWORTH LEAGUERS.

Anniversary Day, celebrating the organization of the Epworth League, is provided for in the general organization of the League and is to be observed this year on or near May 8. Suitable programs can be had from the Central Office. It is urged that all Leagues observe this day, as it is so fundamental in the League work. The offering which is taken goes for the advancement of the work both in the Conference and in the entire church, so fifty per cent of it goes to the Central Office at Nashville and fifty to the treasurer of the Conference League Board. In North Mississippi the Treasurer is Rev. R. G. Lord, Robinsonville, Miss.

THE "ON-WE-MUST" SPIRIT.

Dear Brother Carley: The Set-up meeting at Water Valley tightened the grip that the Educational Movement had upon me. The force of the Movement is growing upon us all, I hope.

"In we are, and on we must."

The Prophet Micah, writing of wicked men, said: "They work earnestly with both hands." Should not we counteract the opposers of the Christian Education Movement with the same zeal?

Let us take off our coats, and roll up our sleeves and say with St. Paul, "This one thing I do." "Fear not, only believe." Love makes the intention good, but something more than this is needed to bring about results.

"Even so faith, if it hath not works,

TRY RENWAR FOR RHEUMATISM.

It is not necessary any longer for you to suffer those intense pains and aches of rheumatism. Renwar is a salts combination scientifically prepared to neutralize the uric acid in the blood, and thereby cure rheumatism. Don't wait until those rheumatic pains return. Buy a bottle of Renwar, and forget about that rheumatism. Renwar is an old well-established remedy. It is prescribed by the best physicians, and has thousands of friends. President L. A. Bauman of Varley & Bauman Company, Nashville, says, "Renwar entirely relieved me of my rheumatism." For sale by druggists. Price 50 cents. Positively guaranteed by money-back offer. If your druggist doesn't carry Renwar in stock, tell him to order it for you from Warner Drug Company, Nashville, Tenn. is dead, being alone. Yea, a man may say, thou hast faith, and I have works; shew me thy faith without thy works, and I will shew thee my faith by my works." James 2:17, 18.

Difficulties will appear, but he who has the spirit of the "must" will see in them only incentives to more strenuous action. He will not weaken or waver because of obstacles. He will not own defeat or admit the possibility of failure. He will reach the port no matter how the winds blow. He who feels the force of this mighty movement will persist. The "On we must" becomes changed to the more cheerful "On we will," and it rings out so clear and sharp that everything gives way before it, and victory is ours. "Ask, and it shall be given you." May God help us.

Earnestly and sincerely yours,
GUY BURT.

LESSON FOR MAY 8.

Topic: Use and Supervision of Recreation.

Scripture Lesson: Leviticus 23:39-43; Deuteronomy 5:12-15; Mark 6:31-32.

Golden Text: "The streets of the city shall be full of boys and girls playing in the streets thereof." Zechariah 8:5.

Home Readings: Monday, A Feast of Joy, Leviticus 23:39-44; Tuesday, The Joy of the Lord Is Your Strength, Nehemiah 8:9-18; Wednesday, The Day of Rest Commanded, Deuteronomy 5:6-15; Thursday, The Marriage at Cana, John 2:1-11; Friday, The Supper at Bethany, John 12:1-11; Saturday, Jesus and the Sabbath, Luke 6:1-11; Sunday, The Soul's Satisfaction, Psalm 63:1-8.

Teaching Points.

1. It is absolutely true that "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy."
2. However, recreation that unfits for the next day's work is an injury rather than a benefit.
3. It is this harmful recreation that we protest against—not the normal expression of the play spirit.
4. The church is not in position to condemn very vigorously the recreations our young people actually engage in unless it is striving to furnish them something better. Too long we have neglected the social side of life.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Rev. J. E. Stephens, New Albany, Miss., is the man to whom all money raised on Sunday School Day should be sent. Like every other custodian of church funds, he never has as much as he needs.

Rev. E. Nash Broyles will preach the sermon at 11 o'clock, Sunday, June 19, before the teachers and others who shall attend the Conference Training School. Brother Broyles is making a notable success of church school at Clarksdale.

We are to have a large attendance upon the organization of our Wesley Bible Class Federation at Grenada College, June 20. It will be worth much to every organized class to have one or more representatives to attend this, the first federation of Bible classes in the Conference.

If you would like to know the worth of an organized class, that is organized for service, just call upon the Brotherhood Class at Sardis. Three months ago the class started with seven; it now has sixty-eight. Men are attending the Sunday school and preaching services who have been classed among the impossibles. Recently this class sent a check to a needy preacher in the Sardis District. Last Sunday the entire class took a prominent and important part in the Sunday School Day program. The entire service on this day was the most impressive and helpful I ever witnessed on such an occasion. The program furnished by the Sunday School Board was used with only a few changes.

Posters are being sent the pastors and superintendents this week. The request has been made that the announcement be read to the school and then place the poster where it cannot fail to be seen by all who attend the services. Help us advertise the school that aims to give religious education to all the people. There is no danger of overestimating the worth of the federation and the training school. We are to have some of the best speakers for the federation and a faculty for the training school second to none.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The itinerary for the illustrated lecture had to be interrupted to my very great disappointment. The results from this lecture were a good deal farther reaching than I thought they would be. Much and lasting good was accomplished. I hope the way will open up for me to have this lecture again in the fall, and if it does I am going to try to get a machine with a Prest-O-Lite tank and go to the woods with it.

I had the delightful pleasure of worshipping with the good people of Biloxi Sunday morning. They have purchased two lots adjoining their church and on one they plan to build a playground for the Boy Scouts and on the other they plan to build an annex for their Sunday school. One of the old Confederate veterans joined the church Sunday morning on profession of faith. This Sunday school has grown as much as it is possible for it to grow until they have more room. This loyal body of people put about $2000 into the Back Bay Mission Church.

I found Brother Moore holding forth in the community dance hall. He has built up a nice Sunday school over there, and he is ministering to a large body of people.

Sunday night I gave the lecture at the Wesley Memorial Church. We had a large crowd and a good hearing.

Monday night the lecture was presented at Long Beach. We had a good crowd and much interest was shown. I feel that much good was done and that the school was helped by this visit. They report a 100 per cent increase since Conference, which is fine.

Tuesday we went to the district conference at Columbia. The Sunday School District Institute was held in the afternoon. The following officers were elected for the coming year: Geo. Carley, Secretary, Gulfport, Miss.; C. B. Gates, Int. Sen. W. B. C., Long Beach, Miss.; H. B. Rush, Missions, Biloxi, Miss.; Miss Alice Fountain, Teacher Training, Logtown, Miss.; Miss Stella Provost, Elem. Supt., Poplarville, Miss.; Miss Mary Weston, Y. P. A. W. B. C., Logtown, Miss.

I trust that each department of the local Sunday schools will communicate with their district officer so that our work may grow and we can keep in touch all along the line.

The Wesley Bible Classes of the Seashore District organized a District Federation. I trust that this may materialize into something both helpful and inspiring. The following officers were elected for this federation: C. B. Gates, President; J. F. Campbell, Vice President; B. C. Page, Secretary-Treasurer.

The Gulfport Sunday school reports an average attendance for the quarter of 544. This, in spite of the weather and the measles and other ills of which children are heir, is very fine.

The Conference Standard Training School meets in Jackson, Miss., June 7-14. Let everybody come!

Pray for the work and the workers. God bless and keep you.

Your friend and brother,

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

A GREAT MEETING AT SHELBY, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: The enclosed clipping, instead of over-estimating the results of our recent revival, is rather an under statement. That spirit-filled and Christ-used man, Bro. Dan Kelly, was the instrument in God's hands of a wondrously gracious revival in our midst. I doubt if, in the history of the great Delta country, any town has been more completely transformed by the power of the gospel. I received thirty-eight into the church last Sunday, the 24th; have five or six more to be received next Sunday. This great reception service last Sunday began with the baptism of ten precious babies, and closed after the reception of the thirty-eight new members with the administration of the Lord's Supper to more than two hundred communicants.

Every phase of our church life has taken on new activity. The Sunday school scored its highest record for attendance last Sunday. The Business Men's Bible Class had present the head of every Methodist family in Shelby, except two who were physically unable to attend. The class-room was taxed to accommodate this splendid group of men. Their unity of spirit, their loyalty to the revival effort, and their personal work throughout the town were no small factors in the success of the meeting.

The Missionary Society, already the liveliest organization, perhaps, in our church, has also made substantial gains. They now have fifty members, practically all the mature workers of our church. Many family altars have been established, and everybody is happy.

Cordially yours,

J. M. WYATT.

ANOTHER $100,000 GIFT.

Mr. P. S. Munger, of Birmingham, Alabama, has made a contribution of $100,000 to the Christian Education Movement, he being the second Methodist layman of that city to make a gift of that amount to this enterprise. Mr. Munger is a prominent business man of this city, and no citizen of Birmingham has a higher rating in the esteem and confidence of his own people. In all church enterprises he has been active, and his liberal financial support has been given to his own church and to every worthy cause.

For some years Mr. Munger has been Chairman of the Board of Trustees of Birmingham-Southern College and, as is well known in Alabama, this institution could not have gone forward in its work but for his generous support. He believes in Christian education, and in this time of financial depression he proves his faith by his deeds.

To date more than one million dollars have been pledged to the Christian Education Movement by men who have given amounts of $25,000 and above, this not taking into account more than one million pledged for new enterprises in Oklahoma and Texas. The names of some of these donors cannot now be given to the public, but their pledges are in hand. Many others will respond in advance of the date of the every-member canvass. The opportunity for a permanent investment in Christian education makes strong appeal to many men and women of wealth. Many others should respond; and for the man or woman who can make only a small gift there should be even stronger appeal to make a safe investment when they give.

NINETY YEARS OLD, AND HAS A BIRTHDAY PARTY.

The parsonage of the Gibson Memorial Methodist church was the scene of a happy gathering Tuesday evening, April 19, when the friends and acquaintances of Rev. H. B. Cottrell assembled to show their love and respect for him on his 90th birthday.

Rev. H. B. Cottrell, or "Grandpa" by "An Ounce of Prevention is Worth a Pound of Cure."

A disturbance of the even balance of health, which often occurs in these trying days of reconstruction may cause serious trouble. Nobody can be too careful to keep this balance up.

When people begin to lose appetite, or to get tired easily, the least imprudence brings on sickness, weakness, or debility. The system needs a tonic, craves it, and should not be denied it; and the best tonic that many recommend is Hood's Sarsaparilla. What this medicine has done in keeping healthy people healthy, in keeping up the even balance of health, gives it the same distinction as a preventive that it enjoys as a cure. Its early use has illustrated the wisdom of the old saying that "a stitch in time saves nine."

Preventive treatment now and then calls for the use of a good cathartic or laxative, like Hood's Pills, which are purely vegetable and act quickly and thoroughly.—Adv.

This party was kept as a surprise for "Grandpa" and it was a surprise indeed for him. He was ushered into the parlor expecting to find but one visitor awaiting him, but instead he entered a room full to overflowing. The room was dark, except for the light shed by the 90 candles that burned upon the beautiful white birthday cake on the table before him. Fruit, flowers, candy, and other sweets were there in abundance, for each one of the ninety guests had remembered to bring a token of their love and esteem for dear "Grandpa." Baskets of fruits and candy most artistically decorated with lovely flowers and tulle were presented to the honoree. Several of his friends together presented him a white hat with which he was as much delighted as a boy of 16 summers. Two interesting little envelopes were handed him which he guarded very carefully; they seemed to contain cash.

Several most interesting letters that he had received during the day and an original poem by one of the guests were read and enjoyed by all present.

It is more fitting to say "Grandpa" is 90 years young than that he is so many years old, for he is still young in spirit and body, too. Although his hair is like snow, his shoulders are erect, his step is firm, his mind is ever on the alert, and his voice has not been stolen by Father Time. He delightfully entertained his guests by singing and playing his own accompaniments at the piano.

His first selection was "When You and I Were Young, Maggie." He sang four verses without faltering and so attentive and silent were his guests that had a pin fallen it could have been heard. He gave several love songs, then to delight the children present he told in song and story of "The Little Boy and the Bird."

"Grandpa" cut the first slice of the birthday cake and insisted that every young lady in love take a piece to dream over, assuring her that it will bring good fortune. All of the guests took a sample of the cake and pronounced it fit to please the taste of an epicure.

Several of the young ladies sang some sweet songs, which all enjoyed. The evening passed far too quickly and the guests reluctantly said "good-bye," wishing "Grandpa" many more such happy birthdays, in the following verses:

To "Grandpa" on his 90th Birthday—

Of all the grandpas in the world,
You are the very best;
I never would give one like you.
For a bunch of all the rest.

I wouldn't swap you for a nickel,
I wouldn't swap you for a dime,
'Cause I just mean to keep you,
And love you all the time.

I love the twinkle in your eye,
I love your happy smile,
It carries sunshine with it,
For many and many a mile.

I love your "youngish" ways,
More boyish you appear
Than a dear old grandpa
In his ninetleth year.

So on this day of all days,
My wish for you shall be,
That you'll be just as young
When you are one hundred and three.

—Vicksburg Evening Post.

ALMA MATER CALLS TO YOU.

In the program of the Christian Education Movement your Alma Mater is included. To her you owe far more than you will ever be able to repay, and she does not ask you to make full return for what she has given. But the old college that gave you the equipment and the ideals that have helped you along the way has a right to ask that you make now some return worth while. It is her day of opportunity—the opportunity to enter upon a larger service. If the alumni of Methodist schools fail in this day to give their whole-hearted support to the Christian Education Movement, they show themselves unworthy of the contribution their church and their Alma Mater made to their success in life. They will not fail.—Bulletin.

CAN WE DO AS MUCH?

The Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company, one of the great railway systems of the South, announces that it is now carrying through a vast program of rehabilitation that calls for the expenditure of $33,400,000 in improvement work. These figures correspond almost exactly with the figures of the Christian Education Movement of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

The L. & N. Announcement says: "Due in a great measure to shortage in motive power and equipment, it has been difficult of late for the railroads to give to the public as efficient service as they would like; a condition brought about largely by the war, when their carrying capacity was taxed to the utmost and the building or installation of new facilities could not keep pace with the increasing requirements."

Does not that statement well set forth the conditions now faced by the schools of our church? The men who direct the policies of this great railway system know that we face hard times in this Southern country, but they are not waiting for better times to begin this work of rehabilitation. They have faith in the future prosperity of the South, and they know that the investment of $33,000,000 now will bring larger returns in the near future.

Will the two and one quarter million members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, say that they are not able to invest in Christian Education as much as the L. & N. Railroad will expend within the next few months? To say this is to declare that we are unable to use the opportunity that the present day brings to us, and that we are unworthy of such an opportunity.—Bulletin.

WHAT IS THE MATTER?

Under this title Mr. Roger Babson recently sent out a report to business men which also has a direct bearing upon our Christian Education Movement. Read it:

"There is a reason for everything. The reason for the situation described above is not because eight millions of men for six years spent their labor on destruction instead of construction, putting us behind 250 billion dollars in improvements and enterprises. This economic loss of the war should cause a greater demand for our products, rather than cause stagnation in industry and commerce. The reason for present conditions is the lack of confidence, due to the war's degenerating effects, and to the evil effects of the reckless period of inflation through which we have just passed. Business integrity—the foundation of commerce—has been forgotten, while faith, industry and thrift—the basis of enterprise—have been lost sight of. The war's greatest damage was not material, but spiritual.

"The causes which prevent our nation from selling its grain, cotton, lumber, copper and other products are spiritual. It is because the men of all nations have forgotten the Ten commandments that trade is at a standstill and unemployment is on the increase, while the world is in greater need for goods than ever before. There is too much Bolshevism and too little regard for truth and service. When we return to common honesty in trade, industry and politics, the world will quickly consume the surplus of raw materials which America now has and there will be an unprecedented demand for more."—Bulletin.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

The Tenth Annual Session of the Women's Missionary Society, Mississippi Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

In the beautiful new Central Church at Meridian was held the tenth annual meeting of the Mississippi Conference Woman's Missionary Society, the opening service being at 7:30 p.m., Tuesday evening, March 1, 1921.

Rev. W. J. Ferguson, pastor of the Fifth Street Methodist Church, had charge of the devotional service; this consisted of Hymn, "Rock of Ages," Scripture lesson from the twenty-fourth Psalm, and prayer by Rev. W. A. Hays, pastor of Poplar Springs Church. A special prayer for the recovery of Rev. H. B. Watkins, pastor of Central Church, and Rev. Paul D. Hardin, presiding elder of the Meridian District, both of whom were ill in their homes, was offered by Dr. I. W. Cooper of Whitworth College.

Mrs. Snow delighted the audience with the beautiful message in song, "My Task."

Rev. J. M. Morse presented the speaker of the evening, Dr. R. H. Bennett, of Nashville, Tenn.

Dr. Bennett stirred the large audience with his strong plea for Christian Education for our boys and girls. "The world is facing utter ruin, only saving factor—religion." Christian leaders are needed to carry on the work of the next generation. Dr. Bennett urged the women to co-operate—to assist, with all their strength, faith and prayers, to win the Educational Campaign.

After the benediction was pronounced by Dr. Bennett, an informal reception was tendered the delegates and visitors by the Central Young People's Societies, in the substory.

While delicious punch was served, a musical program was rendered by the Young People, under the direction of Miss Kate Weatherby, Secretary of the Y. P. Auxiliary. The orchestra from the School of Music, directed by Mrs. E. H. Hart, was a treat. Piano solos by Miss Carrie Alice Gully and Master Henry Earl De Ment added much to the enjoyment of the evening.

In the City Hall, Wednesday night, before a vast audience "Methodist Womanhood's Great Adventure," a pageant, visualizing important events in the beginnings and developments of the Woman's organized work for Missions, was presented by the women of the societies of Central Church, under the direction of Miss Marjorie Woods and Miss Ella Wayne Ormond. The presentation is based on the Pageant, "The Spirit of Missions."

"The Spirit of Missions" was represented by Mrs. A. C. Bryan, Mrs. Bruce Gully, impersonated Mrs. McGavock, and Mrs. W. H. Ormond represented the Council. "Organized Methodist Womanhood."

The interpretation was beautiful and artistic throughout; each and every one carried out his or her part in a splendid manner.

At the close of each scene a chorus directed by Mrs. W. A. Blesoe sang appropriate hymns. The Pageant closed with a grouping of the organized workers, over which hovered "The Spirit of Missions." "The Spirit of Missions" graciously accepted from the Council the gifts of service of women, young people and children, the "Pansies," but—"the task is but begun. Gird yourself for large efforts and "Go Ye" in His Name."

The most delightful feature of the social program of the Conference was the reception Thursday afternoon in the Scottish Rite Cathedral. This reception was tendered the delegates and their hostesses by the Young Woman's Society of Central Church. At the front entrance of the Cathedral the guests were welcomed by several ladies of the hostess auxiliary. The first receiving line in which was Mrs. Mary Brown Burroughs, president of the hostess auxiliary, Miss Ella Wayne Ormond, the honor guest from the Council, and the Conference officers was in the Candidate Hall. A second receiving line stood in the parlor and greeted guests as they passed further on. In this line appeared the officers of the hostess auxiliary. Other ladies of the local auxiliary led the way to the banquet hall where a delicious ice course was served.

The Conference greatly appreciated the presence of Mrs. Hume R. Steele, Educational Secretary, in charge of Mission Study and Candidate Correspondence, and Miss Estelle Haskin, Educational Secretary in charge of literature; their gracious helpfulness added much to the success of the meeting.

The children of the Conference led the last evening devotional service, Miss Martha Watkins, of Meridian, had charge of the service, which opened with singing of the hymn, "I want to be a Sunbeam," followed by prayer by Miss Lucile Middleton, of Mendenhall. Master Kenneth Hill, of Union, read the Scripture lesson, the 15th Chapter of Luke. This service was closed with prayer by Miss Mary Nell Bells, of Pelahatchie. Miss Nell Drake, our missionary to China, addressed the Conference, bringing a message from the young people of China and telling of the Student's Strike recently held in China when more than 70,000 students laid aside their books to help their country.

After a solo by Mr. Paul I. Templeton, evangelistic singer, Mrs. H. R. Steele thrilled the large audience with her inspiring address, basing her thought on St. John 3:16 adapted to modern language—"For God so loved human life that He sent His only Son, that the whole sphere of human life might be reconstituted." Mrs. Steele made a strong appeal for Life Enlistment. The service closed with the benediction by Rev. W. J. Ferguson.

To relieve the pressure of the last busy day, cars were assembled to take the delegates for a drive through the city and to the Wesley House. This hour of pleasure and profit was one of the many delightful features of the Conference.

The gracious invitation from Centenary Church, McComb, for the Conference to meet with them next year, was unanimously accepted.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Minutes of New Orleans District Conference of the Woman's Missionary Society.

The New Orleans District Conference of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Louisiana Conference, met in Bogalusa, La., April 7, 1921, with 28 delegates present.

The meeting was called to order by the District Secretary, Mrs. J. D. Rumph. Mrs. J. E. Dean led the devotionals, giving a very helpful talk along the line of God's being a refuge and strength. Prayer was led by Mrs. C. F. Niebergall.

After a very gracious greeting of welcome by Mrs. H. J. Poole, Mrs. C. F. Niebergall, Conference President of the Woman's Missionary Society, gave, in a very helpful way, information regarding the work for the coming year. She stated that the Louisiana Conference Society was listed 6th in increase in membership for the past year, and this increase was due largely to membership drives which had been conducted by auxiliaries. She then asked for reports along this line. Three reported substantial increases, Carrollton, First and Second churches of New Orleans. She then brought to our attention the months which have been set apart for emphasizing certain lines of the work, March and April for our Missionary papers, the Voice and Young Christian Worker; April, Enlistment and Organization; October, Missionary Study. Mrs. Niebergall then read a letter from Miss Daisy Davies asking for names of women who would serve on a committee for China Relief.

Mrs. Niebergall called our attention to the fact that enlisting the attention of the uninterested women of our churches in the Missionary Society was missionary work, and admonished us not to give the material work first place.

After a beautiful duet by two of the ladies of the Bogalusa Society, bringing a comforting message of God's abiding presence, the reports of the auxiliaries were given. Space does not permit giving these reports in full, but some of the most helpful items. Nearly all of the societies reported Mission Study or Bible classes, and some, both. Carrollton reported that Miss Clara Chalmers, one of their own young women, was to go into the foreign work this year. Rayne Memorial reported in their Young People's work that there was a meeting in which every young woman present took part in the prayer service. St. Mark's reported special attention being given Juniors, training them for service. Second Church reported a fine offering from the Epworth League for the African Special of $120. Two societies reported new Junior Societies organized, Carrollton and Epworth.

Mrs. Rumph told of the visit of several ladies to Louisiana Avenue to give a report of the annual meeting, that society having had no delegate.

Pledges for the year 1921 are as follows: Bogalusa, $115; Carrollton, $150; Donaldsonville, $55; Epworth, $25; First Church, $300; Felicity, $100; Louisiana Avenue, $30; Mary Werlein, $10; Parker Memorial, $100; Rayne Memorial, $350; St. Mark's, $15; Parker Memorial, $10, making a total for the district of $1525.

Rev. Alonzo Early, Sunday School Field Secretary, was then called on, and responded with a talk along the line of his work. He said: "To be in the Third Rank report in the Sunday school implied three things—a missionary committee, a missionary programme once each month, and an offering." He expressed regret at the overlapping of the missionary work of the church in the different organizations, and hoped to see the time when there will be general and compulsory missionary education.

Mrs. Alvis, Superintendent of Mission Study and Publicity, of Rayne Memorial, gave a helpful talk on Missions and Bible Study. She read the article in the Bulletin on the Prayer Committee, and gave the names of our specials for this year. They are: Helen Johnson, Annie Belle Williams, Pauline Randle, Eliza Hies, Clara Chalmers; deaconesses—Mamie Danelle, Cora Godat, Ella Hooper. She then gave extracts from the leaflet by Mrs. Hyams on "The Accelerator," in which we are urged to spend more time in prayer and real Bible study. Mrs. Hyams said that one of the failures of Christian people is their lack of the appropriation of God. At the request of Mrs. Rumph, Mrs. Alvis read the leaflet, "Why You Should Join the Missionary Society."

Mrs. Rumph called attention to the leaflets on Children's, Young People's, and Social Service work, and urged the delegates to supply themselves with them.

The question of holding the District Conference at the same time as the New Orleans District Conference for next year was discussed.

Mrs. Rumph urged promptness in sending our reports and paying our dues and pledge money.

Mrs. W. N. Vaught, Mrs. J. Hill and Mrs. G. W. Rowbotham were appointed a committee to correspond with the Council relative to changes in the report books.

The last number on the program was a message from the last service of the Annual Meeting by Mrs. Vaught.

After a fervent prayer by Mrs. Rumph, the Conference adjourned.

CHURCH EXTENSION NOTES.

Bishop W. F. McMurtry, D.D.,
President

I have just been looking over the facts and figures assembled at the conclusion of the fiscal year, March 31, 1921, of the Board of Church Extension. Our Secretary, Rev. S. H. C. Burgin, D.D., is absent from the office on official business, and it has occurred to me that I might render the Board and the Church a small service by setting down a few of the outstanding facts and figures which appear in the summary of the year's work. I am sure all who take notice of these items will agree with me that, under all circumstances, the Board has had a very good year.

Thos. L. Jones, of San Diego, California, has bequeathed $4,000 to the Board.

Many churches have been in distress, and some are still in that state. Utter disregard for the law of the church, as written in Paragraph 487 of the Discipline, is responsible for no small part of this trouble. We begin to build without counting the cost.

The Architectural Department has paid the expense of operation, and has a balance to its credit of $801.41. It also has uncollected accounts to its credit, amounting to several thousand dollars. Rev. J. A. Baylor, the Architectural Secretary, is a workman that needeth not to be ashamed.

The Increase in the Loan Fund Capital for the year amounts to $342,059.80, making a total Loan Fund Capital, at the close of the fiscal year, March 31, 1921, of $1,836,623.61. This is the largest annual increase in the history of the Board.

The total number of applications for both donations and loans this year is 459, which is 281 less than last year. The amount requested in donations to churches and parsonages is $882,456.18, which is $675,522.95 less than last year. The total amount requested in loans is $1,235,890, which is $480,760 less than the amount requested last year.

The docket created at the last Annual Meeting, so far as donation grants are concerned, has been paid, with the exception of $50,159.51, and the General Fund is overdrawn only $3,674.98, and this is the only fund that is "in the red." The Executive Committee will recommend that $42,359.51 in donation grants be carried over, and that donation grants be made amounting to $76,931.18, creating a total docket of $119,290.69, to be paid out of receipts on assessment. Recommendation will be made that $211,500 in loan grants be carried over, and that additional loans be made, amounting to $322,550, which will make a total loan docket of $534,050.

Mr. J. T. Fisher, of Winchester, Va., for many years a devoted member of our Church, passed to his reward on January 13, 1921, and bequeathed to the Board funds to establish the J. T. and Belle C. Fisher Loan Fund, in the amount of $22,500.

Rev. W. H. Vaughan, of Brookhaven, Miss., has recently invested $5,000 in an Annuity Bond.

The Auditor's Report shows that the Treasurer of the Board has received from the Secretary during the year $1,489,063.79. This is suggestive of the volume of business transacted during the twelve months by the office of the Board. This report gives Miss Grace B. Watts, the new bookkeeper, a clean record.

Our Secretary has traveled many thousands of miles, visited twenty-one Annual Conferences and scores of other points where his services were needed, and to the limit of his time and strength. He has been graciously kept in health and strength, and cordially received by the Church. He has tried faithfully to direct the business of the Board according to the rules of safe business, as laid down by the Board, and has at all times been sympathetic with the real needs of the Church, as represented in the appeals for aid.

The Report of the Loan Fund Secretary, Mr. T. L. Jefferson, shows that, notwithstanding the larger investment of Loan Fund money in churches and parsonages, of many thousands of dollars, and the financial depression through which we have been passing, which has sorely affected the collections on loans, that the due and overdue installments on these investments are in excess of the same figure for 1920 by only $5,315.02, as shown by the following. Due and overdue April, 1, 1921, $103,368.44; due and overdue April 1, 1920, $98,053.42.

The Assistant Secretary, Mr. J. B. Preston, with his usual efficiency and fidelity, has been "on the job" and has his work in hand for the Annual Meeting. His interest in this work goes far beyond that of an employee of the Board.

The Executive Committee, enlarged at the last Annual Meeting, has held seventeen meetings during the year. The Board owes a debt of gratitude to such laymen as Dr. R. B. Gilbert, Mr. J. Adger Stewart, and Dr. W. F. Bogess.

Less wishing and more doing would improve many a vacant lot.—Selected.

A GREAT MEETING AT CARY, MISS.

April 17, Rev. J. R. Jones, our beloved presiding elder, came to Cary to hold the second quarterly conference for Rolling Fork circuit for this year, and remained with us and preached for us twice each day through Thursday.

A large, attentive congregation greeted the preacher Sunday morning. The attendance fluctuated a little through the week, but the interest seemed to intensify with each succeeding service, and was fully proved in the last service, which was Thursday night. It began raining about 4 o'clock in the afternoon, and by night a heavy rain was falling, but, regardless of the rain, we had almost our usual congregation.

Brother Jones is not only a wise leader, magnifying the office of presiding elder wherever he goes, but he is a good preacher. He does not resort to dramatic or exciting methods, or harrowing illustrations to provoke great demonstrations, but, in a plain, unostentatious style, he brings up truths new and old out of the divine treasures, to the edifying of the saints and the conversion of sinners. Almost at will, he swayed his auditors, and held them in rapt attention from the announcing of the text to the last word of the conclusion of the sermon.

Two features of the meeting deserve special mention. First, the school children, both Jews and Gentiles, attended the morning services, which were held from 11:30 a.m. to noon, almost en masse, and listened to the sermons very attentively. Second, in response to an appeal made by Dr. H. S. Goodman, one of the leading laymen of the town, at the Wednesday evening service, almost every person present entered into a covenant to help improve the spiritual life of the community.

The inspiring messages and wise leadership of Brother Jones constitute the chief cause of the conspicuous success achieved in the meeting, but a close second to this cause was the prevailing harmony between the several denominations represented in the community. I am sure that a visitor to the meeting would have had difficulty in distinguishing between Episcopalians, Presbyterians, Baptists, and Methodists. All denominational lines seemed to have been obliterated, and all worked together to build up Christ's kingdom.

Some of the tangible results of the meeting are: a great revival in the church; twenty-five accessions to the church—fifteen to the Methodist Church, and ten to other denominations; and the maturing of plans to begin at once to build a new church.

To the all wise God, and our Savior, Jesus Christ, be all the praise, and dominion, and power, both now, and forever. T. J. O'NEIL, Pastor.

TAKES CARE OF 5 CHILDREN

Mrs. Taylor's Sickness Ended by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Roxbury, Mass.—"I suffered continually with backache and was often despondent, had dizzy spells and at my monthly periods it was almost impossible to keep around at my work. Since my last baby came two years ago my back has been worse and no position I could get in would relieve it, and doctor's medicine did not help me. A friend recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I have found great relief since using it. My back is much better and I can sleep well. I keep house and have the care of five children so my work is very trying and I am very thankful I have found the Compound such a help. I recommend it to my friends and if you wish to use this letter I am very glad to help any woman suffering as I was until I used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

Mrs. MAUDE E. TAYLOR, 5 St. James Place, Roxbury, Mass.

Backache is one of the most common symptoms of a displacement or derangement of the female system. No woman should make the mistake of trying to overcome it by heroic endurance, but profit by Mrs. Taylor's experience and try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

What Some Notable Men Say

CARL E. MILLIKEN

I certainly take pleasure in endorsing the great Christian Education Movement undertaken by the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. As one who has lectured in most of the colleges and universities in the United States, I am sure that no project more worthy of the support of the American people could be undertaken than yours.

HAMILTON HOLT

The Editor of The Independent

The safety of a self-governing democracy like ours requires that the influence of education and religion should be brought to bear upon its citizens. Not only from the point of view of a church man but as a patriotic citizen I rejoice in the enterprise which you have undertaken, and hope for your success.

CARL E. MILLIKEN

Former Governor of Maine

ROBERT W. CHAMBERS

The Educational Movement undertaken by the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is a splendid and noble service to the whole world. You state that "a spiritually starving world is calling for trained Christian workers and leaders to do the Christian work of the world." And you are right. The world is starving and is calling for exactly that. Only by Christian education can we combat and annihilate those evil forces let loose in the Eastern hemisphere and rolling toward our Western world, like vast clouds of poison gas. Already there are some among us sick of the hellish infection—the dark forces of disorder and envy lurking within the nation to do it to death by violence. And I say God bless the Methodist Church, South, and it is doing a brave and holy thing—as fine a service as man may offer to his God and fellowmen.

ROBERT W. CHAMBERS

A Novelist Known Everywhere

I am not only heartily in sympathy with the work the promoters of your Christian Education Movement are trying to do, but believe that the sort of thing to which their energies are devoted is one of the prime essentials in the realization of the ideals of this Republic. The need is as great and the field is as vast as those ideals are high, and I for one would like to see so generous a response to your appeal that the fine men and women who are instruments of your service shall be placed so far beyond the reach of worry as to ways and means that they may devote all their thought and all their energies to the effort that under present conditions so many of them are engaged in at too great a cost in anxiety and sacrifice. When and wherever the grandson of Nathan Bangs can be of service you may count upon his sympathy, interest, and effort.

JOHN KENDRICK BANGS

Humorist, Editor, Author.

JOHN KENDRICK BANGS

I have learned with keenest interest and satisfaction of the comprehensive educational plans of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and I venture to send this word to you, expressing my conviction that this undertaking is of the most urgent and vital importance. What could be more important or more highly multiplying than to safe-guard, strengthen, and augment the forces which have to do with raising up, training, and inspiring the leadership of the Church at this momentous time in the life of our own nation and of the other lands to which America is providentially related. With all my heart, therefore, I wish this effort God-speed.

I think the Christian Education Movement is more timely now than any other movement I know of. Certainly neither Christianity nor education has ever been more vitally needed in the world than now.

"TEAM WORK."

By Bishop James Cannon, Jr., Chairman
Christian Education Campaign Commission.

Our college boys have learned that they cannot depend on one or two brilliant players to win a championship in basket ball, baseball or football. They have given to the business and religious world a new word for co-operative effort—"TEAM WORK." The qualities of the brilliant players are not submerged by the elevation of the whole team in playing the game. Far from it. The team is thoroughly organized and trained to deliver its full power, and this training makes doubly effective the work of the brilliant members of the team. When the team is playing for a "touchdown," every member knows the part that he is to play under varying conditions, and when the touchdown is finally made and the goal is kicked, the glory belongs not alone to the man who carried the ball over the line, or to the man who kicked the goal, but to all the men by whose effective "team work" the game was won.

Our Methodism is openly and positively militant and connectional. It is not a miscellaneous assortment of independent churches. It is a militant host, working under a manual called "The Discipline," with a thoroughly developed, closely knit organization. No one church, no one district, no one Conference liveth to itself, but is a part of the great connectional body. Methodism owes much to her leadership. She has had great and brilliant men who have shone like stars in the firmament of her history. But the great success which has been achieved by Methodism, in "spreading scriptural holiness through these lands" has been the result of the splendid "team work" of the Methodist army. With her millions of members, Methodism can perform any task God gives her to-day if the entire Methodist "Team" will "play the game," as our college boys and girls play their football and basket ball games.

The great representative body of Southern Methodism, the General Conference, decided after thorough consideration, that it is vital to the efficiency of the church that we train more men and women for undivided life service in our home and foreign fields, and that we must provide training schools for these sorely needed workers, which schools must be equal to the best in our country.

That General Conference spoke for connectional Methodism. Every Conference was represented by its own elected delegates. These delegates agreed that the Educational Movement was vital and fundamental. The church needs fifteen hundred workers in the home field and one thousand in the foreign field. This appeal for volunteers must be sounded in every pulpit and in every Sunday school and every Epworth League in Southern Methodism; not spasmodically, not incidentally, but systematically and thoroughly, as is demanded by its vital nature. The appeal for larger, better equipped, better endowed training schools is equally vital. Southern Methodism cannot train leaders equal to present-day needs in second class mediocre institutions. If she desires the best leadership, she must provide first-class training. In short, the building, equipment and endowment of our schools and colleges are a necessity if we are to do our work as a church.

Can we do it? We can. How? By "Team Work." We have our star players, who have more ability than the rank and file of the great Methodist. Some of these stars have already made brilliant plays and have pledged $25,000, $50,000 and $100,000 to equip and endow our schools. If the entire Methodist host will do "team work," and support heartily and vigorously our star players, we will surely reach the goal.

The College of Bishops on April 29 gave an entire session to the consideration of this question, and with a knowledge of the need of workers for our entire field, and with equal knowledge of the lack of adequate facilities for the training of these workers, unanimously adopted the following paper:

"It is the definite, carefully considered judgment of the College of Bishops that the Christian Education Movement is one of the most vital fundamental matters which has been before the church in the present generation, and the success of the Movement is, in our judgment, a necessity for the future efficiency of our work, both in the home and foreign fields. We urge our people, both preachers and laymen, to push this great work to a successful conclusion, and we pledge to our Educational Commission our earnest, persistent cooperation to the end."

Thus the General Superintendents of the church have emphasized the action of the General Conference. May the next month witness the most splendid success in our history as a church.

GO FORWARD, OR STAND ASIDE.

By John S. Chadwick.

The day of the testing of the faith and of the spirit of consecration of the people of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, draws near. We shall prove by our response to the call of our schools, by the pledges made May 29 to June 5, whether we will to enter upon the larger service to which our Lord calls us, or to decree the waning influence of Southern Methodism of the future. No other way opens before us; no other choice is ours. We must go forward or stand aside.

We Must Keep Faith.

There are those of our own people who will not accept the foregoing statements as words of sober fact. They will dismiss them as statements of over-enthusiasm or, at least, as an over-emphasis of the importance of the present enterprise of the church. But let us face the situation as it really is. What if the church should fail to keep faith with its pledge of three years ago? That pledge was made at a time when we could not see our way except as faith in God gave light along the path ahead. The nation was at war, and with no prospect of an early ending of the struggle. We saw at least several years of war ahead of us; and we had no other thought but that 1920-21 would find us carrying the burden of a debt that would tax to the utmost our resources. None of us dreamed that we would have conditions so favorable as now. If we turn now from our task, repudiate the pledge made in 1918, we shall not have right to claim the guidance and the blessings of the Head of the church. It is not an easy task, but the church did not expect it so to be when the program was announced. We must carry it through. The church of 1921 must keep faith with the church of 1918.

What of Our Schools.

Three years ago the schools of the church were told to stand aside. They have kept faith with their church. During the days of severest testing for them they have given their loyal support to the program of Southern Methodism. And what it has cost them to do this only the men and women who carried the burdens of those past years will ever know. Shall we say to these schools that the pledge of three years ago was not made in good faith? Or say to them that because the task is more difficult than we thought in 1920, not in 1918, we are not willing to make the sacrifices demanded? These schools must have now what the church has pledged, or some give up the struggle and all face the future with resources and equipment insufficient for their work. We cannot condemn them to this struggle for life and declare ourselves without responsibility for the waning power and influence of the church.

A Contribution to the Church of the Future.

Southern Methodists of the present day are in a peculiar sense debtors to the Methodists of former generations. We have entered into their labors and on the foundations laid by them the structure in which we now live rests. It is our privilege and our high obligation to make some contribution to the church of the future. Our opportunity so to do is in the Christian Education Movement. Its program, as set forth in the five objectives, is a program of constructive character. If realized in the life of the church of to-day, it will stand as the best enterprise of Southern Methodism until now. We will give over to our children a legacy that will bear witness to the fact that in our day of opportunity we were not found unworthy of the chance God gave to us.

Our response to the financial appeal will prove whether the Christian Education Movement has really entered into the life and thought of Southern Methodism. More than the future of our schools is at stake; our own growth and our future usefulness as a church are in the issues of this Movement. The preacher or layman who in this hour fails to give his best to the carrying through of this enterprise has failed his church in the most critical hour of her history. We cannot fail; we must go forward.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE.

Methodism in Mississippi has, in Millsaps, an institution of which it may justly feel proud. In the twenty-eight years of its history, the institution has sent out into the State a constant stream of educated laymen whose loyalty to Christ and to the church has been an inspiration and a blessing. Without the service of those laymen who, at one time or another have attended Millsaps, Methodism in the State would be far poorer.

Not only has Millsaps been of untold benefit to the Methodist laity of the State; also a large percentage of the clergy have attended the institution. Twenty-four per cent of the Methodist ministers of the State have attended Millsaps College; there being on the roll of the Mississippi Conference twenty-seven per cent Millsaps representatives, and in the membership of the North Mississippi Conference, twenty-one per cent. Eliminating from consideration those preachers who came under the care of the Conference before the establishment of Millsaps College, it would appear that the institution has served thirty-four per cent of the possible total of Methodist ministers in the State.

These facts are significant and vital, but even greater interest is attached to the growing importance of Millsaps to the Methodist ministry of the State. In 1918 forty-one per cent of the probationers in the North Mississippi Conference were Millsaps men; in 1919 seventy per cent of the probationers in the Mississippi Conference had attended the institution. Is it not evident that Methodism in the State must look ever more and more to Millsaps to supply those men who are to be the leaders of its thought and action?

The institution, at the present time, has in its charge approximately thirty-five men who intend to enter the ministry of the gospel of Christ. Of these, about twenty-three are in the college, the others being in the preparatory department. In addition, there is in the institution a goodly number of Christian students organized into a Volunteer Band. Many of these are young ladies. Two of the number are definitely pledged for home missions, and nine for foreign missions.

Millsaps men in the field of religion—ministers, missionaries, and other Christian life workers—number 112. In the field of education are 79; lawyers and physicians, other professions, and in business, 205. Thus the institution makes valuable contributions to world progress and betterment.

The needs of the institution are: An enlarged and improved library, the present facilities being inadequate; another dormitory, the further growth of the institution being impossible without additional dormitory space; a students' activity building to accommodate Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., literary societies, etc.; a larger athletic field with accommodations for track, football and baseball fields; a new gymnasium of substantial construction and modern equipment, the present frame building being small, unsafe, and having no gymnasium equipment; a new science hall, the present one being uncomfortable, and having about one-half the desk space needed for the present student body; a building for the preparatory school; additional endowment to the amount of $475,000.

These needs are cared for in the askings of the college, approved by the Educational Commission of the church and by the two Conferences in Mississippi. If the Methodists of the State answer its call, Millsaps will in a measure be equipped for the work of the immediate future. To fail to answer will be to turn from the best opportunity given to Mississippi Methodism until now. In great degree the progress of our church in Mississippi depends upon the progress of Millsaps College. The Methodists of two great Conferences must answer its call.

NOW AN INDIVIDUAL RESPONSIBILITY.

By A. C. Marts,

Advisory Director, Christian Education Movement.

During the past six months the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has forced into the mind and consciousness of the people of the States it serves a phrase and an ideal which has already begun to exercise an influence of far-reaching power. Christian Education has been strengthened and buttressed in our whole educational system by its championing by Methodism. The development of education in the whole Southland has been affected for years to come by the church's commitment to a process which is planned to result in Christian character. Even though we were to do no educating ourselves, the effect of the church's endorsement of Christian education would be of inestimable value. This phrase, Christian Education, has had a circulation so wide that the ideal to which it gives expression has already become, in a measure at least, a test of our whole system of education.

But it is not the custom of Methodism to erect an ideal and then to walk away from it, leaving it to some one else to make that ideal effective in the lives of men. If Christian education is a worthy ideal, it must be also a responsibility, and our church has assumed its responsibility in the projection of the Christian Education Movement.

Now the purpose of this brief statement is to say that what was the church's responsibility in January, 1921, has become an individual responsibility in May, 1921. The Christian Education Movement is no longer simply a great undertaking of a great church. During the next few weeks it is a searching challenge to two million individuals.

We have believed in it as a Movement. We must, therefore, believe in it as a personal responsibility. We must make and keep American education Christian. We must maintain colleges which will train and produce pastors and leaders able to keep our nation a humble servant of Christ. In order to accomplish these things, millions of individuals must be faithful and sacrificial.

During the month of May, let each of us think of this undertaking not as the Christian Education Movement of the M. E. Church, South, but as my responsibility for the Christian education of America. Then we shall be driven by the compulsion of personal accountability for a great opportunity and will not spare ourselves, in energy, devotion, intercession or giving. When we, as individuals, have, one by one, paid the price in our own hearts and wills, then we as a church can render this saving service to the world.

CENTENARY COLLEGE.

Centenary College, with a record of more than eighty years of service to church and State, has come to a day when, if the Methodists of Louisiana use the opportunity their college for men offers them, it will enter upon the best period of its history. For its own people to fail to equip the institution for this day of larger service will be for Louisiana Methodism a real calamity. They will not fail of their duty; too much is now at stake.

The field of Centenary is wide and unoccupied. The northern part of Louisiana has no other college; the city of Shreveport has no other institution of high grade; the nearest Protestant college is about one hundred and fifty miles distant; it is in the Protestant section of the State. These conditions give to the institution such an opportunity as is in the keeping of few other colleges of our church. And they make plain the duty of Louisiana Methodism.

If there were no such conditions as named, Centenary has made such valuable contributions to the life and growth of the church as gives it right to ask of the church a more liberal support than has yet been given. Its graduates and former students make up nearly fifty per cent of the present membership of the Louisiana Conference; and in other Conferences, in the mission fields, in connectional positions, in the field of education, in other service, are its representatives. Centenary men in all walks of life reflect credit upon the institution to which they are debtor. And the record of the lives and the labors of many of the alumni who have served and have entered into rest is a rich inheritance for the church of to-day.

At present more than twenty students are preparing for the work of the ministry, and some of these have answered the call of God during the present session. Our church in Louisiana must look to Centenary for its supply of trained workers.

And every layman educated in an institution such as this will give to the church and to the State far better service than if his training had been in an institution other than a Christian college.

During recent years Centenary has shown remarkable growth, especially as compared with the slow growth of other years. For some years after the removal of the institution from Jackson to Shreveport, there was uncertainty whether the property, conditionally donated by citizens of Shreveport, would be held by the church, whether Centenary's future was secure. The property is now owned in fee simple by the Louisiana Conference. The citizens of Shreveport are ready to make some substantial contribution to the strengthening of the institution, this on their faith that the church in Louisiana will prove its loyalty to its own school.

The askings of Centenary, approved by the Educational Commission of the church and by the Conference, represent the minimum of its needs. The amount asked, $560,000, will provide an administration building, an additional dormitory, the payment of the debt of the college, and an endowment of $225,000. A Methodist college in Louisiana with total resources of a million dollars represents a great advance over former standards, but it is an advance that does not more than keep pace with the general educational progress. Our church in Louisiana should not be satisfied to reach even the goal fixed by the Christian Education Movement. Centenary is worthy of more than it asks.

In no enterprise of the church of the present day is so much at stake as in this to which the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has pledged its faith. Louisiana Methodists of to-day will in large measure determine what the Methodism of the future in their own State shall be, whether it shall be a vigorous, a progressive Methodism, or shall mark time while the world moves on. In Centenary College is the opportunity to make the Methodism of the future a more influential factor in the growth and prosperity of the State, and in helping the coming of the kingdom.

Our church in Louisiana has had no easy task during all the years of its service in that territory. Its loyalty to the faith, its sacrificial spirit, its devotion to the truth—all these are known to connectional Methodism. The Louisiana Conference has a good name throughout our territory. The entire church expects Louisiana Methodists to show in this day that they are worthy of their inheritance. They have their best opportunity in the call of Centenary College. They will answer that call.

CHRISTIAN CHARACTER AND CHRISTIAN MINISTRY.

By George Trumbull Ladd,

Author, Theologian, and Philosopher, Professor in Yale University.

The plan of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, for improvement of its educational facilities has my heartiest approval, and the breadth and liberality with which the plan is conceived excites my admiration. I should be very glad if anything which I could say should assist at all in its consummation.

CENTENARY COLLEGE OF LOUISIANA.

The supreme aim of all wisely-ordered education is the elevation of character, and this requires not merely knowledge but wisdom, and not merely the wish to be good, and to do good, but acquaintance with the proper and most effective ways of carrying out that wish. This makes it impossible to realize the aim of education without giving to the religious nature its due importance in the well-being of man, both the individual and society.

The need of an educated ministry is more pressing than ever before in the history of this country, perhaps even of the world at large. Every Christian is, by virtue of his profession of Christianity, committed to the duty, at least by example, of evangelistic work. But the peculiar office of an educated ministry is to be teachers of religion, respected and trusted as such. But I fear that of late they have not as a class been looked to by educated men and women in this way.

From the infant class in the Sunday school to the last of the work in the theological seminary this need of a better educated ministry and missionary body should be borne in mind. But for the great body of the laity and for society in general, it is not easy to exaggerate the possible value of the scheme you propose. For education, such as I assume you propose to foster, includes the whole personality, a wise care and use of the body, and the culture of intellect, emotion and will, and the unfolding of the higher nature to which the name "spirit" is appropriately given.

GRENADA COLLEGE.

For sixty years there has been a school for young women at Grenada. For some years operated as a Baptist institution, it was purchased in 1882 by the North Mississippi Conference. With a strong constituency to which to look for patronage and financial support; easily accessible to the people of its territory; a college that has held to the best ideals—all these promise growth and greater usefulness if only its own people give it an opportunity to grow.

During the nearly thirty years of its history as a Methodist college, Grenada has come from a school of small patronage to an enrollment of more than three hundred students. And this has been done while the standards of the school have been advanced in keeping with the educational progress of the country. In fact, Grenada College has kept ahead of the larger number of schools of its grade in such growth as really determines the rating of an institution of learning.

This college holds to the ideals of a Christian school. It has its representatives in Christian life service, in missionary work and in other such activities. A large number of its graduates have entered the profession of teaching, and the contribution of the college to the building of Christian homes has helped much towards the bringing in of a better day. The Christian college for women is a vital factor in the progress of the kingdom. In that its influence is felt in the school and the home, the two institutions that in large degree make the convictions and ideals of a people.

Grenada College has property valued at more than $300,000, this the accumulation of thirty years by the people of the North Mississippi Conference. To hold to its present high standards and to care for all who can be enrolled as students, it must have additional endowment of $200,000, two new buildings, and its debt paid. These will call for a total of $350,000, or nearly six dollars per capita (in five annual installments) by North Mississippi Methodists. Are they able to do this? Is their college at Grenada worthy of this investment? Even in a time such as this, it is to challenge the faith and loyalty of a people to say that such a contribution cannot be made.

The Christian Education Movement brings to the North Mississippi Methodists their opportunity to build this greater institution. Its needs as here set forth are not overstated. The present demands on Grenada College call for this amount and even more. It must be provided two additional buildings, its debts canceled and, if it continue its work as a standard college, the amount of the endowment here named must be secured. It rests with its own people whether the institution shall enter upon its larger service or whether its struggles to come to its present high standing have been wasted efforts. Our faith in the North Mississippi Conference is that it will declare that Grenada College shall live and grow. In the light of present day responsibilities, the church cannot deny its schools the chance to make larger contributions to the ongoing of the kingdom.

MAIN BUILDING, GRENADA COLLEGE.

WHITWORTH COLLEGE.

In Whitworth College, at Brookhaven, Mississippi Conference Methodists have an institution worthy of their confidence and their loyal support. Founded in 1858, it has continued its good work, with a break of only a few years during the Civil War. Its remarkable progress under the administration of Dr. I. W. Cooper is known both to Mississippi Methodism and to the entire church. Its success is its embarrassment, for with its enlargement and better equipment during recent years many students were turned away the present session.

It is with the Methodists of the Mississippi Conference to say whether their college at Brookhaven shall continue to turn away hundreds of young women who seek admission, to send them out of the State, or to deny them altogether the advantages of college training. It is a responsibility such as no people should be willing to carry. Our people of the Mississippi Conference have in Whitworth an institution that holds to the best educational ideals and that is a real Christian college. To turn from its doors young women who need what Whitworth can give, and who, perhaps, will not get what they need in the schools to which they turn, is a situation that should stir the Methodists of the Mississippi Conference to their best efforts.

Our colleges for women must supply adequate equipment commensurate with the progress of the times. Only in this way can we prepare our daughters for the responsibilities that are being increasingly laid upon the womanhood of to-day in the domestic, social, commercial, political, and religious spheres of life. We must build for our daughters colleges that, in equipment, courses of study, endowment, and in all that goes into the making of an institution of learning, are the equal of our colleges for men. The Mississippi Conference and the men and women who have directed the work of Whitworth College have been making remarkable progress towards this goal. But much is yet to be done.

Whitworth is loyal to the church and to the name and character of a Christian college. Through the years it has been supplying workers for the enterprises of the church, missionaries in the foreign field and at home, other Christian life volunteers, and leaders in church activities in home communities. During the present session twelve young women have volunteered for Christian life service, this bearing witness to the fact that there is a wholesome Christian influence and atmosphere.

This institution has a valuable property, large additions having been made during recent years. Its present needs are: An additional dormitory, a conservatory of music, equipment, and $200,000 added to its endowment, a total of $350,000. It has right to ask for this and more. Whitworth's askings are on the plea of past service, on its success and growth, on the argument of the Christian college as the best type of educational institutions. On all of these its case is well sustained, and the Mississippi Conference and the Educational Commission of the church have declared that it should be given what it asks.

WHITWORTH COLLEGE.

MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE.

A Statement of the Case of the School.

Founded in 1854; 430 alumnae.

Only college exclusively for girls in all Louisiana west of the Mississippi River—a territory of about 30,000 square miles, and with a population of about 1,000,000. Methodist membership in Louisiana Conference nearly 45,000.

Graduates from Louisiana High Schools 1920, about 700 girls; in 1921 about 1,000 girls.

M. F. C. has 30 in Senior class; 42 in Junior class, and should have room for 60 at least to come from the High Schools for fall session, 1921.

Turned away about 25 in fall 1919; and about 20 in fall 1920.

Has room for only 125 boarding students; and in two years should double this number.

In eight years has increased its boarding patronage 400 per cent; its faculty has been doubled; its income quadrupled.

Has spent about $25,000 in last four years on buildings, improvements and equipment; and is now far better equipped for work than at any time in its history.

Has property values of about $175,000.

Located in one of the best towns anywhere—in a community that has fine schools, good roads, excellent churches; and enjoys the blessings of most modern conveniences and luxuries that are possible, with an abundance of deep well water, sewer system, natural gas, electric light and power, sanitary laws and a delightful climate.

A standard Junior College: not a venerated plant nor a reformatory; but a school where good, honest work is expected and proper respect for law and order is demanded.

Apportionment in the Christian Education Campaign is $350,000. This amount should give us $100,000 for endowment, and sufficient to build an annex for living rooms, and administration building; furnish a library, a gymnasium, and equip and repair present buildings. We would then have room for perhaps 300 boarding students and more than 100 local, with a total valuation of more than a half million.

PORT GIBSON FEMALE COLLEGE.

Founded in 1843, Port Gibson Female College is the oldest college in the State of Mississippi. It was incorporated in 1854, and became the property of the Mississippi Conference in 1859. The work of the institution from the time it was founded until now has been continuous, with the exception of a short intermission during the Civil War.

The college is situated in a locality of much historic interest, and some of the great men and women of the past have made very valuable contributions of service to the institution; and among its alumnae are many splendid Christian women whose lives have blessed the world. Some of its former students are in foreign fields, and others are in educational and church work in the homeland.

Port Gibson draws its patronage both from Southern Mississippi and from territory beyond the State. It has a loyal company of alumnae who have helped to turn students to the institution, and its good record of nearly eighty years makes strong appeal for patronage.

The purpose which has prevailed at the institution since its foundation has been to offer the very best educational advantages under positive Christian influences. In the thoroughness of its work, it compares favorably with other institutions of its section. Its graduates are given teachers' licenses by the State of Mississippi without further examination. It demands thorough work and the young women who go out with diplomas from the college have such educational equipment as qualifies them for useful service in the schoolroom or elsewhere.

Port Gibson has a territory from which can be drawn a far larger patronage than at present when its present needs are adequately met. It is the privilege as well as the duty of the Mississippi Conference to equip the institution; and in answering the call of Port Gibson Female College, the church will greatly strengthen its own work for the future. It will open to hundreds of young women the doors of a Christian college, and will thus help forward all the enterprises of the Kingdom.

RESOLUTIONS BY THE BOARD OF MISSIONS.

Whereas the Christian Education Movement is approaching the financial climax of the Movement in the Financial Drive set for May 29-June 5, we herewith express our complete sympathy with all of the objectives and our conviction that the success of our own missionary operations is vitally concerned with the full success of the Christian Education Movement.

Shall Louisiana and Mississippi Colleges Stand or Fall?

The supreme crisis in the existence of Methodist education in Louisiana and Mississippi is at hand. On the successful issue of the Christian Education Movement depends the very life of the great and worthy institutions maintained by the Church in these States.

We must meet the challenge. We must place these noble schools beyond the handicap of poverty.

A Never Ending Line

THE choicest young people of the nation pass by in this line. It has numbered in its ranks great statesmen, able jurists, and practically all of our strong educators and preachers. This line for ages past has furnished the world its sane, constructive leaders. The line is all too short. There is a dearth of able leaders in all fields. The length of this line will largely determine whether American leadership shall be sanely progressive or whether it will be radical and revolutionary. A leadership with inadequate training is superficial and unsafe.

Endowed church colleges and universities are the great stabilizing forces in our civilization. With independent incomes they are free from the changing whims of public opinion and the wave of radicalism that may sweep over the country. It was this consideration that largely determined Mr. Rockefeller to direct a large part of his vast fortune to the endowment of Christian colleges and universities. They give stability to society and direct public opinion along sanely constructive lines. People go whither they are led. Trained Christian leadership is a guarantee of normal, peaceful progress. The Christian Education Movement is pledged to enrich and to lengthen the line of graduates of Christian institutions.

SPRING'S HOUSECLEANING.

Spring moved into Winter's halls,
Found them bleak and bare;
No soft hangings for the walls,
Nothing bright or fair.

Spring at once began to clean
House with all her might;
Hid the floors 'neath carpet green,
Soft and new and bright.

Then she called the willing Rain,
Bade her wash the sky;
Asked the Sun to shine again
To make the ceiling dry.

Over fruit-trees bare she threw
Robes of pink and white;
Dropped into the streamlets, too,
Sparkles of delight.

O'er the alders near the stream
Spring flung mantles grey.
Blossoms dainty as a dream
Made her carpet gay.

With this magic all her own,
Pleased as any child,
Spring sat back upon her throne
And just smiled and smiled!

"A BUILDER OF GOOD FOUNDATIONS."

When Jack Carol finished the seventh grade he left school to get a job. He wanted to have money, for one thing, and he did not care much about school, for another. He wanted, more than anything else, to be a carpenter, and finally a contractor. Why should a carpenter study history and geography?

He was a strong boy, with great, broad shoulders and splendid muscles. He was sure he could do a man's work.

He applied first to the biggest contractor in town, for he was ambitious.

"How much education have you?" was the first question asked of him.

"Seventh grade."

"Not enough; a contractor needs to have a good foundation. The foundation is the most important thing in our business. You should go to school for at least seven more years. Good-day."

Jack was surprised, and greatly disappointed, but he was no quitter. He went from one to another until at last he found a man who would give him a chance. He learned, too, that his employer was to build the new Y. M. C. A. building. He knew some thought it strange that so unimportant contractor had obtained the work, but he was radiantly happy over the prospect of helping to build it. The city had needed a new Y. M. C. A. building for a long time. Most of the citizens had contributed to it, and he, Jack, was to have the privilege of helping to build it.

"O, mother," he called, almost before he reached the door, "I have a job at last; I'll get somewhere now! I'll get a chance to lay real foundations. I am to work on the new Y. M. C. A. building. That's the sort of foundation to lay, not history and geography."

"If you are bound to work, son, I am glad you have a good position, and I hope you will always be a good workman."

"I will, mother; I want to work up. I want to be the biggest contractor in town, some day. Just think, my first job is on the Y. M. C. A.!"

The next day he started to work. He was given a spade, and told to dig. He found the ground hard and the sun hot. His back soon ached and his arms felt as though they would never move again. What was the use, he wondered, of digging the hard ground away, when all that would show would be above it, anyway? But he kept his thoughts to himself and worked on.

That night the foreman came to him. "You'll do," he said. "You're the first boy I ever helped break in that did not start whining about digging when he wanted to build." Jack flushed. "I guess," he thought, "digging is a part of a good foundation."

After a few days the contractor came to look at the work. He stopped to talk to the foreman not far from where Jack was working.

"Now, Smith"—Jack could not help hearing his words—"you know no one will know the difference if we do not dig the rest of it so deep. This is the only part any one will see, and it may go for years without doing any harm. The kid will never know the difference. It will save me a cool eight hundred dollars. I can put part of that into the showy stuff on the upper part of the building if I have to, and keep the rest. The foundation doesn't show."

The rest of the conversation was lost to Jack, but his face was burning, partly in anger and partly with shame. He had been hired because he would not know how the work should be done! They were going to use his ignorance to cheat the men who had given the money for the building, and those who were building it!

He went home at noon, but somehow his dinner did not taste right. He went back to his work, but how he hated the sight of it! He was hurt, too, to think that Mr. Smith would help the contractor to work out his dirty scheme. He had thought he was honest! He took his spade and began to dig without saying anything to any one. He did not feel like talking.

The afternoon was long. His heart was heavy. He certainly was not feeling friendly when some one touched his shoulder just at quitting time. When he saw that it was Mr. Smith, he started to draw away, but the look on Smith's face stopped him.

"What's wrong?" he asked.

"I just wanted to tell you, kid, that I'm leaving. I can't work for that sort of a contractor. I believe in good foundations."

"Say, Mr. Smith," Jack's face was strangely glad, "I am through, too. I know; I heard what he said. I won't help build that sort of a building, either. This is a building that is meant to stand for manliness and strength, and I know it needs a whole lot of support under the ground, down where it doesn't show, where no one but the builders know it, but the building won't hold without it. The walls would settle and crack, the floors would be twisted and warped, and some day maybe people would be killed because they trusted us to put in good foundations. Isn't that the way?"

"Yes, hoy, you know more about building than I thought for. You will be a builder, boy!" Then a shadow crossed his face as he added: "If you just get the foundations down right."

"Smith," Jack's eyes were shining. "I've learned my lesson. I am going to school, and I am going to learn all I can, whether it will show in my buildings or not. When I get through I am going to build great buildings for many people, and the foundations will be good."

When Jack told his mother about it that night, there was a glad light in her eyes, but he wondered why she said, as if to herself: "Except the Lord shall build the house, they labor in vain who build it."

Fifteen years later the old Y. M. C. A. building was condemned. "Foundations improperly laid," the report said. The contract for a new building was given to Mr. Jack Carol, "Builder of Good Foundations," and on the corner-stone he inscribed the words he had heard his mother say: "Except the Lord shall build the house, they labor in vain who build it." "Yes," he explained, "the Lord wants good foundations; he and I are partners."—Selected.

Sometimes The Case.

Bishop F. W. Warne tells a good story from America to the effect that, in the South, a district superintendent was holding a quarterly conference which had difficulty in raising the pastor's salary. After a lengthy discussion, one brother said to the chairman: "Does yer want ter know jes why we can't pay? Dees yer sermons we're a gettin' now we paid fer las' year." Indian Witness.

Of Such Is the Kingdom of Heaven

This boy is stuck. The multiplication table is too much for him. Wouldn't you like to help him? If you have a heart, you would. He needs lots of things—a slate, a coat, a new pair of shoes, a good home, a day school, and a Sunday school.

If the Church allows boys like this fine lad to grow up without religious instruction, what is the Sunday school for? And yet there are millions of boys and girls in this land of Churches who are not in any Sunday school.

Membership Campaign Leaflets, Visitation Cards, Wall Mottoes, and Leaflets on Evangelism will be furnished free on application. Address Rev. Charles D. Bulla, Corresponding Secretary, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn. General Sunday School Board, Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

OUR OWN SCHOOLS.

In this issue of the Advocate are set forth some of the claims of our own schools. They were established to serve the church and to make some contributions to the bringing in of the Kingdom of our Lord. They were to serve, also, the State and to strengthen the nation in the making of useful citizens and in adding to the real wealth of the commonwealth.

These schools have been faithful in the work given them to do. If we would know what they have been worth, take from the progress of church and State the contributions of the men and women who have gone out from our own schools to serve the world. We would be far poorer had they not lived and served. For the money invested in them they have brought larger returns than could have been secured from any other investments made.

Have we dealt fairly with our own institutions? The record of their struggles to life and to do their work stands against us. We have not given to them all they needed or all we were able to give. Our contributions to Christian education are not in keeping with our financial ability, nor do they prove our faith in Christian education as one of the great forces for the saving of a world.

But we are going to make a better record. Our own schools are now before us with their plea, not for charity, but for justice. Their askings have been approved by the Educational Commission of the church and by their own Conferences. They ask only what their present-day needs and opportunities demand. We must give what they ask, or repudiate a sacred obligation and turn from the best opportunity until now to strengthen all the work of our church. To fail to answer the call of our own will be a calamity indeed. We will not fail.

THE CONNECTIONAL INTERESTS OF THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION MOVEMENT.

In the askings of the Christian Education Movement are included all of the connectional educational interests of the church. These have been featured in other special issues of the church papers, hence we are not giving prominence to these institutions in the present issue. However, we would call attention to the interests in which every Southern Methodist will be asked to make some investments.

Our two universities, Emory and Southern Methodist, are included in the quotas of each Conference and church of Southern Methodism. To each the church will contribute $2,500,000. While these two sums will add much to the strengthening of our universities, our people understand that only a beginning has been made in the building of two great universities of Southern Methodism. Five institutions of the Woman's Missionary Council—Scarritt Bible and Training School, Sue Bennett Memorial School, Brevard Institute, Holding Institute, and Vashti Industrial Institute—will be given a total of $425,000. It is fitting that the entire church make some contributions to the work which until now has been carried by the Woman's Missionary Societies.

Another connectional interest is the Christian Workers' Educational Aid Fund. To this fund the church is asked to contribute $1,000,000. This is for the aid of worthy young men and women who wish to secure a Christian education for service in the various fields of the church.

For the first time in our history, there is a church-wide movement for the strengthening of all the educational institutions of Southern Methodism. While the larger share of the contributions made in each Conference will go to the schools of that Conference, it is fitting that the entire church include in its giving the connectional interests which will both strengthen these schools and the connectional spirit of Southern Methodism.

LET EVERY METHODIST HELP.

No other Movement of Southern Methodism has made such appeal to Methodists who are able to give large amounts as has the Christian Education Movement. Many gifts of $25,000 to $250,000 have already been pledged, and we will enter upon the every-member canvass, May 29, with a good part of the $33,000,000 already secured.

In view of the fact that the Christian Education Movement makes such strong appeal to our men and women of large wealth, many of our people have believed that it would not be necessary for those of moderate means to make such contributions as during the Centenary campaign. They are mistaken. Unless the appeal goes to the last man, woman and child of the church, and unless there be a response from practically the entire membership, we cannot expect to carry through this great enterprise. All recognize that financial conditions are not so favorable as during the Centenary campaign. The present call of the church is for giving that demands real sacrifice; and in an enterprise such as this, when we are making permanent investments in buildings, endowment and equipment, every Methodist should have some share. Let no member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, fail of his duty in this day of testing for the church.

AT SHUBUTA, MISS.

It was our privilege to attend a few sessions of the Meridian District Conference at Shubuta, Miss., last week. We had pleasant recollections of the place from childhood days—but time changes all things, and after the lapse of thirty or more years we almost felt as if we were in an entirely strange community. However, after walking about a bit to get our bearings, many of the familiar scenes of the long ago came back to us distinctly. We found the avenue of oak trees, where we used to make assault upon the bee martins with a "nigger-shooter;" the exact spot where we were thrown from a horse and received a wrenched arm; the ditch where we used to catch crawfish; the schoolhouse where we missed getting a flogging from an irate schoolmaster by "the skin of the teeth"—not the same schoolhouse, but on the same spot. The old church is no more, and the parsonage we knew is now a private home. Better structures have taken the place of both of them in another part of the town.

We were a guest in the home of the pastor, Dr. W. H. Huntley—which is to say that we were the recipient of every courtesy, which he and his good wife know so well how to extend. Our fellow-guests were Rev. and Mrs. Paul D. Hardin, and Mr. Dick Thornton, of Meridian.

It will bring great joy to his brethren to know that Brother Hardin's health is steadily improving. He was in close touch with all the interests of the church, and every detail of the business of the conference was carefully looked after. We have not seen Brother Hardin's superior as a presiding officer.

The conference itself was well attended, especially by the lay delegates. Dr. H. Walter Featherstun, who certainly is qualified to speak, remarked that it was the best attendance of lay delegates he had ever seen, and others agreed with him. Among the delegates were a good many women, and they contributed their full share to the success of the gathering by their faithful attendance and efficient service on various committees. The secretaries, Rev. J. L. Sells and Rev. W. A. Hays, left nothing to be desired in the performance of their duties.

Other visitors to the conference while we were there were Rev. J. M. Morse, Rev. G. S. Harmon, and Rev. B. F. Lewis, all of whom, with the editor, were given the opportunity of presenting their work.

There were no 4 a.m. trains to take on this trip, so it was altogether delightful. The privilege of staying overnight on the return trip at Ellisville, with father and mother and other loved ones, made the journey a benediction to this grown-up boy.

DEATH OF MRS. R. V. FULTON.

The sad news has come to us of the death of Mrs. R. V. Fulton, wife of our pastor at Farmer-ville, La., on Monday of last week. She was sick only a short time, and her unexpected death brought sorrow to a large circle of friends and acquaintances throughout the State. Brother Fulton is a faithful and efficient member of the Louisiana Conference, and the Advocate extends to him sincere sympathy in his great bereavement. We trust a suitable memoir will be furnished us in due time for publication.

LAYMAN'S WEEK AT JUNALUSKA, AUGUST 8-13. A WEEK OF INSPIRATION AND RECREATION IN THE LAND OF THE SKY.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE TRAINING SCHOOL.

WELCOME AGAIN TO BISHOP McMURRY!

We are sure it will give pleasure to all our people to know that Bishop McMurry has again been placed in charge of the Ninth Episcopal District, embracing the Northwest Texas Conference, the Louisiana Conference, the North Mississippi Conference, and the Mississippi Conference, and in their behalf the Advocate extends to him a cordial welcome to the field in which he has already wrought so well.

Bishop Jno. C. Kilgo was relieved of the presidency of the Conferences because of the condition of his health, but is associated with Bishop McMurry in the work of the Ninth District, to do such work as his physical condition will allow.

Many prayers will ascend that these distinguished servants of the church may be blessed in their labors among us during this year.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. Elmer C. Gunn, our pastor at Rayne, La., began a meeting at West Monroe, La., last week, assisting the pastor, Rev. H. W. Ledbetter.

Bishop Collins Denny will preach the commencement sermon at Emory University, June 5, and William Jennings Bryan will deliver the annual address on June 7.

Our parsonage at Leland, Miss., has just been remodeled, at a cost of about $4000. It is now a splendid preacher's home. Rev. W. M. Young is the happy occupant.

Rev. J. J. Garner, of Sidon, Miss., has sent the Advocate thirty-five subscriptions this year—and he says he is not through yet. An old saying comes to our mind in this connection—"Where there is a will, there is a way."

The Big Brother Bible Class, of Greenville, Miss., has decided to build itself a home. A building committee has been appointed, and plans are being considered. This class has made a notable record in interesting men in the work of the church.

The editor of the Advocate had the privilege of preaching to the congregation of our First Church, Baton Rouge, La., last Sunday morning. The pastor, Rev. N. E. Joyner, preached the commencement sermon for the high school at Jackson, La., at that time.

Rev. R. H. Harper, pastor of our First Church, this city, recently conducted a meeting for the Y. M. C. A. at Millsaps College. A member of the faculty of the college told us that the meeting made a profound impression on the student body. Brother Harper is one of our most gifted preachers.

The meeting at West End Methodist Church, Laurel, Miss., in which the pastor, Rev. A. Joe Beasley, was assisted by the Lewis brothers' quartet, accomplished much good. The Laurel Daily Leader gave good accounts of the meeting. The attendance taxed the seating capacity of the church to the utmost.

A note from Rev. P. H. Howse, our pastor at Prentiss, Miss., informs us that the presiding elder of the Hattiesburg District, Rev. W. W. Graves, recently preached two inspiring sermons on his charge, and that he and Messrs. K. T. Moore and O. C. Luper delivered helpful addresses on the Christian Education Movement.

We acknowledge the honor of an invitation from the faculty and the senior class of Millsaps College to attend the commencement exercises, June 4-7. The class has twenty candidates for the A. B. degree, four for the B. S. degree, and one for the M. A. degree. Among these are several young preachers and children of preachers.

"Everything seems to be moving along nicely on the Hattiesburg District"—so writes the presiding elder, Rev. W. W. Graves.

Dr. H. Walter Featherstun, one of the most distinguished members of the Mississippi Conference, has been fifty years in the itinerancy, but he is still apparently young in body, mind, and spirit.

Sunday, May 8, was a great day at Court Street Church, Hattiesburg, Miss. The attendance at Sunday school was 505. The Epworth League was in charge of the evening service, and rendered a fine program. Every department of the church is thoroughly alive. Rev. C. M. Crossley is the pastor.

A note from Rev. C. E. Flke, our pastor at De Ridder, La., informs us that the work is moving along nicely on that charge. Bishop McMurry will speak on the Christian Education Movement at that place on next Monday evening, and will also dedicate the beautiful church building at that time.

Rev. C. A. Battle, presiding elder of the Lake Charles District, Louisiana Conference, has announced that Bishop W. F. McMurry will deliver addresses in his district as follows: Lake Charles, May 15, a.m.; Crowley, May 15, p.m.; De Ridder, May 16, p.m.; Lafayette, May 17, p.m.; New Iberla, May 18, p.m.

One of the questions asked of every pastor at the Monroe-Ruston District Conference was, "Is your charge organized for the Educational Drive?" and the answer in every case was, "In part or in full." We agree with the presiding elder, Rev. K. W. Dodson, that the Christian Education Movement is the main business of the church until it is over.

The revival meeting at Slidell, La., conducted recently by the pastor, Rev. W. H. Gilles, in which he was assisted by Rev. Lee R. Sparks, of Covington, La., and Rev. J. E. Selfe, of Epworth, New Orleans, was productive of much good. Brother Sparks is gifted both in preaching and in personal work, and Brother Selfe added much to the meeting by leading the singing.

We learn from the South-Reporter, of Holly Springs, Miss., that a recent membership campaign greatly strengthened the Epworth League at Holly Springs. By the way, the policy of the South-Reporter in giving much space to church activities is greatly to be commended. It cannot fail to be helpful both to the church and to the paper itself.

Rev. J. M. Morse, the Mississippi Conference Secretary of Education, has announced that the sum of $224,000 has already been pledged to the Christian Education Movement in the Mississippi Conference. This is merely the beginning, we trust, of an "over-the-top" movement in Mississippi that will adequately provide for the needs of our educational institutions.

We greatly enjoyed a visit recently from Mr. C. C. Elliott, of Yazoo City, Miss. Mr. Elliott has in his possession a Bible which has an interesting history. It was printed in 1793, brought from Scotland to Baltimore, Md., by George Elliott, brought to Mississippi in 1817, being handed down from father to son. Several years ago it was damaged by a fire in the residence where it was kept, but it was sent back to Edinburgh, Scotland, where it was re-bound by Professor Andrew Elliott. It is greatly treasured by its present owner.

All records were broken in the Sunday school at Greenwood, Miss., last Sunday. The Men's Bible Class had 124 present, and the total Sunday school attendance was 507. The Men's Bible Class had charge of the 11 o'clock service, and every available seat was taken. The class rendered a splendid program, which was greatly enjoyed. Automobiles furnished by the class brought every Methodist mother in the community that could attend, to the service. This class now has a membership of 150, and is steadily growing. Rev. V. C. Curtis is the pastor of this live church, and Brother W. E. Bealle is superintendent of the Sunday school.

Dr. S. A. Steel recently spent two weeks with Rev. C. A. Spragins, pastor of the First Methodist Church in Sherman, Texas. After giving his messages on the Bible, Dr. Steel remained a week in a revival meeting, preaching three times a day. Once each day during his stay there, he spoke to the students of Kidd-Key College, numbering over four hundred young women. On Sunday morning thirty-six persons joined the church. Dr. Spragins is an old Mississippi boy, and Mrs. Kidd Key, founder of this noble college, was a gift of Mississippi to Texas. Her son, Mr. Edward Key, is now president of the college, which has been taken over by the Methodist Church.

A fine report comes to us from the Meadville and Bude charge, Mississippi Conference, of which Rev. Paul H. Grice is pastor. Five Sunday school rooms have been added to the church at Meadville—all paid for—making this a fine plant for church work. The church at Bude was dedicated on the first Sunday of the month, an indebtedness of $1200 having been liquidated. The dedication service was conducted by the presiding elder, Rev. H. M. Ellis, of whom the pastor says, "He preached one of the most wonderful and appropriate sermons it has been my privilege to hear." There have been four additions to the church on profession of faith since Conference.

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: Rev. Olin Ray, Macon, Miss., 3; Rev. Elmer C. Gunn, Rayne, La., 6; Rev. W. N. Duncan, Drew, Miss., 2; Rev. T. M. Almsworth, Lorman, Miss., 2; Rev. W. J. Newsom, Clinton, La., 2; Rev. J. I. Hoffpauir, Indian Bayou, La., 5; Rev. T. J. Hopper, Abbeville, Miss., 3; Rev. H. J. Moore, Ellisville, Miss., 3; Rev. W. W. Mitchell, Cleveland, Miss., 2; Rev. W. J. Porter, Columbia, La., 2.

DIVINITY SCHOOL—NOTICE.

In next week's issue of this paper, I expect to publish a list of the cottages on the Seashore Camp Ground that can be rented for ten days of the Divinity School, and the rates. Also, where rooms may be had and rates, and rates at hotels. And for the convenience of cottage owners who would like to rent out their cottages, I will publish a list of the preachers who want to rent.

HATTIESBURG DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

Preachers Take Notice! Please send me at once your delegates' names, as I want to place them, and will have to know how many homes to get for those who are elected; also, I would be glad to hear from each delegate to know for certain as to whether you are coming or not—what train you expect to get here on, how long you expect to stay. We are expecting to show you a great time while you are in our midst, and are praying for a great conference.

MEET OTHER ACTIVE LAYMEN OF THE CHURCH AT JUNALUSKA, THE LAND OF THE SKY, AUGUST 8-13. FELLOWSHIP, INSPIRATION, RECREATION.

HATTIESBURG DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The District Conference of the Hattiesburg District, Mississippi Conference, will be held at Collins, Miss., May 24-27. The opening service will be held Tuesday evening, May 24, at 7:30, followed by the administration of the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper.

The pastors of the district will please send a complete list of their delegates immediately to Rev. J. M. Lewis, Collins, Miss., and to me, designating the ones most likely to attend.

Pastors will please see to it that all Quarterly Conference Records are presented to the Committee for examination.

Let all the local preachers of the district make their reports in person, or send written report, as required by the Discipline.

The Editor of the Advocate, and other brethren representing the various Boards and other interests of the church, are cordially invited to attend and represent their special interests before the Conference.

The District Sunday School Institute will be held on Wednesday afternoon of the Conference, under the direction of Rev. John C. Chambers, Mississippi Conference Sunday School Field Secretary.

The following committees have been appointed:

License to Preach—J. E. Williams, C. M. Crossley, J. W. Thomson.

Admission and Re-admission—H. Meilard, F. B. Ormond, H. S. Westbrook.

Deacons and Elders Orders—J. T. Leggett, J. L. Greenway, W. M. Williams.

Prominence and emphasis will be given to the preaching of the Word. Let all the brethren pray much for the power and leadership of the Holy Spirit throughout the Conference.

W. W. GRAVES, P. E.

Truth at first-hand is better than truth at second-hand, and authority is not safe if it is pitted against inquiry. If it seeks to silence questions, or coerce the conscience.—H. R. Hawels.

I of course have heard with the most complete sympathy of the Christian Education Movement which has been inaugurated by the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. I hope that it will meet with the greatest success. Every man who understands and loves the country must wish education brought to the highest point of development and efficiency and to be shot through at every point with Christian principle.

What Some Famous Statesmen Say

The best investment that any man can make of his money is to invest it in an immortal mine. It brings a dividend which increases as the years go by, to both Church and state. The crying need of the world today is for educated Christian men; men of vision, who understand that with all their getting they must get understanding. The South has enjoyed rich years and I trust that the response to the Educational Campaign will be generous, hearty, and liberal.

JOSEPHUS DANIELS
Former Secretary of the Navy

I am very glad to know that the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is to undertake a great Christian Education Movement whose purpose is to thoroughly inculcate in your membership an appreciation of the tremendous importance of education. A Constitutional Democracy such as ours is dependent for its stability and progress upon the sound education of its citizens. I am also glad to know that you are going to emphasize the importance of Christianity to the nation. No nation can endure without religion. There can be no divergence of opinion as to the importance of our people being well grounded in religious belief.

LEONARD WOOD
General in the United States Army

Any movement having for its object the furtherance of Christian Education should command the support of every patriotic American. The very existence of free institutions and free government rests on the foundation of Christian Education. The safety of all investments, of all financial enterprises, and of the economic framework which makes possible our present high state of civilization, depends upon a feeling of security and confidence in the masses, born of Christian faith and knowledge. Christian Education, therefore, is a form of social insurance, in which every business man is directly and vitally interested. Without it, social unrest will grow until violence and disorder submerge the splendid civilization which Christian faith and hope and progress have already built.

MORRIS SHEPPARD
United States Senator from Texas

I am glad to lend my endorsement to the Christian Education Movement of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, feeling that encouragement should be given to every worthy movement that will make the Church and its branches more helpful and effective. The value of Christian Education cannot be placed too highly. Encouragement must be given to our young people to take interest in the work, and such material assistance should be given as will make an independent living possible for those who enter ministerial activities.

JAMES M. COX
Former Governor of Ohio and Candidate for the Presidency

The Christian Education Movement has compelled the admiration of the great; its fundamental purpose has won the sympathetic interest of all who revere the Christian traditions of America. Its program offers the only course of safety for Church and native land. Will you give it your whole-hearted support?

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION MOVEMENT

M.E. Church, South · Nashville, Tenn.

The Christian Education Movement should command the support of all thinking people. It would be most unfortunate if education and Christian enlightenment were not a most important part of the great work of reconstruction now demanded for the redemption of the world from the disasters of a most un-Christian war. Except in the spirit of Christ, there can be no sure and lasting reconstruction of the moral forces which affect the welfare of all people.

A. S. BURLESON
Former Postmaster General of the United States

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE TRAINING SCHOOL.

Since 1841 there has been a Training school at Montrose, Miss. In 1888 it was chartered and ten years later was deeded to what was then the Brandon District of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. In 1906 the charter was amended and the institution became the property of the Mississippi Conference. Since 1889 it has sent out more than one hundred and fifty graduates and of this number more than fifty were ministers of our church. Many others of its former students have come to positions of prominence and have given useful service in various fields of work.

Shortly before the opening of the school for the present session, the Board of Trustees decided to discontinue, temporarily, the Mississippi Conference Training School. However, it is being continued as a local school and it is awaiting the action of the church in its response to the call of the Christian Education Movement to enter upon its greater work. With the needs supplied—and the Mississippi Conference has given its approval to the askings of the school—it can be made one of the best training schools of the State. The Mississippi Conference should have such a school, for through it the church can touch hundreds of boys and girls at a period in life when life decisions are being made, and thus furnish many recruits for the ministry, missionary work, and other fields of Christian life service. In addition, it will give to many who cannot secure college training, opportunity of a high school course in a Christian school. It should be given a chance to live and grow.

LOSS OF APPETITE

Pimples, Boils, Eruptions, etc.—Mental and Physical Weakness.

Are all very prevalent just now, and are positive proof that the blood is wanting in the power to defend the body against contagious and infectious diseases. They show conclusively that the blood needs thorough cleansing, enriching and vitalizing.

Do not put off giving attention to these dangerous symptoms.

Get Hood's Sarsaparilla today and begin taking it at once.

Remember, this medicine has given satisfaction to three generations, as a treatment for the blood, stomach, liver and kidneys, and for catarrh, rheumatism and other common diseases. It builds up the system, makes food taste good, and helps you to eat and sleep well.

For a gentle laxative or an active cathartic, take Hood's Pills. You will like them.

Headaches Vanish

Sick or nervous headaches, backaches, woman's aches, etc., almost instantly respond to the liquid remedy—Capudine. It stops the pain by removing the cause, giving quick relief. Every home should keep a bottle handy. Sold by druggists in three sizes. Insist upon the liquid remedy—Capudine.—Adv.

Rub-My-Tism is a powerful antiseptic; it kills the poison caused from infected cuts, cures old sores, tetter, etc.

SEASHORE CAMP GROUND SCHOOL.

This school, built upon the Seashore Camp Grounds, Biloxi, Miss., is owned by the church and operated under authority of the Mobile District of the Alabama Conference, the Seashore District of the Mississippi Conference, and the New Orleans District of the Louisiana Conference. Each of these conferences has a share of the small amount asked of the church for the enlargement of the school.

There is possibly no place owned by the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, more beautiful than the Seashore Camp Ground School. Situated on the Gulf of Mexico, with fourteen hundred feet of water frontage, with more than two hundred acres in its campus, a campus of live oak and long leaf pine, it is hard to conceive of anything more beautiful or a climate more delightful than is found here.

This school is the only Protestant institution between Pensacola, Florida, and Galveston, Texas. Its opportunities are limitless for enlarged usefulness in framing public sentiment in so wide a territory. Equally distant between New Orleans and Mobile, accessible to other large centers, there is hardly a limit to what could be accomplished had it but the equipment. Within twenty-five miles and without its advantages are the large Roman Catholic institution at Bay St. Louis, the Gulf Coast Military Academy and the new Girls' Junior College at Long Beach. Each of these has an equipment of more than a hundred thousand dollars. Their buildings are modern, attractive and well equipped. The property of our church, with a natural beauty unequalled, has only old, discarded summer camps for housing purposes. Yet, in spite of this, the school has grown in its eight years of history to an enrollment of more than one hundred and fifty.

FROM TEACHERS IN THE STATE SCHOOLS.

There are those who, not knowing what are the objectives of the Christian Education Movement, have taken it for granted that this Movement is a drive against the State schools. This is far from the facts in the case. The Christian Education Movement is helping create a conscience concerning education generally and will be worth much to the State schools as well as to the educational institutions of the church. The members of the Alabama Educational Association in its annual session adopted the following resolution:

"The Alabama Educational Association, feeling as it does an abiding interest in the church schools and colleges of the State, expresses its interest in the great Christian Educational Movement now under way by the Methodists of Alabama and wishes for the Movement abounding success."

The people who adopted this resolution were practically all teachers in State schools. They see, however, that a Movement such as our church is carrying through will be worth much to the cause of education in the South and this action bears witness to the fact that schools of Alabama are in the hands of men and women who are interested in Christian education. The resolution adopted by these teachers is a call to the church to carry through this great enterprise of Southern Methodism.

CHRISTIAN SCHOOLS AND CHRISTIAN WORKERS.

By John F. Kramer.

Prohibition Enforcement Commissioner of the United States.

If we expect to have able lawyers, we must have colleges of law in which to train our young men; if we are to have the profession of medicine on a high plane, we must have colleges of medicine in which to educate and train our young people. If these institutions of learning go down, the profession will go down with them.

It is not different in the realm of Christianity; if we are to have efficient workers in Christ's vineyard, we must have Christian schools and colleges in which to train our young people.

The Great Commission to "go and preach the Gospel" is not being carried out to-day as it should be. If our Christian schools, colleges and seminaries go down, then this work will fail with them. At the very foundation of this work lies Christian training.

Let us so endow our colleges and seminaries that any young person desiring it may be able to secure the training which will enable him to be an efficient worker in Christ's vineyard. Let us so endow our Christian institutions of learning that they may appeal to those young people who are desirous of securing an advanced education.

If we, ourselves, cannot go into home and foreign mission fields, let us prepare and send those who can go and preach the Gospel. The first step in the course is to give those who are going a Christian education. For these reasons and others which might be mentioned, I wish you abundant success in your noble undertaking.

Epworth League.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE EPWORTH LEAGUE INSTITUTES.

During the last two weeks of March, I had with me Mr. E. O. Harbin, from the Central Office, Nashville, who made a tour over the Conference, holding six District Epworth League Institutes, with the following results:

Hattiesburg District—number of Leagues represented, 9; pastors present, 3; delegates present, 75.

Seashore District—number of Leagues represented, 7; pastors present, 4; delegates present, 53.

Jackson District—number of Leagues represented, 7; pastors present, 12; delegates present, 87; presiding elder present.

Brookhaven District—number of Leagues represented, 9; pastors present, 5; delegates present, 34; presiding elder present.

Newton District—number of Leagues represented, 4; pastors present, 8; delegates present, 50; presiding elder present.

Meridian District—number of Leagues represented, 15; pastors present, 8; delegates present, 126.

I feel that these Institutes are very helpful to League interests, and I am sure no one could have rendered better service than Mr. Harbin. In fact, he captured the hearts of the Leaguers in the Mississippi Conference.

All roads now lead to Hattiesburg Conference, June 7 to 10. Please bear in mind that we are very anxious for every League to be represented, and every church where there is no League, and of course it goes without saying that we want all the pastors and presiding elders with us.

Yours for more and more efficient Leagues, W. D. HAWKINS.

LESSON FOR MAY 15.

Topic: Co-operation, or Competition.
Scripture Lesson: I Corinthians 12: 4-27; Isaiah 41:6-7.

Golden Text: "We are the body of Christ, and members in particular." I Cor. 12:27.

Home Readings: Monday, Spiritual Gifts, I Cor. 12:1-11; Tuesday, A Definite Ministry for Each, I Cor. 12:12-17; Wednesday, The Body of Christ, I Cor. 12:18-31; Thursday, Service Governed by Love, I Cor. 13:1-13; Friday, Workers Together With God, John 6:1-14; Saturday, God's Fellow-workers, I Cor. 3:1-11; Sunday, The Unity of the Spirit, Psalm 133:1-3.

Teaching Points.

1. In nature there is no competition of vital forces—all work together for the common good.
2. The development and use of different talents do not mean that one man must set himself against another; all these talents should be blended into a harmonious whole.
3. In the industrial order that man does most for himself who contributes most to the welfare of all.
4. The Christian principle of unselfishness is the only principle that can preserve peace in all the relationships of life.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Now is the time to gather in thousands of our people into the Sunday school. During the month of May an earnest effort will be made in our church to increase the enrollment and win a large number to Christ. No church is too poor to do this work, because the General Sunday School Board will furnish without cost all the necessary cards, charts, and leaflets to make a successful canvass for new members. We all have many things to do, but this is one thing we dare not fail to do—namely, to win the people for Christ. ALL at it, always at it, is our motto.

Have you thought about holding a circuit Sunday school institute with your own workers? Think about it, write for literature giving practical suggestions, and try it out. The circuit institute has accomplished great good where used. Through this method you can increase your enrollment one hundred per cent in one year. We ought to have not less than one hundred such institutes this summer and fall.

The program for the Wesley Bible Class Federation is complete. Miss Lucy Foreman, an experienced worker with young people, is to be with us. Miss Foreman is from Nashville. Mr. E. E. French will give us the benefit of his extended and varied experience. Get ready for the big day, June 20, at Grenada. Work like it was your own federation. If it is not yours, make it yours.

We have more people enrolled for the Training School than attended last year. We have our faculty complete and will announce the textbooks to be used next week. Several students have already ordered their books; others are making inquiry as to the course they should take. I have heard of one school that expects to send ten teachers. That is the way to go after such an opportunity.

Good reports are coming in from those who have observed Sunday School Day. The program is all right; the trouble is not in the program; it is nearer home than that. It is not too late to order programs and give the children the one opportunity to take a part in the services of the church. It is the one and only day for the church to make an offering for our own children. Some churches do ten times as much for the orphans as they do for their very own. They should not do less for the unfortunates; but more for their flesh and blood.

It is hard to overdo the matter of advertising. It requires a lot of sense and experience to make people see a good thing. Keep the federation and training school before your people constantly until they know about it. They will get what they have been longing for at these meetings, but they do not know it. They will have to attend to find out for themselves.

The Columbus District Conference, the Greenville, and the Sardis were unusually good. Nearly all our men are earnest, and consecrated to the work of the church. The man that is holding back is rare. We are going to "possess the land." The Educational Campaign is gaining ground every day; it is taking deep root in the hearts of our people; it is going to bear wonderful fruit for all time to come. "As your faith is, so shall it be unto you."

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES

Since our last letter I have visited the Neshoba circuit, Sandtown, and Cook's Chapel. A Sunday school at ports two items that are worthy of passing on—a Cradle Roll with 125 members enrolled and a Junior Class of boys in which nine requested that they be allowed to join the church. This speaks mighty well for the teacher of the class.

The Capitol Street Sunday School reports the highest attendance in its history, 676.

Bolton Sunday School reports a steady increase in attendance for the year.

The Brandon Sunday School makes a fine report on Sunday School Day and an attendance in their Bible Class of 45. Fine for Brandon!

The Forest Sunday School reports 75 per cent of the members of the church in their Sunday school. This is fine.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

I had the pleasure of being with Brother Sims on the John's charge, April 22-24. We had a fine meeting on the night of the 23d and the morning of the 24th at Pucket. Much interest was manifested in the work and Brother Sims appointed Brother P. P. Polk superintendent until his quarterly conference meets. I look for this school to take on new life.

On the afternoon and night of the 24th we were at Johns, where we had two good meetings. The writer had a long talk with the superintendent

THE COLLEGE OF BISHOPS AND THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION MOVEMENT.

It is the definite, carefully considered judgment of the College of Bishops that the Christian Education Movement is one of the most vital fundamental matters which has been before the Church in the present generation, and the success of the Movement is, in our judgment, a necessity for the future efficiency of our work, both in the home and the foreign fields. We urge our people, both preachers and laymen, to push this great work to a successful conclusion, and we pledge to our Educational Commission our earnest, persistent co-operation to the end.

in session at Louisville, April 29-30.

Cook's Chapel was organized. All of the officers and teachers were selected and literature ordered. The storm has hurt this country, and while the people were blue on account of the cold weather they had a disposition to rally to the work of the church.

The District Institute at Philadelphia was well attended. The same number of charges were represented as last year, but we did not have quite as many delegates as last year. The percentage of the Newton District stands the same as last year so far, but I trust that it will improve, and I feel that it will. They adopted as their program for the increase of membership in the Sunday school, "The enrollment of the Sunday school to equal the enrollment of the church."

The following are the officers for the present year of the Newton District: W. D. Cook, Forest, Miss., secretary; Mrs. J. E. Oakley, Forest, Miss., elementary superintendent; Mrs. C. P. Quinn, Forest, Miss., Y. P. A. W. B. C. superintendent; Mrs. J. H. Hill, Laurel, Miss., Int. Sen. W. B. C. superintendent; Mrs. Evelyn Looke, Philadelphia, Miss., teacher-training superintendent; Mrs. H. R. McKee, Homewood, Miss., missions.

A teacher-training class has been organized at Montrose, with twenty-three in the class. Ten promised to take the examination.

The Philadelphia Sunday school reand he promises a new and better school there.

On the 26th and 27th I was at Columbia, attending the Seashore District Conference. From there I went to Lucedale, where I showed the Sunday school slides to a good crowd. I found here one of the best Sunday schools it has been my pleasure to be in. Brother J. R. Banes is the best layman I have met since I have been in this work. He is the superintendent at Lucedale, and knows the practical side of Sunday school work. He gained his knowledge by actual experience in the work and not from a textbook. The Sunday School Board could use this man, as he is a practical Sunday school man, loves the work, and is a fine organizer of a school.

The 29th, 30th and 1st I spent with Brother Landrum, on the Americus circuit. We had fine meetings at Cross Roads, Central School, and Pleasant Hill. Great interest and enthusiasm were manifested, and I am sure our work has resulted in great good. We will find better schools here when we return.

(Formerly Summer School of the South).
First Term, June 13-July 21.
Second Term, July 22-August 31.
Courses for teachers and college students. Write at once for catalog.

The Sunday school meeting on Wednesday was well attended and full time was given for the program which had been advertised. The following district officers were elected: A. M. Mayo, of Lake Charles, District Secretary; Mrs. J. W. Wynn, of Rayne, Elementary Superintendent; B. L. Ballard, Opelousas, Intermediate-Senior Superintendent; Young People and Adult Superintendent, Mrs. J. H. Cain, De Ridder; Missionary Education Superintendent, Mrs. C. E. Fike, De Ridder; Teacher Training Superintendent, Mrs. O. C. Stanton, Lake Charles. Rev. C. A. Battle, the efficient presiding elder, held a great district conference.

The Monroe-Ruston District Conference will be held this week, also the Houma District. Alexandria District will be held May 10-12, and the Sunday school meeting will be Wednesday, from 2 to 4. Dr. R. A. Cummins, of Natchitoches, will deliver the main address. Send Sunday school delegates for Wednesday.

Let every Sunday school observe Sunday School Day.

A GREAT REVIVAL IN CANTON, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: Sunday night, May 1, closed a great revival of two weeks for our church here in Canton. Rev. J. O. Hanes, one of our general evangelists, and singer, Brother W. G. Waltermire, of Birmingham, Ala., assisted us in the meeting. Our people were anxious for this revival, as they had had none in four or five years.

Great interest was manifested from the first to the last service. Great congregations filled the church every night during the meeting. Brother Hanes preached the gospel with old-time power. He is a man with a message and is well fitted for his great work. He draws and holds his congregation. I have never had better help in a meeting. It has not been my privilege for many years to witness so great revival. We had many conversions and reclamations. Strong men came to the altar and were gloriously saved.

The spiritual life of the church was greatly quickened and all departments of the church have taken on new life. We had eighty-five to join the different churches. Seventy-six of these joined our church, making a total of 96 received into the church this year. We are expecting others to join.

A SUNDAY SCHOOL REVIVAL.

Dear Brother Carley: I am certain that you preachers of greater experience will appreciate my condition when I explain myself. I am trying to bring up my course of study and preach at nine places in a part of two States. Naturally one is led to believe that I am a busy man, which is certainly true. But this morning I am grappling with a strange experience. Not a single look in the course interests me; I can't get started on a sermon; papers and magazines are not appealing. Getting tired? No, indeed—I have been in a Sunday school revival! Sunday school revival? One says he never heard of such. Have you ever had H. L. Clark, Assistant Sunday School Field Secretary, of the Mississippi Conference, on your charge?

Brother Clark came to my charge (Americus) Friday, April 29, and left Monday, May 2, and time only can tell the good he has done. He has the practical side of the Sunday school and gives country people that can be worked. My people call him "the preacher." He spoke three times Sunday, May 1, and led two sessions of Sunday school and taught one Bible class.

After being with him a short while, I realized he had the work at heart. I also found him a true Christian gentleman and worthy of the confidence of our Conference. His zeal is great and my Sunday school folks were inspired as I have never seen before. New plans are being made to make our Sunday schools all that can be expected of them. The charge has a new vision of the possibilities of real live Sunday schools.

So you see I am praising God for LICE ON CHICKENS.

Lice and mites knock the profits out of poultry. They keep your hens from laying and your chicks from growing. They cause nine-tenths of all your hen diseases and troubles. Knock the stuffing out of them with 'Noxem,' the best lice killer on the market. Keeps them over like they had touched a live wire. Safest, surest and cheapest. A pound of 'Noxem' Lice Killer costs only 25c, 5 pounds $1.00, all by parcel post. 'Noxem' Potato Bug Killer knocks the bugs too. Works like lightning, and does not injure the vines. Half acre size package 90c; acre size $1.00 postpaid. We also have Sulphur, Tobacco Dust, and all kinds of spray materials. Get our circular and price list.

His kind providence which prompted me to ask Brother Chambers to send Brother Clark to my charge. PERMANENT INVESTMENTS.

The appeal of the Christian Education Movement is one for permanent investments. Our people are not asked to give $33,000,000 to be used even in service to their own generation. It is to go into endowments, buildings, lands, scholarships, and the establishment of chairs or departments in our Methodist schools. A small percentage of the total is to be used for equipment, this alone representing in any measure investments other than permanent ones.

This makes powerful appeal to the man or woman who is concerned, and rightly so, as to the use of money given for the furtherance of the enterprises of the Kingdom of Christ. Whether the gift be in hundreds of thousands of dollars or tens of dollars, it is to be used for the years to come. Thus will it keep alive the influence of the donor as it is used for the better equipment of men and women who will serve the world in the spirit of the Master.—Bulletin.

CHRIST WITH HIS INNER CIRCLE.
Mark 14:12-31.

While the ministry of the Master was to all with whom He came in contact, in a peculiar manner He devoted himself to the training of the twelve, that He might lay deep and strong the foundations of His church, and that leaders might be fitted for the days which should follow the crucifixion and the resurrection.

The purpose and power of the Christ found expression in the realm of human life. He who had made the Universe, who had all power in the domain of the material, who had sown the unfenced fields of space with the stars from His open hand, as a farmer scatters the grain, He chose to devote His effort to, and express His power in the reaching of the human heart and in the training of men to represent God in the world. It was His expression of the value of men as against things. More of divinity is shown in turning the human heart to God, in attuning the human soul to the infinite, than in the creation of worlds.

These disciples represented every type of temperament, every variety of individuality, every variation of human ability. They had been called from different walks of life, but were bound into one group by their devotion to their Lord. Judged by every human standard, poor stuff they were out of which to make the foundations of the church against which the gates of hell should never prevail. There was Peter, impetuous and impulsive; there was Thomas, the conservative, who refused to believe unless given unanswerable evidence; there was John, the mystic, who loved his Lord with a deep and undying devotion; there was Judas, whose increasing avarice brought him to the point where he was ready to sell his Lord for thirty pieces of silver.

Christ is still the center of the human circle, and men from every point of the compass, men of every class and condition, men of every taste and temperament are drawn to Him and brought nearer to each other, as they gather about Him. Men will always differ in many respects, as they differed in the days of our Lord; there will always be the impulsive and the phlegmatic, the mystic and the practical, but for all alike Christ is the one hope and the one help, the one leader, the one Lord.

Little chance there seems for agreement on questions of church polity, on matters of minor doctrines, but however widely we differ in ability, temperaments and views, let us draw nearer to Him, who alone can save.—Ex.

Woman's Missionary Society

All communications for this Department should be sent to Mrs. J. G. Snelling, 4721 Prytania St., New Orleans, La.

FROM THE PRESIDENT'S MES- SAGE.

Miss Belle H. Bennett.

It is not my purpose in this brief message to speak to you in detail of the work that you are doing and have done as a Woman's Missionary Council, in either the home or foreign fields. The printed reports of your secretaries are in your hands.

The Christian Education Movement.

The Christian Education Movement now on in Southern Methodism is but one part of a world-wide movement of Protestant Christianity. It is of vital importance to the womanhood of the world, and it is, by every token, a Providential continuation of the great Woman's Movement which, during the past three-quarters of a century, has belted the globe.

Every woman and child in the church should have a part in making this great movement a success, and this Council should send out a message of courageous assurance to the two hundred and fifty thousand women and girls of the Missionary auxiliaries who never fail to answer a call to go forward.

Missions and the Inter-Church World Survey.

A great light has been thrown upon the mission work and on the mission fields of the world during the past year. Under the pressure of a worldwide need, and the inspiration of a few wise, courageous leaders, less than three years ago, the greatest inter-denominational movement in the history of the Protestant world had its origin in what has since been known as the Inter-Church World Movement of North America.

Policies and plans such as the Christian churches had never before known were developed for a scientific survey of nations and peoples—all that relates to human life.

Unfinished and insufficient as this survey has necessarily been in so short a time, the information given, the revelations made in the two volumes (American and Foreign) are worth far more than all the labor, time and money that could possibly have been expended for such a contribution to the great task of the Christian church.

The millions of people of all nationalities in our country who never enter the church of God; the thousands of pagan souls at our doors who are never asked to enter a Christian church or told of the saving grace and love of Christ by any follower of His among us; the States in which there are villages, towns, hamlets and even entire counties having no churches,
Sunday schools nor other regular Christian services in them, are rehearsed to the public in the American number of the Survey.

The overlapping of denominational churches in cities and towns, the needs of our Christian educational institutions and the appalling lack of Christian leaders, ministers, missionaries and teachers are made to stand out before us.

Daily Bible Schools.

Another great and effectual door has been opened to our Christian workers in this country in the almost universal opportunity, wherever it is asked of school boards, for the teaching of daily Bible schools in connection with the public schools of our country.

The strutting revelation that one million and six hundred thousand Jewish children in the United States have an average of two hundred and fifty hours of religious instruction annually, and eight million Roman Catholic children receive two hundred hours annually, while Protestant children receive only twenty-six hours annually, has aroused and gripped the attention of the thinking men and women of our churches wherever it has been made known.

In every urban community within the bounds of our Southern Methodist Church wherever there are one or more Protestant churches or high schools, and one or more Protestant churches, the co-operation of these churches should be secured, a Daily Bible School Commission formed, and an earnest, well trained Christian teacher or teachers employed.

Love never turns its microscope on our faults.—Selected.

Obituaries

Mrs. J. H. EVANS (nee Miss R. I.
Franklin) was born March 20, 1837, and passed to her reward March 21,
1921. She united with the Protestant Methodist Church early in childhood.
Her conversion was clear and distinct —there was no doubt in her mind about her salvation. She knew her Lord and she had unbounded faith in Him. She was converted in those olden days when people lived the simple life—when people trusted one another—when it was no trouble to have great, soul-stirring revivals, when the very atmosphere was surcharged with the fires of heaven. She knew she was saved. She was married to Rev.
J. H. Evans, February 10, 1869, and three children blessed the union—
Mrs. Mattie I. Thompson, Mrs. Hattie
L. McDonald, and Miss Beaula Evans.
There are three stepchildren—Mr. J.
M. Evans, Mrs. Florence Thorn, and Mrs. Bettie Finch. She and Bro. Evans came over to the M. E. Church, South, when the M. P. Church united with us, years ago. Brother Evans preceded her to the glory world some three years ago. Her last days were like the full blossom of a beautiful flower —but, unlike the flower, her beautiful life did not fade with age—she seemed to get sweeter and more beautiful with the passing of the years. Her passing out was like a beautiful sunset, quietly, serenely, slowly slipping behind the western horizon. So she passed from this life into the glorious life beyond. Her body fell asleep to await the resurrection. She has deported this life for the life eternal.
She was happy in life, happy in death, and, thank God, she is supremely happy in her eternal home.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, near the close of the Sabbath, March, 27, 1921, the spirit of Mr.
M. A. GREENE, one of the most faithful and useful members of our Sunday school, left this earth and returned to its Maker; and whereas we realize nothing we can say will add to the completeness and effectiveness of the life of our departed friend, yet we feel that we would be derelict in our duty served so faithfully with all his tal-

Resolved, That we, the officers and teachers and pupils of the Holly Springs Methodist Episcopal (South)
Sunday School, will ever appreciate our association with Mr. Greene in the Sunday school. The instructions which he gave and his exemplary conduct will be a benediction to us throughout life.

Resolved, further, That we express our profound sympathy for the bereaved wife and children.

Resolved, further, That a page of our minutes be set aside on which to

BIENNIAL MEETING OF REPRESENTATIVES OF CONFERENCE BOARDS OF CHURCH EXTENSION.

Reported by Alfred F. Smith.

Since 1909, when the first such meeting was held at Memphis, Tenn., the Annual Conference Boards have been sending representatives, usually the President and Secretary, biennially to a meeting of Conference Board Representatives.

Such a meeting was held at Louisville, Kentucky, on April 26, 1921. There were forty-three men present and every Conference in the Connection, except one, was represented. Rev. J. R. A. Vaughan, of the St. Louis Conference, was elected to preside. His selection emphasized the fact that he organized a Church Extension Society in Colorado before the General Conference had established the General Board, that he was made chairman of the first Conference Board of Church Extension, that he was a member of the first meeting of Conference Board Representatives, and that he has been President of his Conference Board for sixteen years. Mr. P. B. Cox, Wichita Falls, Texas, and Rev. C. H. Hesser, Washington, D. C., were made Secretaries. Dr. S. H. C. Burgin, General Secretary, in his words of welcome, stated the importance of having the Conference Board officers perfectly conversant with Church Extension aims and methods, to have them assist each other and the General Board in devising wise plans and in suggesting needed legislation, and most of all to catch the spirit of the great enterprise of building.

The program of the day was crowded to the brim with tip-top speeches, not a dull or irrelevant one amongst them. Every man made careful preparations and loaded every second of his time with important words. The topics were just the problems that Church Extension Boards have to meet and the consideration of them furnished an institute of instruction and council such as every pastor would be profited to have heard.

It was brought out that "red tape" is not to be despised. Every strand and knot of it is essential to sound finance and permanent success. The law on the Refunding Bond was unanimously approved, and the General Secretary was praised for being, as he said, a "stickler for form" in making loans. The intelligent and earnest men who came to this meeting from all sections of the church, from Texas and Florida, from Baltimore and Corvallis, Oregon, found but little fault with their relations with the General Office, no criticism of policy or management, and by resolution gave hearty commendation to Dr. Burgin, the General Secretary, to Mr. Jas. B. Preston, the Assistant Secretary, and to Mr. T. L. Jefferson, of the Loan Department. The program of the day ended on schedule time, every man a-tingle with interest. The best of humor had prevailed through the day, though no representative had the time to say a fraction of the things that burned in his mind concerning Church Extension.

In the evening a banquet was tendered the representatives by the ladies of the Fourth Avenue Methodist Church. They did it in Kentucky elegance and warmth of hospitality. You will not often hear richer toasts than the speakers gave. They responded to sentiments that characterized the States from which they came: as for instance, "Old Kentucky Home," "Old Dominion," "Show Me," "A Tall Fir," "Oranges and Alligators," "A Goober Grabber," "A Real Gusher."

The business and the pleasure of the session closed with the passing of resolutions which embodied the results of the discussions, as follows:

Report of Committee on Resolutions.
Your Committee on Resolutions begs leave to submit the following report:

(1) We have been deeply impressed with the orderly, business-like methods which have characterized the proceedings of this Conference, and we believe it is evidence of the fact that the affairs of this great arm of the church are in skilled and able hands.

(2) We have a profound and abiding faith in the ability and efficient leadership of our Secretary, the Rev. S. H. C. Burgin, D.D., and his able, courteous and progressive assistant, Mr. Jas. B. Preston.

With the utmost confidence, we commit to them and their corps of assistants, the keeping of the Master's interest in this part of his moral vineyard.

(3) We recommend an increasing activity in the campaign of publicity, concerning the work of the Board of Church Extension, applying to both the General and Conference Boards, to the end that our people of Southern Methodism may more fully be educated concerning the aims and purposes of this most important work. We suggest that the Presidents of the various Conference Boards arrange to have this work brought prominently before the Annual and District Conferences, in their respective jurisdictions; that he also cause a brief and comprehensive summary of the work done by the Annual Conference Boards to be published once each Conference year in their respective Conference organs, and that each pastor be requested to preach a sermon on the work of the Board of Church Extension during the Conference year.

(4) That the General Conference Secretary have printed in pamphlet form, and a supply forwarded to the various Conference Secretaries, a concise statement of the essential requisites that should be embodied in an application, some of which we here note:

Title to church or parsonage property must be clear and contain the Trust Clause.

Must not be a union church, or operating jointly in connection with some other enterprise.

No donation to a church costing over $10,000, except in special instances.

Loans of over $3,000 require a three-fourths vote of the Board.

Loans must be protected by first mortgage on property.

Donations must be secured by mortgage and refunding bond.

Property must be insured, payable in event of loss, to the Board of Church Extension.

Application must be ordered by quarterly conference, and must be on regular printed form.

Applications to the General Board must be in the hands of the Conference Board Secretary on or before March 1.

Applications to Conference Board must be in the hands of Secretary prior to convening of the Annual Conference.

(5) Where possible, we recommend that some member of the Annual Conference Board, to be designated by the President of the Board, visit and make a thorough investigation in every instance where application is to be made to the Board of Church Extension, either local or general, making a report thereon at the time and place the application is considered. The report may be made in writing to the Secretary prior thereto.

(6) We most heartily endorse the suggestion made on the floor of the Conference, that special attention be given by the General Board to our equipment for the great work, and the grasping of the splendid opportunities now open for development in our educational centers, and respectfully request the General Board to confer on the General Secretary (if same does not already exist) full authority to develop this field.

(7) We commend the splendid service rendered by the Architectural Department, under the very able supervision of Rev. J. A. Baylor, and most earnestly request our people to consult this Department before launching their building projects.

(8) Let us not forget that the vital life force underlying the work of the Board of Church Extension is the Loan Fund. Therefore, let us by every legitimate means labor to increase this Fund for the larger work that lies before us. When possible we recommend loans rather than donations.

(9) We also recommend that the Board of Church Extension use its best efforts in perfecting a plan for the better protection of our church property at the earliest possible moment, as set forth in the General Conference enactments of 1918.

"Unite the Two so Long Divided— Knowledge and Vital Piety."

This was the ideal of Wesley—incribed on Kingswood, the first Methodist school on earth. It has been the guiding ideal of the Church always and everywhere. It is the ideal which inspires and furnishes the motive to the schools of Louisiana and Mississippi Methodism to-day.

Sound in scholarship and Christian in character, these institutions transmute money into men and women. They build manhood and womanhood. They produce the cultured leaders in all affairs. They furnish the Christian workers for the pulpit, the mission field, and all the social agencies working for the world's redemption.

Shall we force them to continue the grinding process of trying to make bricks without straw? Shall we keep the door closed to those who clamor for admission? Shall these institutions which have served so faithfully and so well now be forced to fall because of an inadequate support?

The Christian Education Movement is the only hope they have. On it they pin their faith. To its friends they appeal in the hour of the world's worst need.

Kept out of the field by Official order while money was easiest to get and while expenses soared to unheard-of proportions, these colleges have displayed an admirable fortitude, waiting for the Church to relieve the strain upon them. Surely no faithful Christian man—none who has a vision of his duty—none who realizes what Christian Education means to the world—will fail to respond with hearty enthusiasm in this supreme moment.

TIME TO ACT.

The Christian Education Movement has been presented to the membership of the church and to the friends of a better civilization from every possible angle. Unanswerable arguments have been adduced to prove that we are practically at the turning of the ways and that the future is largely dependent upon the kind of education we provide for the next generation. Without opposing education by the State, it has been demonstrated that the church cannot escape the responsibility of providing educational institutions that will minister to the spiritual as well as the intellectual part of our nature. If it would do its part in making our civilization essentially Christian. Not all has been said that can be said, but the time for action is at hand. Within the next few weeks the 'supreme test of our professions will come. We must raise $33,000,000 in subscriptions throughout the church or acknowledge that we are still asleep in the most critical period of the world's history. Indifferent to the urgent appeals of our most effective agencies for propagating the faith, blind to the opportunities for blessing the world that are spreading themselves before us, too poverty-stricken to finance the legitimate business of the Kingdom of God, unconcerned about the future welfare of our own children—we must acknowledge one or all these things if we do not do all in our power to bring to a successful issue this great Movement in which our church is engaged. We must continue to think and to speak—but the time to act has come. Every local organization should be completed at once, every possible preparation made for the campaign, May 29-June 5, and all our forces mobilized for the victorious advance. The Christian Education Movement appeals mightily to those who like to be up and doing.

JUST ONE EXAMPLE.

As one example of the opportunities confronting the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to make a real and lasting contribution to the intellectual, the moral, and the spiritual welfare of this and succeeding generations, we call attention to the possibilities in connection with Centenary College, located at Shreveport, La. This historic institution has already made contributions to the State the value of which cannot be measured in terms of money; and it has before it a future more brilliant with promise if its friends will rally to its support as it deserves. The only institution of its kind belonging to our church in the State, it is located in a city that is peculiarly suitable as the seat of a great institution of learning, and it has accessible a patronage that can give it as large a student body as it can equip itself to serve. Its local friends have determined that it shall have their unqualified support, and already a group of them, irrespective of denominational affiliations, have pledged more than $200,000 to start it on a new era of greatness. Other friends are ready to come to its help if its resources are adequately strengthened by contributions from the State at large. If the Louisiana Conference raises its quota in the Christian Education Movement, there is good reason to believe that it will, within a few months, have a million-dollar institution to which it may look for leadership in the testing days that are to come—an institution that will take rank with any other of its kind in the whole church. This is the opportunity that confronts Louisiana Methodism—and similar opportunities exist in other States. Shall we fail to take advantage of them?

IT ALL DEPENDS.

Thomas A. Edison is reported to have said recently: "College men are amazingly ignorant." If Mr. Edison proposes to measure the knowledge of newly-graduated college men by his own present knowledge of electricity, for example, we suppose we shall have to admit that they still have a good deal to learn; but if he means to suggest that the time spent in college is largely lost, we are forced reluctantly to say to Mr. Edison, "You are amazingly ignorant." We do not recall the exact figures, but careful investigation has shown beyond the shadow of a doubt that college-trained men are the ones upon whom the burden of leadership almost invariably falls in every sphere of activity. We are inclined to believe that Mr. Edison's opinion is due to the fact that he himself did not have the advantages of a college education and he is, therefore, unable to appreciate its real worth. However that may be, we are sure the world is not going to begin to tear down its colleges on the strength of his assertion.

WORK AND SUCCESS.

A great leader in the industrial world said not long ago: "The man who gets out ahead of the crowd must work harder than the rest of the crowd. Seems elementary, doesn't it? Yet it's so simple that some folks never will believe it." That is the trouble—it is hard for people to understand that the price of success is hard work.

This man was not speaking theoretically—he had worked himself up from a place where his only capital was the ability to work hard, to the managership of a concern that does an annual business of $25,000,000. Too many young men reverse the natural order of things in their thinking: they imagine they would work hard if they had a high position, while the only way to reach that position is to work hard. The man who keeps moving is bound to get somewhere.

NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH.

The new constitution of the State of Louisiana, now being framed by the convention in session at Baton Rouge, will contain a provision that has been in it since 1879—"Gambling is a vice and the Legislature shall pass laws to suppress the same." Although the committee reported this item with the reference to vice left out, the convention as a whole objected to the omission and the words were restored. We are glad of it. Gambling is a vice; and the constitutional characterization of it as such will strengthen the hands of those who desire to see it eradicated from the State. We shall see if the next Legislature will observe this mandate of the constitution.

A "MEDICINE"—BUT GOOD FOR NO DISEASE.

A news item from Washington last week was to the effect that two eminent physicians—Dr. Howard A. Kelly, of Johns Hopkins Hospital, and Dr. James M. H. Rowland, of the University of Maryland, in a hearing before the committee which is considering the bill to strengthen the Volstead Act, declared they knew of no disease which beer would cure, and that they had never seen it prescribed. We wonder what the brewers and their friends think about it—while they declare beer is necessary as a medicine, distinguished physicians say they know no disease for which it is good. We knew a man who had to quit drinking beer because his physician told him it would kill him if he kept it up.

DON'T SAY IT.

It is bad enough to think evil of people—but it is worse to speak it. Unkind words wound more feelings, start more misunderstandings, wreck more friendships, and break up more homes than almost any other cause that can be thought of. Unfortunately, too, they are easy to speak. The inspired writer was not beating the air when he commended the virtue of bridling the tongue.

WHAT DOES THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION MOVEMENT PROPOSE TO DO?

By J. H. Reynolds, Director General.

1. The Movement proposes to create in the mind of the church a profound conviction in favor of Christian education, a big body of public opinion that will insist upon carrying Christian ideals into all education.

2. It proposes, in co-operation with a similar movement in other churches, to bring about universal religious literacy. It proposes to abolish religious illiteracy in the nation. It recognizes that religious illiteracy is a greater menace to the stability of our republican institutions than is literary illiteracy. The great mass of our people are religious illiterates and that means moral illiterates. Just how does the Movement propose to abolish religious illiteracy?

(a) Through an emphasis on the Christian home as the first primary institution of religious education. Through the pulpit and through all other possible channels of publicity the Movement proposes to bring to the consciousness of parents, and of young people who may become parents, a full realization of the tremendous moral responsibility of parenthood, and a sense of the place of the home in any comprehensive scheme of Christian education. It will be remembered that Mr. Grady, after looking in on the Supreme Court, the United States Senate, the Executive Departments of the government, our big factories, our steamships and railroads, in his search for America's greatest institution, found it down in a country home in Georgia while he was on a visit to an old college friend of his. About eight o'clock at night, the father, an elderly gentleman, remarked that it was the custom in his home to have family prayers, called for the family Bible, read a passage of Scripture and knelt in earnest prayer for the visitor in the home, for the members of the family and for their common country. Mr. Grady later said that in the home of his friend he found America's greatest institution, namely, the Christian home. It is our greatest institution because it is there that reverence for God, for sacred things, for parental authority, is indelibly impressed upon impressionable childhood and the foundations laid for Christian character and good citizenship.

(b) By making the Sunday school a real efficient school in religious education. The Sunday school now gives the child only thirty-minutes of instruction in religion once a week. It is entirely inadequate as a program for bringing about universal religious knowledge. The Christian Education Movement proposes to establish in every college and university of the church a strong Department of Bible and Religious Education and an appreciation of the supreme value of religious education in the life of the church, of the nation, and of the world. The students will, therefore, go back to their respective churches and become efficient Sunday school teachers, Sunday school superintendents, and directors of religious education, thus making the church an efficient agency in religious education. We will then call upon the public schools to dismiss the children at least one-half day in the week and will take them to our respective churches and give them thorough systematic religious training.

Through these two agencies, revitalized and made efficient, we will bring about universal religious literacy, and thus will lay the foundations for a great Christian nation.

3. The Christian Education Movement, in the third place, proposes to provide adequate equipment and endowment for our church colleges and universities so that through them we may develop a constantly growing stream of highly trained Christian leaders to man the church, both at home and abroad, and to take the responsible places of leadership in modern industry, in labor, in law, in medicine, and in government. In other words, through church colleges and universities as well equipped and manned as any institutions in the land, the Christian Education Movement proposes to conquer the higher culture of the nation with the spirit and ideals of Jesus Christ. Until the higher culture of the nation is Christian the church will get nowhere in its evangelistic program.

The higher education and culture of Germany had become thoroughly materialistic and pagan. This developed an extremely selfish, materialistic leadership, under whose guidance the nation was plunged into the abyss, and with it our modern civilization came near to complete collapse. Indeed the destructive forces turned loose in 1914 have gone much further in destroying some of the fundamental elements in European civilization than we Americans dream of. Warned by this strategic experience in the history of the world, the Christian churches of America, through educational movements, propose to Christianize the higher culture of the nation, and this can be done by an adequate equipment and endowment of the church colleges and universities of the country.

WILL THE CHURCH DO HALF ITS DUTY?

By Hon. Wm. Hemmingway.

My interest in the educational fund which our church is trying to raise emboldens me to give a few facts which will show the opportunity that the church now has and face it with its responsibility towards the children of Mississippi.

The facts which I give were partly acquired in my capacity of Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee in the last Legislature, and in direct inquiries since that time.

The Legislature provided a bond issue to enlarge the State educational institutions. It is not probable that any enlargement of these institutions will be provided for at least five years, and probably ten. Our State educational institutions, namely, The University, The A. & M. College, The Mississippi State College for Women, The State Normal College, The Industrial Training School, The Blind Institute, The Institute for The Deaf and Dumb, are taking care now of approximately 3,700 children, not all of them being in the college department, however. The building program of the State, provided for by the bond issue, will increase the capacity approximately 500 students, if the present students are not given any additional room. But, as there are from two to nine in some of the rooms, the enlargement will not be for 500, if health is to be considered and not more than two or three are placed in one room. This total to be taken care of by the State, therefore, being for many years, will not exceed 4,200 students, with 3,700 now enrolled.

From figures given to me during the Legislature from reliable sources, I find that the number of high school graduates in 1919 was 6,000. That left us at that time with 2,400 to be provided for by private, denominational and parochial schools, which was beyond their capacity. Many were turned away from all institutions and either lost for life their chances for an education or went beyond the State for such an education. With the compulsory education, school attendance last year increased 33,000 and if 1 per cent of these attend the State educational institutions, they will be taxed to their limit, even with the bond issue buildings.

One hundred graduates per county would be 8,200. Some counties are turning out approximately 300. So, in the two years, we will have about 1,000 graduates from high schools before the State will be willing to make additions to its institutions; and before the payments are completed on the present Educational Movement there will be from eight to ten thousand graduates of high schools. The State is limited to 4,200. The responsibility to take care of the others is with the private, denominational and parochial schools. We are deciding how to meet that responsibility, how to grasp that opportunity. What are you going to do with the 4,000 high school graduates that have no college to attend in the State of Mississippi?

When the denominational schools made a fight before the Legislature to have their graduates admitted as teachers on the same terms as the graduates of State institutions, one of their arguments was, "We are taking care of boys and girls that the people have to pay taxes to take care of, if we don't." The Legislature heeded that argument, and it is now to be decided by the denominational schools as to whether they will continue in that field or neglect it.

The State is giving $4 per capita for the education of children. One State is giving $60. Will Mississippi continue this proportion and perpetuate itself in a secondary position for all time by not giving her children educational advantages equal to the best?

My figures are based on high school graduates, and it is estimated that a large number go to college and enter the Freshman class before they graduate from a high school. The figures become more convincing; and when we realize that the churches are undertaking to give a preparatory education as well as a college education, the responsibility and opportunity both become much greater. The figures I have given are purposely made a little smaller than are really justified, but I want them to be such that they cannot be safely attacked.

The State is doing one-half its duty; will the churches be content to do only one-half?

SOMETHING WORTH WHILE.

The Seashore Divinity School will be in session at Biloxi, Miss., on Camp Ground, from June 14 to 23. Brother H. M. Ellis is to be congratulated on the selection of the splendid platform men for the occasion.

The undersigned has been hearing preaching for more than fifty years and has heard nearly all of the celebrities during that time, besides having heard very many orators in various walks of life; has been a bystander at two General Conferences, seen pyrotechnic displays in parliamentary debate, heard silver-tongued political statesmen galore; and it is his opinion that the program of the Divinity School this year is the most promising in all his experience.

The Rev. Geo. L. Robinson has been with us twice before, and is a scholarly Christian gentleman, broad, deep, clear and inspiring and delightful—a man who has done original work both at home and abroad.

Bishop Quayle is unique. There never was but one, and perhaps there will never be another. Any attempt to portray the man and his messages would be as futile as to attempt to put upon canvas a storm and a dead calm, an ocean of mountains, the Aurora, and sweet strains of music all mingled in one.

Bishop James Cannon, Jr., is known throughout the United States and abroad, and is held in very great esteem on both sides of the ocean. The writer has not had the privilege of hearing him, but is convinced that our esteemed Bishop, who always brings things to pass, will give us a message of inspiration and truth, of more value than pearls and rubies.

Our own Bishop McMurtry is a platform speaker and an orator, a man who does things on a broad scale, and we are all delighted to welcome him again at Seashore.

The purpose of this article is to get everybody to come, and to get the Methodist people to see that a way is provided for the pastors to attend this feast of good things. The banquet is so good, the writer does not want anybody to miss it. The following excerpt from the Christian Century is a propos.

"Every so often the preacher ought to get away from his church and sit in a pew. * * * His congregation at home should open the way for him to do this not less than twice a year. They should not expect him to come back and report, either, on what he heard. He should do this for the sake of his own spiritual culture. Incidentally, the restoration of the joy of his own salvation will inevitably affect his preaching."

It means new life, red blood, added inspiration, breadth, depth and height in Christian experience and efficiency. If the pastor's good wife can get off, it would not be a crime to provide a way for her and give her a much needed vacation.

SEASHORE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Seashore District Conference of the M. E. Church, South, convened in the Methodist church at Columbia on the afternoon of the 26th day of April, 1921. After religious services conducted by Rev. W. M. Sullivan, the presiding elder, H. L. Norton, was elected secretary. All the pastors of the district were present during the sessions of the conference except Revs. W. L. Linfield, Lewis Fayard, and J. H. Moore. The per cent of the lay delegation in attendance was above the average.

The business of the conference was dispatched with the rapidity, the grace and dignity, with which the efficient chairman usually does things. The reports from the pastors gave account of fine progress in every department of church work. A report from the trustees of the district parsonage property, located at Long Beach, Miss., showed the property to be clear of debt, with a balance of cash in hand.

The reports of the local elders, deacons, and preachers were heard, their characters passed, and the local preachers' licenses renewed. The reports of all committees were read and adopted. F. L. Lingerian was licensed to preach. Rev. R. G. Williams was recommended to the Annual Conference for elder's orders.

The following lay delegates were elected to the Annual Conference: J. S. Otis, H. B. Hinton, H. R. Rush, W. E. Barnes, and L. E. Havens. The following Ad Interim Licensing Committee was announced by the chair: M. B. Sharborough, H. C. Castles, W. L. Linfield, and W. G. Forsyth.

M. B. Sharborough, J. F. Campbell, J. M. Corley, and W. G. Forsyth, preached during the conference. Malachi Sharborough is indeed a prophet of the Lord, mighty in the holy Scriptures. Matt. Corley is a great preacher, and Campbell is not a whit less. Will Forsyth is that graceful, dignified character whose gospel messages always soothe and encourage.

The splendid progress of the Centenary movement, the Educational Campaign, the Methodist Hospital, located at Hattiesburg, and the Orphans' Home, at Jackson, as reported by their several representatives, is indeed gratifying. We were honored with the presence of a number of visitors during the sessions of the conference. The editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, Rev. W. W. Graves, presiding elder of the Hattiesburg District, Revs. C. M. Crossley, J. E. Williams, W. W. Nelson, R. H. Barr, Rev. T. M. Lemley, pastor of the Presbyterian church, and others, cheered us with their presence and good words.

Poplarville was chosen for the seat of our next district conference. A resolution of thanks to Rev. L. L. Roberts, host of the conference, and to those in whose homes delegates were entertained, for their courtesies and hospitality, was offered and adopted. All business having received attention, the conference adjourned with the benediction by the presiding elder.

H. L. NORTON,

Secretary.

GREENVILLE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The 52nd session of the Greenville District Conference, North Mississippi Conference, convened at Gunnison, April 28, with Rev. Jas. H. Felts, the presiding elder, in the chair. The conference was opened with the communion service.

The attendance was a record breaker. There were more than forty laymen and laywomen present, besides every preacher in the district. Also, the visitors filled the church almost all the time during the business hours of the conference and at all times for preaching.

All points of business were given due consideration by the committees and on the floor of the conference. The Sunday school work was emphasized by Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Rev. E. S. Lewis, Mrs. H. Tolbert and Mrs. J. M. Wyatt, all making fine and suggestive addresses. The Educational Movement was brought to the attention of the conference by Rev. E. N. Broyles, Dr. J. Reese Lin, of Millsaps College, and Rev. J. H. Felts. Many of the preachers and laymen and laywomen expressed themselves as being ready to do all that they can to put over this great movement, and if there is a single failure in the district it will come after a hard and honorable fight. The finances of the district are well up, in the face of the prevailing conditions. The preachers salaries have been increased in the district $500 over last year and are well paid up to date. Other causes are receiving due consideration and some debts are being paid. The interest of the Orphanage at Jackson was very efficiently represented by Mrs. Alma G. Riley, and that of the Rescue Home at New Orleans by Rev. J. L. Sutton. Revs. J. H. Holder and B. P. Jacob represented the Educational Movement and the Missionary Centenary respectively. It was found that there are several in the district who have offered themselves for life service in the Kingdom, three doing so at one of the evening services.

The following were elected to Annual Conference as lay delegates: S. V. Wall, J. H. Johnson, S. J. Holcomb, J. H. Sherrod, Mrs. J. M. Wyatt, Mrs. M. E. Dakins, Judge Percy Bell, A. J. Simmons, with Mrs. G. W. Butler, Edmond Taylor, Jr., J. T. Mathis, and Mrs. J. J. Pulliam as alternates. S. V. Wall was elected District Lay Leader. Not a point of business was slighted by the able president, who presided to the delight of all the conference.

The spiritual interest of the church was well looked after. Many times during the conference a testimony meeting was held, and on Friday morning Rev. L. A. McKeown led an old-time love feast in which all present took active part. The district has had some fine revivals, and over 100 have been added to the church on profession of faith alone. Preaching services were observed at 11 a.m. and 8 p.m., when the great old truths of the Gospel were told by Revs. W. W. Mitchell, C. P. Moss, J. H. Felts (by request of the preachers), W. C. Carlisle, E. N. Broyles and R. G. Lord. There were many seasons of spiritual refreshing during the conference, and a happy spirit of brotherhood prevailed throughout.

No people could have been more hospitable in their entertainment than the people of Gunnison were, or any pastor-host more untiring in his efforts to serve the visitors than was the host, Rev. E. E. McKeithen.

The conference adjourned to meet next year at Tunica, where they say that the chicken coops are there stories high and well filled.

R. G. LORD, Secretary.

MERIDIAN DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Meridian District Conference met in Shubuta at 9 a.m., May 3, with the service of worship conducted by the presiding elder, Rev. Paul D. Hardin. Rev. H. G. Hawkins, of Enterprise, had preached an excellent sermon on Monday evening as the opening of the conference. The preachers and all lay delegates were greatly pleased that our presiding elder was able to preside at every session and look carefully after all the interests of the conference. Our hosts, Dr. W. H. Huntley and the fine people of Shubuta, left nothing lacking in the entertainment, and it can truly be said that it was one of the most enjoyable and helpful conferences this district has ever had. Rev. M. L. White, of DeKalb, and Rev. H. A. Wood gave two strikingly original and helpful sermons that were full of evangelistic fire and fervor. Rev. J. M. Morse, on Tuesday night, presented the cause of Christian Education in a way that appealed to every thoughtful mind. Rev. B. F. Lewis spoke in the interest of the Orphanage at Jackson, and gave some facts in reference to the work being done there that will tend to make every one support it more diligently. Rev. G. S. Harmon was full of enthusiasm and facts about the work and need of the Methodist Hospital at Hattiesburg, and assured us that in his work as Commissioner of the Hospital he will diligently look after its interests. Rev. H. T. Carley, editor of our Advocate, was on familiar ground, having lived in Shubuta in days gone by when his father was pastor there. The many memories of that time did not hinder him from making a most effective appeal for more diligent effort in behalf of our Conference organ. The only president that Seashore Camp Ground School has ever had, H. W. Van Hook, was present and was so close to the scenes of his first circuit that reminiscences just had to be told that gave the Conference opportunity for some hearty laughter. The school is flourishing in spite of the hindrances, and Van Hook is as optimistic as ever. May his hopes and wishes all come true in the coming campaign for education!

One hour of the first day was given over to a memorial service in memory of our fallen brother, H. B. Watkins. Many touching tributes were spoken concerning him. He will live long in the minds and memories of his brethren of this district. Dr. W. H. Huntley presented a memorial that paid full attention to the great worth and efficiency of Brother Watkins as a Methodist preacher, and it was adopted by a rising vote.

Over 50 lay delegates were present and showed great interest in all the work of the conference. Miss Ella Wayne Ormond and Mrs. W. J. Ferguson spoke about the work of the Woman's Missionary Society and the Wesley House, and urged diligent effort in every charge for these two interests.

Harvey J. Oakley was licensed to preach, and Daniel P. Yeager and Clarence A. Massey were recommended to the Annual Conference for admission on trial.

W. D. Hawkins, D. W. Heidelberg, J. B. Holland, S. M. Graham, Miss Ella Wayne Ormond, Miss Madge Stuart, Mrs. W. J. Ferguson, and Mrs. P. D. Hardin were elected delegates to the Annual Conference.

Seoba was chosen as the place for the next district conference.

The presiding elder appointed a licensing committee, J. Lloyd Decell, J. L. Sells, W. J. Ferguson and W. A. Hays.

Rev. J. Lloyd Decell, the new pastor of Central Church, Meridian, recently from California, was given a hearty welcome. He has a large place in the hearts of his brethren.

W. D. Hawkins, our efficient Centenary representative, was present, spoke clearly concerning this great interest of the church, and on Wednesday night gave a lecture with new pictures, illustrating the advance on some of our miss on fields.

The one supreme desire of preachers and laity, often expressed, was for a sweeping revival all over the district. May it soon come!

JAMES L. SELLS Secretary

GRENADA DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Grenada District Conference opened Wednesday, May 4, at Coffeeville, Miss., at 2:30 p.m., and continued until Friday at noon. The attendance was very good indeed, not only by the delegates, but by the people in the town and surrounding community. Many visitors were in attendance on the business sessions.

Much time was given to the report of the pastors, the majority of which showed that splendid work is being done. The discussion of church work of every nature was free and open, no work of the church being overlooked—pastor's salary, Conference collections, Orphans' Home, church paper, church records, sacraments, Sunday school work, Epworth League, educational work; in fact, all these were given time and thought. Much stress was laid on the spiritual needs and progress of the congregations. Two hundred and seventy-eight had been received into the church thus far. The pastors who had held revivals all reported good meetings.

The preaching was done by Revs. L. M. Lipscomb, W. H. Moninger, and W. W. Woollard. In addition to those helpful sermons, some addresses and talks were given by laymen. Hon. L. G. Fant, of Holly Springs, and Judge J. G. McGowan, of Water Valley, spoke in the interest of the Education Movement. J. H. Holder and W. R. Bourne caused the tide of educational interest to rise when they, with force and interest, presented the cause.

An interesting feature of the conference was a presentation of the Epworth League interest by Miss Haldee Curd, of Holly Springs, the District Secretary. Mrs. A. W. Stokes presented the women's work.

The following were elected lay delegates to Annual Conference: L. G. Fant, J. G. McGowan, J. E. Bailey, Mrs. A. W. Stokes, R. E. Wilburn, R. W. Sharp, W. M. Meek, A. W. Milden; alternates: F. A. Howell, D. H. Bishop, Mrs. W. A. Stineback, L. A. French.

Licensing Committee: W. W. Woollard, T. M. Bradley, L. P. Wasson and W. M. Langley.

The royal entertainment given to the conference by the people of Coffeeville will long be remembered. The next conference will be at Vaiden. W. R. LOTT, Secretary.

AN APPRECIATION.

The recent death of Brother Brown Jones marks the passing of one of the great laymen of Methodism in North Mississippi. His death took place at Robinsonville, Miss., in the home of his daughter and son-in-law, Dr. G. M. Shaw, where he had been on a visit for some time. His home for the past few years has been in Memphis, but his life work as a Christian worker was in North Mississippi. For long years he lived at Cockrum, then at Olive Branch. Here the writer had intimate association with him and learned of his great worth to his church. He was then an old man, but with mental and spiritual vigor he led his church in every good work. Physically he was not strong and suffered impaired vision, which was a great handicap in his church work. Still, he was one of the most capable superintendents and was a Sunday school enthusiast; and in the capacity of Sunday school superintendent he served for many years. For a long period of years he served on Annual Conference boards, and often as a delegate.

In his special interest for young preachers I first learned to love Brother Brown Jones. His warm greetings at the Annual Conferences, his sympathetic interest for the young preachers drew me closer and closer to him. Then when I became his presiding elder, often in his good home at Olive Branch, with his most excellent family, I came to know his true worth. I shall never forget at a quarterly conference in Olive Branch on Saturday and Sunday, how he planned for the old-time dinner on the ground Saturday, with preaching at eleven o'clock. He invited the other denominations, and this was a great occasion, a multitude of people being present. What true brotherhood and what a blessing to his own church!

A great and good man has passed out from us, one of the old type. He was so deeply spiritual he kept abreast of the progress of his church, but held tenaciously to some of the best things and methods of church work, proven and tried and sanctified in success by the fathers. He believed in magnifying the quarterly conferences. Blessed be his memory!

He leaves his good wife by a second marriage and a large family—five children by his first marriage and four by the second—to mourn his going; but they know where to find him. Many preachers of the North Mississippi Conference, like myself, feel a deep personal loss in the going of this great Christian layman. W. M. YOUNG.

Leland, Miss.

NOTES ON FRENCH MISSION DISTRICT CONFERENCE FOR 1921.

On the afternoon of May 6, the District Conference of the French Mission District was opened by Presiding Elder Martin Hebert in the historic town of St. Martinsville, where is located the "real" Evangeline oak. This point is of especial interest to Southern Methodists, because our own Richmond Nolly preached here.

The opening session found all the preachers of the district in attendance, with strong lay delegations from all the charges except one, and with one charge showing a full delegation. And more than this, every preacher and every delegate remained until the close of the last session on Sunday night, the 8th.

The reports from the pastors showed a most gratifying zeal and energy in re-opening for service church buildings that had been abandoned, seven having been this year reclaimed, with the opening of work at nine points where buildings should be erected.

Several new Sunday schools have been opened, and there were reported fourteen active schools, with a total enrollment of over six hundred, as against a total Sunday school attendance twelve years ago of twenty-five. There were reported four more points ripe for Sunday schools, only lacking workers and funds to man them.

Brother T. L. Bryson, formerly a member of the Louisiana Conference, was a candidate for readmission, and his application was unanimously endorsed; while Brother C. W. Lahey was endorsed as a candidate for admission with Deacon's Orders.

Recommendation was endorsed for renewal of license for the following candidates: K. F. Martin, E. V. Duplantis, J. A. Knight, Edgar Duffrene.

At the preaching services we were privileged to hear Brothers T. L. Bryson, F. J. McCoy, A. S. Lutz, and Alonzo Early, while our brother laymen, J. H. Thatcher and R. T. Moore, made stirring addresses on the Educational Campaign, creating hearty responses in the hearts of their hearers, who are now ready to take hold of that movement with energy and vim. We were indeed glad to have these visiting preachers and laymen in our conference.

On Saturday afternoon, Mrs. E. J. Shaw, District Auxiliary Secretary, conducted a meeting for the women's work, urging the women of the district to greater activity in the work of the missionary societies.

The following delegates were elected to attend the Annual Conference in November: Mr. H. C. Duplantis, Mr. J. H. Thatcher, Dr. R. S. Joseph, Mrs. E. J. Shaw, Mr. R. P. Duplantis, Mr. B. E. Reed, Mrs. J. J. Burdin, Mrs. L. M. White.

Owing to our presiding elder's well-planned program and tactful conduct of business, and the hearty co-operation of the delegates, the conference moved, with verve and interest from start to finish.

We were so splendidly entertained by Pastor A. J. Martin and all St. Martinsville that a strong vote was cast to return there next year; but Houma won out by the small margin of one vote.

LAURA M. WHITE, Secretary.

NEWTON DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Newton District Conference convened in the beautiful and commodious Methodist church at Philadelphia, Miss., at 9 a. m., May 4, 1921. Devotional exercises were conducted by the presiding elder, Rev. J. A. Moore, who made some strong and timely remarks concerning the great issues now confronting the church. The roll call revealed the fact that every pastor was present except one, Brother G. L. McNeese, who was kept away on account of illness in the home. There was a good delegation of laymen present. Rev. J. W. Price deserves special mention in that he had 11 delegates present besides himself from the Walnut Grove charge.

O. S. Lewis was elected secretary and J. W. Chisholm was made assistant. A very happy address of welcome was made by Hon. H. L. Austin in behalf of the good people of Philadelphia. The preachers and delegates were all made to feel perfectly at home and all received royal entertainment. The Philadelphia church really enjoys entertaining a district conference. The pastor, Rev. J. S. Purcell, is doing a great work, ably assisted by his faithful wife. Her many friends will be glad to know that her health is entirely recovered.

The various committees were appointed and every item of business carefully considered. Reports from the charges were all encouraging, and showed substantial growth in all departments of the church. Being the most rural district in the Conference, the revival season is usually late in the summer, so very few revivals have yet been held, but plans are being made for great revivals. Every pastor is carrying out the Educational program as far as practicable for his charge.

Our Conference Educational Secretary, Rev. J. M. Morse, was present and made a stirring address on the great Educational Campaign. He sounded a note of optimism that was encouraging to all.

Prof. G. L. Harrell, of Millsaps College, ably represented that institution, and proved to be a good salesman for Millsaps College. He also represented the Laymen's Movement and Minute Men of the Centenary Movement. We do not know of a graduate of Millsaps who has more and greater responsibilities, nor so many varied interests to look after. He is the Lay Leader of the Mississippi Conference, Chairman of the Minute Men for the Centenary Movement, Traveling Salesman for Millsaps College, Professor of Science in Millsaps College, has charge of the James Observatory, and in between times he makes observations of other worlds, all the time looking for new worlds to conquer. He is an alumnus of Millsaps College, being one of the "Nine of Ninety-Nine." Hurrah for Harrell!

Brother C. E. Knight, of Nashville, Tenn., was present and on Wednesday night, after a sermon by the writer, showed three reels of moving pictures setting forth in a most forceful way the great needs and aims of the Educational Campaign.

Mrs. W. L. Hunter, Secretary of the Woman's Missionary Society for the Newton District, made a thrilling address, giving special emphasis to the need of organizing the Young People and Children's Auxiliaries. Her district showed the largest number of new societies organized the past year.

R. M. Gibson was granted license to preach. The Committee on Admissions announced that no one was before them. This is in striking contrast to the situation a few years ago, when the Newton District led all the districts in applicants for admission. W. J. Stokes was recommended for local deacon's orders.

The following lay delegates to the Annual Conference were elected: Mrs. J. E. Oakey, W. A. Davenport, G. W. Mars, W. H. Jones, H. H. Little, Mrs. J. F. McCauley, P. L. Blackwell, O. S. Hopkins. The alternates are: Dr. W. H. Mars, W. D. Crout, W. J. Stokes and Mrs. J. B. Moore.

W. D. Hawkins was present on Thursday and represented both the interests of the Centenary and the Epworth League. He is another busy layman, doing a great work for the Centenary, and is second to no man in Southern Methodism in looking after the young people. He urged a big representation at the Epworth League Conference in Hattiesburg in June.

In the absence of Rev. B. F. Lewis, kept away on account of illness, a resolution pledging sympathy and support to the Orphans' Home was adopted.

A very fine Sunday School Institute was held the day before the conference, conducted by our efficient Field Secretary, J. C. Chambers. Rev. J. W. Chisholm preached a very fine sermon on Tuesday night before Conference.

The Ad Interim Licensing Committee is composed of B. F. Jones, R. E. Rutledge, J. M. Smith and W. W. Hopper. Forest was selected as the next meeting place in 1922. Resolutions of thanks for the cordial hospitality afforded by Brother Purcell and his people were enthusiastically adopted.

The presiding elder, Rev. J. A. Moore, gave expression to his appreciation of the brethren of the district. Again reminding us of the momentous issues confronting the church, he made a plea for faith and courage in order to reach a full realization of the great objectives of the church.

Rev. W. W. Hopper prayed the closing prayer and the conference adjourned. The brethren were unanimous in declaring this conference to be one of the most harmonious and inspiring they ever attended.

IS OUR PUBLIC SCHOOL SYSTEM A FAILURE?

By Rev. John W. Ramsey.

As little as some people may think of it, the question contained in the caption of this article is a vital one and needs serious consideration at this time because all the nations of the earth are confronting the most critical problems, such as have never before arisen in the history of the world's progress toward a higher civilization. Crime waves are sweeping over the country and the spirit of lawlessness, as represented in anarchy and Bolshevism, is threatening the destruction of the foundations of civilization. As I see it, the church and the school are the only factors which can furnish a solution for the world's pressing problems and save our present civilization from its impending disintegration. The church, of course, is the chief factor, but since the church is the mother of the school the latter should cooperate with the church in an earnest effort to reconstruct the world and redeem it from its moral relaxation. Since this article is concerned, as indicated in the caption, with the part the school should take in the effort to find a solution for the problems of the existing situation, let us come at once to its consideration.

I presume it is generally understood that the basic idea involved in State education, as represented in the public school system, is the production of good citizenship. Hence, to answer the question, Is the public school system a failure? we must know whether its tendencies are toward the production of good citizenship. Now, there are two objects to be accomplished in the ultimate purpose of producing good citizens: First, the banishment of intellectual illiteracy; second, the eradication of moral illiteracy.

First, then, if the public school system is not a failure it should be effectively driving intellectual illiteracy from our midst. Is it doing it? I answer that while it is accomplishing this purpose to some extent, it is very largely a failure in the rural sections and in the smaller towns. The failure in these places is not to be attributed to their excessive ignorance as compared with the cities, but it is because too many young, immature girls, who know little or nothing of modern methods of teaching and who are too inexperienced in life to have any appreciation of the sacred trust committed to their hands, are being employed as teachers in these schools.

Secondly, if the public school system is not a failure, it should be engaged diligently and persistently in the elimination of moral illiteracy. This nation is being swept by wave after wave of shameless crime as a result of moral illiteracy. A few months ago the whole nation was startled by an explosion in the heart of New York city resulting in the destruction of property and the death of many people. The question, Who threw the bomb? was on every tongue. It was the outcropping of materialism, anarchy, and atheism. This spirit is now blasting at the foundations of society. Its roots are running deep, not in intellectual ignorance, as some would have the world to believe, but in the soil of moral illiteracy. The remedy for ignorance is knowledge, but the only remedy for moral depravity is religious teaching. The school, next to the church, should be the greatest agency in the inculcation of moral principles, but, unfortunately, it is not. The childhood of America learns little or nothing about God and right living in the school room, and religious illiteracy is to-day a national menace. There are twenty-seven millions of Protestant children and young people in America who receive no religious training. This means spiritual and moral bankruptcy eventually. Here is the field already white unto the harvest for the public school. Public school teachers, some of them, are enthusiastically teaching patriotism; let them teach the principles of Christianity by precept and example and patriotism will take care of itself. It may take some teachers a long while to learn the truth that true patriotism cannot exist in the heart in which the principles of religion have not found a permanent place. Pilate said to Jesus Christ, "What is truth?" Some teachers need to have that question answered for them that they may get a clearer vision of the field of truth in its relation to the sacred task of training childhood.

Christian education is the only complete education. It will take Germany a century to live down the effects of a system of education minus the Christian element. Germany has demonstrated the truth that what you want in the life of the nation you must first put into your schools. Shall the annals of American history have to have its pages stained with crime and blood in order to convince men of the truth that intellectual training imparted to her citizenship without the inculcation of religious principles and Christian ideals is worse than no education at all? Do not our school teachers and school trustees know that to educate a child's head without at the same time educating his heart is more dangerous than putting a gun in the hands of a savage, instructing him how to use it, and then failing to teach him that it is wrong to commit murder?

In view of the facts herein stated, I have to say that the only salvation of our State system of education, especially that of the public school, is to be found in the Christian characters of the teachers, and I am glad to believe that the majority of public school teachers are Christian men and women. However, some of them are godless professors and frivolous, dancing school ma'ams, and their number is increasing. Hence, the time has come when the men who compose the school board of trustees must see to it that no man or woman goes into the school room who does not know God. Further, I challenge the moral right of any set of men, called trustees, to insist upon a community a skeptical professor or a dancing school ma'am in opposition to the sentiment of Christian people, even though they be in minority. Minorities have rights as well as majorities, and these rights should be respected. Leaving out of the discussion, for a moment, the moral issue involved in the question, I affirm that a teacher who goes to a dance two and three nights in the week is neither mentally nor physically fit for the school room. The school room and the ball room do not go together, and to have a dancing school ma'am teaching children who come from Christian homes is enough to stir the heart of an angel with righteous indignation. The central fact upon which I desire to place all possible emphasis is the truth that the personality of the teacher is the supreme element in any system of education.

If the public school system is failing, it is because it is breaking down at the point of the production of Christian character. A recent survey shows that 60 per cent of the professors and 50 per cent of the advanced students in the great secular colleges deny the existence of God and the immortality of the soul. Hon. Bird S. Coler, of New York, in his book, "Two and Two Make Four," says: "The public schools in this country are not making for righteousness." President Thompson, of the Ohio State University, says: "A boy might become a B. A. or an M. A. in almost any of the best State institutions and be ignorant of the Bible and the fundamental principles of religion." President Kinly, University of Illinois, says: "There is no complete education without religious training, and character cannot be developed without faith in God." Ex-President Wilson says: "Every man who loves his country must wish education shot through at every point with Christian principles." Major General Leonard Wood says: "A constitutional democracy such as ours is dependent for its stability and progress upon the sound education of its citizens. No nation can endure without religion." In view of these quotations from these great men, which could be multiplied indefinitely, our school boards should begin to realize that education at the expense of religion is a dangerous thing. Furthermore, if they believe that Christian education gives stability and progress to civilization, they should inquire more carefully into the Christian characters of all applicants for positions in our public schools.

I have written this article with a profound conviction of the sacredness of the vocation of the school teacher, believing that in this respect it is next to that of the ministry. I honor the faithful school teacher, and may God hasten the time when all of them shall be Christian men and women, guided by a keen appreciation of the stupendous responsibilities and the glorious possibilities of the sacred trust which God has committed into their hands by affording them the wonderful opportunity of training our potential citizenship, thereby largely determining the future destiny of this great nation.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

Dear Brother Carley: North Mississippi Conference is awake to the cause of Christian Education. A host of men and women are preaching the gospel of Christian Education. Presiding elders, pastors, special speakers and Minute Men are covering the territory. Gloom is giving way to optimism. Some of our people are getting restless. A telegram from Greenville District Director to the Conference Director says:

"Merigold over the top with some to spare. First Church over." Good for Merigold!

Others are sending good news. This message just received from Mr. Maris:

"Dear Brother Holder: Our church at Hillsboro, Texas, got impatient two weeks ago and put on the financial canvass for the Christian Education Movement. Their quota was $11,000 and they have raised $21,000 with many names still to canvass. The interesting thing about this is that when the Charge Director was appointed to the position he wired the presiding elder as follows: 'The church is heavily in debt. They have their outstanding obligations to the Centenary pledges. We held our cotton like most other cotton raising sections, and it seems to us that everything has gone to smash. Our Board of Stewards say that it will be useless to try.'

"After the financial canvass he sent this message: 'Needless to say that I am ashamed of that telegram. May the Lord forgive me for lack of faith and vision. At luncheon last Thursday night we pledged $10,000 and last night at the close of a wonderful revival raised our pledges to $21,000 with more to hear from. A praying church made it possible for us to do in two days what we did not believe could be done in two months. God be praised.'

Mr. D. H. Hall, New Albany, gives $5,000. Our county is financially broke, but not the spirit of our people.

The South's Unfinished Job

THE World's Almanac reports that in large gifts of $75,000 and above, Northern colleges and universities received in 1920, $87,464,203, while Southern institutions received only $250,000. Each Harvard, Columbia and Chicago has more wealth than all Southern Methodist schools, colleges and universities put together. The endowment of the colleges and universities of the little state of Massachusetts (1917) is $61,899,255, while the endowment of all colleges and universities of the entire South is $52,597,963. The World's Almanac for 1921 reports that there are fifty-five colleges and universities in the North, each with an endowment of one million or over, and only five such in the South. Of these five one is for colored people and much of the wealth of the five came from Northern philanthropists.

Our Southland can never have an independent, intellectual and spiritual life of its own without great colleges and universities. Our Southern people are supposed to be proud and independent, and yet we are looking to Northern philanthropy to equip and endow our schools and to Northern universities for all higher education of post-graduate type. We do not have a graduate university in the South.

The Christian Education Movement proposes to help remove this disgrace. It is calling upon our people to join in completing the unfinished job of equipping and endowing our Southern colleges and universities.

THE WHOLE TRUTH.

Oh, Katie's doughnuts are the best
That ever you did see!
She says she could not cook at all
Without the help of me.
She mixes dough so smooth and sweet.
Then she will roll, and roll;
But it is not a doughnut yet,
Until I make the hole

And if I make the hole, I say
They're wholly mine, you see!
But Katie cannot take a joke,
And never will agree.
So when they lie all brown and hot
And tempting in the bowl,
She says to me, "You may have one,
But do not eat the whole!"

HOW TULIPS GOT THEIR FRILLS.

One bright spring morning little Fairy Gay sat up in bed and blinked at the sunlight that streamed through a crack under her door. The snow was gone, and the wind was no longer rocking her willow-tree house, where all winter long she had slept, cozy and warm. So she tossed back her quilt of milkweed down and opened her door.

The air was soft, and the grass was green. "I must shake out my summer clothes!" cried Fairy Gay.

Now Fairy Gay loved pretty clothes. She was especially fond of scalloped silk petticoats, which she wore under a robe of cobweb lace. Some of her petticoats were of pale pink, some of white, and some of yellow; but the greater number were of bright red, with splashes of green. They were all very lovely, and Fairy Gay smiled as she brought them out in armfuls and hung them on a cobweb line.

But she had scarcely turned her back when the West Wind played an unkind joke. Puffing out his cheeks, he blew until the clothesline snapped and the bright petticoats, flapping and fluttering, came tumbling down and rolled away over the green bank and out of sight.

"O dear! O dear!" wailed the poor little fairy.

But though she ran and ran she could not overtake her petticoats, and the chase made her so tired that she went back to her willow-tree home and slept a whole month longer.

The next time she wandered out she wore only a plain white petticoat under her cobweb gown. She was looking for honey, but the bees had drained most of the flower cups. Suddenly she saw a green bank covered with beautiful flowers, all red and yellow and pink and white, with gracefully scalloped edges; and they had a wonderfully familiar look.

As she stood gazing at them Mother Nature came along with a basket of seeds on her arm.

"Oh! Oh!" called Fairy Gay. "Some one has stolen my petticoats!"

The old woman put down her basket and looked first at the fairy and then at the flowers.

"My dear little fairy," she said, "I took them. But how was I to know they were your petticoats? I found them blowing over the hill, and the minute I set eyes on them I said to myself, 'Just the thing for springtime flowers' frills!'"

Fairy Gay looked hard at the blossoms.

"You may have them back, of course," said Mother Nature. "But they do so brighten up the hillside! If you want my honest opinion, child, the costume you are wearing becomes you much better than those gay skirts."

Now Fairy Gay was loath to part with her petticoats, but she had a generous heart. Besides, she knew that Mother Nature had excellent taste and that doubtless those colors were indeed too gaudy for a well-bred little fairy. So she said, "Keep them, please."

And that is the way, so they always tell it in fairyland, the tulips got their frills.—Gertrude L. Folts, in The Youth's Companion.

THE HIDDEN NEST.

Cuddledown was a beautiful cat. She had a cold little nose and a warm little tongue and the softest, silkiest fur. When she was cross—and that never happened unless she was teased—she said "Meow!" very sharply and scratched "Meow" too with her sharp little claws. But when she was happy—and that was nearly always—she sang "Purr, purr" in the coziest way, as she cuddled down to sleep. So the children called her Cuddledown.

Now Rob and Jenny were very fond of Cuddledown. If they wanted to romp, she was ready for a game with a ball or a string. How she did run and jump! She could outbounce the ball any time. And no string could twist itself into as many knots as she could make. Besides, she could untwist herself, while the string couldn't. And if Rob and Jenny preferred to curl up on the window-seat with a book, Cuddledown was perfectly happy to curl down between them for a nap.

But of late something had come over Cuddledown. She said "Purr" as prettily as ever, to be sure, and she ate her food with remarkable relish, being careful to wash her paws and her face afterwards and to scrub well behind her ears. Oh, Cuddledown was nothing if not thorough! But when Rob and Jenny spoke to her, she seemed to be thinking about something else. And she was much too busy to play! For hours at a time she disappeared, and no calling through the house or hunting about the grounds could find where she was hidden.

One morning the children were gathering eggs. They visited all the nests and were coming back past the barn, when they saw a hen hop off the ladder that led to the loft. "Do you suppose she's made a nest in the hay?" asked Rob.

"We'd better see," said Jenny.

So the children set down their basket and climbed to the haymow. It was quiet and sweet-smelling there, and through the high windows the light shone dimly. Rob and Jenny crawled over the hay, looking for a nest. And they found it too!

"What's that funny squeaking?" Jenny asked.

"Perhaps it's a mouse," returned Rob.

In My Name

Our Lord took children in his arms, and blessed them. He said: "Whoso shall receive one such little child in my name receiveth me." Those whom Jesus blessed should be sacred to us.

"Jesus advanced in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and men." The physical, intellectual, social, and religious welfare of children should be the first concern of the home, the Church, and the State.

Membership Campaign Leaflets, Visitation Cards, Wall Mottoes, and Leaflets on Evangelism will be furnished free on application. Address Rev. Charles D. Bulla, Corresponding Secretary, 910 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn. General Sunday School Board, Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

The squeaking rose suddenly in a clamor of tiny sounds. And the next minute the children were down on their knees by a cozy hollow filled with four tiny, furry, talkative kittens.

"So that's the secret Cuddledown has been keeping from us," laughed Rob.

"Oh, the cunning, darling things!" cried Jenny.

The babies seemed glad to be found. They allowed themselves to be picked up and admired. They even purred a little inside their wee little throats.

"But I don't see why Cuddledown hid them," said Jenny. "She ought to be proud. I should think she'd want to show them to everybody."

The babies squeaked again excitedly. "There was a soft rustle in the straw, and Cuddledown appeared. She arched her back and rubbed her head against Rob and Jenny and purred so loudly that it was almost like real talking. "Of course I want people to see them," she probably said. "I was waiting till they were old enough. Aren't they beautiful children?"

To make them even more beautiful, she began scrubbing the babies with her pink tongue. It made a pretty rough wash-cloth, but the babies enjoyed it—all but the ears.

"We don't blame you for not wanting to play with an old string," said Rob.

"You must let us help play with your babies," added Jenny.

Cuddledown looked at Rob and Jenny and purred more loudly than ever. "That will be delightful," she seemed to say. "You are right about my babies making beautiful playthings. Come as often as you like."

The playthings didn't say anything. You see, they were busy falling asleep. But they stayed awake long enough to wink at Rob and Jenny. It's fun having your playthings wink at you!

"That's the nicest nest we ever found," said Rob and Jenny.—Abigail Burton, in Presbyterian.

"TIME OUT."

Wise Mothers!

Aunt—"Do you know you are playing with two very naughty boys, Johnny?"

Johnny—"Yes."

Aunt—"You do? I am surprised. Why don't you play with good little boys?"

Johnny—"Because their mothers won't let them."—Exchange.

Desperately Wicked.

A small, henpecked, worried-looking man was about to take an examination for life insurance.

"You don't dissipate, do you?" asked the physician, as he made ready for the tests. "Not a fast flyer or anything of that sort?"

The little man hesitated a moment, looked a bit frightened, then replied in a small, piping voice: "I sometimes chew a little gum."—Houston Post.

His Fears Realized.

An old colored man in an optician's shop gazed in wonder at an extraordinary looking instrument. After a long struggle with his curiosity he was vanquished. Turning to the optician, he asked, "What is it, boss?"

"That is an ophthalmometer," replied the optician, in his gravest manner.

"Shoh!" muttered the old man to himself, as he backed out of the door, his eyes still fastened upon the curious-looking thing on the counter. "Shoh! dat's what I was afeared it was!"—Harper's Magazine.

DIRECTIONS.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate. The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after three or four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise, use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least an inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

THE MEMORIAL HOME

The Memorial Home is an institution located in this city owned by our church and operated under the direction of a Board of Managers composed of representatives of the Louisiana, the Mississippi, and the North Mississippi Conferences. Its mission is to minister to those unfortunate and unhappy girls who become mothers out of wedlock. It is presided over by a matron who is peculiarly adapted to this delicate work by reason of her devout character, her sympathetic nature, her long experience, and her religious activity. Our superintendent of city missions, Rev. W. C. Childress, has immediate oversight of its work.

By the very nature of the case, the work of this institution is done quietly; as a result, its claims upon the church are not felt in proportion to the importance of the work it is doing. The three Annual Conferences mentioned above have officially made provision for its support, and we are writing these lines simply to call attention to the fact that its needs are urgent at this time and to request that its friends do what they can at the earliest practicable time to provide for its necessities.

Any communications concerning the institution and its work will receive prompt attention if addressed to Rev. W. C. Childress, 815 Washington Avenue, New Orleans.

BISHOP McMURRY IN NEW ORLEANS.

Bishop W. F. McMurry is scheduled to be in New Orleans on Friday of this week in the interest of the Christian Education Movement. A great luncheon has been arranged at First Church for the noon hour, at which he will address representatives from all our churches in the city; and on Friday evening he will speak to a group of laymen who are actively interested in securing the full quota of the New Orleans District for this great cause.

In this connection we congratulate the church upon the fact that Dr. Paul H. Saunders has accepted the financial directorship of the district for the campaign. Dr. Saunders is one of the great bankers of this city, a man who has attained nation-wide distinction because of his financial ability. He is an official member of our Rayne Memorial Church, and his active interest in the Christian Education Movement will mean much for its success.

Bishop McMurry will go from New Orleans to Brookhaven, Miss., where he will preach the commencement sermon for Whitworth College on Sunday, May 22.

DEATH OF DR. FRANK M. THOMAS.

When our eyes fell on an Associated Press dispatch last week announcing the tragic death of Dr. Frank M. Thomas, Book Editor and Editor of the Methodist Quarterly Review, we could scarcely believe what we saw. The details given by the dispatch are meager: his body was found hanging to a tree near his home in Bowling Green, Ky., on Monday, May 9.

As is well known, Dr. Thomas had been seriously ill for more than a year. His trouble seemed to be largely nervous, and he was a great sufferer from insomnia. There can be no doubt but that his brilliant mind finally gave way under the ravages of disease and the tragedy of his untimely end followed.

While we did not enjoy an intimate acquaintanceship with Dr. Thomas, we happened to be closely thrown with him on one or two occasions and were strongly drawn to him. He was simple and unaffected in his manner and altogether lovable in his disposition. He was a great student, and his attainments in the field of scholarship had caught the attention of the church long before he was elevated to the position he filled so admirably. As Editor of the Review he was laboring in a congenial field, and he had already achieved distinction for his literary ability.

The church has lost a great and good man, and it will reverently pause to pay tender tribute to his memory as a humble servant of the Master. We will think of him as we knew him in the days of his strength—a man loving and to be loved.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. F. J. McCoy, of Houma, La., paid the Advocate office an appreciated call on Friday of last week.

Rev. W. T. Griffin, Mississippi Conference evangelist, recently assisted Rev. T. J. O'Neil in a good meeting at Rolling Fork, Miss.

Rev. R. G. Lord, of Robinsonville, Miss., writes: "All goes well with us on this work. The good people have made it very pleasant for us."

We acknowledge the receipt of $2 from Mrs. W. W. Paine, Jackson, La., for the China Famine Fund. The amount was promptly turned over to the proper authorities.

Rev. Lastie N. Hoffpauir, our pastor at Amite, La., preached the commencement sermon for the high school at that place on May 8, and he will render a like service for the high school at Chestbreaux on May 22.

A note from the pastor, Rev. H. H. Wallace, informs us that the Pleasant Hill charge, North Mississippi Conference, is making fine progress in spiritual things. The prayer meeting is a great means of grace to the community.

A destructive hail storm struck Naborton, La., Sunday afternoon, May 8, damaging most of the houses in the town. The windows of the Methodist church were badly damaged by the large hailstones. We get this information from Rev. G. D. Purcell, our pastor at that place.

According to an exchange, announcement has been made of the engagement and approaching marriage of Miss Eva Estelle Rhodes, of Shelbyville, Tenn., to Bishop James Atkins. The wedding will take place in June. The Advocate extends all good wishes in advance of the happy event.

Mrs. Laura M. White, in charge of the work of the MacDonell Wesley Community House at Houma, La., an institution of our Board of Missions, was elected secretary of the recent French Mission District Conference, held at Houma. That she filled that important position well, goes without saying.

Bishop M. C. Harris, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, died in Japan on Sunday, May 8, in the seventy-fifth year of his age. He was elected bishop for Japan and Korea in 1904, and had devoted himself to extending the work of his church in that great field ever since. On account of his age, he retired from the administrative duties of his office in 1916.

The College of Bishops has announced the delegates from our church to the Ecumenical Conference, to be held in London, England, within a few months. Among the delegates are the following: W. M. Buie, Jackson, Miss.; Dr. I. W. Cooper, Brookhaven, Miss.; Rev. V. C. Curtis, Greenwood, Miss.; R. M. Weaver, Corinth, Miss.; Dr. S. H. Werlein, Alexandria, La. Among the reserve delegates appears the name of Rev. Briscoe Carter, Minden, La.

A telegram from Rev. Waldo W. Moore, received just before the Advocate went to press, brought the good news that the foundation of the Back Bay Methodist Church has been laid, and that the framing is going up rapidly. Brother Moore is taking great interest in this missionary enterprise, and we congratulate him upon the success that is attending his labors.

Dr. T. E. Sharp, presiding elder of the Memphis District, died suddenly at the Tulane Hotel, in Nashville, Tenn., on the night of May 5. He was in attendance upon the meeting of the Board of Missions, of which he was a member, and was apparently in good health when he retired for the night. He was one of the strong men of the church, and his loss will be keenly felt.

The announcement for the third round of quarterly conferences in the Baton Rouge District, Rev. J. W. Lee, presiding elder, reached us too late for insertion in the Advocate this week. The following are the first dates on the list: Zachary, at Zachary, May 29, a.m.; Ponchatoula, May 29, p.m.; Baker, at Bethel, June 5, a.m.; Istrouma, June 5, p.m. The list will appear in full next week.

The editor of the Advocate had the privilege of preaching the commencement sermon for the Vancleave (Miss.) Consolidated High School on last Sunday. The congregation was large and attentive, and the occasion was altogether delightful to the preacher. He especially enjoyed the hospitality of Rev. and Mrs. J. H. Grice and their two splendid children, Inez and James. Other friends, too, showed highly appreciated favors.

Dr. John A. Rice, of Southern Methodist University, one of our great educational leaders, preached at Rayne Memorial Church, this city, last Sunday morning. His message was an inspiring call to seize the opportunities presented to us in the Christian Education Movement. Dr. Rice is held in high esteem in New Orleans, having served Rayne Memorial as pastor for four years.

Rev. and Mrs. W. T. Griffin, of Summit, Miss., announce the marriage of their daughter, Laura Desoto, to Mr. Israel N. Gorza, on Wednesday evening, May 18, at Holding Institute, Laredo, Texas. Miss Desoto is one of our Orphans' Home girls, who taught in an orphanage, and is now teaching Mexican children in this Institute of the Woman's Board. The groom is an earnest Christian product of our mission on the border.

The Annual Sunday School Meeting of the New Orleans District will be held at Parker Memorial Church next Sunday afternoon, from 3 o'clock to 5 o'clock. An interesting program has been prepared and a large attendance is expected. Rev. Alonzo Early, Louisiana Conference Sunday School Field Secretary, and Miss Caroline Hess, of the Elementary Department, will be present and take part in the meeting.

The Sunday school of First Church, Shreveport, La., is engaged in an attendance contest with the other schools of the church which registered an attendance of at least one thousand on Easter Sunday. Great interest is being manifested in the contest, and diligent effort is being made to increase the enrollment and attendance of this already great school. Mrs. R. H. Wynn is in charge of the Woman's Class—which is a guarantee that it will do its part toward gaining the victory.

Dr. Franklin N. Parker, Dean of the Candler School of Theology, Emory University, Atlanta, Ga., will preach the Commencement sermon at Millsaps College, Jackson, Miss., in the College Chapel, at 11 o'clock, Sunday morning, June 5, and Dr. Fitzgerald S. Parker, General Secretary of the Epworth League, Nashville, Tenn., will deliver the baccalaureate address in the College Chapel on Tuesday morning, June 7, at 11 o'clock. A great treat is in store for those who have the privilege of hearing these distinguished servants of the church.

A telegram from Dr. J. S. Chadwick received just before the Advocate went to press, announced that several places throughout the connection have already "gone over the top" in the amount of subscriptions for the Christian Education Movement. Among the places mentioned are Greenville, S. C.; Mills, Tenn.; Shelbyville, Tenn.; Abingdon, Va.; Highland Park and First Church, Dallas, Texas, went twenty per cent over on the first day. The faculty and students of Hendrix College pledged $15,000, and the girls of Martha Washington College pledged $6,000.

We acknowledge the honor of an invitation to be present at the commencement exercises of the New Iberia (La.) High School, on Friday evening, May 20, received from Miss Iris Fern Hebert, a member of the graduating class. Miss Hebert is the daughter of Rev. Martin Hebert, presiding elder of the French Mission District. Brother Hebert believes in giving his children the best possible educational advantages, and he is a strong supporter of our church schools. His eldest son, Lee Beverly, will receive his degree at Millsaps College in June, another son, Guy K., is also a student at Millsaps and will enter the Sophomore class next September, and his daughter, Miss Vera Mildred, will receive her diploma at Mansfield this year. We imagine Brother Hebert has had a pretty strenuous time in carrying out this rather extensive educational program—but he is making the finest possible investment.

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: Miss Midge C. Stuart, Meridian, Miss., 2; Rev. W. W. Bruner, Victoria, Miss., 2; Rev. R. A SUPERANNUATE AGAIN IN SADNESS.

By Rev. T. W. Adams.

News of the passing away of my friend, Herbert Watkins, reached me at Allison's Wells, where I was seeking health. While not unexpected, yet the news shocked me indeed. My heart was filled with sadness. In a little more than two years death has three times invaded my innermost circle of Conference intimates. Every time sadness increased. First, my dear son; then, my dear old life-long friend, Tom Holloman; and now, my gifted young friend, Herbert Watkins. I think of them by day and by night. I keenly feel the loss of their fellowship here, but their leaving has increased and strengthened the heavenly ties. All three of these choice spirits were with me in district work, and their fellowship and co-operation added to my joy in the service. I'll see them no more here, but bye-and-bye the reunion will come. Thank God for that joyous hope!

When Herbert Watkins brought his young wife to the Meridian Conference in 1893, I took him into the Natchez District and had him appointed to Harriston circuit. Within the bounds of this circuit he was born and reared until he was fourteen years of age. He served the friends of his early boyhood and his many relatives with great satisfaction and success. All welcomed him and made every day of his service a pleasure and joy to him. They all loved him and delighted in giving evidences of it.

When on the Brookhaven District, I brought him to Hazlehurst, and he happily filled a pressing need in that important station, and in four years' service developed it into a very choice charge.

When I was appointed to the Port Gibson District, I found him closing his first year at Jefferson Street, Natchez. His service of four years marked an epoch in the history of that historic church. He was greatly loved by all the people, and his name will be held precious by them in the years to come.

In these three pastoral charges I served as his presiding elder. I spent much time in his hospitable home, and found therein as choice fellowship as one could have. He was a kind and thoughtful host. His love and tenderness for his wife and children were remarkable. Their pleasure and happiness seemed to be the burden of his heart. As a pastor, he was thoughtful and tender to his people in their homes; and while he always preached a gospel of cheer and tender persuasiveness, yet when occasion required he was ready to meet issues and deliver himself without compromise.

In all my service as a presiding elder, I never had a preacher in my district more responsive and trustful of my leadership than he was. His co-operation was helpful to me as his leader. He was intelligent, thoroughly prepared in the schools, and of a working spirit. These made him invaluable as a helper. He loved the church with all of its machinery, and worked diligently to perfect himself in every line of service. I had fondly hoped to see him on some important district, in which service he would have honored himself and blessed the church. But that hope is not to be realized. Good-bye, Herbert! Just for a little while. It won't be long till I join you and Tom Holloman and my precious son in that good world where there will be no parting.

TO THE PRESIDING ELDERS, PASTORS, AND CENTENARY TREASURERS, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Co-Laborers in the Big Task: The Centenary record is on my desk, showing the standing of the various Conferences April 30, 1921; and it shows our Conference to be in the eighth place.

This is a loss within the last two months of from the fifth to the eighth place, and I know this is as distressing to you as it is to me.

I am appealing to you to let's pull together to regain our lost place and climb still higher.

Let's strive to make our collections as large as possible, and remit promptly, so we may go up the ladder for the month of May, rather than down.

Yours for service,

W. D. HAWKINS,

Conference Centenary Treasurer

POINTS FOR PREACHERS.

1. Don't yell it, but tell it.
2. Don't sing it, but say it
3. Better give a psalm than a slam.
4. Deal gently with sleepers. Your train of thought will go over them.
5. A smile is better than a frown, whether the work is up or down.
6. Don't scold or nag, or you'll pack your bag.
7. Christ's work will go better and faster, if you remember you are the servant and he is your Master.—Watchman-Examiner.

Christ showed his greatness by his humility. But few of those who knew him thought of his greatness. He did not separate himself from men. He came with the message of heaven, but he told it in the language of earth. Not one word did he say of the flower of Paradise. He talked of the "lilies of the field" that all his hearers had seen. If a multitude was ever present at such an exhibition of his power, it was a multitude of peasants. Born a peasant and reared a carpenter, he remained to the last in his lowly station, and he showed us that a man may be poor, unlettered, un-honored, and yet be a king and a son of God.—Selected.

We are none of us wise enough or large-hearted enough to see religion in all its possible aspects, and different aspects of it are natural to different temperaments; and to argue contemptuously and acridly about other people's beliefs may reduce your opponents to silence, but cannot possibly convert them; indeed, it can only leave in their minds a deep suspicion of the quality of the faith which shows itself in contempt and disdain.—A. C. Benson.

Obituaries

On December 17, 1920, the spirit of BLUFORD D. GODBOLD was carried away by the death angel to the home of the saved; and on the following Sunday his body was laid to rest by his loved ones and a host of warm and appreciative friends. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. C. W. Grafton, the honored pastor of Union Church, and long-standing friend of the family. Brother J. S. Decell made a very touching talk, and others, with the writer, took part in this service, which was conducted at the home of the deceased. Brother Godbold was born October 8, 1830, near Meadville, in Franklin County, Mississippi, and joined the Methodist Church (Old Wright's Church) when about 17 years old. On Nov. 13, 1856, he was married to Miss Fredonia Gilmer. To them were born ten children, six girls and four boys, and these, as far as the writer knows, have turned their faces toward that heavenly city. Brother Godbold's life was lived doing the will of His Lord as best he could. He was an officer of the church for more than seventy years, and died in harness in Bethel church, Scotland charge. A consistent Christian, a devoted husband, a loving father, and worthy friend was he. He leaves a dear companion of more than sixty years, eight children, and a host of friends to mourn his departure. A Friend.

dren, eight of whom she leaves to mourn her departure. She was buried in Zion Cemetery, December 18, 1920, near Trenton, Miss., Rev. A. M. Broadfoot conducting the funeral service. Sister Howie was a life-long Methodist, a strong supporter of the church, and a devoted Christian. She was a woman of sturdy character and of sterling worth. She commanded the highest respect of all who knew her. Of her life we can say, in the Master's own words, "She was among us as one who served." "She hath done what she could." Back of Sister Howie's bright, smiling countenance was the indwelling Christ, and from His life within emanated the light that shone in her face. Sister Howie was one of those noble "mothers in Israel" who are rearing a noble Christian family. Their devotion to her was touchingly beautiful and they will ever "rise up and call her blessed." Her home was the preacher's home, and she counted nothing too good or too costly for the servants of God. The writer counts it one of the greatest privileges of his life to have been her pastor for five years, and recalls many a profitable and delightful visit to her home where he enjoyed the rarest Christian fellowship and felt always the stronger for the visit. Sister Howie, though ascended to her reward, will live long in the memory of her friends and in the lives of her children, who are striving to follow in the path she led. Praise God for such a function of the gospel as was exemplified in her radiant life! Such exponents of holiness point to the intimacy of heaven and earth, the mystic confluence of divine and human currents into one clear, holy stream of life.

Her former pastor,

T. B. WINSTEAD.

Our church and community have suffered a distinct loss in the death of Sister BERTIE BROWN CURTIS, who died Tuesday evening, April 26, 1921, following a brief illness. Sister Curtis' girlhood was spent in Monroe, La., where she has a host of relatives and friends. She was reared in a Christian home, and united with the Methodist Church in early life. She knew the Methodist Church and loved its doctrines and lived by them. Her marriage to Brother W. W. Curtis was of short duration, but happy indeed. Her home was a delightful place in which to visit. Our hearts are made sad when we witness the going of such a beautiful life, but our mourning is not like one not having hope. I believe she was ready to meet God, and to me that's a great comfort. Sister Curtis' remains were shipped to Monroe, and interment was made in the Faulk Cemetery, the funeral services being conducted by Rev. H. W. Ledbetter, of West Monroe. Sister Curtis left to mourn her departure her husband, mother, two sisters, two brothers, other relatives, and a host of friends. May God's richest blessings, in the form of a Father's love and tender mercy, come into the hearts and minds of these loved ones. Is the prayer of her pastor,

J. M. BOYKIN.

S. EDGAR SHEPARD, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Shepard, was born at Anna, Miss., Walnut Grove Plantation, December 25, 1875, and died March 6, 1921, at Cannonsburg, Miss. He was baptized by Rev. J. Perry Drake at Locust Grove Church. He united with the church early in life. He was married to Miss Katherine Marsh, of Washington, Miss., November 14, 1907. Brother Shepard was perfectly resigned to the Master's will, and after protracted illness he was desirous to go, saying, "There is nothing in my way; pray that I may go now." The church has lost a good man, and the community a useful citizen. He hated to leave his sweet home and loving and devoted wife, but, as he was conscious that God was calling, he felt that he was going to a heavenly home. Sympathy is extended to his bereaved wife and faithful mother, and his brothers and sisters.

FROM STANDARD, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: On the 24th of April we began a meeting at Standard, with Rev. R. A. Bozeman to do the preaching, his wife to play the piano, and Mr. Templeton to lead the singing.

We can truly say that it was the best meeting ever held in Standard.

It was a genuine revival of old-time religion.

There were 17 accessions to the church on profession of faith, with several to follow by certificate as soon as letters can be obtained. This makes a total of 42 accessions since Conference, with one meeting yet to be held.

The Epworth Leagues at Olla and Standard are the largest in the State in comparison with church membership. Our Sunday schools are in a flourishing condition.

The salaries of the pastor and presiding elder are paid on the first of each month.

Good beginnings have been made on several of the objects included in the Conference budget.

How Coca-Cola Resembles Tea

If you could take about one-third of a glass of tea, add two-thirds glass of carbonated water, then remove the tea flavor and add a little lemon juice, phosphoric acid, sugar, caramel and certain flavors in the correct proportion, you would have an almost perfect glass of Coca-Cola.

In fact, Coca-Cola may be fairly described as "a carbonated, flavored counterpart of tea, of approximately one-third the stimulating strength of the average cup of tea."

The following analyses, made and confirmed by the leading chemists throughout America, show the comparative stimulating strength of tea and Coca-Cola stated in terms of the quantity of caffeine contained in each:

Black tea—1 cupful.....	1.54 gr.
(hot) (5 fl. oz.)
Green tea—1 glassful.....	2.02 gr.
(cold) (5 fl. oz., exclusive of ice)
Coca-Cola—1 drink, 8 fl. oz.....	.61 gr.
(prepared with 1 fl. oz. of syrup)

Of all the plants which Nature has provided for man's use and enjoyment, none surpasses tea in its refreshing, wholesome and helpful qualities. This explains its almost universal popularity.

The Coca-Cola Company has issued a booklet giving detailed analysis of its recipe. A copy will be mailed free on request to anyone who is interested. Address:

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT TO SISTER R. V. FULTON.

Whereas God, in his infinite wisdom, has seen best to call from our midst Lillie C. Boyd Fulton, wife of the pastor in charge, and whereas Sister Fulton, by her bright and cheerful Christian disposition, had endeared herself to the members of the Ladies' Aid Society of Farmerville M. E. Church, South, and to all her associates; therefore, be it Resolved, That the members of said society do hereby extend to the bereaved husband and children our heartfelt sympathy in this hour of grief.

Resolved, That, while we feel keenly our loss, we know it is her gain, for our Savior said, "I am the resurrection and the life," and "I go to prepare a place, that where I am there ye may be also."

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread on the records of our society and copies sent to each member of her family, to our local newspaper, and the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Signed: Mrs. W. R. Whitaker, Chairman; Mrs. H. G. Fields, Miss Ellso Guehring.

TO THE MEMORY OF SISTER
LILLIE C. FULTON.

Good-by, dear friend, with your cheerful smile;

We loved you here but a little while; God called you home to the realms above.

Where all is joy, and God is love.

Good-by, dear friend, we miss you here—

Your loving, tender words of cheer; But we know you've gone to the land that's fair,

Where peace abides, and God is there.

Good-by, dear friend; the tie will still bind

Your life to those who are left behind;

To live in Christ is not in vain, And we, too, hope to live again.

So we mourn not for your gain.

But the loss to those who must remain

To do the work God bids us do;

Then we'll come home to God and you

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION—DOES IT PAY?

A young Chinese student by the name of D. G. Cin came to this country seven years ago to prepare for Christian service among his countrymen. He holds the following degrees: A. B. from Wesleyan, B. D. from Drew, and Ph.D. from Columbia. Just before preparing to leave for his native land he wrote to Bishop Keeney, who was about to take up his work in China, as follows: "You will probably recall that a Chinese young man introduced by Dr. Ward came to see you in New York. I was indeed very glad to know that you are going to China to supervise the work and to meet you in this country. After I left New York, I came to this place (Perth Amboy, N. J.) to find work to earn money to return home. Having had so much chemistry in college, I went to the chemical plant to look for a job. I had a long interview with the superintendent, telling him that I had inorganic and organic chemistry, qualitative and quantitative analysis and physical chemistry. He wanted to place me in the research department with a salary of $8,000 a year, on condition that I stay with the company and grow with the business for not less than fifteen years. I well know that my education is not my own. It belongs to God and the church. Finding I had no right to stay in America to make money, I told the superintendent that I had a very important work in China. He smiled, and I took up another job. I hope to earn money enough to go back by October. I may have to stay longer, but I earnestly hope to see you in Foochow Conference."

Now the sequel to all this, as given in the New York Christian Advocate, is told by Bishop Keeney: "Our brother Cin, who had the offer of eight thousand dollars to remain in America, is assigned as Director of Religious Education and Social Service in two districts at thirty dollars a month. He started away happy for his work. He was seized, bound and beaten on the way, but I secured his release last Sunday. * * * I am going to use him to help lift up new standards in a very important part of the Conference about eighty or ninety miles from Foochow."

Does it pay? How this incident thrills us and makes us long to have some stock in those Christian institutions, such as this young Chinese attended, which help in such a vital way to produce the highest Christian character.

In an educational address several years ago, Bishop Candler related this incident: "Years ago I was college president. I attended a certain district conference. There was present a colonel—a sure enough colonel. I was speaking for Emory College. The colonel interrupted me and said: 'My father gave $5,000 to Emory College before the war. I would like to know what has become of it.' That gave me my chance. I said to him, 'I'll tell you what became of it. The trustees were very wise. They made such an investment of that fund that they have it still. It is in such men as L. Q. C. Lamar, Atticus G. Haygood, Young J. Allen, and a host of others who have helped to make this country great and their fellow men strong and happy. What has become of that money which your father invested in Negroes before the war? It is all gone. Emory's five thousand is still ours.' Does it pay? H. H. SMITH.

THE BRAVEST BATTLE.

The bravest battle that was ever fought

Shall I tell you where and when?

On the maps of the world you will find it not—

'Twas fought by the Mothers of Men.

Nay, not with cannon or battle shot,
With sword, or nobler pen;

Nay, not with eloquent word or thought,
From mouths of wonderful men.

But deep in a walled-up woman's heart,

Of woman that would not yield;

But bravely, silently bore her part,
Lo—there is that battlefield.

No marshalling troop, no blivouac song.

No banners to gleam and wave;
But oh—these battles, they last so long.

From babyhood to the grave.

Yet faithful still as a bridge of stars,
She fights in her walled-up town;
Fights on—and on—in the endless wars

Then silent—unseen—goes down.

Oh, ye with banners and battle shot,
And soldiers to shout and praise,
I tell you the kindest victories fought,
Are fought in these silent ways.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Fine reports come from Drew as a result of observing Children's Week. We all have a great deal to look after, but not too much to give some thought to our own children.

Orders for Sunday School Day programs are still coming in. Only a few schools are neglecting to give the children an opportunity to receive the training the day offers.

Every class in the New Albany school is full. The attendance is nearly equal to the church membership. Some of the teachers, in fact most of them, have received training. You can build up the Kingdom of God when you train teachers and leaders.

Would you like to have help in increasing the membership of your school? Ought we not have as many people in attendance upon the school as we have members of the church? In other words, ought we obey the command of our Lord when he said, "Feed my lambs, feed my sheep?" Literature on getting the people and winning them will be supplied for the asking.

Interest in the Educational Campaign is growing where the information has been given sympathetically, constantly, prayerfully. Our people are as true and loyal as any on earth. They are still following their leaders. Every man is leading to the heights or in the brush.

If you have neglected the organization of your classes above the Junior, this is a good time to look after that. Many of our classes are learning how power can be directed through an organized class to accomplish any task. Let every class in the school know about the federation of all the Bible classes to be held in Grenada, June 20. Miss Lucy Foreman, of Nashville, will give instruction to the young people, Mr. E. E. French to the intermediates, and Mrs. Wyatt to the adults.

Class work will begin Monday morning at 8 o'clock at Grenada College—Monday, June 20. If you reach Grenada Monday afternoon, you miss the first two lessons. The time is limited to six days, so it is necessary to put in every hour of every day to do the work. The teachers will be on hand to begin the work of instruction; if any student gets in late, something is lost that cannot be made up.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

The work during the past week has been in district institutes.

Rev. W. C. Owen came to us at Meridian for Sunday. We had a very profitable meeting there, and representatives of the Wesley Bible Classes organized a City-wide Wesley Bible Class Federation. They have officers in each church and appointed the fifth Sunday for their regular meeting. They adopted a program of work for the next meeting: to place a copy of the Standard in each class room, to make their annual report, and for all classes to organize and enroll. This will mean a forward step in many respects. The work at Meridian, I believe, was very profitable and helpful.

Tuesday we held the District Institute at Topisaw. Twenty-two out of twenty-three charges were represented. Sixty-eight delegates were present, and two hundred people were in attendance. The percentage of this district was 95 per cent.

The following officers were elected: V. G. Clifford, Bogue Chitto, Secretary; S. D. McMullin, Brookhaven, Y. P. A. W. B. C.; J. A. Rodgers, McComb City, Int. Sen. W. B. C.; J. E. Carruth, Summit, Teacher training; Z. Z. Linton, Fernwood, Missions; Mrs. J. E. J. Ferguson, Wesson, Elem. Supt.; Mrs. W. T. Denman, McComb, Home Dept.

Wednesday, the Jackson District Institute was held in Brandon, Miss. Twenty-five out of twenty-five charges were represented. Eighty delegates were present and two hundred attended. This district was a 100 per cent district. The following officers were elected:

Mrs. J. W. Marley, Jackson, Secretary; Mrs. D. C. Cox, Braxton, Missions; Mrs. J. C. Turner, Canton, Elementary Supt.; J. A. Lindsey, Brandon, Teacher Training; O. H. Wingfield, Jackson, Y. P. A. W. B. C.; I. H. Sells, Harrisville, Int. Sen. W. B. C.

Thursday, the Vicksburg District Institute was held at Utica, Miss. Twenty-three out of twenty-three charges were represented. Fifty delegates were present, and seventy-five people were in attendance. This district was a 100 per cent district.

The following officers were elected: H. H. Crisler, Port Gibson, Secretary;

Mrs. Z. M. Davis, Vicksburg, Elem. Supt.; J. B. Cain, Oak Ridge, Teacher Training; H. H. Crisler, Jr., Port Gibson, Int. Sen. W. B. C.; Rev. M. K. Miller, Holly Bluff, Y. P. A. W. B. C.; Miss Louise Preston, Vicksburg, Missions.

The district officers are functioning. I think this is evident in the attendance in the district institutes, and I speak to each and every one, asking that they support their officers and help them to do a better piece of work than they have done.

Eighty-eight Sunday schools were reached in this series of institutes.

The Sunday School Day offerings are coming in slowly. I trust that each one will observe the day and send their offering to Mr. Garner M. Lester, Jackson, Miss.

The Conference Standard Training School will be held in Jackson, Miss., June 7-14. Your railroad fare and $10 will meet all expenses. Plan to come!

J. H. Reeves, superintendent of the Norfield Sunday school, reports an increase of 100 per cent in the efficiency of his Sunday school and an organized class of fifty. Hurrah for Norfield!

Mrs. D. C. Cox, Braxton, Miss., reports her school 100 per cent. Fine for Braxton!

The Hattiesburg District Institute will be held at Collins, Miss., Wednesday, May 25.

School Institute in the district conference was a good meeting in that we had a good time talking about our Sunday schools and making reports of the work done. The presiding officer, Rev. K. W. Dodson, was a pleasant and agreeable presiding officer. Strong resolutions commending the Methodist Sunday school work for the Conference was adopted. The following district officers were elected:

District Secretary, E. L. Walker, Jonesboro; Elementary Superintendent, Miss R. Lane, Tallulah; Intermediate-Senior, W. L. Mills, Ruston; Young People and Adult, Mrs. M. E.

SUFFERED SEVEN LONG YEARS

Finally Relieved by taking
Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Ravenswood, W. Va.—"For seven long years I suffered from a female trouble and inflammation so that I was not able to do my housework. I consulted several doctors but none seemed to give me relief. I read in a paper about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound so I decided to try it, and before the first bottle was gone I found great relief so I continued using it until I had taken eight bottles. Now I am very well and can do my own housework. I can gladly recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's medicine to suffering women."—Mrs. BERTHA LIERING, R. F. D., Ravenswood, W. Va.

The ordinary day of most housewives is a ceaseless treadmill of washing, cooking, cleaning, mending, sweeping, dusting and caring for little ones. How much harder the tasks when some derangement of the system causes headaches, backaches, bearing-down pains and nervousness. Every such woman should profit by Mrs. Liering's experience. Remember this, for over forty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been restoring health.

Gilbert, Gilbert; Teacher Training. Mrs. A. B. Holloway, Mer Rouge; Missionary Education, Miss Calhoun, Rayville.

The Houma District now has a district Sunday school organization, and the personnel of the officers is excellent. The officers as elected are as follows:

District Secretary, B. E. Reed, St. Martinsville; Elementary Superintendent, Miss Ella Hooper, Houma; Intermediate-Senior, Mrs. Grace Shoemaker, Port Barre; Young People and Adult, Miss Annette Brunett, Houma; Teacher Training, Mrs. Joe Pullen, Houma; Missionary Education, Mrs. E. J. Shaw, Houma.

The Houma District Conference was full of the Spirit, and Brother Hebert showed himself a good presiding officer. He is much loved by his people.

All the Sunday school workers in the New Orleans District will please make note of the district Sunday school meeting to be held at Parker Memorial Church, Sunday afternoon, May 22. A full delegation from each school is desired. The district Sunday school meeting for the Baton Rouge District will be held at Amite City, Wednesday morning, May 25.

The Mansfield Standard Training School will be held June 15-22, and all students are requested to be present for the morning session on the 15th. The faculty and courses of instruction will be as follows: Bible, Dr. Thomas Carter, Nashville, Tenn.; Pupil, Prof. D. B. Raulins, Shreveport; Intermediate-Senior, Harry Denman, Birmingham, Ala.; Junior, Miss Nell Richardson, Baton Rouge; Primary, Miss Caroline Hess, Alexandria.

Presiding elders, pastors, and Sunday school superintendents are requested to see that suitable persons are enrolled at once with the Field Secretary.

North Mississippi Adult Bible Classes.

Become a charter member of the Wesley Bible Class Federation to be organized at Grenada, Miss., on June 20. To do this you have only to send a representative—let it be your best—to take part in organizing and launching the Federation.

Some class must furnish this new Federation a president. Why not yours?

You are one of the alert, progressive Bible classes of the Conference. Then prove it a second time, by sending a wide-awake delegate to take the "Adult Methods" course offered in the Teacher-Training School at Grenada College, June 19 to 25. One member, if necessary, can represent your class in both these important phases of up-to-date Sunday school work. Have that representation on hand, on time, for full-time attendance. Make your contribution to the common good. Receive and take home a blessing of inspiration and information for more fruitful Christian service.

Yours for the promotion of the Adult Bible Class movement.

MRS. J. M. WYATT.

North Miss. Conference Superintendent of Adult and Y. P. Classes, Shelby, Miss.

THEY STAND ON THEIR RECORD OF SERVICE.

The schools of Southern Methodism have served every interest of Methodism and every enterprise of the Kingdom. And this they have done without the resources needed for their work. For the first time in the history of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, we have undertaken an educational movement of church-wide proportions; we propose to give to each school of the church what its present needs demand.

These schools are before the church on their record of service. They ask only for some small return for their contributions to the church's growth and prosperity. Will we refuse to give what our own institutions ask? If so, we are not worthy of the service they have given through the years.

WHAT THEY ASK.

Just keep in mind the fact that the schools of the church are asking of Southern Methodism three dollars per member a year for a period of five years. It is true that many who are enrolled as members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will not make a contribution to this enterprise, and there are some who will not be able to give the three dollars a year. But if as a church we are not able or willing to give to Christian education the average named, let's surrender our commission and give over our responsibilities to others.

THE SUMMER SCHOOL FOR CITY WORKERS.

Every city worker, every presiding elder on a city district, every one interested in the modern city, should be in Conway, Ark., June 7-17.

Congregations should send their pastors, city boards should send their workers.

This is the first school of this kind we have ever undertaken. Men and women of rare ability have been secured to teach. On to Conway!

TO THE WOMEN'S, YOUNG PEOPLE'S AND CHILDREN'S AUXILIARIES OF GREENWOOD DISTRICT.

The district meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society, Greenwood District, will convene at Tutwiler, Miss., June 2. Morning session will be devoted to the Junior work and afternoon to the Adults.

The "Young People's Rally" will be held at Drew, Miss., June 3.

Interesting programs are being prepared. The auxiliaries at Tutwiler and Drew have assured us of a most cordial welcome and all auxiliaries are urged to send representatives. All superintendents of Young People's Societies are especially urged to attend the Young People's Rally.

In the meantime, let us pray earnestly for the presence and leadership of the Holy Spirit in these meetings.

SPRING DEBILITY

Loss of Appetite, That Tired Feeling and Sometimes Eruptions.

Thousands take Hood's Sarsaparilla as a spring medicine for that tired feeling, nervous weakness, impure blood and say it makes them feel better, eat and sleep better, and "makes food taste good."

Spring debility is a condition in which it is especially hard to combat disease germs, which invade the system here, there and everywhere. The white blood corpuscles, sometimes called "the little soldiers in the blood," because it is their duty to fight disease germs, are too weak to do good service.

Hood's Sarsaparilla strengthens the "little soldiers" and enables them to repel germs of grip, influenza, fevers and other ailments; relieves catarrh and rheumatism. It has given satisfaction to three generations. Get it today, and for a laxative take Hood's Pills.

FROM MRS. J. H. MCCOY'S REPORT

The Christian Education Movement.

The Christian Education Movement which was adopted at the General Conference of 1918 as the program of the church following the Centenary, has a very definite relationship to the work of Home Missions, not only through the departments of life service, Christian stewardship, and intercession, but in the actual listing of five of the educational institutions of the Woman's Missionary Council for financial benefit, aggregating in the total of $425,000. In the interest of this Movement the Secretary has attended eight of the Annual Conferences of the church, as follows: Holston, Western North Carolina, North Mississippi, North Texas, Virginia, South Carolina, Alabama, and North Alabama. At each of these Conferences, in presenting the Movement, its relation to the cause of missions was emphasized. The Secretary has also addressed more than a dozen congregations and other gatherings.—Council Bulletin.

Christian Education Movement.

Dr. Henry Snyder appeared before the Council in behalf of the Christian Education Movement in a telling address. He held the attention of his audience from his first to his closing word. His passionate words, no less than his rare passages of humor, made a profound appeal. The women of the Council were privileged in hearing Dr. Snyder. A few thoughts from his well-sustained and illustrated argument are given the readers of the Bulletin.

"The disturbed conditions of to-day make us think. Men are thinking, as never before, if they have anything to think with. They are thinking out big things. We do not want to stay on the surface of things any more. We are trying to get down to bed-rock foundations. You cannot build on anything to last unless you build on the Rock of Ages.

"This old world has been mighty homesick and is coming home, back to the church. The aisles of the churches are crowded. It is not so much who is doing the preaching—it is answering the hunger of the heart.

"We hear very often that our church was born in a revival. I want to tell you that while this is true, if it ever dies it will die by the embers of a dead revival. We cannot change things to-day with evangelistic efforts—and this is not said to discredit them. We want to put into our educative processes more religion and more and better educative processes into our religion. A man who has reached mature years said of the Christian Education Movement: 'I am in this thing for my grandchildren. I don't want their eyes to see what mine have.'

"Somehow it must be of God in order to meet conditions. Men are saying that somehow, in this gray and haggard hour, the call of God is in it. Sometimes it seems that the tides of the Spirit that once flowed in on us are stale and stagnant. But the hopeful sign is that they are fluid, not fixed. No hour can be too black to command God's power to do anything He calls us to do.

"The youth of the world saved the world yesterday. We asked them to save a tottering world they did not make. The call of your church to-day is that you shall make possible a Christian Education that will make a better world."

COUNCIL MEETING AT RICHMOND, VA., APRIL 13-20.

Snapshots From The Floor.

Bishop Moore, recently returned from Brazil, said that four years ago, the Council had twenty-six women missionaries in Brazil; to-day there are only fourteen, among 10,500 communicants.

Bishop Lambuth said there are 35,000 women employed in the mines of Japan; 200,000 work in the mills—many of whom are taken off the farms.

Bishop Lambuth also said that the Chinese women are the most moral of all the pagan women, very industrious and capable of almost anything. The medical and health center at West Gate, a union institution, should by all means be enlarged and the work extended, as there is opportunity to reach at least one hundred thousand Chinese women and train them for work among their own peoples.

The new Wesley House in San Francisco has become a reality, at a cost of one hundred thousand dollars. This new work will have an opportunity to reach a community of more than one hundred thousand people. There are only one hundred and twenty Protestant churches in all of San Francisco, the average congregation being forty persons.

The Roman Catholic Church selected two cities in the United States as their strongholds, Baltimore and New Orleans. In the latter city of 400,000 people, there are about thirty thousand Protestants. The Roman Catholics have an educated leadership but an ignorant following.

Miss Claiborne, from McTyre School in Shanghai, said with great emphasis: "Shanghai has one million people, representing every nation of the earth. Its people are crowding into the schools, and for more than twenty years, McTyre has had no room for all the students wishing to enter. Ambassadors from some of the great countries of the world have married the girls from McTyre. A volunteer band in McTyre supports and staffs a school in the Unang province, with a population of thirty thousand."

Miss Lochle Rankin, with her experience of forty-three years in China, said of her district, "We need everything."

Miss Ruth Brittain, of the Bible School in Nanking, said their work is training the natives in a knowledge of the Bible, and graduates from other schools come to take intensive courses of Bible study. One native teacher had been the means of leading sixty souls to Christ, and the large number of volunteers come through the native Christians who were trained in Nanking Bible School.

Miss Bennett made the astounding statement that the Methodist Episcopal Church has two thousand deaconesses, five hundred of whom are serving in Europe. The Southern Methodist Church has only fifty-five deaconesses for appointment this year. Miss Bennett urged the women to speak out through their Conferences, through the schools and colleges, to the young people on Life Eminent.

The missionary should have salary sufficient so that she shall feel a freedom of the pocket-book beyond living expenses.

"I'd like to have some books and a victrola," said Miss Gist.

"Somehow I don't feel comfortable to sit down to these delicious luncheons when 15,000,000 starve in China."—Miss Davies.

"Eighty-six out of ninety-nine Scarlett girls meet the standards for mission work, the best record in any Missionary Training School."—Dr. Cook.

"I haven't heard a word about hard times here."—Dr. Snyder.

"What the South will be to-morrow depends upon what the Southern Methodists and Southern Baptists make it, due to their numbers."—Dr. Snyder.

"Folks can't get away from us when we are true to Methodist organizations."—Dr. Snyder.

"Courtesy in advance of slaughter." Apropos of what?

The conference ranking in its gifts per capita is the South Georgia, $8.55.

MOTHERS' DAY AT GREENVILLE, MISS.

Mothers' Day in Greenville was strictly in the hands of the Big Brothers. They had 1-5 men present and raised over $1000 to build them a home. Their tent is too small. They had charge of the 11 o'clock service, and it was a service never-to-be-forgotten. Seven grown people joined the church at the conclusion of the service. At the evening hour the Epworth League presented a missionary pageant to a great congregation. It was indeed a red letter day for Methodism.

ON TO CONWAY.

The two great schools, one for urban and the other for rural workers, to be held in Conway, Arkansas, June 7-17, offers most unusual advantages. No other summer schools, institutes, or standard training schools have ever been undertaken on such a scale, nor was there ever a more carefully prepared course of study offered. The Home Department of the Board of Missions is sparing no time, labor or expense to bring to rural and urban workers the best helps that this continent affords. Churches are urged to provide the traveling and boarding expenses of their pastors. Presiding elders can often get this done. Laymen and women who are able to send their pastors are requested to make this small investment for increased efficiency in their pastors. Some Conference Boards of Missions are planning to help some of their worth-while missionaries to get to these schools. Meet us in Conway, June 7-17.

Do you want more money than you ever possessed? If so, learn to make nut and fruit bonbons—the business will net you $90.00 to $300.00 per month. You can work from your own home; all who sample your bonbons become regular customers. You start by investing less than $10.00 for supplies. Mary Elizabeth started her candy kitchen with $5.00, and has made a fortune. Cannot you do likewise? I will tell you all about the business and help you start, so you can become independent. Now is the psychological time to make big money, as sugar is cheaper and fine bonbons command phenomenal prices. Write to-day. Isabelle Inez, 344 Morewood Building, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Epworth League.

A LIVE LEAGUE AT FRANKLIN-TON, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: A splendid League rally was held here on the 23d and 24th of April. The Leaguers from Fisher joined the Franklinton Leaguers at every meeting. The first service was held on the evening of the 23d, at the parsonage. This was in the form of a social. A part of the evening, however, was spent in planning and talking over the League work for the new year.

Brother Jas. B. Grambling, our Louisiana Conference Epworth League President and Field Worker, was with us. He gave a very interesting talk on the Epworth League in a business sense, standards, etc. Brother Grambling spoke to the church at large on Sunday at the morning service hour. Then again in the evening at the League hour he gave a lecture, with the pictures, "The Young People's Work." There was a splendid attendance at all meetings, and altogether I think, we had a very successful meeting.

Our pastor, Brother L. W. Cain, is thoroughly a young people's man, and we are expecting big things through our League in the new League year. We are hoping to send a number of delegates to our State Assembly at Mansfield, June 7-14.

VANDA BURRIS, Sec'y.

ALL ABOARD FOR MANSFIELD!

Epworth Leaguers from the Southern portion of Louisiana are invited to meet Monday, June 6, at 7 p.m., with the New Orleans District Leaguers in the Texas and Pacific station. A special Pullman has been provided. Be sure to secure reservations in advance. Come prepared for a jolly good time with the "Jiggs Family." ROBINA VAUGHT, District Corresponding Sec'y.

MEDICAL WORK IN AFRICA.

Upon returning from America, I took charge of the medical work definitely on Nov. 15, succeeding Miss Kathron Wilson, who has carried on the work of this department since Feb., 1918. The most prominent feature of this department, as it appeared to me just arrived from the homeland, was the careful work that had been done in the past two and a half years by Miss Wilson and those of the missionaries who had had time and ability to assist her. The best criterion of her splendid success as a missionary was the strong hold she had upon the hearts of the people whom she had served while she was here and the great regret that they displayed when she left in December for a rest in America. The department is well equipped in drugs with the exception of three or four essentials, which, however, are ordered and should be here within three or four months.

Surgical appliances are, in general, sufficient for the work to be done, though we are in need of better means of sterilizing instruments and dressings. The completion of a building for sterilizing these necessities will overcome this handicap and enable the department to do better work the next quarter. This building has been erected by the Industrial Department and will be occupied some time in January of the coming year. We are greatly in need of buildings for the care of sleeping sickness, leprosy and other patients who should not be kept with the usual occupants of a hospital. As to the location of a lazaret for these people, it is difficult to speak conclusively. The region close to the Mission is not very suitable, especially for the sleeping sickness patients, as the forests are rather close and streams abound, suitable harbors for the transmitting tsetse fly. The difficulty, however, must be met somehow or other, and these unfortunate victims given all the care that is possible. Many of them who will come to us or will be brought to us cannot be helped as to curing, but they can be taken away from people who oftentimes do not treat them with consideration, and they can be watched so as not to become a menace to their healthy neighbors.—D. L. Mumpower, in Centenary Bulletin.

HILLSBORO, TEXAS, SAYS IT CAN BE DONE.

Hillsboro, Texas, is in the black land cotton district of the Southwest, and, like all the towns of the cotton country, "hard hit" by reason of low prices of farm products and the general depression in business. Some six weeks ago a leading member of the board of stewards of our First Church, Hillsboro, introduced a resolution at a meeting of the board declaring that it would be utterly impossible for the church, with a heavy indebtedness on its property and with practically its entire membership having lost heavily during the financial depression, to accept any quota in the Christian Education Movement. It was generally agreed that it was useless to try to carry through the program of the Movement.

But on April 11 this church reported $21,000 pledged on a quota of $14,000. How was it done? A real revival came to Hillsboro, the pastor, Rev. J. W. Fort, having with him in the meeting Dr. C. C. Sealeman, of First Church, Dallas. While the meeting was in progress the pastor and Dr. Sealeman placed before a group of thirty laymen the proposition that First Church, Hillsboro, make an effort to reach its quota in the Christian Education Movement. These laymen made pledges totaling $10,500. Two days later the matter was presented to the entire congregation, and the subscription was carried to $21,000, much of this being in cash and Liberty Bonds. And there is more to follow.

The layman who served as charge financial director wired his presiding elder some months ago: "The campaign is a tremendous mistake, and one that the business laymen of the church, from whom the most of the money must come, will not at this time endorse." On April 16 he wired: "Needless to say I am ashamed of that telegram. May the good Lord forgive me for my lack of vision and faith. * * * A praying church made it possible to do in two days what we did not believe we could do in two months."

The example of First Church, Hillsboro, should inspire every discouraged and doubting pastor and layman to go forward to victory. It can be done if only we give ourselves to the task.

THE CHURCH AND LEISURE TIME ACTIVITIES.

Should the church take an active and intelligent interest in the leisure occupations of its members?

"In the high school years," says Dr. John E. Stout, "the spirit of play is still dominant and must be recognized in any system of education that is comprehensive enough to care for the whole ongoing of youth."

We face the fact that great moral issues are involved growing out of the way boys and girls are taught to use their leisure time. Play activities are not confined to the period of childhood but are carried over into adulthood. The lessons learned during the formative years when character is being moulded through certain kinds of activities tend to affect the whole of life.

The future of our country depends to a great extent upon the way youth spends its leisure.

A discussion of this most important subject will not be undertaken at this time, but attention is called to the fact that a movement is now on foot of unusual significance and interest to the churches.

The Joint Educational Commission of the Sunday School Council and the International Sunday School Association, at its meeting at Buffalo, April 28, 1921, authorized a Commission to prepare a comprehensive program for adolescent boys and girls to be used primarily by the churches. This Committee on Character Tests and Programs will endeavor to provide a well balanced program of recreational activities to meet the physical, mental, social and religious needs of boys and girls from the standpoint of the church. The Commission is now at work organizing material and outlining the programs for the various age groups. Dr. Norman E. Richardson, of Northwestern University, is chairman and the Commission will be in session for six weeks at Northwestern University, Evanston, Illinois. Rev. E. R. Stanford, Superintendent of Intermediate-Senior Work, has been invited to sit with the Commission as a representative of the General Sunday School Board. He is now at Northwestern and will work with the Commission until June 1.

WHAT SOME FAMOUS EDUCATORS SAY

GEORGE A. COE

The Christian Education Movement deserves and will have the united support of the great Methodist Episcopal Church, South. In the last analysis the progress of the Kingdom depends absolutely on the education of the people. Jesus of Nazareth was not an orator, not a preacher, in our sense of the word, but a teacher, who gathered around Him little groups of men and trained them to think as He thought, to see the world through His own eyes, and to absorb His life purpose. Christian Schools are pursuing the very methods He employed in Palestine. On their equipment and success the future of the Kingdom absolutely depends.

W. H. P. FAUNCE

President of Brown University

It gives me pleasure to express my appreciation of the Christian Education Movement. Not only is Christian Education one of the first essentials in a program for Christianizing America and the world, and not only is this part of the Church's duty most seriously neglected, but the success of the campaign will put into operation some of the most statesmanlike and far-seeing denominational policies that have come to my attention. I refer particularly to the linking together of all the educational agencies, from Sunday school to theological seminary, in the definite and continuous task of providing trained workers, lay and clerical, for the entire Church.

GEORGE A. COE

Professor of Religious Education in Columbia University

I think it is practically impossible to exaggerate the importance of a forward movement on the part of our Churches for Christian Education. Very much larger resources are needed for our privately maintained schools and colleges, if our Christian young people are to get the education they ought to have in these critical times. I believe most thoroughly, therefore, in the Christian Education Movement of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and trust that it may prove a triumphant success.

HENRY CHURCHILL KING

President of Oberlin College

I am very glad to again express my very emphatic approval of the great work which you have begun in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in the interest of education. There is no more important work which can possibly engage your interest and efforts at this time. You will be doing a great service, not only to your Church, but through your Church to the country and the world.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

COURAGE AND FAITH.

This is the last issue of the Advocate before the financial campaign for the Christian Education Movement begins next Sunday. As we face the momentous issue of providing adequate resources for our educational institutions, too much is at stake for us to undertake the work faint-heartedly and in doubt. If there ever was a cause that deserved the support of all our people, this one does, and we ought to present it without apology and in the strongest way possible. We here and now have the opportunity of making a permanent contribution to the Christian civilization of the world—and we must not refuse to make it. If we go at the work with courage enough to appeal confidently to every member in every church, and with supreme faith in the righteousness of the cause and in the ability and willingness of our people to meet an urgent need that has been made so plain, victory is assured. Courage and faith—let these be our watchwords as we enter the final stage in this greatest movement in the history of the church!

WILL METHODISTS DO AS WELL?

The Baptists of the cities contributed more than fifteen per cent of the total amount pledged during the "$75,000,000 Campaign" of their church. This estimate is based on reports from eight cities which together furnished approximately $6,500,000, or about seven per cent of the total amount pledged. Twenty or more cities not named in the following list doubtless pledged more than the eight here named: Richmond, $1,665,797; Atlanta, $1,341,518; Memphis, $995,488; Louisville, $980,088; Birmingham, $672,015; Nashville, $123,710; Little Rock, $326,000; Oklahoma City, $192,211. Will Methodists of the cities of the South accept the challenge of the city Baptists? Of course they can claim credit on their "quota" Centenary pledges, and after giving themselves credit for that amount see what amount is needed to reach the Baptist figures. If they cannot reach those figures, they can stand aside and let the people who can do big things have a clear field for their activities.

WHAT A CHANCE!

Southern Methodism faces now the biggest opportunity that has come to her during the present generation, if not during all her history. It is the opportunity to do a hard thing, to carry through an enterprise that will draw on the reserve strength and resources of the church. It calls for courage, faith, consecration. And if we have not these reserve resources, what is the use of living anyhow? What right have we to live? God has given us a wonderful opportunity in the coming of the every-member canvass at a time when it will really cost us something to reach the financial objective and go on beyond the $33,000,000. And what are we in the world for except to do hard tasks, to carry through enterprises that seem impossible? With such a chance as this, let us thank God as we go forth to victory.

THE BUSINESS OF EVERY METHODIST.

The carrying through of the Christian Education Movement program rests now, as from the beginning, with the Methodist people in the home churches. The bishops and connectional officers, the field workers, the church papers, the Conference secretaries, the presiding elders and pastors, the leaders among the laymen—all these have had

A MESSAGE FROM BISHOP McMURRY.

I am closing my work in Louisiana and Mississippi in the interest of the Christian Education Movement. I sincerely regret the impossibility of answering all calls. The interest in the Movement has steadily increased from the beginning. Many assurances of full success are being received from the preachers and laymen. I know of no preacher who has been faithful and diligent in carrying out the program, who is expecting to fail. We must not fail. With this task fully accomplished, there is a better day at hand for our church in Louisiana and Mississippi. I appeal with all earnestness to preachers and laymen for a supreme effort in these closing days of the Campaign.

W. F. McMURRY.

New Orleans, La., May 21, 1921.

places of responsibility and have helped to carry through the cultural program. But they have understood that, after all, the success of the enterprise, the future of the church, was in the hands of the men, women and children in our churches. It rests with them whether their church go forward. In view of this fact, can any Methodist refuse to have a share in the giving of the $33,000,000?

BY THIS YOU WILL BE JUDGED.

The Centenary Campaign was an undertaking worth while, and in the good record made all rejoice. Some of our churches and some of our Methodist people went to their limit in giving to this enterprise, but for the church as a whole this surplus giving did not in 1919 represent a tithe of its increased income. By our going to the Christian Education Movement, more than to any other enterprise until now, will we be judged. More than the future of our schools is to be determined within the next few days. What will be the record of your church? What will be your own record?

IS IT THE LORD'S PROGRAM?

The Christian Education Movement has made a contribution worth while to the life of the church and to the building of the kingdom. Its emphasis, first of all, was on prayer and the reading of the Word, and there are today many thousands of Methodists who are stronger in faith and more efficient in service because they have answered the call of God, through the Christian Education Movement, to daily prayer, Bible reading, and family prayer. The Movement has sounded the call for Christian life service volunteers, and more than four thousand of our choicest young men and women have answered the call of God. The stewardship of money has been emphasized, and there are additional thousands who have signed the tithing covenant. It is plain that God has led us until now, and his blessings have been upon our efforts. Do we question whether it is his will that we carry through the program of the Christian Education Movement? And if it is his will, can we stop short of the goal and hold what we have gained in the following of his leadership until now?

WORK THE PLAN.

Again we appeal to pastors and all who will have part in the activities of the local church during the every-member canvass to follow the suggestions and directions of the Method Book. It is the church's plan, and the time for amendments and changes is gone. If we give it a fair trial, follow it to the letter, then fail, the fault is not ours. If we turn to some other plan and fail, as the chances are we shall fail, then the failure is our responsibility. And it is a responsibility no man can afford to carry.

THE COUNTRY HAS MOST AT STAKE.

Nearly seventy per cent of the student enrollment in our Methodist schools is from the rural districts. The church, therefore, have more at stake in the Christian Education Movement than have the city churches, and, since they have received more from the church schools, their obligations are the greater. Methodists of the rural districts and of the small towns cannot, with these facts before them, declare that it is the obligation of the city churches to take care of the Christian Education Movement.

AN ADDRESS.

We, the Bishops, assembled in Annual Meeting in Louisville, Kentucky, acknowledge the courtesy of an official communication from Rev. E. B. Chappell, D.D., General Secretary of the Sunday School Board; and as a means of expressing our appreciation and endorsement of the long and monumentally successful service which Dr. Chappell has rendered as the director of our Sunday school interests, and for the purpose of calling the general attention of the church to this service, and to the most excellent results obtained through it, send this address to our people through the medium of the church press.

The Christian nurture and training of our children and youth we accept as the first and greatest obligation imposed by the Master in His commission to the early disciples. That this should be planned for and carried out with the strictest regard to the demands of the truth and needs of the mind and soul life of Christian youthhood is a doctrine which we also cordially accept and approve. It is to us an occasion for joy and renewal of confidence for the future that these considerations have so long and so constantly influenced the activities of our Sunday School Department; so that there has been developed through the wise direction of our own Sunday school leaders a well approved method and order of teaching, and a corresponding literature of such excellence and adaptation as to provoke the admiration and secure the recognition of fellow workers in the wider fields of Sunday school effort.

We rejoice greatly to learn that our representatives in this field have insisted on the doctrine of regeneration as the fundamental truth in the Christian nurture and training of our children and youth. We are thus building in strict relation to the pattern given us at the beginning. Our Sunday school workers should always be teaching evangelists, and should be charged that the end of their work is the winning of souls. Beyond expression, we are cheered by the report that the earnest appeal of the Sunday School Department to this standard of testimony and teaching largely accounts for the coming into the membership of the church last year of more than 88,000 young people from the classes of our Sunday schools. This was an increase of more than 32,000 over the past year. The significance of these figures can hardly be expressed in words. And the lively efforts of our Sunday school directors look to the careful training of these multiplying thousands in Christian experience and service. The fruits of this training are evidenced in the increasing numbers of young people to offer themselves for the fields at home and abroad.

We advert more particularly to the literature which is being prepared to meet the enlarged program of teaching in the Sunday school. The periodical publications of the Board naturally have first consideration; and we are pleased to note that the periodicals, both for scholars and teachers, are not only at once interesting in their contents and instructive in their summaries, but that they are purposeful in that they are designed to promote spiritual nurture, to be practical guides in conduct, and to supply general religious information to their readers.

The adaptation to our Sunday school classes of Graded Courses has marked the most distinct and significant advance in modern Sunday school methods. It announces the entrance of the church school into the realm of a true interpretative and educational treatment of those subjects which it is to teach. It lays the whole field of the church's missionary and home activities, its history, its sacraments and its doctrines open to orderly and logical study in the Sunday school, thus bringing our youth in susceptible years into familiar touch with our church's life, faith and administration. The Graded Courses are an expansion of the ideal of the old-time church catechism to the measure of the religious needs of this present time. They are worth the attention of the parents and the Kingdom builders of our Methodism. The Sunday school is basic in church life and vital to the home and commonwealth.

That these constantly enlarging ideals of Sunday school work and teaching should call for heightened standards of efficiency in the Sunday school teacher is but natural and logical; and it gives us satisfaction to note that plans for the training of teachers are now as thoroughly a settled method of our Sunday school work as is the instruction of the young. The standard training school for Sunday school teachers is an approved means of securing efficiency and effectiveness in the instruction of our Sunday school classes of every grade. The ideal of the training school is "the helping of our superintendents and teachers to realize the large and sacred significance of their work and to fit them intellectually and spiritually for the responsibility which it involves." About 70 of these schools have been held during the current year, and a much larger number is in prospect for the coming year. We earnestly exhort Sunday school teachers and workers to take advantage of these sessions so happily provided to their hands.

We have considered with much interest the reference made in this report to the plan of organization followed by the Board in covering the field; to the instructions and rules under which the field secretaries of the Board operate; to the intensive direction of the machinery of the Board to the problems and needs of our missionary work, and to the interdependent relations which have been recognized as subsisting between the home and the Sunday school, and the means for making these relations more intimate and vital. We have only words of commendation for the way in which a special literature relating to missions and the Home Department has been worked out by this Board, and we gratefully acknowledge the value of the use of this literature as seen in the liberality and loyalty of the membership of our Sunday schools everywhere.

The thought of putting the courses of our Sunday schools in usable relation with the courses of our high schools, colleges and universities is significant of the real advance which has been made in Christian pedagogy. The end of the Christian Education Movement is the unifying of our ideals of Christian instruction. The Sunday school is a real vantage from which to begin the realization of this ideal. While we are seeking from the great secular universities recognition of particular Bible courses to be taught by us, might we not ask our own institutions of learning to recognize and credit certain of the higher courses put out by our Sunday School Board? The answer is with ourselves.

As a final emphasis we appeal the matters discussed in this address to the living conscience and spirit-quickened thought of the whole church and entreat our pastors and their associates and helpers in every department of Christian teaching to remember those all but last earthly spoken words of our Lord—"Feed my lambs."

CHURCH LOYALTY.

By Rev. C. E. Fike.

We have heard much during the past years about loyalty to our country, and from the pulpit we have been exhorted to be loyal to Christ. The former entreaty is good, the latter better; but perhaps we have not stressed as we should—church loyalty.

My observation has convinced me that when you find a loyal member of one of our evangelical churches, you usually find a good man or woman. As Methodist people we have been afraid of being called narrow. As preachers, after sermonizing on the great doctrines of our church, we have been too much disposed to apologize.

Personally, I do not think we have anything to be ashamed of. We are one of the youngest, yet the largest, Christian denominations in America. I do not know where to put the blame, but I have found people who have their names on our church registers who take the position that one church is just as good as another. As a consequence of this idea, they will send their children to Presbyterian and Baptist Sunday schools; yet they tell you that they want them to join the Methodist Church. Such people should learn these lines—

"What kind of a church would my church be, If all the members were just like me?"

I have just taken up a little country church at the request of our presiding elder. The Apostolics, Unknown Tongues, Gospel Trumpeters, Baptists, and perhaps others, have been holding services there. The Baptist brethren tried to organize a Sunday school, but failed. They went further and tried to organize a Baptist church in our church building. The people of the community are Methodists, and have been for a generation. The building and grounds belong to the M. E. Church, South.

In view of such conditions, it seems to me that we have shown and talked liberality long enough. We have lost immensely by being unduly liberal. The quicker our people stop running after and supporting all kinds of spasmodic religious organizations and interdenominational programs, the better it will be for us as a church.

It is certain that when we unite with the church, we become an asset or a liability. It is also true that we do not need any more dead weights. We need an aggressive, progressive and loyal church membership. Some mistake the word "progress" to mean breaking away from the organized church, which is the pillar and ground of the truth. Real denominational progress means, not digressing from, but going back to the teachings of our great church.

The church is God's institution. The Methodist Church is a great part of God's church. As Methodist people, we are under obligation to the church that has cared for us and has meant so much to the world. I believe that the Lord is doing his work largely through the organized church. I have absolutely no faith in or patience with religious tramps going through the country denouncing the church. I doubt your finding one good out of a hundred. They won't do to tie to. Two such fellows came to our prayer meeting last year and attempted to berate the church. They held a tabernacle meeting in our town. One was ordered to leave town, and he did so at night. The other had the reputation of separating a man and his wife.

We cannot estimate the possibilities for good of a well organized Sunday school, Epworth League, Woman's Missionary Society, and prayer meeting. If the fathers and mothers of Methodism will be loyal to the vows of their church and bring their children to the preaching services, we will stand a chance to reach them with the Gospel.

It will take loyalty to put over this Educational Campaign. The need is great and our people have the money. Loyalty on the part of the preachers and church membership means success in this great undertaking. Our boys and girls need the atmosphere and ideals of a Christian college. Our fathers and mothers of Methodism need it in saving their children for the church.

I am not a pessimist regarding the future of our church. It is growing and, I believe, will continue to grow. I am thoroughly convinced, however, that we need more church loyalty among the rank and file of our membership. A leading Baptist preacher told me, not long ago, that he stressed church loyalty all the time—in their Sunday school literature, in their church papers, in their prayer meetings, in their preaching services and in their associations they give great emphasis to their church doctrines. It is certain that they are more than holding their own in many sections.

I do not exhort our people to take the Baptists as examples so far as a model Christian is concerned; but if we were like them in being "churchy" we would be better off. They are devoted to their doctrines, the Catholics to their church; and while Methodism is holding to the wonderful truths of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, may we also be loyal to the great church to which we belong.

Let us "reprove, rebuke, and exhort with all long-suffering and doctrine." We should ever keep in mind that our teachings of sin, conviction, repentance, justification, regeneration, faith and sanctification are based on and gotten from the teachings of God's Word. Paul was right when he said all Scripture was profitable for doctrine as well as other things.

We have a goodly number of Methodist people in De Ridder. Our church has a splendid future. De Ridder, La.

GRENADA COLLEGE.

On May 23, Grenada College closed what has been its best year in point of attendance and character of religious and academic work. The total enrollment has reached 250, and the strenuous financial condition of the country has forced economy on parents and students. This has brought a seriousness and earnestness of purpose to the student body that has not been equaled in my observation. Beyond doubt, money spent by students is usually in inverse ratio to benefits received. Waste of money brings also waste of time and opportunity, cultivates a bad habit and promotes snobbery. Parents, take notice!

Early in the session a gracious revival was conducted by Dr. S. S. McKenney. All students not members of a church joined, many pledged themselves for tithing and part time service. Ten signed up for life service. Four of the present senior class are student volunteers. One will enter Scarritt Bible and Training School next fall. The others will teach next year. Thirteen are being graduated with the A.B. degree, two in plano, one in expression, and one in home economics. Three of these will continue their studies and the others will teach. All are Christians and all give promise of large usefulness.

Two members will be added to the faculty for next session—a man for the chair of Religious Education and a woman for physical training.

If our people could realize the needs of Grenada College and its value to the North Mississippi Conference, along with our other educational institutions, the financial campaign would result in a large excess over the sum asked for.

ALUMNAE MEETING AND COMMENCEMENT AT PORT GIBSON FEMALE COLLEGE.

The recent Alumnae meeting at Port Gibson Female College was a thrilling and inspiring one. Invitations had been sent to the presidents of all the Methodist institutions within the bounds of the Mississippi Conference and to their students, as far as known, within the bounds of the Vicksburg District. Each institution had student representation except the Seashore school. Dr. Watkins, President of Millsaps, came and delivered one of the chief addresses. Dr. Bourne enriched the occasion by an impressive address. There were nearly a hundred present who had attended Port Gibson Female College sometime in the past years. Of course, students of the present session attended in a body. The Alumnae Association of the Port Gibson Female College provided an enjoyable banquet, and there was not a dull moment from start to finish. At times the situation was really thrilling. The vitality of the institution was impressively illustrated by the presence of Mrs. Mary Reagan, who entered here seventy-seven years ago and graduated seventy-three years ago; also by the presence of Mrs. Reagan's great-granddaughter, Miss Roberta Lum, who is the fourth generation in that family who has attended the college. Mrs. Reagan's daughter, Mrs. Laura Lum, of the second generation, was also present. Miss May Russell, who is known by her W. C. T. U. work throughout the nation, called attention to the fact that the silver fork used by Mrs. Reagan at the banquet, was the same that she used as a girl in school. During the Civil War that fork was taken from the Reagan home by a Federal soldier who kept it for more than thirty years. Space forbids giving the interesting details of the return of the fork; and we must pass unnoticed many items of equal interest. I doubt that there has ever been any Alumni meeting of as charming character as the one at Port Gibson.

The commencement exercises just closed were of superior order. The sermon was preached by the Rev. C. P. Jones, pastor of the Methodist Church at Fayette, Miss., and the annual address was delivered by the Rev. Dr. H. F. Tolle, pastor of the Capitol Street Methodist Church, Jackson, Miss. Both the sermon and the address were practical and impressive. Other exercises reflected great credit upon faculty and students.

The fact that Port Gibson Female College has been enabled to serve so many years while other institutions were dying, and accomplish such marvelous results with so few contributing to its success, suggests the vast possibilities of a great future ushered in by the approaching financial campaign and constant support by the concerted action of the brethren of the Conference. Financial conditions in the western section of Mississippi are not at the present juncture up to normal, but it is difficult to overestimate the extraordinary resources of the remarkably fertile section extending from Baton Rouge, La., up to Memphis, Tenn., served by a trunk line of the Y. & M. V. Railroad, running through Port Gibson. This great section, together with a part of Louisiana and Arkansas, is our natural territory. With ample grounds, buildings, and equipment, why should not Port Gibson Female College gather from this great territory hundreds of the most promising girls and young women of the land? Our success is to be limited only by the accommodations placed at our command.

I had thought of directing my future service into other channels, but our trustees and local citizens urged me to continue in my present relations and I have consented to do so. After all, it is difficult to render more important service than that of educating the girlhood and young womanhood of the country. It is certain that the home, the school, the nation, and the church of God, can not rise above the level of girlhood, womanhood, and motherhood.

We owe it to the past and to the future to make ample provision for Port Gibson Female College.

ROLFE HUNT, President.

LAKE CHARLES DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Lake Charles District Conference convened in the progressive little city of Rayne, La., on April 26. Rev. C. A. Battle, the newly appointed elder, presided. The good people of Rayne entertained the conference royally and the elder proved to be a splendid presiding officer. J. H. Cain, of De Ridder, was elected secretary.

The Memorial Home in New Orleans, the Epworth League Assembly in Mansfield, the Sunday school training course and the Educational Movement claimed prominent places on the program.

Great interest was shown in the Educational Movement by the preachers and by a number of leading laymen who were present. Enthusiasm was much in evidence at the close of an address by Dr. Geo. S. Sexton, of Shreveport, on what he termed, "The Third Battle Line." A testimony meeting relative to Christian education followed.

The preaching was done in a very commendable way by F. M. Freeman, of Crowley, and J. B. Williams, of Many. The devotional exercises were conducted by C. A. Battle, S. D. Howard, Briscoe Carter and W. L. Doss.

The following brethren visited the Conference: Alonzo Early, Sunday School Field Secretary of the Louisiana Conference, Briscoe Carter, of Minden; R. W. Vaughan, of our Orphanage at Clinton; J. B. Grambling, Epworth League State President; W. L. Doss, presiding elder of the Alexandria District; J. G. Snelling, presiding elder of the New Orleans District; Martin Hebert, presiding elder of the French Mission District, G. S. Sexton, of Shreveport, and S. S. Thomas, the Centenary man.

R. P. Howell was re-elected District Lay Leader.

The following delegates were elected to the Annual Conference: Mrs. Crow Girard, Mrs. E. C. Gunn, Mrs. C. E. Fike, J. H. Cain, R. J. Wilson, A. M. Mayo, J. I. Davidson, and H. N. Pharr.

The reports of the preachers were encouraging; several splendid revivals have been held, and many more are planned.

Several of the preachers have been looking for and some have found, missionary territory. The prospects bid fair for a splendid year in the Lake Charles District. A good spirit is prevailing on the part of the preachers and laymen of the district.

The presiding elder exhorted the preachers to circulate the New Orleans Advocate and other church literature.

It was noted that 16 local preachers reside within the district.

The next district conference goes to the historic town of Opelousas. Here was the starting of the Louisiana Annual Conference.

We feel sure that we will not be entertained any better there than we were by the splendid people of Rayne.

J. H. CAIN, Secretary.

VICKSBURG DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Vicksburg District Conference of the Mississippi Annual Conference was held in the beautiful town of Utica, Miss., May 10-12, 1921. Rev. Rob't Selby preached the opening sermon at 8 p.m., May 10, captivating his audience with his eloquence of oratory and profundity of thought. This sermon was followed by the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, administered by Brothers W. H. Saunders and C. A. Schmitz. Others who occupied the pulpit were J. W. Broom, Conference Financial Director for the Educational Campaign; Dr. Rolfe Hunt, President of Port Gibson Female College; J. O. Ware and N. B. Harmon. All preached to the edifying of those who heard, and that means that many were edified, for large congregations attended these services.

The first business session was convened at 9 a.m., May 11, and from that hour to the close of the conference there was not a dull moment, for every hour was crowded to the fringes with interesting addresses, inspiring sermons, or minute business.

The reports from the several pastoral charges were encouraging. They showed that the Sunday schools and Epworth Leagues are being unusually well attended, and that the work being done by them is high class. Several revival meetings have been held, and about three hundred have been added to the church this Conference year, while a goodly number of family altars have been erected.

Hon. M. M. Satterfield, of Port Gibson, was elected Lay Leader for the district.

Rev. Rolfe Hunt, local elder; M. M. Satterfield, S. W. Sharbrough, H. G. Flowers, Mrs. Pauline Sharbrough, W. A. Price, and R. L. Davis were elected lay delegates to the Annual Conference.

Rev. Bruner M. Hunt, a very capable young local preacher, son of Dr. Rolfe Hunt, who will graduate from Millsaps College in June, was recommended to the Annual Conference for admission on trial in the traveling connection.

Official visitors to the conference were, Rev. J. M. Morse, Conference Educational Secretary; Rev. J. W. Broom, Conference Educational Financial Director; Mr. W. D. Hawkins, Conference Missionary Secretary; Mrs. B. F. Lewis, representing the Orphans' Home; Prof. G. L. Harrell, Conference Lay Leader; Rev. G. S. Harmon, Commissioner for the Mississippi Methodist Hospital at Hattiesburg; Rev. J. C. Chambers, Sunday School Field Secretary; Mr. H. L. Clark, Assistant Sunday School Field Secretary, and Rev. W. C. Owens, Superintendent of the Young People's Department of Sunday School Work, all of whom were given respectful hearing.

Ira B. Robertson and W. W. Cammack, honored superannuates, several local preachers, a large number of lay delegates, and all the pastors of the district except J. A. Wells, who was at Hot Springs, Arkansas, attending his sick wife, were present.

Rev. J. R. Jones, P. E., presided over all the sessions of the conference. The skill and ease with which he directs the affairs of the church entrusted to him, the manner in which he dispatches the business of the conference, and the esteem in which he is held by the pastors and laymen of the district, because of his fatherly counsels, godly life, and inspiring sermons, evidences the wisdom of his appointment to the responsible position he occupies.

With the adoption of resolutions of thanks to the pastor of the Utica Methodist Church, Brother W. B. Alsworth, who proved himself an ideal host, and to the good people of Utica for their royal entertainment of the conference, which, though well-written and beautifully phrased, very inadequately express the appreciation of the conference for the many courtesies and genuine hospitality and brotherly kindness received, late Thursday afternoon, May 12, the business and the pleasure of the conference closed, and the preachers and delegates reluctantly took leave of their kind hosts, to meet next year in Anguilla.

T. J. O'NEIL, Secretary.

BROOKHAVEN DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Brookhaven District Conference convened in the church at Topisaw Camp Ground, 8:30 a.m., May 11. After worship conducted by Rev. W. H. Lewis, the conference was called to order by the presiding elder, Rev. H. M. Ellis. C. F. Emery was elected secretary. The proceedings of the Sunday School Institute held the preceding evening were ordered incorporated into the minutes.

The attendance throughout the session was unusually large. All the preachers in the district were present except two, who were detained by sickness.

A resolution was adopted expressing regret at the absence of Rev. T. W. Adams on account of ill health and tendering him the sympathy and love of his brethren. A large number of the delegates and many of the local preachers were present.

The business of the conference was dispatched with ease and celerity and there was not a dull moment during the entire session.

The host of the conference, Rev. H. E. Raley, spared no pains in looking after the comfort of his guests, and judging from the bountiful spread of good things supplied by the splendid people of this community there was no suggestion of "hard times."

The cause of Christian Education was ably represented by Rev. J. M. Morse, Dr. I. W. Cooper, Dr. J. R. Linn, Rev. W. H. Lewis, Rev. G. H. Thompson.

The preaching was done by Revs. V. C. Clifford, A. M. Broadfoot and H. M. Ellis.

Three young people offered themselves for life service.

Every item of business was given due consideration by the committees and on the floor of the conference. The interest of the Orphanage at Jackson was efficiently represented by Rev. B. F. Lewis. Rev. W. C. Childress represented the Memorial Home in New Orleans. W. D. Hawkins, our efficient representative of the Educational Centenary Movement, on Wednesday night gave a lecture with new pictures illustrating this great interest of the church.

The result of all the addresses upon this momentous issue before the church was a practically unanimous expression upon the part of all the preachers and delegates as being ready to spare no effort to make the Educational Campaign a perfect success. The utmost enthusiasm prevailed and not a single discouraging note was sounded.

Errie Hendricks was recommended for admission on trial to the Annual Conference, and W. L. Spinks and E. C. Terry were recommended for admission in elder's orders.

Mrs. Henry Myer addressed the conference on the work of the Woman's Missionary society.

The following were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: T. W. Sullivan, Mrs. Henry Myer, Dr. Henry Flowers, W. W. Godbold, S. C. Sample, H. B. Renfro, and L. E. Grice. Alternates: C. W. Boggs, M. G. Felder, W. T. Denman and L. S. Felder.

Mrs. Jerome Ford was elected agent for the Memorial Home in New Orleans. Centenary, McComb, was selected as the place for holding the next session of the conference. J. E. Carruth was elected lay leader. Ad interim committee: I. W. Cooper, W. H. Lewis, W. B. Jones, G. H. Thompson.

A resolution of thanks was adopted by a rising vote, thanking the host of the conference and the good people of Topisaw for their generous hospitality, the presiding elder for his courteous and tactful conduct of business, and also the secretary.

A large number of preachers and delegates pledged themselves to observe Friday, May 27, as a day of fasting and prayer for the success of the Educational Campaign.

The hour for adjournment having arrived, the presiding elder, Rev. H. M. Ellis, made an earnest and eloquent appeal for faith and courage in order to successfully meet the great enterprises of the church.

Conference adjourned sine die with the singing of the Doxology and benediction by Rev. J. E. Raley.

C. F. EMERY.

A MESSAGE TO THE CHURCH.

I hurriedly dispatch this note from New York City, where I have spent a day in the interest of the Christian Education Movement. On every hand throughout the church there is a hopeful note. The culture work has been well done. But complete victory has not been won, and will not be until in the Every Member Canvass the workers present the cause to every member so forcibly that all will contribute in proportion to means.

Many a battle has been lost by a lack of courage or zeal in the last critical hours of the struggle. The time for hesitation or doubt is passed, and the time for action is at hand. The results now largely depend upon the faithfulness, zeal, and enthusiasm with which pastors, presiding elders, directors, and members of teams present the financial appeal. May God grant that when such big issues of Christian civilization are involved, no one may falter, but that all may go forward with a faith and courage born of God!

Let every official do his full duty, every member make a real sacrificial offering, and no church fall below its quota.

J. H. REYNOLDS, Director General.

SPLENDID RESPONSE TO THE LIFE SERVICE CALL—THE FIVE THOUSAND ASKED FOR WILL PROBABLY BE REACHED.

The response of our young people to the Life Service call has been splendid. From all quarters of the church they come. The tramp of a mighty host is heard from the mountains to the sea.

Our bishops, presiding elders, editors and secretaries have carried the summons far and wide.

Our pastors have had the burden on their hearts. Our college faculties have sounded out the call to responding students. In congregation, Sunday school, Missionary Society and Epworth League the note has been voiced. Parents have offered their children for earth's noblest service, and the children have answered, "Here am I, send me."

It is a new day in church volunteering. We have received in our office some four thousand names, and they are still coming in by every mail, about fifty a day. It looks as if we will reach the five thousand set as the objective. It is a day for devout thanksgiving.

But it is also a day for a still louder and more irresistible call, and that is the overwhelming demand that these five thousand young people make upon us to enlarge and equip our colleges in order to educate them. Five thousand of our children were turned away from our Methodist schools last fall for lack of room. Here are five thousand more saying, "Here am I. Equip me to do the work to which God calls me." Can any one hesitate for a moment to vow a mighty vow, "It shall be done?" Not to educate them would brand us with an abiding disgrace throughout the ages. If they can say, "Here am I, send me," surely the rest of us can say, "Here's my check, send it."

And what a summons there is in these five thousand enlistments to the rest of us to give the Million Dollar Aid Fund to help them through college! They are writing by hundreds, "If I go to college, can I get any help to meet my expenses?" Of course we must give it to them. Brethren, come down hard on this fact in your speeches and sermons.

It would do your heart good to look over these names—most of them fine young people in the prime of life, and also in the throng some few dear children who refuse to be denied the privilege of enlisting in the holy crusade. Then there is one card from a sister seventy years old. Bless her heart! If she just had a body equal to her spirit, what might she not do? To what field shall we assign her? Maybe she is getting ready without knowing it, for a missionary trip in a few years to the North Star or the Pleiades or the Milky Way or Betelgeuse.

Send in your list, brother, if you have not done so. We need them all.

Let us praise God, and then gird ourselves anew for the raising of the money to train these five thousand young officers in the Lord's army. If ever the world needed them, it does right now, rocking and quivering on its very foundations. "Thou art come to the Kingdom for such a time as this."

EDUCATIONAL MEETING AT SCOOPA, MISS.

The setting-up meeting was opened by Rev. P. D. Hardin, the presiding elder of the Meridian District, who conducted the religious services. Rev. M. L. White led in prayer.

Mr. J. C. Watts, of Meridian, told in a short, but very forceful way, what this educational movement is, and introduced the speakers.

Rev. J. M. Morse, the Conference Secretary, gave an interesting address, telling how we Methodists spend our money now, and how we must spend it in the future, if we do our duty in this great work that we are going to do. He believes that this campaign is going to be a success.

Rev. J. W. Broome, the assistant to the State Superintendent, told in a most interesting way what Christian education will do for our country, and what the results will be if education and Christianity be left out.

Rev. M. L. White, of DeKalb, Miss., told of the plans he has made for the drive, and he is believing that it will be a success on his charge.

Rev. J. L. Snelgrove, of Moscow, Miss., says his people seem to be anxious to enter this great campaign.

Rev. D. E. Vickers, of Meridian, says that his people will do their part in this drive when the time comes.

Rev. T. H. King, of Scooba, has his work partly organized and will have everything completed by the 29th of May.

Rev. W. H. Lane, of Lauderdale, says the seed has been sown, and he believes his people will do their part. His people want their subscription to go to a certain school.

Rev. J. N. Broadway, of Porterville, believes his people will do their bit in the cause.

Rev. J. W. Broome told how to put the drive on. On motion of Rev. P. D. Hardin, presiding elder, the district setting-up meeting requested the board of education to move the Montrose Training School from Montrose to Meridian, Miss. The meeting adjourned with prayer by Rev. J. N. Broadway.

Secretary.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

Ever and anon, as I walked the Way of Life, the Spirit of Wisdom, whose eyes were as clear as the springing day and deep as its source of light, and whose feet stumbled never and whose voice like the sound of far-off silver bells, low and sweet, would join me—and I was glad.

"What are yonder men doing with that radiant light, that shines so bright and full, the great, burnished lamp, flashing a glory and splendor clearer than the sun, fairer than the stars—would they hide its life and splendor?"

The face of Wisdom shone with the beauty of the light, and his voice answered: "This is the lamp of Truth lighted by the Master of life, yet some have eyes and see not. And some would hide its light, yet the ages are its own, it burns through all covering, having immortal grace and strength, and cannot be quenched."

"But see some dark shadows fall on the way, and darken it for wayfarers—what means these shadows, for Truth shines for all?"

With tones of sadness, Wisdom said: "Those who face the light catch its glory and know its grace; the gloom and shadows are upon them who walk away."

I turned and looked and all the backward way was dark, and the many stumbled in doubt and fear; others cast stones and mocked at the glory of the light, yet its beams shone on, undimmed, concerning which I was glad again.

The great Educational Campaign of the church grows apace. The schools are receiving greater attention from churchmen than ever before in all history. Men are coming to the knowledge, after so many weary years of teaching, and so many tragic failures, that mental training must be inseparably joined with moral training, in the right development of character and efficiency. In other words, they are discovering the soul or spirit, and are endeavoring to repair the ghastly failures of the past. Meteorologists tell us that the sun's heat causes vast spaces of the atmosphere to become so rarefied that huge vacuums are formed and that the inward rush of cooler airs generate the resistless sweep of the hurricane. Yet the formative force of sunlight and heat, while storing the cause of the cyclone's wrath, was as noiseless and quiet as the summer sky. So with the shock and storm of the recent world war and its attendant ruin and sorrow. Back of all were those silent yet tremendous formative forces which built characters fit for deeds of cruelty. Right education is life, wrong education is death. The one fits youth for deeds of noble, honest worth and daring; the other fits him for "treason, spoils and stratagems." We are learning, and I hope not too late, that after all that is said and done, character and character building is what counts in the ultimate sum of things. The thoughts that are stored, the lessons of integrity, right, and truth that are stamped upon the impressionable mind, live and linger as long as the heart has life and passion. In short, right education is the expression of life in worthy, wholesome conduct.

The church press is saying but little concerning its power and influence as a factor in Christian education. Great bundles of literature are sent to us long-suffering and patient pastors, for distribution among the churches, in which figures and facts are packed and jammed anent the manifold interests of our universities, colleges, and academies; yet the greatest educative influence in all the world—the press—is scarcely if ever mentioned. Arise, ye men of tripod and typewriter, and tell them, while seats of learning have their thousands, you have your tens of thousands, and you turn none away. Moreover, that your curriculum is as broad as the need of the race, and mightier in its results than the thought of kings. The Alpine avalanche is formed by the faint falling of crystal snowflakes, gentle as the breath of dawn, light as the touch of baby fingers. Yet when formed and unloosed from its mountain fastness, ruin and destruction follow its resistless rush. Its mighty momentum is a symbol and lesson of the cumulative, silent results of repeated and continuous heaping of silent thought. If money is as potent as some would have us believe, then let part of the $33,000,000 stream be turned toward a better equipment of the Christian press.

DIVINITY SCHOOL RATES, ETC.

I am able to publish the following rates for entertainment at Biloxi during the ten days of the Divinity School:

White House: The White House makes a flat rate of $2.50 per day for preachers and their wives, American plan. This is about half-price and is not conditioned on numbers. It is a good place to stay, as all know who have tried it.

Floyd Hotel: The Floyd Hotel makes a rate of $15.00 per week for singles, and $12.50 each per week, two in a room. This is a good rate, considering the fare, and he hopes by making this rate to have quite a number. I know this to be a good place, as I stayed there during the school last year. It is right on the beach, and at the street car terminal in Biloxi. This is quite a concession in price.

Keller Lodge: Keller Lodge, with its cafe, will be in operation, but I am not prepared to quote rates.

Cottages: Mrs. A. M. Haygood, 1525 Ohio Street, New Orleans, can accommodate ten, if two to the room; price not stated. Write her if interested.

Mrs. M. E. Donaldson, 1427 Calhoun Street, New Orleans, has three rooms to rent; two of them have double beds, and one a single. For the rooms with double beds she wants $1.00 per day, and 50c per day for the single. Write her.

Rev. S. H. Werlein, Alexandria, La., would rent all of his nice cottage but one room. There are six or eight bedrooms, with kitchen, dining room, and all conveniences (not screened). Write Dr. Werlein.

Pearl Cottage: Mrs. Zable will rent three rooms, double beds, for the ten days of Divinity School, for $45.00. If six preachers would rent these apartments together, their lodging would cost them only $7.50 for the term of the school. Write Miss Belle Pennington, on Camp Ground.

Kannawha: Kannawha Cottage can be rented for the term of the school, for $15.00. It has four bedrooms and a kitchen, all well screened, even the porch, with nice modern furnishings. Write Miss Belle Pennington, on Camp Ground.

Mrs. J. A. Harris, 515 Audubon Street, New Orleans, will sell or rent her daughter's cottage. She will rent it out if it has not been sold by June 1. I don't know number, name, or location of cottage, or price. It has eight bedrooms, two dining rooms, two kitchens, and all modern conveniences. This is a nice proposition for any one who might wish to keep boarders. Sale price only $500.00. Write Mrs. Harris, if interested.

I have decided not to publish names of those wanting to rent cottages.

Our president, Rev. H. M. Ellis, Brookhaven, Miss., will be on the ground several days in advance, and will be able to take care of you. Hunt him when you arrive. And let nothing prevent your going.

THE BOY WHO FORGOT.

How strange, a boy who forgot! Did you ever hear of such a boy—a boy who goes around dreaming, and forgets everything he is told to do? Freddie forgot so many things!

One day when Freddie was in the garden with his father, his father said to him, "Freddie, please take my purse in to mother."

Freddie started for the house, swinging the purse carelessly in his hand, and thinking—what was he thinking about? Perhaps he was thinking so hard of the ice cream his mother was to make that afternoon that he forgot he had any fingers. He had forgotten all about the purse before he reached the house; it had dropped out of his hand into the tall grass and was lost. Such a time as his father had before he found it! There was over forty dollars in the purse, and his father was a poor man.

Such a strange thing happened to Freddie once when he forgot. Freddie lived in a very old New England house. One day his father made over the cellar stairs so that they would come up into the kitchen instead of into another room. He intended to nail up the door that had opened into the stairway before it was changed, but it was so late that he left it until morning.

What do you suppose forgetful Freddie did the next morning? He started to go down the cellar in the same old place. He went down in the same old place, but not in the same old way. No, he had a great fall, ker-whack! on the cellar floor, but because the floor was of soft dirt instead of hard cement, he was but little hurt. One finger was badly skinned by the old door-latch, but that was all. After this accident, Freddie always remembered the new way down cellar, and many other things besides!—George W. Tuttle, in The Christian Register.

BILLIONS to Kill with, Nothing to Build with.

A BIG business man in accepting a responsible position in the Christian Education Movement said that we boasted during the war that we could finance the war twenty years; now we are saying we can't finance peace. Is it possible, said he, that only yesterday we had billions to kill with, and now have nothing to build with? If so, said he, moral bankruptcy preceded financial failure. We could not stand prosperity.

Then he added, it is time we were changing our investments and putting some of our wealth in spiritual forces.

The real poverty of the world is spiritual and moral; not financial or political. If business men and statesmen want to make permanent our free institutions and business stability, let them invest largely in the spiritual forces of our civilization. These will give stability to our institutions. Otherwise, their children will see our property and civil liberties go up in the smoke of red revolution or be destroyed in another great war.

Mankind has been investing billions to kill with all through history. It has proven a failure. Is it not time that we turned our millions to the constructive forces of our civilization—Christian religion and Christian education?

The Christian Education Movement stands for Christianizing American culture through a great system of Christian schools.

THE FIRST HAIR CUT.

Jimmy's had a hair cut!
How the folks all stare!
It's so short you see his skin
Showing through his hair.
'Twasn't what he had before,
Cut all round a bowl;
It was in that barber store
By the candy pole.

Jimmy's had a hair cut!
We were there to see,
Looking through the window pane—
All the boys with me.
He was worried there alone,
Trying hard to grin,
On a kind of great big throne,
Wrapped up to his chin.

Jimmy's had a hair cut!
'Course it scared him some.
All those shears and cups and things
Sort of struck him dumb.
Jimmy's mother saved a curl—
She feels bad, I know,
That he wasn't born a girl,
And could let them grow.

Jimmy's had a hair cut—
My! It made him proud,
Walking out, while all of us
Followed in a crowd!
He got pretty rich that day,
'Fore he went to bed;
He made every fellow pay
Just to smell his head.

HOW GRANDMA USED TO PLAY SCHOOL.

By Gertrude Fisher Scott.

It was raining hard, so grandma knew she would find the children up in the playroom. She wanted to ask Ethel where she had put her scissors that she had borrowed that morning and had forgotten to return.

She did not go to the playroom often as it was on the third floor and it was hard for her to walk up so many stairs. But she needed the scissors so badly just then that she made the effort and after several rests along the way, finally reached the playroom door and knocked loudly enough for the children to hear her.

When they opened the door and discovered who their visitor was they were delighted, for they loved her dearly and she always entered into whatever they were doing as if she were as young as they. And she could tell such wonderful stories, mostly about when she was a little girl up on a big farm in Vermont, that the children never tired of hearing them and always begged for just one more.

"What are you doing, my dears, playing school?" asked grandma after she had glanced around and had seen the dolls arranged in front of tables. "My, what fortunate little girls you are to have so many dolls and playthings! I'm afraid you wouldn't have enjoyed playing school the way I used to do when I was your age. But I had good times and I guess I was just as happy as you are, for it was my favorite game, and I played whenever I had a chance."

"Oh, grandma, please tell us a story about it," begged Ethel as she led grandma to a chair. "But I thought everybody played school in the same way."

"Yes, I guess they do as far as a teacher and scholars are concerned—but they don't always have the same things to play with. You have so much and we had so little. You have everything and we had nothing. That's the difference. I wonder how you'd like to play school if you had no big playroom all to yourselves, no beautiful dolls, no desks and tables, no story-books, and only a slate and pencil."

"Why, how could you play school without any of those things?" asked Rosalie. "I shouldn't think it would be any fun."

"Oh, it was the make-believe things that helped us out, I guess. And then, besides, we didn't know anything about the things that you have to-day, so we didn't miss them."

"But what did you have, grandma, that made you like it so?"

"Well, I guess it was what we called our dolls, but they were not much like yours, my dears. You see, my father's farm was way up in the hills, a long way from the cities and so we didn't have many things that came from the stores. Father didn't go to town often, and besides, there wasn't much money to be spent on us children, so we had to get along with what was made at home."

"But who could make dolls for you at home?" asked Rosalie, who had never had a doll that was not bought at the store.

"Your great-grandmother made the first one I ever had, a little rag doll, something like your Raggedy Ann. Later on I made some for myself, and then your great-grandfather made the ones I liked best of all and the ones I am going to tell you about that I played school with."

"Were they all rag dolls that you had?" and Ethel looked rather pityingly at her grandmother as she thought of her own collection of beautiful dolls.

"No, Ethel, there was only one rag doll for each of us girls and they soon were the worse for wear with much handling, and mother didn't have time to make us any more. Mothers on farms were very busy those days."

"Well, what was the kind you made yourself?"

"Wooden dolls—but I don't suppose you would call them dolls at all, for they were only sticks of wood. You see, there were always great piles of split wood in the yard all summer, waiting to be stacked in the woodshed for the winter. I used to spend days looking them over and picking out the pieces that were thin and crooked, with knobs at the end that looked like heads. After I had found a half dozen or so that satisfied me, I used to carry them down to my favorite apple tree in the south orchard and there I played school day after day and was as happy as any little girl in Vermont."

"But I shouldn't think pieces of wood would have looked anything like dolls," said Ethel in a tone that showed she was anxious to hear more of the story.

"Well, they didn't exactly, at least not like one of your dainty dolls. But you see one of my older brothers, who was very clever with his knife, cut eyes and a nose and a mouth in the head of each piece of wood and I put pieces of cloth round them for dresses and gave each one of them a name, and they made the best kind of scholars you ever saw. And there on the green grass under the blue sky we sang our multiplication tables and our geography lessons over and over all through the long summer."

"What were the dolls' names?" asked Rosalie. "Oh, I don't believe I can remember them all, it was such a long time ago. But my two favorites were always Mable Ann and Roxanna Rose Ann, named after my favorite aunts."

"Now there was only one trouble with these dolls and that was that they wouldn't stand up unless I propped them against the trunk of the apple tree. I never said anything about this to anybody, but my father must have noticed it when he went by the tree so often and saw me playing school there, for before the summer was over he made me some dolls that would stand alone. And what do you suppose he used to make them of?"

"Oh, tell us quickly!" said Ethel. "I know we could never guess."

"Well, it was an old bedstead that he found up in the attic."

"But, grandma, how could he possibly make dolls from a bedstead? That sounds even funnier than your sticks of wood."

"Yes, I suppose it does, dear, but let me explain a little more. The old bedstead in its day had been a very beautiful one and its four slender posts were hand carved, each with a top shaped like a pineapple."

"Now without telling any one what he was doing, my father one day carefully sawed off these posts about ten inches from the top. You see that gave plenty of length for the bodies, the narrow part for the necks, and the heads on top. These he painted and polished out in his workroom in the barn, and one morning when I went down to the apple tree to play school I could hardly believe my eyes when I saw the four lovely new dolls standing there as straight as I could have stood myself. There was no word of explanation and if I had believed in fairies I should have said they had left the dolls there in the night."

"I'm sure that never, until I was grown up, anyway, did anything give me so much happiness as did those pineapple-top dolls. I played with them as long as ever I played school and even until I was a big girl I kept them in my room and played with them once in a while. And if you'll believe it, when I was married I took one of them to my new home and my first little girl played with it."

"But how did you ever find out who made the dolls for you?"

"Well, it was by accident. A day or two after I discovered them I happened to hear father and mother talking together out in the milkroom. First mother said, 'But why in the world did you ever spoil a perfectly good bedstead to make silly dolls for little Sarah Jane?' And father answered softly, 'Well, the old bed wasn't good for anything and we weren't using it and I knew what fine dolls the tops would make. And I'd do most anything for little Sarah Jane. She does love dolls so and plays school so contentedly with them down in the orchard! Why, she'll be teaching a real school before we know it. She's a born teacher if ever I saw one.'"

"And did you teach a real school, grandma?" asked Rosalie.

"Yes, dear, until your grandfather persuaded me to give it up and go to live with him."

"Oh, tell us about your real school, please," begged Ethel.

"Not to-day. We'll save that for another story. I have some sewing downstairs to finish. And you will want to go on with your school. There's your mother calling me now."

So Ethel and Rosalie helped grandma down the stairs and then went back to the playroom and started playing school again. But they didn't get very far, for they spent the rest of the morning talking over what grandma had told them and they decided they were very fortunate little girls to have so many real dolls instead of just wooden "make-believes."—Zion's Herald.

"TIME OUT."

Mean!

Wife (at breakfast): "Could I have a little money for shopping to-day, dear?"

Husband: "Certainly. Would you rather have an old five or a new one?"

Wife: "A new one, of course."

Husband: "Here's the one—and I'm four dollars to the good!"—Exchange.

— But Soon!

Father had been cleaning the bedroom windows outside, when little Muriel came in from the garden, and said, "Mother, did you hear the ladder fall down just now?"

"No," replied the mother.

"Well," said the child, "it fell down and broke three flower pots. I told daddy you'd be cross."

"Oh, dear," said mother; "I hope your daddy hasn't hurt himself?"

"I don't think he has yet," said little Muriel; "he's still clinging to the window-sill."—Exchange.

The greatest duty every father owes his children is to walk where it will be safe for them to follow.—Selected.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after three or four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise, use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least an inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

Editorial

THE APPEAL OF OUR OWN SCHOOLS.

With the Methodists of our own territory is the future of the schools we call our own. If we fail them in this hour, there are no other people to whom they can look. During the next ten days we shall give the verdict concerning each of our own schools—shall declare either that they will live and grow, or that we are not concerned as regards their future. They face a new day, and they are not equal to the tasks of the future except we give them now what they ask. The Methodist people, not the Methodist schools, of our territory are on trial—the question at issue is, whether we are worthy of the service these schools have given.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE. This is the institution that will, in large measure, type the Methodism of Mississippi for the coming years. To Millsaps of Mississippi and North Mississippi Conferences must look for their supply of preachers, and the institution is to furnish a large share of the loyal laymen who will carry forward the work of the church in their home communities. It has served well the church and the State, and on its record has a right to ask of its own people the money needed that it may continue to serve. Millsaps asks for $805,000—of this amount $475,000 for endowment and $330,000 for buildings. In the giving of this amount and more, Mississippi Methodism will prove itself worthy to live and grow; to fail to answer this call is to turn from opportunity and duty in a day when great issues are at stake, when the future growth of the church in this territory is involved.

GRENADA COLLEGE. To the North Mississippi Conference Grenada College looks for its support and for the guarantee of its life and growth. It must have what it asks of its own people. Not able now to care for all who would come, it faces the future unable to do the larger work to which it has been called unless its own people speak the word. That word is to be spoken in the response of North Mississippi Methodism to Grenada's call for $350,000. Of this amount $200,000 is for endowment, $150,000 for buildings and the payment of its debt. With such an opportunity for growth and enlargement, it is unthinkable that North Mississippi Methodism will decree the waning influence of their own school. Their failure to answer its call will so declare.

WHITWORTH COLLEGE. A Christian college, an institution that holds the confidence of its own people and the leaders in educational work, Whitworth asks that it be strengthened for the greater work that is ahead. The institution can serve other hundreds of young women if given what it asks; it cannot hold its own if Mississippi Conference Methodists refuse to give. Of its askings of $350,000, there is provided $200,000 of additional endowment and $150,000 for buildings. In this is the opportunity to build at Brookhaven a great college for women. And in this service to the church of the future every Methodist of the Mississippi Conference should have a share.

PORT GIBSON FEMALE COLLEGE. For more than sixty years this institution has been making its contribution of cultured Christian womanhood, and the great value of such a school cannot be overestimated. It must continue to live, and in its day of need the alumnae of the old college and the Methodists of Mississippi should come to its help. Its askings of $210,000 will provide an endowment of $90,000 and buildings and equipment to the value of $120,000. This represents but a small amount for the Mississippi Conference, but it means the saving of the old college. It has right to live and serve.

THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE TRAINING SCHOOL and the SEASHORE CAMP GROUND SCHOOL. Our church has pursued a wise policy in the establishment and maintenance of training schools and academies. From no class or grade of educational institutions have come larger returns to the church. They furnish many recruits for the ministry and other Christian life service, and open doors of opportunity to hundreds of young people who otherwise would be denied their chance. Mississippi Conference Training School asks for $105,000; the Seashore Camp Ground School for $94,500, the Mississippi Conference to share with Louisiana and Alabama in providing this amount.

CENTENARY COLLEGE. Centenary offers to Louisiana Methodists their best chance until now to build a greater Methodism in this territory and to make a larger contribution to the building of the Kingdom of Christ. The college, with more than eighty years of honorable history, with a record of service unsurpassed by any small college, has come to where it must be enlarged and strengthened if it is to meet the responsibilities of the new day. It will be equipped for this greater work if Louisiana Methodists answer the call of duty. There is no way open to a church that would answer the call of God except to build upon surer foundations its educational work. Centenary in its askings of $560,000 gives Louisiana Methodism an opportunity worth while. Shreveport will do its part in this program, and what Shreveport gives will be in the faith that the Methodists of other sections of the State will not fall of their duty.

MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE. With an enrollment of more than two hundred, Mansfield has before it an open door. If it enters upon its larger service, its own people must give what it now asks. Of its askings of $350,000, every dollar is now needed to guarantee that it shall live. There is pressing need for additional buildings and the endowment of $200,000 is a necessity. Let every Methodist of the Louisiana Conference have some share in the service the institution shall give during the coming years.

CONSIDER THESE FACTS.

Last year the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was 1,048 preachers short; this year it is 1,130.

The demand for educated preachers grows steadily. The only source for educated preachers is our own schools and colleges.

Of our educated preachers, 85 per cent come from our own schools.

In fifty years' time one large State university, with 1,000 Methodist students enrolled and 3,000 students of other Protestant denominations and with an alumni body of 8,000, has produced 20 preachers for all denominations.

Many of our colleges will close their doors next fall if the church does not give them financial support. The president of one of our leading colleges states publicly that his institution will not be able to open without this relief. This college in its history has produced 900 Methodist preachers.

Of the 283 missionaries in our mission fields since 1910, 236 came from our own schools.

During 32 years the University of Virginia contributed 3 preachers to the Virginia Conference, while in the same period Randolph-Macon contributed 240 preachers. Also the University of Alabama in 32 years has contributed 5 preachers to the North Alabama Conference, while old Southern University and present Birmingham-Southern College contributed 100.

Other denominations are providing for their colleges. The Southern Presbyterians are raising $11,000,000. Their membership is 356,000. On a per capita basis equal to that, we would be raising $69,000,000.

The Northern Methodists have recently raised $35,000,000 for their schools. The last General Conference (May, 1920) authorized an additional campaign for $138,000,000 for these schools. They are now engaged in this campaign.

The Southern Baptists have raised $28,000,000 for their colleges. The Northern Baptists have raised $33,000,000 for theirs.

The Southern Methodists rank second in membership among the American Protestant Churches. They rank fifth in educational facilities.

One Northern Methodist college is now in a campaign for a $25,000,000 endowment—Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill. This is equal to the total assets of all our schools and colleges.

Our mission fields could use every man now enrolled in our theological seminaries without leaving a single man for our own pulpits in this country.

Last year our Southern Methodist schools turned away 5,000 boys and girls from their gates because of lack of room.

The moral progress of man has not kept pace with his material progress for the last 100 years. It is estimated that during the last 75 years mankind has produced more wealth than during the entire history of the race prior to 1850. There has been no corresponding moral progress.

The General Conference, composed equally of laymen and ministers, ordered both the Centenary and the Christian Education Movement in May, 1918, in the darkest days of the Great War. Surely we will carry out in times of peace a spiritual program planned in the blackest hours of human history.

The financial plan of the Christian Education Movement is not a cash proposition but a five-year program.

Dr. P. P. Claxton, United States Commissioner of Education, says that the American people spent last year more for luxuries than they have spent in their entire history on education, the figures being $22,700,000,000 for luxuries in 1920, and $16,645,000,000 for education since 1789.

Is it not high time for the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to invest not less than $33,000,000 in Christian education?

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Investigation shows that there has not been a death in Port Gibson Female College since 1879. Such a record is marvellous.

The editor of the Advocate has been honored with an invitation to preach the sermon before the Y. M. C. A. and the Y. W. C. A. of Millsaps College, at Galloway Memorial Church, Jackson, Miss., on Sunday evening, June 5.

A note from Rev. Spencer J. McLean, of Calhoun, La., gives an encouraging report of the work on that charge.

Rev. and Mrs. J. B. Grambling, of Shreveport, La., announce the birth of a son, Robert Franklin, on Tuesday, May 10. Blessings upon the little one!

Rev. H. L. Norton, of Logtown, Miss., paid the Advocate office an appreciated call on Monday morning of this week. It was easy to see that he is happy in his work.

Rev. W. L. Broome, pastor of our University Church, Norman, Oklahoma, formerly of the North Mississippi Conference, keeps in touch with his old friends through the Advocate.

Dr. John R. Nelson, pastor of Grace Church, Houston, Texas, has been appointed presiding elder of the Memphis District, to take the place of Dr. T. E. Sharp, who died recently.

A meeting of the Book Committee has been announced for June 22, the purpose of the meeting being the election of a Book Editor and Editor of the Review, to succeed the late Dr. F. M. Thomas.

An optimistic note comes to us from the Jackson District, Mississippi Conference. The preachers are at work and hopeful, and the laymen share in a large degree their faith. Rev. M. L. Burton is the presiding elder.

"Missionary News" is the name of an interesting monthly publication issued by Rev. Marion Browning, in charge of our Mary Werlein Mission, this city, who is also engaged in work among the Spanish-speaking population.

President Harding has appointed Dr. John James Tigert as United States Commissioner of Education. Dr. Tigert is the son of the late Bishop J. J. Tigert. He has achieved distinction in the field of education, to which he has devoted his life.

Rev. J. W. Burton, a local elder, of Emelle, Ala., has been a subscriber to the Advocate since 1868. He is still vigorous and active in the work, and would be glad to help any of the brethren who may desire his services in meetings during the summer.

The Bulletin of the First Methodist Church of Laurel, Miss., Rev. O. S. Lewis, pastor, calls special attention to the Conference and the General organs in its issue of May 15, and urges the membership of the church to subscribe for them. Good!

We have received the following amounts recently for the China Relief Fund, and applied them promptly to that urgent need: Big Rock Sunday school, Waynesboro, Miss., by L. McCulley, superintendent, $4.59; Mrs. J. K. Chappell, Columbus, Miss., $4.

Rev. D. F. Ellisor, publicity agent of the Seashore Divinity School, requests us to state that the rates at the Keller Lodge this year will be as follows: where only one person occupies a bed, $1 a day; where two persons occupy a bed, 75 cents a day. The rates at the restaurant are not given.

A note from Rev. W. L. Blackwell, of Vaughan, Miss., informs us that Sunday, May 22, was a good day with him. A fine sermon was preached by Rev. Charles W. Wesley, a member of this year's graduating class at Millsaps College, and a "boosting" Sunday school service was held by representatives from the Bible Class of Yazoo City.

Rev. C. F. Emery, of Tylertown, Miss., reports that the work is moving along smoothly on his charge. Senior and Junior Epworth Leagues and a Young People's Missionary Society have recently been organized and are actively at work. The attendance on public worship is increasing, and plans are being made for a great revival soon. Brother Emery claims one of the best Woman's Missionary Societies in the Mississippi Conference.

Rev. John H. Stafford, pastor of the Pearl River circuit, Louisiana Conference, is planning for the first protracted meeting of the year at St. Tammany, beginning on May 28 and continuing through June 5. The preaching will be done by the pastor, although he expects the assistance of Brother J. K. Mann during the meeting. The work on the Pearl River charge is prospering, all the departments of the church being well organized and active.

We take the following from the Southern Christian Advocate of May 12: "Bishop Kilgo's South Carolina friends will be much gratified to learn that his condition is now greatly improved, and will join in earnest prayer that this gifted servant of the church may be restored to many years of faithful service." This will be good news to the many friends of the Bishop in Louisiana and Mississippi, and they will join in the prayers for his complete restoration to health.

We hope every member of the church will read and heed the message of Bishop McMurry, which appears on the first page of this week's Advocate. The Bishop has been untiring in his work in the Christian Education Movement, and his heart is in the cause. His visit to New Orleans last week was a great help to all our churches.

The New Orleans District Sunday School meeting at Parker Memorial last Sunday afternoon was well attended, and a fine program was given. Rev.

Alonzo Early and Miss Hess, the faithful and efficient Conference workers, gave fine service in the meeting.

Our attention has been called to a most deserving and industrious girl, attending one of our church schools in Louisiana this year, preparing herself for missionary work, who desires to secure some kind of employment during the summer that would enable her to discharge some financial obligations by the opening of the next session, or about that time. If any of our readers know of any position that she might fill, they are requested to communicate with Rev. P. O. Lowrey, Indian Bayou, La. Brother Lowrey is also desirous of securing summer employment for a capable young man who is now in college.

A note from Rev. A. M. Shaw, of Trout, La., calls our attention to the fact that the author of the beautiful little poem, "The Bravest Battle," published in the Advocate of May 19, is Joaquin Miller, "the poet of the Sierras." The poem came to us as "fugitive verse," and as we could not place the authorship, we marked it, "author unknown." We are glad Brother Shaw has identified it, for we agree with him that it is a pity for the name of so fine an author to get separated from so fine a production. Brother Shaw writes that he would be glad to know the name of the author of the poem beginning,

"Tell me, ye winged winds,
That round my pathway roar."

Perhaps some reader of this note can give him the desired information.

"I WILL GO OVER TO SIBERIA."

The Board of Missions, at its Annual Meeting in May, 1920, authorized the establishment of the Manchuria Siberian Mission, and in the summer of last year, Dr. W. G. Cram and Rev. J. S. Ryang were appointed to make an exploratory visit. This resulted in the opening of work in Northern Manchuria and the sending of Rev. Chung Chai Duk to Kirin, from which point he was to work out as a center and minister to the scattered groups of Koreans not reached by any other agency. Let us keep him in our prayers.

The accompanying letter, in its quaint, oriental style, tells its own thrilling story. No man is truly a hero who is conscious of it. This Korean brother in his self-abandonment, simple faith, and sacrificial spirit is a hero—every inch of him. He has felt the piercing bite of the icy winter, fallen among thieves, experienced the ravages of famine, the perils of lonely journeyings and the hostility of those who could not appreciate his motive. How apostolic it all sounds: "My coming to Manchuria is like Paul's coming to Macedonia for Lydia's prayer. I am planning to charge this work to Choi Mok Sa and will go over to Siberia."

W. R. LAMBUTH.

Report of the Manchuria Siberian Mission.

By Chung Chai Duk, Jan. 24, 1921.

I am going to write a report of my work in Kirin during the past four months.

Traveling.

I am staying in a Korean inn and I can meet many Koreans who come from everywhere. So I preached to them in this inn many times and I visited the neighbors. The first Sunday since I came, I worshipped with five young men in this inn and the next Sunday fifteen men came and worshipped. And now much progress has been made. We rented a house from a Chinese and about twenty members are coming and worshiping God every Sunday. We selected leaders and organized a church. The inn keeper has been selected as a leader of the members. I will tell you about my visit to the country.

1. I went to Syn An Chon with a young man whose name is Pak No Il. This country is ninety li from Kirin. There, we awakened the old believers who were sleeping, gathered the scattered believers and got new believers. So we worshipped on Sunday with thirty-one members. I saw them welcome us with great joy as hungry lambs met their master.

2. We went to Soo Deung Huh and discovered three olden believers and worshipped with them on Sunday. After this we went to Syn An Chon. We examined probationers and taught the Bible. We examined their faith and baptized them, and selected leaders and organized church. We named this church Syn An Chon Church. We relieved the believers in the famine. We decided to encourage education and help the school and to ask some money from home church for this purpose.

3. We went to a country called Ak Mok Hyun. This village is about 360 li from this city. There are many Koreans in the surrounding villages (from this village about 100 li in every direction) and this village is the center of this district. I started from Kirin for this village on December 9 riding on a wagon. In this traveling I endured many sufferings from the bad roads. One time I fell down into the water from a bridge, for the construction of the bridge was very faulty. After I traveled about one week enduring these sufferings and severe cold, I reached this country and met my beloved brothers Ryu and Rhee. I stayed with them about one week and traveled in the surrounding villages, about 20 or 10 li from Ak Mok Hyun. During this time I suffered from thieves but much with the new believers. I got 50 new believers there. I charged Brother Ryu Choon Jo with this church and left for Kirin by an ox-cart under great protection of Brother Kim Pok Tong. In this traveling we passed great forest about 100 li and walked about 100 li on the ice of Song Kwa River. We walked before the morning about 40 li every day, for we did not know the Chinese custom. We had no time to sleep. It was very cold in the morning and I warmed by my fur coat but my nose felt very cold and frozen. The Chinese said that I am a small country people and insulted much. After eight days we arrived in Kirin and there I met pastor Choi Soo Yung. I was very glad for we met far from our own country. Then we had conversations about our church. I have been in a great danger and great sufferings, but I am comforted and rejoiced in mind by the love from the Heavenly Father.

4. I traveled in the Syn An Chon with Pastor Choi. These people of this country are in a great famine. I had written to Dr. Cram and churches in our country and I received some money from Dr. Cram and churches. So we bought 200 measures of millet and salt and gave them each 3 measures and some 1½ measures of millet and one pound of salt. We taught the Bible during some days and baptized them. We got over 10 new believers. They were filled with joy and said that they relieved both in spirit and body.

Special Things.

Brother Um Myung-kil in Syn An Chon, an old man, is an earnest believer. And he said that he worshipped every Sunday and prayed for a preacher. He said that my coming to Manchuria is just like Paul's coming to Macedonia for Lydia's prayer. So I glory to God and thank the Board of Missions and the churches in my country for their prayers. I am planning to charge this work to Choi Mok Sa and will go over to Siberia. I am hoping that all of you will pray for this work.

CHUNG CHIA DUK.

Obituaries

The subject of this sketch, MRS. LILLIE BOYD FULTON, was born near Homer, La., May 18, 1871. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Boyd, were among the substantial builders of our North Louisiana citizenship, and both were devoutly religious. She was married in 1897 to Rev. R. V. Fulton, and died May 9, 1921, at Farmersville, La. She was a beautiful Christian character, having been converted in early childhood. She shared the lot of an itinerant Methodist preacher with true devotion to God, her husband, and those whom they served. Many beautiful floral wreaths attested the affection of those whom she and her husband had served here and over the State. She was called hence very suddenly, but was found watching and faithful. She was laid to rest at Davis Springs cemetery by the writer, May 11, 1921. A large number of her friends of youthful days were with her loved ones at the funeral. There was much weeping over their loss, and shouts of victory over her triumphs. She leaves her preacher-husband in lonesomeness and sadness. Two children preceded her into the other world and three survive her—Mrs. S. E. Richardson, Wilmer, and R. V., Jr. She also leaves five brothers and five sisters. We commend her example of faithfulness to her loved ones, and pray God, our Father, to comfort them, and to give to each grace sufficient for every need.

HENRY T. YOUNG.

MRS. EVELINE HESTER COURTNEY (nee Thompson) was born at Opelousas, La., May 24, 1860, and died at Bayou Chicot, March 27, 1921. Sister Courtney is survived by her husband, Mr. H. D. Courtney (to whom she was married April 21, 1880), by three brothers, and Miss Syda Thompson, her only sister, and by her nine children. To speak what sheer justice requires of this estimable woman would seem the merest flattery. She was a woman of rare culture and refinement, and possessed those social gifts and graces that mark the truly elevated life. Her home life was one of peculiar beauty and charm. How ardently she loved her husband and her children! To raise her children to be honored and esteemed, to live above reproach, but above all to live religiously, was the paramount wish of this Christian mother, and she saw her hopes fulfilled, for (I think) all her children are members of the church of her choice, and there is not one that would not be a credit to any family. Sister Courtney was a devoted Christian. She loved her church and was loyal to her pastor, but above all, she was faithful to her Lord. Her health had been feeble for a long time. She was ready for the end when it came. Her sufferings are over, and she is forever with the Lord.

NATCHITOCHES METHODIST CHURCH FACTS AND NEEDS.

Our church here at Natchitoches, La., occupies a unique place in our Conference, so far as its mission is concerned. It must not only serve a local congregation, but, in a sense, must serve the whole State. There are students here attending the State Normal School from almost every section of Louisiana. Our Conference has rightfully recognized these facts for several years and has supplemented the pastors' salary in order that they may make effort to look as much as possible to the spiritual needs of the Normal students. So much, so good. But we owe it to ourselves and the youth of our State to do even more.

1. We must adequately equip our church building so as to meet the demands that are upon us. Our splendid church building, made possible by assistance from our Conference and General Church Extension Boards, is still without furnishings. If we ever needed the building, and we did, then it is the height of folly, after having spent as much money as we did on the building, not to place proper furnishings in it. For about ten years we have had this splendid modern building, presenting its bare interior to the leadership of our State, and so impressing them with our beloved Methodism. We must put an end to such procedure.

Some one suggests, so I imagine, "Let the local congregation look to it." To some this seems both plausible and reasonable. There is no people in our Conference more liberal or loyal, and were it a matter of caring for a building sufficient for their own needs, they could do that, but to provide for both themselves and our share of a student body of five hundred to fifteen hundred, they are unable. From some source outside of our local congregation must come funds to equip our plant.

2. We must realize the magnitude of the Louisiana State Normal School in the life of our church and State, and make effort to furnish dormitory facilities for our Methodist boys and girls who, in large numbers, attend school here. Such effort would go a long way toward solving, in our State, the matter of State education.

We have a great school here, and for the most part, a faculty that would adorn any denominational school. Our President, Dr. Roy, is doing his best in every way to give proper protection to the youth of the State committed to him. Since the school is great and permanent, let's build dormitory facilities sufficient to care for the boys and girls of our church who come here.

HENRY T. YOUNG, Pastor.

OUR FAITH PLEDGED TO THIS.

The General Conference of 1918 spoke for the church when it pledged the faith of Southern Methodism to the carrying through of a great program for the present quadrennium. For two years the full power of the church was to be delivered in a new movement for missions; for two years the church was to give itself to the Christian Education Movement. It was not to be two separate and distinct programs, but two phases of the one program for the quadrennium.

Each Annual Conference of the church has given its pledge to the carrying through of the program. We must keep faith with our own high purposes and with One who has led us until now.

REV. C. M. DUNAWAY AT JACKSON, MISS.

Rev. C. M. Dunaway, of Decatur, Ala., assisted the pastor, Dr. H. F. Tolle, in a three weeks' revival campaign at Capitol Street Methodist Church, Jackson, Miss., during the month of April. The song service was under the direction of Prof. C. E. Edwards, of Barlow, Ky.

This series of services proved to be a great blessing to the church and also to the city of Jackson. Many church members were reclaimed and a great many made stronger in the faith and a great many Family Altar League and several Life Service cards were signed and seventy members added to the church.

Brother Dunaway's preaching was not to get men and women to join the church, but he preached the old-time gospel of Jesus Christ as a savior from sin, and appealed to all classes to get right with God. A large percentage of the conversions were young men and young women and old men and women.

We do not feel that the revival closed with the last service of the series, but that our church will continue to be a soul saving station and that eternity alone will be able to reveal the results of the good done by the preaching by Brother Dunaway.

Prof. Edwards proved himself to be a great blessing in the song service. He has the happy faculty of being able to get others to sing, and his special songs were very uplifting and soul-stirring. We do not hesitate in recommending these servants of God to any church desiring Spirit-filled men to assist them.

G. E. ALLAN,
Lay Leader.

HELP HEARTEN THE PUBLIC.

What is the church's duty in a time of depression such as this? Is it to fall in line with those who cry calamity, and thus add to the general demoralization of the country, or is it the church's business to hearten the people and thus help to create a spirit of optimism and faith?

For the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to carry through the Christian Education Movement, to pledge $33,000,000 and more, would help much in bringing about better conditions in the business world. It would be an indication that the country, after all, was not drifting toward bankruptcy; that the people of Southern Methodism had faith in the early recuperation of business. The country needs a message such as the pledge of millions for a great enterprise will bring. And it is the church's duty to serve the nation as well as its own interests. Let's make a contribution to the future prosperity of the country.

GREAT REVIVAL AT HOUSTON, MISS.

Friday night, April 29, closed the greatest revival that Houston has had for a long time. Rev. W. A. Wilson, our Conference evangelist, came to us April 17, with a heart full of love for God and lost souls. He preached Christ, and the people gladly heard him. Eternity only will reveal the results. There were twenty-one received at the close on profession of faith and two since. A number have joined the other churches.

All denominations took part and showed a most brotherly spirit, for which we are grateful.

The singing was by local talent, but was equal to the very best. For a month prior to the meeting the ladies had been holding cottage prayer meetings and praying for a revival. These prayer meetings are continued. There are four of them. And a business men's prayer meeting at the Court House is well attended. They all meet on Tuesday afternoons. The men have recently painted the church and the ladies are now making much improvement on the inside. The young ladies have chosen as their part the parlor at the parsonage and have it looking new.

We entertain the district conference, June 14, 15, 16, and hope to have the honor of your presence, Brother Carley.

Yours and His,
E. M. SHAW.

DR. CLARK HONORED.

Dr. Elmer T. Clark, secretary of the Department of Publicity of the Christian Education Movement, has been invited to address the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World at the Annual National Convention to be held in Atlanta next month. He has been asked to make a display at that convention of all the literature and publicity material issued by the Christian Education Commission.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON EVANGELISM, MAY, 1921.

Your Committee on Evangelism is happy to report that we seem to be at the beginning of a real religious awakening. We held fifty-six meetings in our church schools this year. There were more than one thousand professions of faith, several hundred young men acknowledged their call to the ministry, and several hundred young men and women volunteered for missionary work at home or abroad. It is our purpose to offer to all our church schools revival meetings next year at the expense of this Board.

The plan for church-wide revival which your Committee gave to the church last year has proven by actual test to be practicable, workable, and efficient. The gross increase in membership last year was the largest in our history, as was also the net increase. The plan having stood the pragmatic test, is no longer looked upon with fear or suspicion, and all objectors are put to silence. Reports coming into our office now indicate that this year's campaign will be far more fruitful than last year's. The pre-Easter meetings this year were the best in our history. Your Committee is now preparing to give special attention to the revival campaign in the rural districts during the coming summer season. If we can get the rural pastors to follow the plan as the city pastors are following it, we shall no doubt witness the same awakening in the country we now see in the city. Your Committee will bring to the rural pastors all possible help during the summer.

Our city churches everywhere report unprecedented attendance at the church services. Let us hope and pray that the ingathering during the year 1921 may outstrip that of 1920 as much as 1920 outstripped all other years in our history.

Our thirty-eight evangelists report a good year. It is estimated that more than twenty thousand people were brought into the church under their ministry during the past year. Our evangelists are loyal to the church and support faithfully all the great forward movements of the church. These general and Conference evangelists are under law just as are the pastors and presiding elders and other regular preachers. The unauthorized local preacher who roams at large is not under law and we have no way of controlling him. The day for the unauthorized evangelist in Methodist churches should cease. The man who cannot get the endorsement of his Conference should not evangelize in his Conference, and the man who cannot get the endorsement of the General Committee should not roam over the church as an evangelist.

Signed: U. V. W. DARLINGTON, Chairman.
O. E. GODDARD,
Secretary.

BLUE RIDGE MISSIONARY CON-FERENCE—AN INVITATION.

By C. G. Hounshell.

Our Board of Missions is greatly interested in the Missionary Education Conference to be held at Blue Ridge, North Carolina, June 24 to July 4, and is extending a cordial invitation to all our people to attend. This is an annual meeting heretofore held under the auspices of the Missionary Education Movement, but which has now been taken over by the Mission Boards of the great Southern churches.

This Conference draws the best from all denominations, and is able therefore to offer the strongest possible program. In addition to the great platform addresses by outstanding missionary leaders of our own and other churches, there will be classes in all the new mission study books. Among many noted speakers and leaders may be mentioned Dr. W. W. Pinson, Dr. H. H. Horn, Dr. W. D. Weatherford, Dr. O. E. Brown, Mrs. J. H. McCoy, Mrs. Hume R. Steele, Rev. John Little, Dr. H. F. Williams, and Mrs. E. C. Cronk.

As a meeting for inspiration and training in missionary principles and methods, the Blue Ridge Conference affords a unique opportunity. Add to this the privilege of coming in contact with the outstanding leaders of other denominations, the inspiring spiritual atmosphere of the Blue Ridge assembly and the rare charm of the physical surroundings, and you have a combination of attractions that no one who can possibly attend can afford to overlook.

It should be said that the Blue Ridge Conference in no way conflicts with our own General Missionary Conference, to be held at Lake Junaluska, July 29 to August 7. On this point Dr. Pinson, the General Secretary of our Board of Missions, says: "The Blue Ridge Conference meets June 24, the Junaluska Conference July 29. The first is interdenominational, the second Methodist. Both have in view the training of missionary leaders. They are in no sense in conflict or rivalry. They supplement each other. Those who can should attend both." The Blue Ridge Conference was also given the endorsement of our Board of Missions at its Annual Meeting in Nashville a few days ago.

There are no age limits. All who desire to know more about missions are invited. Registrations are already coming in. Delegates have been appointed from many churches. Those wishing reservations should register at once. For full information write the Educational Department, Board of Missions, Box 510, Nashville, Tennessee, or Missionary Education Conference, Blue Ridge, North Carolina.

A NEW CONSCIENCE ON THE SUB-JECT OF MONEY.

In the Centenary and Christian Education Movements, the doctrine of Christian stewardship and the duty of acknowledging God's ownership by the payment of at least the tithe, have been given an emphasis not known heretofore in the church. More and more, the truth of Christian stewardship and its importance from a spiritual as well as financial viewpoint, is changing the attitude of the church toward the question of property; 75,000 tithing pledge cards have been received at the central office; 3,500 have been received since the 1st of March, and it is conservatively estimated that at least 30,000 more cards have been signed that never reached headquarters.

In addition to those who have signed the pledge, many thousands have become tithers in acknowledgment of their stewardship, who, for one reason or another, have never signed a card, and a great many others have been brought to a new realization of God's ownership and their trusteeship, who have not joined the ranks of tithers.

THE TRIALS OF A HOUSEWIFE

How They Have Been Endured and How Overcome by
Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Experience of a Providence Woman

Providence, R. I.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for a female trouble and backache. It began just after my baby was born, and I did the best I could about getting my work done, but I had awful bearing-down pains so I could not stand on my feet. I read in the papers about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and the good it was doing other women, and I have got dandy results from it and will always recommend it. You can use these facts as a testimonial if you wish."—Mrs. HERBERT L. CASSEN, 18 Meni Court, Providence, R. I.

Ohio woman for three years could hardly keep about and do her housework she was so ill. Made well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound:

Fayette, O.—"For about three years I was very nervous and had backache, sideache, dragging-down pains, could not sleep at night, and had no appetite. At times I could hardly do my housework. I got medicine from the doctor but it did not help me. I saw Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised in a newspaper and took it with good results, and am now able to do my housework. I recommend your medicine to my friends and you may publish my testimonial."—Mrs. CHESTER A. BALL, R. 15, Fayette, Ohio.

An Illinois woman relates her experience:

Bloomington, Ill.—"I was never very strong and female trouble kept me so weak I had no interest in my housework. I had such a backache I could not cook a meal or sweep a room without raging with pain. Rubbing my back with alcohol sometimes eased the pain for a few hours, but did not stop it. I heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and six bottles of it have made me as strong and healthy as any woman; and I give my thanks to it for my health."—Mrs. J. A. McQUITTY, 610 W. Walnut St., Bloomington, Ill.

The conditions described by Mrs. Cassen, Mrs. Ball, and Mrs. McQuitty will appeal to many women who struggle on with their daily tasks in just such conditions—in fact, it is said that the tragedy in the lives of some women is almost beyond belief. Day in and day out they slave in their homes for their families—and beside the daily routine of housework, often make clothes for themselves and for their children, or work in their gardens, all the while suffering from those awful bearing-down pains, backache, headaches, nervousness, the blues, and troubles which sap the very foundation of life until there comes a time when nature gives out and an operation seems inevitable. If such women would only profit by the experience of these three women, and remember that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the natural restorative for such conditions it may save them years of suffering and unhappiness.

There is hardly a neighborhood in any town or hamlet in the United States wherein some woman does not reside who has been restored to health by this famous medicine. Therefore ask your neighbor, and you will find in a great many cases that at some time or other she, too, has been benefited by taking it, and will recommend it to you. For more than forty years this old-fashioned root and herb medicine has been restoring suffering women to health and strength.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Private Text-Book upon "Allments Peculiar to Women" will be sent to you free upon request. Write to The Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Massachusetts. This book contains valuable information.

Sunday School

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Brother W. C. Owen completed his tour at Laurel. We had a fine meeting at Capitol Street Church, Jackson, Miss., on Friday night for the Wesley Bible Classes. Brother Owen made a fine presentation of the work and much interest was manifested.

Sunday was spent at Laurel. All three churches were reached. A Wesley Bible Class Meeting was held in the afternoon with a large representation attending from all the churches. They decided to meet again on the fifth Sunday and perfect their organization. Brother J. B. Bridges was elected temporary chairman.

Wednesday and Thursday were spent at Decatur. We had a good meeting at Decatur. They agreed to emphasize the Evangelistic Campaign, Sabbath observance, and to improve their system of records.

Have you observed Sunday School Day? If you have, send your offering in. If you have not, please observe the day at your earliest convenience and send in your offering.

The Conference Standard Training School, Jackson, Miss., June 7-14. Don't fail to have your school represented.

Mrs. Murrah, the Superintendent of the Beginners' Department of Capitol Street Church, Jackson, reports her Department to First Rank. We were mighty glad to get this cheering information.

Pray for the work and the workers. God bless and keep you.

Your friend and brother,

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

The Greenwood District Conference appointed a committee to secure a place for holding a Standard Training School early in the autumn. When we have one trained teacher in each school, this teacher can train all the others. Our goal is a trained teacher for every class in the Conference.

All who heard Dr. Sam Steel preach at the session of the district conference at Lambert were glad the Louisiana Conference superannuated him. We were made to sit together in heavenly places as this great preacher unveiled the face of our Lord to us. We shall not hear anything like Dr. Steel again soon.

How many people realize that the Sunday school is the one and only institution that proposes to give Christian education to all the people? The work will be done well in proportion as we train teachers. Our first objective is to lead the soul to know God; the second is to train the soul in the worship of God; and the third is to train in the service of God. The teacher who knows her business is doing all these things constantly.

Why do the Masons have a Grand Lodge in the State? Why do the clubs have a federation? For the same reason we mean to organize our Bible classes into a federation. Many classes are being organized this month and after the federation we will organize double the number we have. Just look around you and see what these great classes are doing for the kingdom of God.

One of the first things we will do when we meet at Grenada, June 20, will be to elect a president, vice president, secretary, and treasurer of the federation. This will put us in a position to do bigger things next year.

It cheers a fellow wonderfully to see the interest the preachers are manifesting in our Training School. They are behind this enterprise and are lending a helping hand. It will be a big help to write a short notice to the county paper and give the name of those who expect to attend the Training School. If you have not the time to do this, get some one else to do it.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The District Sunday school meeting at Oakdale was held in the district conference. Rev. W. L. Doss, the presiding elder, was careful to see that full time, two hours, was given to the Sunday school work. The program was carried out as printed and we believe that much good was accomplished. The following officers were elected:

District Secretary, C. V. Breithaupt, Alexandria; Elementary Supt., Mrs. B. E. Early, Alexandria; Intermediate-Senior Supt., A. W. Bryan, Alexandria; Young People and Adult Supt., R. H. Cook, Natchitoches; Supt. Teacher Training, Dr. R. A. Cummins, Natchitoches; Supt. Missionary Education, Mrs. H. G. Owen, LeCompte.

The address on Religious Pedagogy, by Dr. Robert A. Cummins, of the State Normal at Natchitoches, was an able presentation of the subject, and we hope to see Dr. Cummins made an approved teacher in our Standard Training schools for the whole church.

The annual meeting of the New Orleans District Sunday schools will be held at Parker Memorial Church, Sunday afternoon from 3 to 5 of May 22. We are expecting at least 500 Methodists from the schools of the city and district to be present.

The annual Sunday school meeting of the Baton Rouge District will be held at Amite City May 25, which is Wednesday, from 10 a.m. to 12 m. A full delegation is expected.

Mansfield Standard Training School from June 15 to 22. The Faculty is chosen and comes selected.

Pastors, you come. Dr. Thomas Carter will give a Bible course of 12 lessons—six in Mark's Gospel and six in Romans. This course will be given when no other classes are assembled, to give the whole school the benefit of the course. Send in your names and enroll at once.

Leaders of Boys and Girls, come. Harry Denman is a leader of leaders in teen age work and teachers and superintendents of teen ages should come for this course. You will know how to handle those teen age boys and girls after this school. Enroll at once.

Leaders of children, come. Two courses are given for those who teach children. Miss Nell Richardson will teach Junior methods, and Miss Caroline Hess will teach Primary methods.

Those who want foundation course will take "Pupil Study," under Prof. D. B. Raulins.

All these courses are credit courses in Standard Training courses of M. E. Church, South.

Write your name on postal card, or any piece of paper and mail to me and I'll enroll you. Write me for information.

SUNDAY SCHOOL DAY.

Rev. J. E. Stephens, Treasurer of our Sunday School Board, North Mississippi Conference, reports that Sunday School Day money is coming in very slowly. Let me urge that in all the charges and in all the churches of all the charges, services be held and the people be given an opportunity to make an offering for our Sunday school work. Last year in the Aberdeen District eighteen out of the twenty charges reported something for Sunday School Day. In the Columbus District twelve out of nineteen charges reported. In the Corinth District seventeen charges out of twenty-seven made a report. In the Durant District fourteen charges out of twenty-three observed the day. Fourteen charges out of eighteen in Greenville District reported. Holly Springs swung fifteen of her charges out of a total of twenty-three into the line of support. Sardis had eighteen charges in line out of twenty-one, and Winona fifteen out of nineteen.

The cause is worthy and the program is good. Let the whole line advance.

and evenings will be given to a consideration of the questions which have to do with the work and purpose of our adult classes in the Sunday schools of North Mississippi. We speak of this meeting as a Federation of Bible Classes. All adult classes ought to be organized, and all organized classes ought to send one or two of its picked men or women to this Federation to be held at Grenada College on the date mentioned above. Winona, and Greenwood, and West Point, and Amory, and Greenville, and the other strong schools are looked to for a big attendance. Work for the program. Get in the game and find out what the other class is doing. See how they do their work. We need your co-operation to make this a great meeting, and your class needs the Federation.

TRAINING SCHOOL AT GRENADA COLLEGE.

We are expecting that June 19-25 will be a history-making period at Grenada College. Fully 200 or more of our fine Sunday school workers from North Mississippi will be in attendance for the Training School. You had better write Rev. J. R. Countiss, at Grenada, and ask him to reserve a room for you. Your expenses while at Grenada will be $1 per day for board and lodging.

The Sunday School Board of the North Mississippi Conference feels that fifty or sixty of the preachers of the Conference ought to be there, and in all probability will be there.

We have a fine faculty selected. Make your plans to take one of the eight courses offered; notify Brother Gladney what subject you want to study and it will save time and trouble.

Be sure to reach Grenada Saturday afternoon, or night of June 18.

WOMEN AND WORLD PEACE—DIS- ARMAMENT WEEK, MAY 22-29.

The Women's Committee for World Disarmament is asking the women of the nation to speak as a unit urging President Harding to take the lead in calling an international conference on disarmament and asking Congress to curtail military appropriations until such conference has been held. To this end they have set aside May 22-29 as Disarmament Week for this concerted effort.

The letter sent to women who are to act as State chairmen says in part:

"The time is here for women to act together for what women as individuals believe on the question of taking steps to make war less possible. In order that the widespread sentiment for an international conference looking towards disarmament may be focused upon President Harding and Congress, we are calling upon the women of the United States to express themselves during the last week of May, to be known as Disarmament Week.

"This is an emergency. Upon our willingness to meet it to the best of our vision and ability may depend the economic and moral salvation of our country and the civilization of the world. The women of other lands look to us to help stay this tide of militarism and world bankruptcy. In one united effort we can at least make the voice of women heard."

It is expected that Congressmen will be flooded with letters from women in their districts representing every large women's organization in the country as well as the small groups who are seldom heard from.

The Board of Missions Adopts Resolutions on Disarmament.

The following resolutions were adopted unanimously by the Board of Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in session May 4-6:

Be it resolved by the Board of Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in Annual Session assembled:

1. That it is the sense of this body that the providential hour has arrived in the history of the nations for the curtailment of armaments, looking to the permanent preservation of peace.

2. That we believe the United States of America is in position from every standpoint, both of opportunity and of obligation, to take the lead in such a movement.

3. That we therefore request President Harding to call at an early date an international congress, looking toward progressive disarmament; and

4. That we call also upon Congress to lend all possible aid to this movement.

IMPORTANT COUNCIL ITEM.

Resolution Concerning the Council.

Believing that the work of the Woman's Missionary Council has been marvelously blessed of God; and,

Believing, further, that in His providence and under His guidance there remain great tasks which are peculiarly the work of this organization; therefore be it

Resolved, That this body put to record in this session the fact that it would deplore any legislation by the General Conference which would lessen its present powers to direct and operate its work during the coming quadrennium.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

New Orleans Epworth Church, Mission and Bible Study.

Having completed the study of our book, it was suggested that we review the entire work in one evening; accordingly each member of the class prepared a chapter lesson, and we met at the church, Tuesday, May 9, at 3 p. m.

The lessons given were interesting and inspiring, and while we do not presume to say we found all "the pearls lying in the depths," we realize that we found many helpful messages, which strengthened our missionary spirit.

Helen B. Montgomery in her book, "The Bible and Missions" has so beautifully portrayed the missionary example of our Lord and Savior, and the study of her splendid work has touched a dormant chord in the hearts of her readers; we feel that this book should prove a sweet reference for study in our leisure moments.

We hope to have a large class in the fall and will look forward with pleasure to the renewal of our study.

Miss G. CARTY, Secretary.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Newton District Meeting.

The Newton District meeting will be held at Newton, June 1-3. How about your coming? Yes, you are all busy women, but not too busy to lay aside other thing for this occasion of much importance to you and the work you wish to do. There will be interesting study and information, and the best of good fellowship. Come, we will be expecting a good representation from each society. Mrs. W. L. HUNTER, District Secretary.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Greenville District Meeting.

The district meeting was held at Lula, May 12 and 13. I never saw a more interested, enthusiastic meeting and the attendance was most unusual—140 delegates, visitors and ministers were present. On Friday a lovely luncheon and fish fry was given us by the hospitable people at their beautiful Moon Lake.

The program, except for the much regretted absence of Mrs. Neblett, seemed to be just what our women needed. Mrs. G. B. Taylor, of Cleveland Juniors, presented the work for Mrs. Neblett. Mrs. J. M. Wyatt, of Shelby, conducted a round table on missionary problems and how to solve them, which will prove wonderfully helpful. Mrs. Fant brought a splendid message from the Council, telling us the very things we most needed to know. The Clarksdale auxiliary gave an excellent program on "Christian Education."

A beautiful spirit pervaded the whole meeting, the presence of God was with us and I am convinced that each one present departed with a vision and a higher conception of individual responsibility. We are full of hope for our work this year. The slogan adopted by our presiding elder, Brother Felts, "Greenville District knows no retreat," means that our work will go forward. Greenville invited us to meet there next year.

Our Young People's Rally will be at Hollandale, June 9 and 10. Nothing that made for our pleasure and comfort was left undone by our hostesses, Mrs. Rhodes, president of Lula Auxiliary, assisted by Mrs. Harris Riley, chairman of entertainment and her committees, as well as Brother Brown, our pastor host.

Mrs. B. P. WOOLLARD,
District Secretary.

FROM BYHALIA, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: We have just closed one of the best meetings that have been held in Byhalia in many years. Rev. W. A. Wilson, our Conference evangelist, did the preaching, and all who have had this man of God in a meeting know he did it well. Brother Wilson is a power. He is a man of great faith in God, coupled with a determination that knows no defeat. He is a sweet-spirited man, but he has moral courage to face the devil anywhere. The meeting was one of the old-time type where men and women came to the altar and professed faith in their Lord. I think the effects of the meeting will be seen and felt for years to come. As a result of the meeting we received fifty-five members into the Methodist Church, and fifty of these were received on profession of faith. This is evidence that God's arm is not shortened and His ear is not heavy, but He is ready to give His children great things when they meet the conditions. Pray for us that we may keep the spiritual fires burning upon the altar of our hearts. Yours and His,

C. T. FLOYD, P. C.

SCHOOLS FOR RURAL PASTORS AND LAY WORKERS.

The program is out. Teachers of the highest grade are on it—university trained, skilled by experience, both in the actual work of the rural task, and in conducting schools on rural life. These men have submitted schedules for their class work and the program has been so arranged that no overlapping will be done.

These schools are a new venture with us and surely have in mind a most wholesome purpose. We are receiving from all sections of the church the most sympathetic support in this movement. The Methodists of city and town, as well as in the rural sections, are interested in the country church. Well they may be: for if the rural church fails, sooner or later, they, too, will fail. There need be no hesitation in giving the widest possible publicity to these schools, for we will live up to our claims. Every pastor on a rural charge should have the privilege of this ten days at Conway, Arkansas, or Lake Juna-luska, N. C.

We are competing with no other summer schools or training schools; because no others are attempting the Rural Life Program as we are. We hope every other summer school may be largely attended, but every man who purposes to do work in rural communities—towns of 2500 or under—should deny himself all other privileges and come to one of these schools. Moreover, it would be well for us if he were encouraged to do it. If we imperil the rural church, we hazard the interest of the whole denomination.

If you have not sent in your card for reservations, do it right away.

The bishops and presiding elders have been high in their praises of the movement. We are hoping they will further evidence their interest by urging certain men in their districts to avail themselves of this opportunity for better equipment for their work.

We should be glad to have you, Mr. Editor, to come with us and give us the benefit of your counsel.

Epworth League.

COME TO HATTIESBURG!

Dear Epworthians and Friends: Hattiesburg offers to you, on June 7-10, a very great opportunity for inspiration and instruction along League lines.

Some very excellent speakers have been secured and plans laid for an interesting meeting. The representative from the Central Office is Mr. Garfield Evans, who holds the position of Life Service Superintendent. I am sure that he has in store for us a number of good things. Mrs. F. S. Love, formerly Miss Phala Hawkins of the Central Office, will be in charge of the Junior work of the Conference.

Come! You'll do us good and we'll return the favor. Sincerely,

ERMA M. KILE,
Conference Secretary.

EPWORTH LEAGUE CONFERENCE, NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

Let every charge, and church, send some of their very best young people, as many as will come, to the League Conference to be held at Grenada College.

Program begins on the afternoon of June 9, and closes Saturday morning, June 11. All trains from every direction come in and go out of Grenada at noon. Send your young people whether you have a League, as such, or not. A charge of $2 will be made for meals served in the dining room; 50c per meal for any who may drop in for one or two meals, but no reduction for any meal missed while there for the two days. No charge for rooms. Bring sheets, pillow cases and towels. "All-Aboard" for Grenada.

We are to have with us at the League Conference Mr. James E. Ellis, of the Upper South Carolina Conference, and Miss Nell Drake, of Port Gibson, Miss. Miss Drake will have charge of missionary lectures; Mr.

SPRING AILMENTS

Impure Blood, Humors.—Relief in a Good Medicine.

Spring ailments are due to impure, thin, devitalized blood.

Among them are pimples, boils, other eruptions, catarrh, rheumatism, loss of appetite, that tired feeling, nervousness and "all run-down" conditions.

Hood's Sarsaparilla combines the roots, barks, herbs, berries and other medicinals that have been found in many years of intelligent observation to be most effective in the treatment of these ailments.

Successful physicians prescribe the same ingredients for diseases of the blood, stomach, liver and kidneys, and in cases where alternative and tonic effects are needed.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is the spring medicine that purifies, enriches and revitalizes your blood, increasing power of resistance to disease.

Every League is expected to send delegates to this conference, and also every charge, whether there is a League or not. You will do well to send a group of young people anyway. The board will cost only one dollar per day; however, the delegates are required to bring their own sheets, towels and pillow cases.

We expect to have lectures, addresses, and much helpful discussion on live League subjects. There will be good fellowship, games on the campus; in fact, something every hour for more than two days to interest and instruct.

President.

SHALL WE USE THE OPPORTUNITY?

Practically without exception, the speakers who have carried to the people the message of the Christian Education Movement report that they have never before noted such interest on the part of the public as in this enterprise of our church. Many pastors have made similar statements concerning the "state of mind" of their own people. It is plain that the people are more ready to hear this message of the church than we believed would be the case when the Movement was launched.

Why this great interest? First of all, there is a quickening conscience concerning education. The people of the South are beginning to see that we have not done for the cause of education what our needs demanded and what our financial ability made possible. On the basis of comparative strength financially, the South has not kept pace with other sections in the matter of investments in education. We are seeing this as we had not in the past.

Then, there is a new understanding of the vital importance of Christian education as related to the coming of the Kingdom of Christ. Our people are seeing this as never before, and with this new understanding of the obligation of the church there has been developed such an interest and such a conscience as the church did not have six months ago. It is the best sign of promise for the church to-day.

If, with this readiness of mind on the part of the people, we fail to go to our limit in the matter of driving home the truth, it will be a real calamity for Southern Methodism. We must not fail. Let no preacher or lay worker fail to use every day and every opportunity yet ours for the doing of this big task.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S CAMP CONFERENCE.

The General Sunday School Board has authorized the holding of the first Camp Conference for Young People from approximately 18 to 24 years of age at Lake Junaluska, North Carolina, August 12-26, 1921.

There will be special courses for leadership, dealing with practical class and department problems. In addition to a devotional study of the Bible and a course in "Training the Devotional Life," the young people will hold devotional meetings under their own leadership. There will also be the opportunity for counsel with trained men and women on all phases of personal religious life. The organized recreation will not only afford a most delightful vacation, but will at the same time present a constructive program of activities to meet this need at home.

The afternoons will be spent in swimming, boating, hiking, picnics and in both formal and informal recreational features.

Bishop Atkins, Chairman of the Sunday School Board, speaking of the camp, said:

"I cannot but urge that as many as possible of our young people shall attend this wholesome recreation camp."

The expenses of the camp are reasonable and the railroads offer a one and one-third rate.

No young man or woman could make a better investment than in this trip; no Sunday school could make a better investment than in sending a young man or woman to this camp conference.

During the past few months I have come into close touch with the great educational work which you are doing in the South. I saw your great colleges and universities with men of light and leading at the head of them, and the eager students that throng your institutions. I also saw in your Conferences hundreds of ministers who told me it was the regret of their lives that they had never been able to secure for themselves a college or seminary training. Will you permit me therefore to utter both a hearty congratulation and an earnest challenge? Will the church prove herself adequate to the situation? Only an educated community and ministry can take full advantage of your marvelous opportunities. May God fire your hearts to make the great Methodist Episcopal Church, South, a leader in an educational movement that shall have Christ at the centre of it and thereby supplant a training that is purely selfish by one that will serve and bless the world.

Noted Pastor and Evangelist.

C. L. GOODELL.

I can certainly commend and endorse very heartily the Education Campaign planned by the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and you may say for me that I am in the most hearty sympathy with such a movement to put into the ministry young men who are thoroughly educated in the highest and best sense of that word. I wish full success to your undertaking.

CHARLES M. SHELDON.

Editor of the Christian Herald; Author of "In His Steps" and other volumes.

True education is, of necessity, character education. And that means Christian education, without any modern thinning out of that word Christian. Simply to store the mind and put a sharp edge on the mental powers may make a man a menace to society, and worse. There must be true moral standards and judgments instilled, and a moral motive power put in, else the whole thing may thwart the chief objective in education. All our American higher education was begun and fostered by the Christian Church. And that initiative should be most earnestly followed up. Education that is not distinctly Christian is distinctly dangerous, except as it may be affected by unconscious Christian influence. This makes the present effort by Southern Methodism to increase decidedly the efficiency of their whole church school system of first importance.

S. D. GORDON.

Author of the "Quiet Talks" series of books on religion.

What Some Great Preachers Say

I earnestly hope that this great movement which has been started in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will reach the goal of all your endeavors and hopes. The experiences of recent months are teaching the world that there can be no stable civilization that does not rest on a religious foundation. Our only hope as a nation is through the right kind of leadership and this means a Christian leadership such as can only be secured through institutions in which the Bible is studied and Christ honored. The great enterprise in which you are engaged of establishing Christian institutions is one of supreme importance and should appeal to every patriotic citizen and to every earnest Christian enlisted in the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth.

J. ROSS STEVENSON.

President of Princeton Theological Seminary.

Assuredly the campaign of Wesley's spiritual children for our southern people is dictated by necessities which are fully realized by all Christian statesmen and leaders. The emphasis given in this project to educational demands is entirely wise. No church can retain its hold upon the public heart and mind which does not dominate in Christian learning.

S. PARKES CADMAN.

Noted Brooklyn Divine.

The plan of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, for improvement of its educational facilities has my heartiest approval, and the breadth and liberality with which the plan is conceived excites my admiration. The supreme aim of all wisely ordered education is the elevation of CHARACTER, and this requires not merely knowledge but wisdom, and not merely the wish to be good and to do good, but acquaintance with the proper and most effective ways of carrying out that wish. This makes it impossible to realize the aim of education without giving to the religious nature its due importance in the well-being of man—both the individual and society.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

A COMPLETE CANVASS.

Reports already received show that a great many churches and pastoral charges throughout the connection "went over the top" last Sunday in securing their quotas in the Christian Education Movement. This fact is an inspiring proof of the intelligent interest of our people in this great cause and of their loyalty to the church in its efforts to meet the urgent needs of its educational institutions. The mere fact, however, that the quota was not secured on the first day should not mean in any case that the quota is not to be secured at all. It was not expected that every charge would be able to complete its canvass in one day, and the campaign period was made long enough to carry the appeal to every member in the church. There are yet three full days in which to prosecute the work, and it is upon the efforts made during these three days that success or failure will depend. We earnestly appeal for a complete canvass in every charge, so that every member of the church may have the privilege of sharing in the glorious consummation of this noteworthy undertaking. A great task always challenges men to do their very best.

MEMORIAL DAY.

Last Monday, May 30, was Memorial Day, set apart to commemorate the sacrifice of the thousands of young men of America who gave their lives in the carnage of war that the blessings of peace might come to the world. It is a sacred day in the nation's calendar, and its observance should warm every heart with the glow of undimmed patriotism and the fervor of a renewed consecration to the lofty ideal of unselfish service. It is a tragedy that men should have to die for the best things in life; it were a greater tragedy to let these men lie in their graves unhonored and unsung. We pause reverently and bow our heads humbly as we think of the heritage into which we have entered through the death of our heroes; and we pray God that this great country may never lack a multitude of men and women who are willing even to die for the right.

—AND WE DIDN'T KNOW IT!

We always enjoy reading Zion's Herald, and we turn to it confidently each week with the expectation of finding things that are both interesting and inspiring. It is seldom that we are disappointed—and sometimes we are rewarded beyond our fondest hopes. For example: In the Issue of May 11, under the caption, "Southern Editors Embarrassed," we learn that two Southern editors, Rev. L. C. Branscomb, D.D., of the Alabama Christian Advocate, and Rev. Henry T. Carley, of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, now find themselves "in a most embarrassing position arising from their criticism of an editorial entitled 'Is the Negro Free,' which appeared a few weeks ago in Zion's Herald." We learn further that the two editors aforementioned, in criticizing the editorial in Zion's Herald, "have not only wasted their time and their ink, but have also covered themselves with confusion." We do not know how Dr. Branscomb feels about it; as for ourselves, we cannot find words adequate to express our appreciation of the discovery the erudite editor of Zion's Herald has made concerning us. Here we are, in a most embarrassing position, covered with confusion, wasting time and ink—and we didn't know it! If our intense interest in the psychology of the case were not overcome by our feeling of gratitude to our learned friend for his intimate revelation concerning our state of mind, we should be inclined to "waste" more time and ink in expressing our wonder that we could feel so perfectly calm and wholly unabashed, and at the same time be "in a most embarrassing position," and "covered with confusion." In such predicament without knowing it! Thank you, Dr. Hartman, thank you!

We much fear, however, that the wise Dr. Hartman, in his ecstasy over his discovery that we are "in a most embarrassing position," and that we are "covered with confusion," based his revelation upon what he imagined we were thinking (and he has a vivid imagination), and not upon what we actually said when we penned our few feeble lines. He makes the following naive statement: "Both these editors assumed when they wrote their criticisms that the only data in the mind of the Herald editor were furnished by the Williams case." This is wonderful! Now, how does he know that? We did not make any such assumption; nothing we wrote implies any such assumption; it was not remotely in our mind to make such assumption—yet this gifted seer calmly assures us that we did make it. Such knowledge is too wonderful for us! How can just one head hold such vast store of information?

In justification of his former pronouncement, that "this whole case (the Williams case) is sickening in its revelations of conditions in the South," the learned editor of Zion's Herald cites a booklet written by Governor Dorsey, of Georgia, in which the Governor charges that there have been numerous cases of barbarous treatment of Negroes in the State, and he takes the statements contained therein as proof of the correctness of his own judgment. If New Orleans were as far from Georgia as Boston is, we might profess to know all about the situation there; since it is not, we shall have to gain our knowledge as best we can at close range. In his acceptance of Governor Dorsey's statements, however, our fair-minded friend, through inadvertence possibly, omits any mention of the fact that other prominent public officials and private citizens of Georgia have, publicly and vigorously, categorically denied the truth of the Governor's statements, and have challenged him to substantiate his charges with the proof. Since "It is a poor rule that won't work both ways" we commend to the editor of Zion's Herald the profound wisdom of the words he so graciously addresses to us: "May we be permitted to say also that nothing ever is gained by ignoring or denying the truth of actual conditions. The ostrich buries its head in the sand and sees nothing wrong, but that bird's action ought not to be accepted as a worthy example to editors."

For the sake of clearness, we restate the substance of our reply to the previous editorial in Zion's Herald, "Is the Negro Free?": The Williams case in Georgia, with all its horrible details, does not justify the conclusion of the editor of Zion's Herald that "the whole case is sickening in its revelations of conditions in the South," because such conditions do not exist generally in the South. That the editor himself realized that his conclusion was too general, we take to be evident from his modified statement in his later utterance of May 11: "A wide reading of reports from Georgia, however, convince the editor that this case did not stand alone, and that it did represent a condition altogether too prevalent in Georgia and probably in other sections of the South." (The black-face type is ours.) There is a wide margin between the statements that such and such conditions do exist, and they probably exist, though in this particular case the second inference is as fallacious as the first. We repeat and stand by the statement we made in the former editorial dealing with this matter: "Only those who are blinded by prejudice, fettered by ignorance, or misled by false statements, believe that the South defends or condones peonage, or that it upholds any policy of racial injustice."

THOSE WHO WALK WITH US.

The days grow shorter and the nights grow longer:
The headstones thicken along the way:
And life grows sadder, but love grows stronger
For those who walk with us, day by day.

The tear comes quicker, the laugh comes slower:
The courage is less to do and dare:
And the tide of joy in the heart falls lower,
And all true things in the world seem truer,
And the better things of earth seem best,
And friends are dearer, and friends are fewer,
And love is all, as our sun dips west.

Then let us clasp hands, as we walk together,
And let us speak softly, in low, sweet tone:
For no man knoweth, on the morrow, whether
We two pass on—or but one.

—Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

LEAVES FROM THE LIFE OF DR. JOHN W. BOSWELL.

Conference Experiences.

I never had any experiences out of the ordinary at an Annual Conference. It was a wonderful thing to me when quite young to meet great men, to hear them talk and preach. Dr. Jno. B. McFerrin and Dr. R. A. Young were then in their prime. They were great preachers, but not the equals of Bishops Paine and Pierce and Kavanaugh. But, as platform speakers, Drs. McFerrin and Young had no rivals. Each in his own way excelled Saturday night, the time for the Missionary Anniversary, and the occasion of the Annual Conference. No matter who was the speaker, every foot of space was occupied. The people expected something, and were seldom disappointed. If Dr. McFerrin was the speaker, the audience was sure of a rousing time and a big collection. If Dr. Young was the man of the hour, they were treated to a strong, enlightening address, delivered in as chaste and elegant English as ever came from the lips of a Southern orator. And a big collection followed. The reader must understand that the Annual Conference anniversaries were depended on, not to supplement the missionary collection, but to raise the biggest collection of the year. The result was, the preachers were drained of all their cash. We do better in these latter days—we give our money at home—and we carry more to Conference than we did in the old days. My part in these experiences was to look on and give a little money.

Sometimes we boys had a little fun at the expense of our elders. I remember that for chairman of our third or fourth year's class we had the wisest, most easy-going and instructive examiner in the Conference. He was fond of smoking and talking, and the boys kept him doing both at the same time. They supplied his pipe and plied questions, and kept it up until midnight. So it turned out that, if they didn't know the lessons when they came to class, they knew them when they left. Maybe that wasn't a fair way to learn. The method was efficient. Some of the examiners turned the tables on the youngsters. Said one brother to the class: "The way to get through this business is to look wise, act as though you knew, and ask questions." He tried his tactics on Dr. S—, who, when he asked the first question (and the only one), replied, "Brother G., I didn't come here to answer questions, I came here to ask them." That ended the bluffing game.

My most blessed Annual Conference experiences consisted in fellowship with my brethren—of that I have had a full share. The unpleasant encounters during a fellowship of sixty-two years could be counted on the fingers of one hand.

At General Conferences I have had painful and amusing experiences. My first look on that august body was in 1870 at Memphis. I was young and only a "looker on." I made what I thought was proper preparation for the visit. I carried a brand new broadcloth suit of clothes; but for some reason I did not wear it when I went to the Conference room. By the close of the first day I discovered that I didn't need it. I was fairly well dressed anyhow. Nobody except the home-folks knew me, or paid any attention to me, and my new suit remained in my satchel until I got back to my parsonage.

That General Conference gave me a painful shock. I was a preacher's son and read the church papers as far back as I can remember. There was not a noted man in the church with whose name I was not familiar, and I had imbibed the idea that our noted men were great men. Certainly there was something about them that attracted attention and put them in high places; but all of them were not great. Some of them lacked much of it. As a matter of fact, compared to some of their fellows they were small. I did not lose respect for them, for they were good men, but the idea that they were great vanished forever. On the other hand, a few men less conspicuous in the public eye loomed large and exercised a controlling influence. Among these was Dr. Alpheus W. Wilson, then a young man, who a few years afterwards was elected bishop. Dr. John C. Keener was a little past middle life. The race between him and Dr. James A. Duncan for the Episcopacy was very close. A short speech he made, not more than five minutes in length, a day or two before the election, turned the scales in his favor.

Bishop McTyeire was the most forceful man of the body—the only presiding officer that could keep order. Up to that time I had never seen such a disorderly Conference. I called the attention of one of the delegates to it. His reply was, "No one can keep order in a General Conference." I said: "To-morrow is Bishop McTyeire's turn to preside. He will keep order." "No," said he, "General Conferences make bishops, and they do as they please, paying little attention to the bishops' rulings." The day after Bishop McTyeire occupied the chair, I met that delegate again and said: "What do you think now?" He answered: "He did keep order, but I didn't believe he could." Did Bishop McTyeire ever undertake anything he did not succeed in accomplishing? Some persons thought he was a mighty poor preacher. Two preachers were discussing his merits. One held him in the highest esteem as a preacher. The other thought him mighty dull and indifferent. A third brother was called into consultation: "What do you think of Bishop McTyeire as a preacher?" His answer was, "He is no preacher for fools." A little dampness fell on the conversation. During that first day's presidency of Bishop McTyeire, one of the most prominent members of the body undertook to make a speech, but for some reason the Bishop ruled him out of order. He continued to speak. The Bishop arrested him again. The speaker appealed from the Bishop's decision, but his decision was overwhelmingly sustained. The brother continued to speak. The Bishop interposed and said: "Dr. L., whatever may have been the case heretofore, you are certainly out of order now. Take your seat." And he did. Bishop McTyeire was master of the situation.

At another General Conference I saw and heard things, and had an experience, if not an adventure. During the first week there was preaching every night at the principal church in the city. It was understood among the delegates that every man appointed to preach in that church during that week was "spoken of as a suitable man for bishop." That made him "the observed of all observers." Under such circumstances, very few men could do themselves or the cause justice. Only two did. The others were ill at ease, and plainly showed that they were "preaching trial sermons." It was hard work. How they did attitudinize, and gesticulate, and try to look dignified and wise! And how they did sweat! Only one of the seven or eight that occupied that pulpit reached the goal, and he was one of the two who were thoroughly self-possessed. As I was not in the "eligible" class, I was not uneasy. But I made up my mind that, if appointed to preach anywhere in the city, I would try to be natural and preach just as I was accustomed to before my Arkansas congregation. The second Sunday evening I was appointed to one of the small suburban churches. I spent nearly all day in preparation. I selected what I thought was a suitable subject—Christian Courage. Only a few weeks before this the city had passed through an exciting election, local option being the question at issue. The moral forces of the city were badly beaten. I could not resist the call, stranger though I was, to tell the people why they had been so overwhelmed. The whiskey forces threatened a boycott. Many good people voted the whiskey ticket who otherwise would have voted for local option. By some means I had gotten hold of a statement of the strength of the churches of the city, and used it to the best advantage. I called attention to the fact that Christian sentiment in the city is predominant, that every third man is a Baptist, that the Methodists are strong, and that the Presbyterian and Episcopal Churches are of commanding influence, "and yet," said I, "with all these churches on the side of right, you suffered yourselves to be intimidated by the forces of evil, and went down in defeat." When I concluded, the pastor of the church jumped up, and with his arms flying in every direction, said, as if frightened, "I hope the brother who has just preached will tell the congregation that I had nothing to do in inspiring that sermon." I didn't know what was the matter, but I assured the audience that the pastor was entirely innocent, that I alone was responsible. After dismissal he explained: "Just three weeks ago I preached a sermon on that line. It offended many of my members, and they have not been back to church until to-night." That was a bit of experience out of the ordinary.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE GENERAL BOARD OF FINANCE.

By Luther E. Todd, Secretary.

The Annual Meeting of the General Board of Finance for the year, March 31, 1920-March 31, 1921, was held in St. Louis, Mo., April 25-26. The members of the Board in attendance were: Bishop W. F. McMurry, Mr. Jno. W. Frisbie, Gov. Lon V. Stephens, Dr. C. W. Tadlock, Bishop E. R. Hendrix, Bishop W. N. Ainsworth, Rev. J. A. Smith, Rev. H. E. Draper, Dr. T. N. Ivey, Dr. T. E. Sharp, Dr. S. P. Cresap, Mr. F. M. Jackson, and Luther E. Todd.

The following interesting facts are taken from the Secretary's report:

The total increase of the General Superannuate Endowment Fund for the year was $129,878.41, making the total amount of the General Fund on March 31, 1921, $710,141.30. Of this amount, $104,486.33 is subject to annuity contracts.

The total amount of the General Fund when the Board of Finance took charge, September 2, 1918, was $446,080.25. Therefore, the Board of Finance, during the two and one-half years of its existence, has added to the General Fund $264,061.05. This has been accomplished notwithstanding special campaigns throughout the church for other purposes, and in the face of other great difficulties.

Since the Board of Finance was created the assessment for the immediate support of the Conference Claimants has been increased $159,295. If this increase in the assessment for immediate support were figured in terms of endowment, it would require $2,654,500 at 6 per cent to earn it.

The several Annual Conferences own 116 superannuate homes, valued at $286,760. The total amount of Conference Superannuate Endowment Funds is $669,952, which amount, added to the value of superannuate homes, makes $956,712 total Conference Superannuate Endowment.

The latest reports show that the church now has 828 superannuates and 1,332 widows. The average amount per capita paid to superannuates the past year was $286, to widows $197. This is equal to $100 per capita increase for superannuates and $72 per capita increase for widows, since the Board of Finance came into existence.

The amount contributed from the 1 per cent assessment on salaries for the General Fund during the past year was $55,369, being more than $10,000 in excess of any amount so paid in the history of the church. On this item the South Georgia Conference leads with $3,346. The Virginia Conference is second with $2,994. The Central Texas Conference is third with $2,970. The North Georgia Conference is fourth with $2,891.

There are 2,019 pastors receiving each, as salary, under $1,000; 1,971 pastors receive each $1,000 and under $1,500; 1,237 pastors receive each $1,500 and under $2,000; 529 pastors receive each $2,000 and under $2,500; 175 pastors receive each $2,500 and under $3,000; 217 pastors receive each $3,000 and under $4,000; and only 61 pastors receive each $4,000 and up.

The Board approved the Secretary's recommendation of a Preachers' Savings Department, wherein the savings of preachers will be accepted on deposit and 5 per cent compound annual interest allowed thereon, subject to certain conditions, which will be fully explained in the Third Annual Bulletin. This is a distinct advance in the work of the Board and it is sure to meet the hearty approval of the preachers throughout the church.

A Special Commission of Seven was appointed to have in hand matters pertaining to the proposed campaign during the next quadrennium, for adequate Superannuate Endowment. The following were appointed members of the Commission: Bishop W. F. McMurry, Bishop W. N. Ainsworth, Dr. T. N. Ivey, Dr. T. E. Sharp, Dr. C. W. Tadlock, Mr. Jno. W. Fristoe and Luther E. Todd.

The Third Annual Bulletin fully covering all of the above items, and a great deal more, will be mailed to every preacher in the church, together with a copy of "When Crossroads Cross Again," on or before July 1, 1921. Any one besides the preachers who would like to be placed on the mailing list for the above named publications is requested to send to the offices the name and address on a postal card.

All claimants who have changed their addresses and who have not notified the Board of said changes are requested to send their present addresses to the Board at once. Otherwise many distribution checks are likely to miscarry. Send all communications to the Board of Finance, 510-13 Security building, St. Louis, Mo.

THE CORINTH DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The recent conference of the Corinth District, held at Baldwin, was in fact an unusual one in more than one way. The attendance was like those I have seen twenty years ago. I have not seen such an attendance at a district conference in North Mississippi in my day up here. This is the most important conference in our church in many ways, and we lose when the folk are not there. I think every pastor was there and every charge had a lay representative, and some full representation, and some were represented with several visitors.

The people of Baldwin were most gracious and liberal in their hospitality. It was a delightful time we spent in that splendid little city. The people of the town came to every service and the house was full all day long.

Our presiding elder, Brother Randolph, presided well. He looked as a veteran at the job. He had every detail well in hand and went through the work without confusion, hurry, or unnecessary delay. We felt proud of our one-year-old elder.

We were treated to some fine deliverances. The address of Senator W. R. Webb was a notable utterance. Dr. W. R. Bourne brought one of the most felicitous educational speeches we have heard. We also heard with pleasure a really great address by Hon. W. M. Cox, who was asked by the conference to speak to us on the subject that was predominant in this Conference. The following brethren did themselves and their subjects credit: B. P. Jaco, G. L. Harrel, J. G. Houston, D. H. Hall, R. M. Weaver. Mrs. S. F. Riley represented the Orphans' Home. Miss Etta Murray presented the work of the W. M. S., and Rev. R. H. B. Gladney represented the Sunday school interest. Besides, the conference heard with patience the sermons of W. M. McIntosh, J. E. Stephens, P. F. Luter, J. W. Ward and O. W. Bradley. The opening sermon was preached by our saintly brother, D. W. Babb.

L. B. Wimberly, C. W. Allen and Roy A. Gresham were licensed to preach. Rev. E. P. Craddock was recommended for admission from the Presbyterian Church. R. C. Nanny, J. C. Nelson, and J. B. Love were recommended for deacon's orders. J. T. Gullett, J. D. Boggs, Edgar Blizzard and S. P. Gresham were recommended for elder's orders. The presiding elder nominated the following Licensing Committee: O. W. Bradley, B. P. Fullilove, A. R. Beasley, J. W. Ward, R. G. A. Carlisle, and W. W. Jones. The following were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: D. H. Hall, R. M. Weaver, E. D. Stephens, W. C. McCay, Miss Corinne Rogers, Miss Etta Murry, Miss Jimmie Caldwell and J. G. Houston; alternates: S. S. Finger, Edgar Blizzard, W. R. Akin, and Mrs. J. M. Augry.

The reports from the district were never better, despite the depression. Finances and revivals are ahead of many years. If we do not go over the top in this campaign for education, I don't think that the blame can be put on Houston, Weaver, the elder, W. T. Rogers, or Hall. And I believe every preacher is doing the very best he can.

The next conference goes to Sherman.

O. W. BRADLEY.

SARDIS DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The fifty-first session of the Sardis District Conference was held at Senatobia, May 3-5. The organization was perfected Tuesday night after a sermon by Rev. A. C. McCorkle.

The conference was well attended. Between thirty and forty delegates of the laity answered to their names. These men and women of the laity entered eagerly into the work of the conference and hopefully faced the tasks before the church at this time.

Despite the financial depression, the reports of the preachers were encouraging. Few revivals have been held to date, but a growth in membership was reported throughout the district. Many of the pastors stated that their people intended to pay every pledge made to the church.

The connectional interests were ably represented. Rev. B. P. Jaco presented the status of the Centenary collections. Dr. Bourne, of Centenary College, and Rev. J. H. Holder brought inspiring addresses on the Educational Campaign. Mrs. Riley, of the Orphans' Home, spoke for that institution. Dr. Childress, of New Orleans, told of the work of the Rescue Home for Unfortunate Women. Rev. R. H. B. Gladney urged the pastors to support the Training Schools at Grenada and Junaluska for the training of religious leaders. Brother Bell was present and addressed the conference in behalf of the superannuate preachers.

Dr. C. C. Grimes, of St. John's Church, Memphis, delivered a great sermon Thursday morning. Other sermons were preached by Rev. A. C. McCorkle, Rev. J. T. Lewis, and Rev. Melville Johnson.

The conference recommended Brothers H. H. Wallace and G. C. Gregory for admission on trial into the traveling connection. The Ad Interim Licensing Committee was named as follows: E. G. Mohler, R. O. Brown, A. C. McCorkle, N. G. Augustus.

Dr. L. L. Minor, Memphis, Station G, R. F. D. 5, was re-elected district lay leader.

The Committee on Lay Activities is as follows: J. R. Wilson, Arkabutla; J. B. Carothers, Batesville; G. S. Smart, Elyhalla; Warren Stuart, Charleston; C. G. Langston, Cockrum; J. M. Chambly, Coldwater; J. W. Wooten, Como; G. W. Gunn, Pope; W. M. McDade, Crenshaw; T. O. Adams, Oakland; W. F. Wood, Hernando; L. L. Minor, Memphis; J. W. Jennings, Sarah, Route 2; J. M. Coleman, Oakland; J. W. Ivey, Mount Pleasant; V. Denman, Sardis; E. E. Arnold, Sardis; C. O. Pate, Senatobia; M. M. Richards, Courtland; E. H. Rook, Como; W. J. Bailey, Olive Branch; W. A. Williamson, Neshit.

The following lay delegates were elected to the Annual Conference: N. E. Wilroy, Hernando; Dr. L. L. Minor, Memphis; A. D. Elder, Coldwater; Herbert Holmes, Senatobia; H. H. Wallace, Pleasant Hill; Dr. W. T. Wilkins, Olive Branch; J. E. Birmingham, Olive Branch; J. D. Turly, Coldwater. Reserves: M. S. Childress, Tyro; H. G. Johnston, Hernando; W. C. Sturdivant, Como; E. E. Arnold, Sardis.

The characters of the following local preachers were passed and their licenses renewed: J. H. Arnold, J. A. Chambly, H. H. Wallace, M. H. Weed, M. H. McCall, W. P. Bailey, Marvin White, S. W. White.

Sardis was selected as the place for holding the next conference.

MELVILLE JOHNSON, Secretary.

BESIDE THE SILENT SEA.

By Rev. Elmer C. Gunn, Chaplain Louisiana Department, American Legion.

Again we bow our heads in memory of "the boys who didn't come back," while for a moment the sunshine of our day is shadowed by the cloud that hovers over the pathway of the past. Some of us do not forget the funerals of yesteryear. Let us pause and turn with bared heads and hushed voices to the days when the hearts of the boys whose bodies lie in France, or the ocean, or the homeland, were beating in unison with our own. The "wilted crosses, row on row," are silent reminders of our solemn duty to make worth while the appalling cost of the victory so widely heralded on the wing of the winds of yesterday.

Two years ago I said the simple memorial ceremony over the graves of one hundred and twenty-six of our dead who are buried in the cemetery at Blois, France. On that occasion the mayor of the city said, "It shall be the duty of the citizens of Blois to keep green the graves of these Americans who died for us." Such is a noble sentiment, but this is no local matter. The heroes who died were not simply members of a local family, a neighborhood, or even a nation; they were world citizens and it becomes the business of the world to pause to-day and place flowers of tribute upon their too nearly forgotten graves.

We must keep green the memory of the men who fell in battle not only by placing flowers of tribute upon their graves, but also by carrying on with the burdens which cost them their lives. We must cling to the purposes which placed them in the battle line. America stands or falls according to the disposition of her ideals. This also is a world matter. While our men died to bring about a nobler order of things, it is for us to say whether or not such order shall finally come to be. We should keep steady the flame of purpose for which they gladly gave their lives.

In order to this we must take account of that One who leaves His footprints upon the hilltops of every age. We must remember that those who died for us died fighting His battles against a common foe; His purposes to us are benevolent; His power in us supreme; His love to us secure. On this day of all days in the year, soldiers should lift their faces upward to the Great Father of us all whose will for the world is that it shall be saved in Himself. If we would keep green the memory of our boys, if we would hold the banner of their ideals high, we must look to Him for inspiration and power.

Away in the offing is the ship which carried our "buddies" across the "Silent Sea." Eventually all of us will ride that ship to the other side. For some of us the sails are already set, the anchors beginning to hoist. It remains for each to learn what anchorage the ship will make, what haven will mark the shores of his future home. Let us be able to say to the boys whose hands we have clasped in the sympathy of a common purpose and in the joy of a common good, "Hail, brothers, and farewell; farewell, brothers, and hail."

JACKSON DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The district conference of the Jackson District, Mississippi Annual Conference, met in Brandon, Miss., at the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at 9:30 a.m., Tuesday, May 10, 1921, and adjourned at 2:30 p.m., Thursday, May 12, 1921. Rev. M. L. Burton, our presiding elder, was present and seemed to keep everything moving, but avoided any rush. There was a spiritual interest running through all the services.

A very helpful Sunday School Institute was held on Wednesday, the 11th, conducted by Brother Burton, assisted by J. C. Chambers and W. C. Owen.

Thomas Jackson Ray, George Elmer Allan, and James Hillman Sharp were licensed to preach.

Enoch Alexander King and Robert T. Hollingsworth were recommended to the Annual Conference for admission on trial. J. A. Lindsay, W. H. Bradley, I. O. Brown, W. M. Buie, Dr. J. M. Sullivan, W. M. Lofton, C. B. Hilton and M. S. Enochs were elected lay delegates to the Annual Conference. Dr. J. M. Sullivan was elected District Lay Leader. On Thursday morning the laymen, under the leadership of Dr. Sullivan, gave some very helpful talks on the different parts of a layman's usefulness.

Rev. J. M. Morse was present and presented the cause of Education on Wednesday night.

The people of Brandon were untiring in their hospitality and efforts to make us feel our welcome. Harrisville was chosen as the meeting place for next year.

Report of Committee on Evangelism.

The following report was presented by the Committee on Evangelism of the Jackson District Conference, and the conference, in adopting it, asked that the secretary of the conference furnish a copy to the New Orleans Christian Advocate with a request that it publish the same.

S. F. HARKEY, Secretary.

The Report.

The world was never so torn as to-day; it was never so hilariously mad as to-day; it was never so crazed over money as to-day; it was never so jealous as to-day; it was never in so deep mourning as to-day; and we believe there never was a time when there were so many people forgetful of God as to-day. The Bible says, "The wicked shall be turned into hell with all the nations that forget God." Because of these conditions and because of the great number who have forgotten God, we believe there never was a time when we needed to emphasize Evangelism so much as to-day. Men, through education, philosophy, science, legislation, unions, and combinations of all kinds, have tried to put it right and have failed; not only have they failed, but the conditions have grown rapidly worse and more complicated. Human nature is essentially the same as it was when Jesus said, "Ye must be born again." This new life does not and can not come in but one way, namely, through repentance for sin, faith in Jesus Christ, and obedience to his words. Men are not easily aroused from such a condition as we find so universal to-day. One sermon a month, or one a week is not enough hardly to check, much less to turn men towards God. We, therefore, recommend that each pastor first examine his own life, and see where, in his services, he is putting the emphasis, and, if under our ministry men are not finding God, that we wait upon God until we, like the Christians of old, are empowered to lead men from the bondage of sin to the life and liberty that is found only in Jesus Christ. Let us not plan and hold our revival meetings with the thought of getting them off of our hands, but with the express purpose of getting men saved, whether in the church or out of it. This cannot be done by pressure and manipulation of man's planning, but by the Holy Spirit, who operates only through a consecrated ministry and church membership. The gospel has lost none of its power to save; men are as much in need of it as when God gave his Only-begotten Son on the Cross. Let us, therefore, put the emphasis on the salvation of precious souls, many of whom without our faithfulness will be eternally lost. We, therefore, urge that such men be secured as professors in our Methodist schools, as teachers in our Sunday schools, and especially as preachers in our pulpits, as by personal experience and knowledge of the Book of books can act as the salt of the earth; who are not content to serve merely for the loaves and fishes, but whose chief delight is in leading men to the "Lamb of God who alone is able to take away the sins of the world." May we as preachers and laymen set the example in this, the most important work intrusted to the children of men.

A LETTER FROM AFRICA.

(At our request, Rev. W. M. Williams, of Purvis, Miss., father of Mrs. Beanland, has given us the privilege of publishing extracts from this letter from his daughter, who, with her husband, Rev. Gayle C. Beanland, is engaged in missionary work in West Africa. We are sure it will be read with much interest by a multitude of friends in Mississippi.—Editor.)

February 18, 1921.

Dearest Everybody: Saturday afternoon, and I'm all ready for a chat with you, after the day's duties, and studying my Sunday school lesson. Will start this, and then have to-morrow in which to finish it. To-day hasn't seen much accomplished, and I feel ashamed to offer this day's work to the Master. While we were at breakfast this morning a man came up on the porch with a monkey just like Antionne, and of Antionne's tribe, and of the opposite sex, so after palavering a bit I bought the animal for 90 cents, and then we had to spend an hour or two out by the cage watching the new member get acquainted. He frightened the smaller ones, but Antionne was very ready to make friends, even though the new comer was a bit frightened at our white faces, and advances; this afternoon he seems more satisfied, and grabbed a handful of peanuts and some rose apples from me a few minutes ago! I am glad to get the partner for Antionne, and now that we have two of two different tribes, I am satisfied with our menagerie, and don't want any more. Only wish you could see them. Miss Staley said this morning as we were both trying to see the antics of all four at once: "My, this is worse than a three-ringed circus!"

Another excitement happened, too, that has interfered with studying or anything else. Two men came in from the beach with loads, and even though we have had orders not to open a load until the road book comes, I looked on a letter from Mr. Adams, the caravan man at Kribi, and saw the box No. 143 was G. C. Beanland's personal box. And even though Mr. Cozzens wrote us that he had read every manifest, and there were no Edison records there for the Beanlands, I couldn't help but believe that that box held the records for which we have been waiting for ages. So "Pandora" gets the screw driver and hatchet and silently opens the big box. (I forgot to say that Gayle is down at Nnyep holding a Communion this week-end!) But, my dears, I wasn't silent for many minutes, for I gave such a yell calling Miss Staley that all the boys came running in from the kitchen and outhouses! For in the box were RECORDS! And oh, how we clawed them out, brushed the excelsior off, and hurried to the sitting room to try them on the Edison. Besides some Edison records there was a Victor attachment and some Victor records that we have enjoyed too. There was one record, "Home Sweet Home," that I thought might make me homesick, so I didn't play it, but the thing that made me weep for my own back-yard was "Mrs. Rastus at the Wedding!" I have played it no less than a dozen times, and have wanted to kiss that REAL, MISSISSIPPI NIGGER, for that she truly is, and even the "Pasture" that "pree-formed" the ceremony came from Tunica! I have spent the time between windings, explaining to Miss Staley what she means by some of the nigger-ish expressions. Her education has been sadly neglected! I want one more Negro dialect especially, and that is the Edison record, "That Love-Sick Coon." Too many of that kind wouldn't be very palatable, and I really prefer the more substantial ones, but for a change I do love those old Negro ones.

Did I tell you about the bracelet and necklace that Gayle brought me when he came back from Yebekolle? The necklace weighs 18 pounds, and the bracelet, two! Do I wear them? Hardly, because I could hardly stand up under the weight. They were both worn by the head-wife of a big chief and were molded on her body. Some kind of a contrivance is used to get them off by stretching them, or else the woman's head is cut from her body and the necklace is removed in that way. They are of solid brass, and almost as big around as my arm. And the women like to wear them, if you please!

The other day, we were out looking over our possessions and I saw a pile of stovewood in the back yard that Ze had just cut for the kitchen, and just for curiosity I asked what kind of wood it was, and Gayle told me that it was mahogany! Mahogany stove-wood, please! But it's rotting in the forest, so why not burn it? From where I sit I can see a palm tree which stands in the middle of the path that leads to the Girl's School Town, and against the tree stand about a dozen long sticks of mahogany wood, waiting to be cut into stove-lengths for our kitchen stove. How I'd like to send you every one enough to make you a dressing table, or some other piece of furniture.

School has opened again, and I am honestly glad, for I feel that I accomplish so little when we are having vacation. I have over 50 girls in the dormitory, and 113 in the day school. Such interesting things, and the way they have come! Some of them with baskets strapped to their backs containing pots, books, and rug to sleep on, and an extra bustie, and bananas and peanuts. Others brought themselves, and a pleasant smile: not a book, not a thing to cat, and not even a rug on which to sleep. But they are happy to be here, and all seem so contented. I have set apart every Wednesday night to visit them in the dormitory and to have a social chat with them. And it's so interesting, for they are all busy; some grinding food, some eating from the little iron pots; some dancing in the moonlight, and some combing the other fellow's hair. I have a scheme up my sleeve now and have written to the Mission Treasurer for money to build a dining room, and have tables, plates and spoons and have cooks appointed for a certain time, and have them all eat at once and from a table like the white man does. I have offered the plan to them and they seem enthused, so if the money is to be had, the dining room will be built within the next few weeks. Then, too, I am going to have a sitting room built on to the dining room, and latticed in, so that they will have a place to sit to sew, read, comb hair, and palaver, for they use the kitchen for that purpose altogether now, and I want them out of the kitchen! Gayle tries to remind me constantly that Rome wasn't built in a day, but somehow I'm just getting enthused over this proposition since I'm getting hold of the language, and I see so many things to do. If Mr. Rundle could just walk into our school, and see so many of his plans and ideas being carried out even in Africa, he'd think that he was having a hand in missionary work, when he educated me! I only wish I had more of his systematic ideas, and his executive ability. But we are improving every day, and yesterday at the girls' first sewing lesson 20 out of 25 learned to thread a needle, and tie the knot as I counted 3!

Sunday Morning.

It still lacks an hour of Sunday school time and we are up, and my house is in order, and my Sunday school lesson learned, and books ready to pick up and go to work. I only wish it was in my power to teach these children what I feel and that I could use the language I want, to express my feelings, but their language is so inadequate, and their experience so limited that sometimes I feel as though they didn't get anything. Sometimes I wonder just what impressions you have gotten from my hastily written letters of this wonderful, awful, country, and I wonder if you get any sense at all of the world through which I walk in the late afternoons under the tall palm trees, and through rows of little brown huts, every roof smoking with the supper fire; of the people themselves as they pass me on the path, some comely and some repulsive, dirty, patched up here and there with sulphur for their many kinds of skin diseases, deformed, many of them especially as to feet, which have been neglected for years and years. It is hard for me to realize that they are as individual as you or as I, and that they are as dear to God as you and I are. I only wish they were as dear to me. Still, for that I hope, in the future years when one has gotten a clearer understanding, and an insight into their hearts and natures.

And often I think that these people think that we ourselves (who think we are so proper) have been very badly brought up. For they have manners and customs that we disregard, just the same as they do ours. I hope some day to be able to enter and leave a town with the proper ceremony and in due form, for they count all these things against our bringing up, and I don't want my mother's and dad's training to gain disrespect in this far-away land!

Every town in this country is practically built on the same plan, one street, and rows of houses on either side, and every house built exactly alike. Miss McKenzie, in her "Black Sheep," gives such a dandy paragraph describing the towns that I am copying it below, and you may recognize any by this description. She says:

"A town in this neighborhood consists of two rows of houses with a street between. The houses differ very little. They are all low huts of a room each—say, a matter of eighteen feet by seven, with two openings like windows in the center of each long wall. The framework is of sapling poles, the walls of plates of bark which is yellow when newly cut, but which soon tones to a silvery brown, as do the leaf mats which form the roof and make a thatch very much like a straw thatch. The eaves project beyond the walls some two feet, and hang very low; it is almost always necessary to stoop in passing under them. Certainly you must stoop to enter the door of the house, and at the same time must step over the sill which will be anywhere from one to two feet from the ground. Inside you will find yourself on a mud floor in an interior persistently brown. For furniture there will be several beds made of split poles laid in rows on two logs which serve as legs. Another log serves as a pillow, and all these are brown and polished with use. From the roof will be hanging mysterious bundles done up in great plantain leaves brown with smoke; gourds, brown by nature, brown baskets for peanuts and corn. On the ground there will be a woman evolving a meal; but there will be no chimney in the roof, which explains a good many things, and why the unseasoned visitor presently makes for the street. An average street will be from 50 to 60 feet wide, perfectly clean and generally barren."

Her descriptive powers so far surpass mine that I had to copy that instead of racking my brain for suitable words to describe a native village. And they are all alike. Miss Staley and I went for a walk Friday down towards Metet through a small village, and stopped at several houses along the path, stuck our heads in at the opening that is used for window, door, and chimney, and gave the woman sitting inside a greeting, and tried to show a friendly interest in what her family was going to have for supper. We heard a woman crying in a house along that path, and stopped to inquire the cause and were told that a carrier coming from the beach had brought the news that her son who had gone with this caravan for loads, was very sick on the path, and that other men had been sent out to get his load. That he was not seriously ill had not occurred to her, for any illness out here is serious, so the minute she heard it she sat down in a heap on the floor and refused to be comforted. She will probably mourn for him for a week, and then will find that he has recovered and has returned to his own. She did rouse herself long enough to run up and down the path until she was utterly exhausted crying at the top of her voice, telling every one within range of her voice that she was mourning because she had just heard bad news. If you want to know all the manner and customs of these people concerning marriage, death, and birth, then read Genesis and Exodus, and the other Old Testament books, for there is very little difference.

We did step into one little hut and found one of our school girls there getting supper. I asked her what she was doing, and what she was cooking, and she showed me a basket full of wiggling, squirming, fat, sleek grubs. She thought she was conferring a great favor on me when she offered me the basket, and asked me to take some home for my supper. But I kindly told her that she didn't have enough to divide, and that she had gone far into the forest to get them so she must keep them and I would go back to my house and see what Atanane had prepared for my supper.

Write to me, all of you. I didn't intend writing such a lengthy letter this week, but I didn't know when to stop. With much love to each and every one of you, for I love you dearly, dearly, and am counting the days until the half-way line is reached and I start the downward path to you, and HOME!

Lovingly,

AU REVOIR.

By Payton A. Sowell.

It is not needful to the preachers of New Orleans and of Louisiana, of the Methodist brotherhood, that I speak a word, but it is an occasion of heart pleasure to say a last word. In speaking it, a company of pleasant faces cluster around my thoughts. I cannot help intuitively living pleasantly again with a number of friends in the (old) Lafayette District; and among them are such preachers as Lutz, Fike, Hebert, Hoffpaul, and others.

My stay has been brightened by a rich fellowship for these months with Snelling, Alford, Atkinson, Childress, Sawyer, Duren, the Harpers, Harrison, Kleinschmidt, Seife, Romano, Smith, Wier, and last—though not least Carley, and a few local Methodists, and the New Orleans Advocate printing outfit.

I will not say an old "Tennessee farewell" to these, as I turn my face toward the hills and mountains from whence Andrew Jackson and his squirrel rifle volunteers came to Chalmette over a hundred years ago, and from whence many pioneer and eloquent Methodist preachers came to preach, and one—Rev. R. J. Harp—was a charter member of the Louisiana Conference; but I will say—"Au Revoir."

THE STORY OF A MISSIONARY OVERCOAT.

By W. E. Towson.

Thirty-one years ago, to be exact, in January, 1890, on reaching Japan and finding the cold very damp and penetrating, I purchased a heavy overcoat. It was of English make, of heavy cloth, and reached almost to my ankles. I found it very serviceable during the severer part of each winter, especially on trips around the district, while travelling on trains, boats and jinrikshas. Many were the nights while sleeping on the floors of small Inland Sea boats, or in drafty Japanese hotels, not daring in fireless rooms to undress, but buttoning myself in my long coat and using my blanket and two Japanese quilts, would do the best I could until morning. However, all my precautions did not prevent an attack of bronchopneumonia, on account of which I was invalided home, and that caused our sojourn in South Georgia and my membership in that Conference.

But to come back to the overcoat. Japanese pastors have small salaries. How some of them manage to live on them I do not know. Tales could be told how, recently, pastors' wives have been forced to sell some of their better clothing in order for the family to live. On leaving Japan I gave the coat to a native pastor who, because of his limited salary, always purchased his suits at a second-hand shop. That was fourteen years ago, after I had used it for sixteen years. I saw my friend, the pastor, last week and, wonderful to relate, he still has the coat, and though it has been in constant use it looks as good as now. He gave me the history of the garment as follows: Being a smaller man than the former owner, he had the coat cut down and then used it for seven winters. He then had it dyed and used it for another sabbath of years. And now, after fourteen years, he has had the coat turned and it looks like it would last for, at least, another term of seven years.

Why have I told the story of this remarkable coat? Certainly not to emphasize its value, for its first cost was less than twenty dollars, or the splendid quality of the cloth of which it was made—but for the missionary interest connected with it. If the Holy Spirit thought that the sentence, "the cloak that I left at Troas with Carpus, when thou comest, bring with thee," in order to protect the worn and waste body of his aged servant, lying in a Roman dungeon, was worthy of inspiration, perhaps the recital of the history of this garment is not out of place even in a missionary record. The man who used it for the past fourteen years is one of God's most faithful and useful servants. He has even been called "the Paul of Japan." Though pastor of a large city church, he spends three and four months of each year in evangelistic work and holds an annual convention in a mountain retreat, for the deepening of the spiritual life. He told me he uses the coat constantly, on his winter evangelistic trips, while travelling on the trains and boats. And everywhere he goes he says he tells the history of the coat and of its wonderful service in the extension of the gospel.

The Honor of the Church is at Stake

Methodism has swept around the world in a blaze of glory. Though one of the youngest of Churches, she ranks among the greatest. Her achievements for God and humanity have evoked the commendations of historians, called forth the praise of statesmen, commanded the admiration of all the great, secured the benedictions of the Almighty.

The Church has proved true to every trust reposed in her. She has met every task nobly. No failure mars the bright escutcheon of her record. Over and over again has she proved true her new-found motto: "When two million Methodists go from their knees to any task, it shall be done."

It Is a Time of Testing

The M. E. Church, South, is now in the midst of a strenuous testing time. The success or failure of the Christian Education Movement will determine whether or not we shall be true to our duty, our genius, our history. Whether the onward march of a triumphant faith shall continue. Or whether in the hour of the world's worst need we prove craven and flee the field, leaving the education of our own people to secular, irreligious, and even atheistic agencies.

Shall we put our hand to the plow and then turn back? Shall we fail in the greatest thing we were ever called to do? Shall we prove recreant to our highest and holiest trust? Shall we throw up our hands in despair and slink away to let Christian Education perish from our program?

What Would Failure Mean?

It would mean no trained workers for pulpit and mission field, no linking together of religion and learning, no educated leaders for the future. It would eventually mean a hard-shell Church. It would mean that Methodism, for the first time in history, confessed herself unequal to her task and was content to record a miserable failure.

There Shall Be No Failure

It must not be so. Our people are made of sterner stuff. They will not let the kingdom's most important cause go down to defeat, and then plead in extenuation the purely temporal and secular excuses of hard times, unfavorable conditions, declining markets.

Gird up your loins for a new effort in these last days. Put your Church on the triumphant side at any cost. Let no failure besmire a record written so brilliantly in the blood of sacrificial consecration. The honor of the Church is at stake.

The Home Circle

FUNNY NEIGHBOR TOAD.

Old Neighbor Toad so funny
Stays in his garden home,
So quiet and so sunny,
And never cares to roam.

With hopping, hopping, hopping,
He gets from end to end,
Between his hopping, stopping
To greet his gardener friend.

At home he sits a-thinking,
His little door beside,
Still blinking, blinking, blinking,
With eyes so bright and wide.

Ere Winter spreads his garden
With coverlet of white,
And begging no one's pardon,
He slips down out of sight.

When Spring returns with laughter,
To make the brookiets run,
Our neighbor follows after,
And sits out in the sun.

His last year's coat is rather Worn out, but what cares he?
Beneath it there's another,
As bright as bright can be!

He doffs his old coat rusty,
And then—he swallows it!
It must taste rather dusty,
But he eats every bit!

And then he sits a-thinking,
And watching well for flies,
Still winking, winking, winking,
And looking, oh, so wise!

HOW ELLIE CHANGED HER MIND.

Ellie Dale stood at the window looking out at the big moving van which had stopped in front of the house next door. She was greatly excited over the arrival of new neighbors. Suddenly she turned to mamma with a little cry.

"Oh, mamma, the awfulest thing! That dreadful boy, the one I tol' you about at school, has moved right next door to us. Oh, dear, it's terrible!"

Mamma looked up from her sewing. "Why, no; maybe it's a chance to make friends."

"Friends? Ugh! He's a horrid boy. He put a hop toad in my desk last week an' scared me mos' to death. I hate boys mos' as much as I hate toads; they're jus' like 'em, always hoppin' around scarin' little girls."

Mamma did not answer, but a few days later Ellie rushed in upon her, breathless and terrified.

"Mamma, that Wilkins boy has got Arabella. Yes, he has. You see, I— left her in the grape arbor, an' he reached over and got the poor darlin', an' now he says she's a captive, an' he's holding her for a ransom. However am I goin' to make him give her up?"

Mamma considered. "Perhaps you had better try strategy, as you are the weaker enemy," said she.

"Oh, yes," cried the little girl, with breathless interest.

"Well," continued mamma, "there's a pan of freshly baked cookies in the kitchen, the kind with nuts in them. How would they do to begin with?"

Ellie clapped her hands. She knew well there never was a girl, much less a boy, who could resist mamma's cookies, and when they were the kind with nuts in 'em, why, their possibilities were without limit.

"Splendid," she exclaimed. "I'll run and get 'em right away, for I know Arabella's just quakin' and shakin', she's so scared."

She raced downstairs, and, securing a supply of the tempting cakes, hurried to the rescue of her beloved child. Looking over the low fence which separated the two yards, a horrible sight met her eyes. Arabella, her blue eyes brave and smiling, was tied to a stick embedded in the ground, while all about her tin soldiers kept guard and her captor triumphantly pointed a toy pistol at her golden head.

"Ha!" he exclaimed, as he caught sight of Ellie. "She's a spy an' she's to be shot at sundown with her back to the wall."

Peter hesitated no longer as the spicy smell reached him. Kicking aside the soldiers, he seized the captive and thrust her over the fence.

"She ain't hurt any," he said as he bit into a cake. "Gee, but these are good!"

"Mamma makes 'em," returned Ellie with pride. "She makes jus' 'licious things. Does yours?"

Peter stopped eating his cake and a queer look came into his face. "My mother's dead," he said gruffly.

"Oh!" said Ellie. She cuddled Arabella in her arms. "I—I'm real sorry," she murmured, and fled to the house.

Peter put no more toads in Ellie's desk. He looked at her shyly across the room and once he offered her a slate pencil, new and sharp.

Mamma had discovered her new neighbor was a widower with only a housekeeper to look after the boy, and she put an extra supply of fudge and apples in Ellie's lunch basket. "Peter likes my cooking, you know," she said gravely.

Then came the great, exciting event of a dolls' party, to which Arabella was invited. Her little mother washed and ironed her underwear and got out her very best dress, while mamma contributed a new sash. Thus arrayed, Arabella was lovely. Ellie took her downstairs to show Nora; then she rushed back to get dressed.

"It looks like rain," said mamma, and sure enough, just as she was fastening Ellie's hair bow, there came a terrific clap of thunder and a vivid flash of lightning. Another moment and the rain began in torrents. Ellie shrieked, "Oh, mamma, I left Arabella on the porch steps. Nora won't remember her an' she'll be all wet and ruined. Oh, dear; she'll be washed away an' drowned!"

Indeed, the rain was pouring with the violence of a sudden storm. One could scarcely see for the torrents of rain.

"It will probably not last long," said mamma, "but I am afraid Arabella will be spoiled for the party. You should not have left her outside, dear."

Ellie began to cry. "She and mamma went downstairs, but when they opened the door the rain rushed in with such violence they had to close it immediately. From the window they saw no sign of Arabella."

"Oh, she's washed away," cried Ellie; "I'll never see her again!"

She was so distressed that she no longer cared for the party.

After a little mamma called, "Come, Ellie, look at the rainbow. How beautiful it is!"

And as they stood looking at the wonderful emblem of hope which God has placed in his heavens, a little figure scrambled on the porch and Peter appeared, carefully carrying Arabella, who was perfectly dry and unharmed.

With a cry of delight, Ellie seized her.

"I saw her sittin' there," explained Peter, "an' I kinder thought sho'd get spoiled, so I hopped over an' grabbed her. I jus' had time to duck under the porch with her, an' we bin waitin' there for the rain to stop."

He turned to go, but Ellie stopped him.

"Oh, wait," she cried. "There's half a lemon pie in the cupboard. You'll let me have it for Peter, won't you, mamma?"

And as Arabella's rescuer disappeared munching happily, Ellie said thoughtfully: "Mamma, I like Peter, even if he is a boy. You see, he can't help being one, an' so I've decided to like him anyhow."

"Good," said mamma, smiling. — Presbyterian Advocate.

THESE ALSO ARE OURS.

Emory University.

This institution stands as the very heart and center of the church's hopes and plans in the territory east of the Mississippi. With assets of $4,100,000, a beginning has been made in the building of a university. In number of students enrolled, it takes rank with the leading institutions of the South. There are six distinct departments, and plans provide for additional departments and for the strengthening of those now in operation. The church is to provide $2,500,000—of this total $1,000,000 for the School of Education, $750,000 for the School of Theology, and $750,000 for the Graduate Department. The Conferences in Georgia will provide $700,000 additional, this amount for the College of Liberal Arts. The South looks to Southern Methodism to build a real university at Atlanta. It is our day of opportunity. We cannot turn from this best chance that has come to any church in the South and make good our claim that we follow the leadership of our Lord.

Southern Methodist University.

This institution has come within six years to an enrollment of more than 1200 students, a faculty of sixty members, property valued at $2,000,000, and practically unlimited possibilities of growth if only the church answers its call. Already it turns away multitudes from its doors; it cannot go forward until the church speaks the word. With the best field of any institution in the Southwest, it is doing its work against tremendous odds. It cannot hold its own except the church make good the pledge given in the establishment of its university for the territory west of the Mississippi. For its strengthening Southern Methodism is to provide $2,500,000, and the Conferences in Texas will add $700,000 for buildings and endowment for the College of Liberal Arts. Until now connectional Methodism, outside Texas, has had little share in the building of the university at Dallas. We will not continue thus to repudiate our obligation to this institution. The church will make good its pledge to Southern Methodist University.

Christian Workers' Aid Fund.

The Christian Education Movement will provide a permanent fund of $1,000,000—a loan fund for young men and women training for specific Christian service. It will be a permanent fund, increasing through the years, and its dividends will be in the thousands of men and women who are to be given a chance to equip themselves for the best possible service. The money will be available for young men and women in any school of the church. Too long we have delayed this matter, for we are far behind other strong churches of the country in making provision for the help of worthy young persons who ask only for a chance to serve. Our small loan fund has helped sixty-four young men, and the original capital has increased nearly twenty-five per cent. The M. E. Church has aided 23,400 students and has a loan fund of more than $2,000,000. Is it not time that we do something worthy of a great church?

Schools of the Woman's Missionary Council.

Five schools of the Woman's Missionary Council are included in the connectional "askings" of the Christian Education Movement. The women of Southern Methodism have cared for these institutions, and how well they have wrought in this field of service is known to Southern Methodism. It is now our privilege to make some small contribution to enterprises that are worthy of far larger amounts than they ask.

Scarritt Bible and Training School, our only school for the training of women who are to serve as missionaries at home and in foreign fields, is to receive $150,000. Brevard Institute and Sue Bennett Memorial School serve the young people of the Appalachian section. Brevard is to be given $75,000 and Sue Bennett Memorial $50,000. Holding Institute, on the Mexican border, a school for the children of Mexican immigrants, is to receive $50,000. Vashti Industrial Institute, a school and home for young girls who are homeless and dependent, will be given $100,000. Not one of these schools that is not now crowded to capacity and is turning away those who seek admission. The church has now its chance to share in the service of the women of Southern Methodism.

THE BATON ROUGE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

We had the privilege of visiting the Baton Rouge District Conference, held in the beautiful little city of Amite, La., last week. The conference began with a sermon by Rev. N. E. Joyner on Tuesday night, which we did not hear, but of which we heard many good things. Promptly at 9 o'clock Wednesday morning, under the careful and brotherly presidency of Rev. J. W. Lee, the presiding elder, the conference began its business sessions.

The pastor, Rev. Lastie N. Hoffpauir, and as loyal band of Methodists as we have ever seen, made as perfect provision for the entertainment of the conference as could be imagined. The trains were met; twelve automobiles, bearing suitable placards, were at the command of the delegates throughout the conference, and the hospitality in the homes of the people was without a flaw. Brother Hoffpauir would make an ideal Annual Conference host, and the good people of Amite would be not a whit behind him in ministering to its comfort. If the town were just large enough, we would second anybody's nomination of Amite as the place for holding an early session of our annual gathering.

The attendance of delegates, both clerical and lay, was unusually good. Every pastor in the district was present on the first day, and most of the charges had more than one lay delegate present. Several visitors were present, among whom we noted Rev. A. S. Lutz, Rev. R. W. Vaughan, Rev. Alonzo Early, Miss Caroline Hess, Rev. W. C. Childress, Mr. Stephen S. Thomas, Mrs. C. F. Niebergall, and Mrs. R. H. Harper. All of these had messages for the conference, or for the district meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society, which was held on Thursday, and all of them, including the editor of the Advocate, were given generous treatment.

The special occasion of the editor's visit was an invitation to have part in the program in the interest of the Christian Education Movement, on Wednesday evening. A great congregation assembled for the service, and there was enthusiastic interest in the cause presented. We predict that the Baton Rouge District will make a fine showing in the financial support of our educational institutions. A very delightful feature of the evening gathering was a reception tendered the conference at the close of the program.

We shall always be grateful for the delightful hospitality we received in the homes of Mr. and Mrs. Louis F. Lefevre and Mrs. Edwards. Their cordial invitation to "Come again" is treasured in our heart.

WHAT IT MEANS TO LOUISIANA.

We have received the following telegram from Mr. R. T. Moore, Conference Financial Director for the Christian Education Movement in Louisiana:

"Received confirmation, provided and conditioned Louisiana fully meets Christian Education quota, over quarter of a million additional outside money available for use in State. This should electrify and inspire every Methodist and friend of Christian Education to greatest possible endeavor. Shreveport Rotary Club, strongest civic organization in State, membership non-sectarian, to-day pledged its enthusiastic support."

With this splendid sum available provided Louisiana raises her quota in this Movement, every Methodist in the State ought to go to the limit of his ability in securing the full amount. A great educational system under the auspices of the church is within our grasp in this State if we do our duty. Such an opportunity does not often present itself. WE MUST NOT FAIL!

FIRST OVER IN THE NEW ORLEANS DISTRICT.

The Talisheek charge, Rev. H. W. Jamieson, pastor, was the first charge in the New Orleans District to report that it had secured its quota in the Educational Campaign, the full amount being pledged on Thursday of last week. Rev. H. W. Jamieson, who is secretary of the Y. M. C. A. at Tulane University, is serving this charge as supply, and he threw himself vigorously and enthusiastically into the work. Congratulations to him and the fine people of the Talisheek charge!

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Announcement has been made that the fall meeting of the College of Bishops will be held in Richmond, Va.

Rev. A. D. Martin paid the Advocate office an appreciated call on Thursday of last week. The editor regrets that he missed seeing him.

A member of our church in O'Neil, Miss., in a business note to the Advocate takes occasion to speak very highly of the pastor at that place, Rev. N. S. Loftus.

Encouraging progress is reported on the Camden charge, Mississippi Conference. The pastor, Rev. C. H. Ellis, is praying and planning for great things this year.

Rev. M. W. Porter, of Avera, Miss., writes encouragingly of his work. He has been especially interested in the Christian Education Movement, and predicted that his charge would "go over the top" in the financial campaign. We trust his faith was amply rewarded.

A note from Sister T. S. Randle informs us that she recently had a very happy visit to Alexandria, La., and Pineville, La., at both of which places she presented the cause that is so dear to her—the support of the superannuated preachers. Sister Randle is grieved because she meets a good many people, preachers included, who do not know the meaning of "C. C. C."—the Conference Claimants' Club—the purpose of which is to increase interest in the support of our superannuate preachers. The motto of the Club is: "Have a heart, lend a hand, and pay a dollar."

The work is in a flourishing condition on the Bienville charge, Louisiana Conference, Rev. P. H. Fontaine, pastor. There is a flourishing Sunday school at each church on the charge, and these schools are making substantial growth. The degree of interest in the Christian Education Movement is indicated by the fact that a "test" collection at Strange two weeks before the date for the campaign to begin, resulted in the pledging of more than four times the amount that was subscribed by all the rural appointments on the charge for the Centenary. Fine!

Rev. E. H. Cooley, of Bay Springs, Miss., writes that everything is moving along nicely on his charge.

Dr. John T. Sawyer, one of the early graduates of the Law Department of Tulane University, has recently been honored with a life membership in the Alumni Association of that great institution.

A nation-wide appeal for old clothes for use in the Near East will be made during the first week in June. All bundles should be sent, prepaid, to Near East Relief Warehouse, 549 West 39th St., New York, N. Y.

We greatly appreciate an invitation from Miss Warren Harlow, a member of the class, to attend the graduating exercises at Centenary College, Shreveport, La. Miss Harlow is a student of unusual ability, and a fine type of young Christian womanhood.

The commencement exercises of Mansfield Female College were held during May 28-31, a fine series of entertainments and exhibitions being given. The baccalaureate sermon was preached by Dr. Fitzgerald S. Parker on Sunday morning, and the commencement address was given by Rev. W. W. Holmes on Tuesday evening. We thank President Bobbitt for an invitation to be present on this delightful occasion.

The Advocate has received $2.56 from Miss Pentecost Humphrey, treasurer of the Sunday school at Varnado, La., for the benefit of the China Famine Fund, and the amount has been applied as designated. We are sure the little children who contributed this money received a blessing in their own lives because of their thoughtfulness of others.

Rev. Standifer Raper, our pastor at Coldwater, Miss., preached the commencement sermon for the high school at that place on Sunday, May 22. The service was held at the Methodist church, and a large congregation was in attendance. The graduating address was delivered on Monday by Superintendent Rundies, of the Grenada High School.

The editor of the Advocate will spend the week, June 6-13, in Montgomery, Ala., teaching the class in Bible at the Conference-Wide Training School of the Alabama Conference. The brotherly willingness of Rev. R. H. Harper, pastor of our First Church, this city, to render editorial assistance makes it possible for the editor to enjoy this privilege.

We acknowledge the honor of an invitation to attend the commencement exercises of Tulane University, sent us by Mr. Calvin N. Joyner, a member of the graduating class this year. Mr. Joyner, a son of Rev. N. E. Joyner, of Baton Rouge, La., is under appointment of the Board of Missions in connection with important building enterprises in China.

The announcements for the third round of quarterly conferences of the Aberdeen District, North Mississippi Conference, reached us too late for insertion in this week's Advocate. We give here, however, the list in part; it will appear in full next week: Okolona, June 5, 6; Amory, June 12, 13; Tupelo, June 17; Verona, at Palmetto, June 18, 19; Shannon, at Pleasant Grove, June 19, 20.

Rev. J. B. Randolph, presiding elder of the Corinth District, North Mississippi Conference, requests us to make the following change in the third round of quarterly conferences: Kossuth circuit, at Pleasant Hill, August 13; at Kossuth, August 14. The request came too late to make the change this week in the regular announcements, as the part of the paper containing them had already gone to press.

A note from Rev. W. J. Wood, of Duck Hill, Miss., brings the sad news that Mrs. Maggie Woods, wife of Mr. J. H. Woods, of Grenada, Miss., died on May 16. The body was laid to rest in Chapel Hill cemetery on the following day. Brother Wood, her pastor, officiating at the service. The Advocate expresses its sincere sympathy for those who are in sorrow because of the going of this good woman.

It now appears that practically every Methodist school and every town in which a Methodist school is located, have gone well beyond their quotas in the Christian Education Movement. Our church in Emory, Va., where Emory and Henry College is located, with a membership of less than 150 and a quota of $4,900, reports more than $51,000. Of this amount, $19,000 was pledged by the faculty and the students of the college.

Since last Monday was a legal holiday, there were no mail deliveries in New Orleans, and it is probable that we failed to receive some announcements that should have found place in this week's Advocate. The paper goes on the press on Monday, and it is only emergency notices we can get in after that time. As we have stated several times, one half of the paper is "made up" on Friday for the following week; hence, it is very important that we receive communications as far in advance of the date of publication as possible.

The following, from the St. Louis Christian Advocate of May 18, will be of interest to the many friends of Brother Black throughout Mississippi: "Dr. M. M. Black, of the Mississippi Conference, has spent several months in St. Louis as Alumni Director for the Christian Education Movement, and, having completed his work in this capacity, he has now returned to his home in Jackson, Miss. He has been a diligent and enthusiastic leader in the interest of our schools in Missouri and Arkansas. His brotherliness and Christian character have impressed themselves on all with whom he has been associated. Missouri school people and the ministers of the Conferences wish him every happiness in his future work."

The work at Bunkie, La., an account of which we gave some weeks ago in an editorial note, is developing wonderfully. This is the place where automobile trucks have been brought into use to convey the people from the surrounding territory to church at Bunkie, and the results of this forward movement have been highly encouraging. The indications now are that the Sunday school will soon outgrow the present facilities for taking care of it—and of course provision will have to be made for the increase. Rev. George Fox is the capable leader under whom this work is being carried forward. In this connection, it will be of great interest to their many friends to know that Miss Emma Causey, of Bunkie, and Brother Fox were married on April 15.

A TELEGRAM FROM HEADQUARTERS.

Just before going to press on Tuesday, we received the following telegram from Dr. J. S. Chadwick, Nashville, Tenn.:

"Reports incomplete, but news from every section of the church is that canvass is being pushed with determination. To Tuesday morning the Conferences leading are New Mexico, West Virginia, Virginia, North Alabama. Victory assured if we keep up the fight through the week."

With victory in sight, we cannot afford to grow slack in our efforts during the few remaining days of the campaign. Too much is at stake for us even to think of anything less than complete success.

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: Rev. M. A. Massey, Fannin, Miss., 2; Rev. J. G. Sloane, Pelican, La., 4; Rev. M. B. Sharbrough, Biloxi, Miss., 3; Rev. E. L. Cargill, Gibbsland, La., 2; Mrs. Maude Jones, Guntown, Miss., 2; Rev. M. W. Porter, Avera, Miss., 3; Rev. George Fox, Bunkie, La., 2; Rev. E. C. Driskell, Greenwood Springs, Miss., 5; Mrs. B. F. Bremer, Glenmora, La., 2; Rev. H. G. Hawkins, Enterprise, Miss., 2; B. F. Goza, Magnolia, Miss., 3.

THE ABERDEEN DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Aberdeen District Conference will be held in Houston, June 14-16, beginning on Tuesday, June 14, at 3 o'clock p.m. A full attendance is expected. Let all who expect to attend the Conference, send their names to the pastor, Rev. E. M.

Shaw, so that ample provisions may be made for entertainment.

The following committees are appointed:

License to preach—E. R. Smoot, R. I. Collins, B. F. Buillard.

Recommendation for Admission on Trial—J. E. Cunningham, D. W. Babb, W. B. Baker.

Recommendation for Deacon's and Elder's Orders—H. P. Lewis, J. A. Hall, R. M. Evans.

LISTEN AND LEARN.

Brother Carley: This simple yet most beautiful little poem I have lately found in an English tract entitled "HIS," by B. McCall Barbour, that was sent by an English lad, a member of the "Boys Brigade" to his mother, who is a stewardess on steamship Asian of the Leyland Line. It is entirely too good to be shut away in a musty pile of booklets. Somebody should have the inspiration of its message.

W. G. EVANS.

I owned a little boat awhile ago
And sailed a morning sea without a fear,
And whither any breeze might fairly blow,
I steered my little craft afar and near.
Mine was the boat; and mine the air;
And mine the sea; nor mine a care.

My boat became my place of mighty toil,
I sailed at sunset to the fishing grounds;
At morn the boat was freighted with the spoil
That my all-conquering work and skill had found.
Mine was the boat; and mine the net;
And mine the skill and power to get.

One day there passed along the silent shore,
While I my net was casting in the sea,
A man, who spake as never man before.
I followed Him—new life began in me.
Mine was the boat, but His the voice;
And His the call, yet mine the choice.

O, 'twas a fearful night out on the lake,
And all my skill availed not at the helm,
Till Him asleep I wakened, crying, "Take,
Take thou command, lest water overwhelm."
His was the boat; and His the sea;
And His the peace o'er all and me.

Once from His boat He taught the curious throng,
Then bade me let down nets out in the sea.
I murmured, but obeyed, nor was it long
Before the catch amazed and humbled me.
His was the boat, and His the skill,
And His the catch, and His my will.

A PICTURE OF HEATHENISM.

A writer in the Indian Witness, describing his experience at Puri where the idol Jaganath is kept, draws many repulsive pictures. Puri is a great resort for Holy Men who constitute a sort of side show to the great idol. They sit or lie on spiked beds; they lie with large stones on their stomachs or chests; they sit, smeared with ashes, within a sacred circle of burning cow dung. Some even have their heads buried in the sand. Men and women come up out of the bath to worship these fakirs, bowing the head to the ground before one and placing his feet on their foreheads. Thus they become pure. At the Gate of Heaven the dead are burned and the odor is sickening, especially when a man keeps stirring the fire to speed the burning. When the fire dies down pilgrims dig and scrape about in the ashes, hoping to find a piece of bone to carry home as a charm against disease and evil. Some 200,000 persons visit Puri in the season, and the press at some of the idol functions is so tremendous that numbers are trampled to death.—Review of Christian Work.

Obituaries

Obituaries not over 200 words in length will be published free of charge. All over 200 words must be paid for at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and be sure to send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all around. We cannot make discriminations. Memorial resolutions are subject to the same rule as obituaries.

As neither of these goodly saints has had an obituary, I will write them jointly. As they were joined in life in heart and head, so they were permitted to live here together a long while and there was not a long separation in their departures. They were devoted to one another and also the church. They would spend and were spent for the church. Their homes were open to the preacher at all times, and all that they had belonged to the Lord and His work. Besides, they were charitable to the poor and the needy of all classes. Their generosity made for them friends wherever they were known. Knowing that he who would have friends must show himself friendly, they had the knack of this most inestimable gift. Their gain is our loss. The Lord blessed them with nine children, four girls and five boys. All survive to mourn their departure. They were most devoted to the better soul-interest rather than their earthly interest. While those bodies have returned to the dust, the weeping willows hang in sighing pangs above their mounds, but still in the children's hearts will forever live a thousand messages of love and devotion. JOHN DAVIDSON was born June 15, 1848, died January 23, 1921. Mrs. ANNA ELIZA DAVIDSON was born October 21, 1844, died December 11, 1920.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, the Omnipotent Ruler has taken from us a friend and co-laborer upon whom we have ever looked as possessing those traits of character which meet the observer's mental vision as ideal; therefore, be it resolved:

First—That in the death of Mrs. Mary McMortimer the Methodist Church of Brookville, Miss., has lost a member in every respect worthy of rank among the most thoughtful, earnest, prayerful and industrious.

Second—That a good woman has gone from us, and in her going the church, town, and especially the young people have lost a very ardent and strong friend. No good cause ever knocked at her heart's door without finding a hearty welcome, and she unconsciously, has sown seeds of hope, truth, and love.

Third—That she will be missed not only by our church and Sunday school, but by the large circle of friends she had drawn around her in her lifetime.

Miss Mary is no more in flesh, but still lives in memory of our hearts, in spirit with Jesus, at home with God.

Fourth—That a copy of these resolutions be furnished the local and church papers; a copy sent to the sorrowing husband, loving brother and sister; and a copy be spread upon the minutes of our Society.

Signed by: Mrs. W. W. Hartsfield, Mrs. J. M. Calmes, Mrs. T. C. Hambrick, Committee.

A NOTE FROM REV. W. M. McINTOSH.

These last days have been very busy days with me. I spent last week closing out a great meeting with Brother A. A. Martin, of Pittsboro, Miss. I came home this week to rest, but I have spent most of the time at the district conference. We had a great time down there at Baldwin, and the conference was not only an inspiration to the pastors and delegates who attended, but seemed to be a great blessing to the town. The good people of that little city still retain much of the old-time Southern hospitality, and they treated all of us most royally. We had the largest attendance at the conference we have seen in a long time.

Rev. J. B. Randolph presided over his first district conference, and I must say that he presided like a bishop. He was careful to look after all the interests of his district and was very courteous to all members of the conference.

The Educational Campaign was the special feature of the conference, and able addresses were made by such notable speakers as Dr. Webb, ex-United States Senator from Tennessee, Dr. Bourne of Centenary College, Louisiana, and Judge W. M. Cox of Baldwin, Miss. The Educational Campaign is very hopeful. It now looks like the Corinth District is going over the top. So mote it be.

Yours fraternally,

W. M. McINTOSH.

A GREAT REVIVAL AT BENOLT.

Dear Brother Carley: We closed here last Sunday night an eight days' meeting, which is conceded by the widest residents of this place to have been the greatest revival that this place has ever had. Rev. J. W. Robertson, our pastor at Rosedale, did the preaching after Sunday. Robertson preaches the gospel without fear or favor, and the Holy Spirit honors it. Sin in all its forms was exposed, and many took the preacher's hand and said, "We have quit it." There were two accessions on profession of faith, and there will be some to come in by letter. Almost everybody is already a member of some church.

Brother Youngberg, pastor of the Baptist Church here, was with us most of the time and assisted all he could in the meeting.

Also Brother Bennett, a traveling salesman—I think he is from Jackson—remained over Monday and Tuesday, and rendered very helpful service in prayer and exhortation. We shall not soon forget him. He is a witness for Christ wherever he goes. God bless him.

W. E. GOODLOCK.

NOTES FROM SENATOBIA, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: Yesterday there were one hundred and forty-eight men actually present in our Bible class. Considering the population of our town (only about twelve hundred), we challenge any town in the Conference to equal it.

The work prospers in our church here, and the pastor is pleased and happy. Best wishes to you.

How Coca-Cola Resembles Tea

If you could take about one-third of a glass of tea, add two-thirds glass of carbonated water, then remove the tea flavor and add a little lemon juice, phosphoric acid, sugar, caramel and certain flavors in the correct proportion, you would have an almost perfect glass of Coca-Cola.

In fact, Coca-Cola may be fairly described as "a carbonated, flavored counterpart of tea, of approximately one-third the stimulating strength of the average cup of tea."

The following analyses, made and confirmed by the leading chemists throughout America, show the comparative stimulating strength of tea and Coca-Cola stated in terms of the quantity of caffeine contained in each:

Black tea—1 cupful.....	1.54 gr.
(ice)	(3 d. oz.)
Green tea—1 glassful.....	1.05 gr.
(cold)	(3 d. oz., exclusive of ice)
Coca-Cola—1 drink, 8 fl. oz.....	.61 gr.
	(prepared with 1 d. oz. of syrup)

Of all the plants which Nature has provided for man's use and enjoyment, none surpasses tea in its refreshing, wholesome and helpful qualities. This explains its almost universal popularity.

The Coca-Cola Company has issued a booklet giving detailed analysis of its recipe. A copy will be mailed free on request to anyone who is interested. Address:

HERE AND THERE.

On April 24 and 25, Brother Jones was with me for our second quarterly conference occasion. He preached at Mt. Carmel Sunday and held the conference at Gloster Monday following, with representatives from each church. Mt. Carmel people will not soon forget Brother Jones' convincing and profound sermon on the subject of Christian Education. It was just simply great. We had a good quarterly conference: one accession on profession of faith, one infant baptized, more people coming to church, prayer meeting growing (at Gloster), both Sunday schools (at Gloster and Liberty) growing in interest and numbers. Both places had observed Sunday School Day with good programs and good collections. An Epworth League was recently organized at Gloster. It will likely struggle to keep alive through the summer, but live it must, to meet the need. We intend that it shall be represented at Hattiesburg, June 7-10. Let Epworth Leaguers all over the Conference pray

How Miserable This Woman Was Until She Took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Toomsboro, Ga.—"I suffered terribly with backache and headache all the time, was so weak and nervous I didn't know what to do, and could not do my work. My trouble was deficient and irregular periods. I read in the papers what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for others and decided to give it a trial. I got good results from its use so that I am now able to do my work. I recommend your Vegetable Compound to my friends who have troubles similar to mine and you may use these facts as a testimonial."—Mrs. C.F. PHILLIPS, Toomsboro, Ga.

Weak, nervous women make unhappy homes, their condition irritates both husband and children. It has been said that nine-tenths of the nervous prostration, nervous despondency, "the blues," irritability and backache arise from some displacement or derangement of a woman's system. Mrs. Phillips' letter clearly shows that no other remedy is so successful in overcoming this condition as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

hard for us, that we may "fight the good fight of faith," and meet the demand here in Gloster for the salvation and social and spiritual development of the children and young people.

Having one Sunday each month for evangelistic work, I have held two meetings off the circuit—at Bovina and Hot Springs, Ark. The occasion of my going to Hot Springs was for my wife to take the baths longer at the suggestion of the specialists there. While there I assisted Rev. J. W. Thomas, pastor of the Second Methodist Church. We had some grand old-time revival services, when young and old came to the mourners' bench under deep conviction and "prayed through," while the saints shouted aloud the praise of God. Amen! The meeting continued over two weeks. There were thirty-three accessions to the church. Brother Cain said all that he could say about the Bovina meeting, though it was not an entire failure.

We landed back at Gloster May 21. Dr. Roife Hunt, financial secretary of the Educational Movement in the Vicksburg District, was with us at Gloster Sunday, May 22. He spoke at Liberty Monday, May 23. He gave me a "lift" in the work of the Educational Movement. He is great. I feel more encouraged relative to the Drive.

Just about to forget! John Chambers was here in April with his slides. The weather was against him, but he did good. He captured our high school students at two chapel services. I am hoping our Sunday schools will be represented at Jackson, April 7-10. Enough! J. A. WELLS.

A PRESIDING ELDER'S METHOD OF PRESENTING TITHING.

Rev. J. Allison Molloy, presiding elder of the Nashville District, in his third round is stressing tithing. Believing most earnestly in Christian stewardship, and tithing as an acknowledgment of that stewardship, he is giving about fifteen minutes at each quarterly conference on his present round to the presentation of that subject to the officials of his district. He emphasizes its importance from a spiritual standpoint, and calls upon the officials to pay at least the tithe in acknowledgment of God's ownership of all that they possess. He lays emphasis upon the effect of their example as officials in the church, and sets forth the fact that tithing will solve the financial problems of any congregation.

In a recent quarterly conference, following the earnest and forceful address of the presiding elder, thirty persons signed the tithing pledge card.

Brother Molloy also states most emphatically that the proper preaching on stewardship and tithing, instead of hindering, vastly helps revival services.

A Clear Brain and healthy body are essential for success. Business men, teachers, students, housewives, and other workers say Hood's Sarsaparilla gives them appetite and strength, and makes their work seem easy. It overcomes that tired feeling.—Adv.

REVIVAL AT SECOND METHODIST CHURCH, BOGALUSA, LA.

We have recently closed a successful series of meetings at the Second Methodist Church of Bogalusa, La., which resulted in 34 conversions and recclamations. The pastor was assisted by Rev. L. R. Sparks (pastor-evangelist), Covington, La., who did the preaching. Brother Sparks possesses evangelistic ability, and did some splendid work.

Bogalusa Second Methodist Church began its work, as a church, January 1, 1921, with 2 members. It now has 46 members, a fine Sunday school, and Woman's Missionary Society.

We "praise God from whom all blessings flow," and are looking forward to greater things.

LESSON FOR JUNE 5.

Topic: Making The Nation Christian.

Scripture Lesson: Psalm 33:12; Proverbs 14:34; Romans 13:1-7.

Golden Text: "Righteousness exalteth a nation: but sin is a reproach to any people." Proverbs 14:34.

Home Readings: Monday, "The Powers That Be," Romans 13:1-10; Tuesday, A Christian Citizen, Acts 22:22-30; Wednesday, A Citizen of Zion, Psalm 48:1-14; Thursday, The Lord of Hosts, Psalm 46:1-11; Friday, The King and the Prophet, Jeremiah 36:21-32; Saturday, Jesus's Love for His Nation, Luke 19:37-48; Sunday, The Righteous Ruler, Isaiah 32:1-8.

Teaching Points.

1. A nation can be—and ought to be—as much Christian as an individual.

2. Some kinds of religion and some kinds of politics will not mix, but pure religion and unselfish patriotism get along splendidly together.

3. Good Christians cannot be satisfied with an unholy nation.

4. Every Christian is under obligation to do all in his power to make the nation what it ought to be.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

Advantages of the Wesley Bible Class Federation.

The following is given by Mr. J. M. Way, formerly one of our best Field Secretaries:

"1. Federation stimulates class organization. The annual meetings and the publicity which precedes them call attention to the advantages of class organization.

"2. It makes for permanency and solidity. Since the Federation is composed of enrolled classes, its life and prosperity depend upon the life and prosperity of the constituent classes. Hence it strives to keep its members alive, busy, and growing in numbers and usefulness.

Deficient Vitality a Great Misfortune.

Persons that can rarely or never say that they feel full of life, are really among the most unfortunate. They do not live, but merely exist; for to live implies more than to be. To live is to be well and strong—to arise feeling equal to the ordinary duties of the day, and to retire not overcome by them—to feel life bounding in the veins.

A medicine that has made thousands of people, men and women, well and strong, has accomplished a great work, bestowing the richest blessings. Such a medicine is Hood's Sarsaparilla. The weak, run-down, or debilitated, from any cause, should not fail to take it. It builds up the whole system, changes existence into life, and makes life more abounding. It is simple justice to say these words in its favor.

Hood's Pills very effectively supplement it in cases where a cathartic or laxative is needed.—Adv.

"3. It instructs and inspires class officials. The success of any class may be measured by the efficiency and faithfulness of the officers and committeemen who direct its activities.

"4. It is both a wise and natural step to form a Federation. If each little stream should flow alone from the mountains to the sea, there could be no hydro-electric power plants, no river steamboats. Should each class insist on standing aloof from other classes, the great achievements of united effort would be lost.

"5. It is an entering wedge. In hundreds of Sunday schools the first forward movement is a Wesley Bible Class. The class opens the way for other improvements and trains the leaders, who make it possible to attain the Standard of Efficiency. The same is true on a larger scale with regard to the work of a Federation.

"6. It is a brotherhood. Every true class, every class that lives up to its motto, 'My Brother and I,' is a fraternity. The oldest fraternity in the world binds its lodges together and unifies their work through Grand Lodges. The Federation is the Grand Lodge of our Wesley Bible Classes.

"7. It is a strong arm of the church. This new organization has already defended the church against the attacks of those who claim she has lost her power to achieve."

The following is the program of our Intermediate, Senior, Young Peoples', and Adult classes to be held at Grenada, Monday, June 20. The opening service will be in the College Chapel at 2:30 p.m.

At 8 p.m., addresses by Miss Foreman and Mr. French.

Music furnished by Mrs. E. G. Mohler and the Gladney Sisters, cornetists.

One big feature of the occasion will be reports from representatives of all classes present.

Election of officers will take place at the evening hour.

Mr. French and Miss Foreman, and Mrs. Wyatt will hold departmental meetings for Intermediate, Young Peoples' and Adult classes.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE NOTES.

The District Sunday School Meeting for the New Orleans District was held last Sunday afternoon, May 22, at Parker Memorial Church. The District Secretary, J. H. Carter, presided over the meeting and made an excellent chairman, and very carefully and successfully carried out the program for the meeting. Many pastors, superintendents and Sunday school workers were present. The following officers were elected to push forward the work of the district: District Secretary, J. H. Carter; Elementary Superintendent, Mrs. R. H. Harper; Intermediate-Senior Superintendent, Miss C. Martinez; Young People and Adult, Edgar Cayard; Teacher Training, Miss Cora Perkins; Missionary Education Superintendent, Mrs. J. G. Snelling.

The Sunday School Field Secretary, and Miss Hess, Elementary Superintendent for the Conference, were present and had a part in the program. The workers took some forward steps; the executive committee was asked to consider the advisability of

FROM MENDENHALL, MISS.

Dear Advocate: The work in the bounds of our work is encouraging. The work of this, our third, year on the charge promises to be far in advance of previous years. We are building a beautiful church at D'Lo. It promises to be the most beautiful and best equipped in this section. Plans are being perfected to make our church here at Mendenhall modern in its equipment and beautiful in appearance. We have a fine people to serve, and they are keeping us busy serving. We are in this Educational Movement to do all we can.

Yours faithfully,

CHURCH DEDICATION AT CROWLEY, LA.

The dedication of the First Methodist Church last night was witnessed by a congregation which did more than tax the capacity of the spacious auditorium. Hundreds were unable to obtain even standing room in the sacred edifice. It was most appropriate that Bishop W. F. McMurry, of Louisville, Ky., should preach the sermon—and he did not attempt a discourse, but talked to the people in such a way that men and women of any denomination could take home with them a message which was fraught with profit to their souls.

Beautiful decorations, tenderly expressing the love of the women for their house of worship, made the chancel and altar fragrant with flowers and adorned with palms and other potted plants. The taste displayed was worthy of more than passing notice.

Always excellent because of the care taken in the selection and rendition of the music, the choir was at its best. Aside from the regular members, Miss Dixie Lyons, whose fine-toned contralto voice has helped in a material way for the quartet of the Crowley High School to win honors, was added to the singers. Miss Lyons has a bright future as a musician.

The services opened with a prayer by Bishop McMurry. It touched the hearts of all, because it rang with the sincerity of a true man of God. The Scripture lesson was read by Rev. C. A. Battle, the young and enthusiastic presiding elder of the Lake Charles District.

R. J. Wilson, who is in charge of the Christian Education Movement in this district, with headquarters in Lake Charles, did not take up much time, but he used every minute of his opportunity to speak by bringing a message of optimism to the Methodists hereabout. He spoke as a business man who has readily given up his work, so to speak, for the cause of Christ, as expressed in the campaign for education. His talk was full of helpful thoughts, and it was appreciated.

Bishop McMurry is a big man, not alone from a physical standpoint but as genuine leader. He did not attempt to deliver a set sermon, but preferred to talk to the people assembled in such great numbers. It was easy to follow him as he built up the structure of common sense reasoning in making the point that it was proper to speak of the Christian Education Movement at the dedication of a house which is set apart for the worship of God.

The Bishop brought his hearers face to face with facts that were so true that they burned into the heart, and they will find expression in a most liberal response to the call for funds, because, as he said, there was never a more opportune time for educational work in the church than at this period. So wrapped up in what the Bishop was saying was the congregation, that his explanation of the great movement was all too short, as there were many who would have enjoyed hearing him speak for a much longer time.

When the officers of the church had assembled in front of the altar, E. L. Savoie, chairman of the official board, presented the building to the Bishop, who in turn dedicated it to the services of God. Rev. C. A. Battle gave the benediction.

It was truly a Christian Education day in the Methodist church. At the morning service, Rev. F. M. Freeman, who has established himself as a thoughtful, scholarly servant of God, delivered a sermon which was powerful in its appeal.—Crowley Daily Signal of May 15.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI EPWORTH LEAGUE CONFERENCE.

Dear Epworth Leaguers:

I hope that each of you has received your copy of the program of the North Mississippi Epworth League Conference, which will be held at Grenada College, June 9, 10 and 11. Grenada being centrally located and easily accessible from all points in this Conference, we expect a good attendance and earnestly pray for great results.

We feel so fortunate in having in our department Miss Nell Drake, a returned missionary from China. I hope that every delegate will be inspired by her talks on the missionary work, and when they return to their local chapters impart to them their inspiration.

I have a request to make of every chapter. It is this: Please instruct your delegate to be prepared to participate in the following discussion: "How the Study of Missions is Made Interesting in my Chapter."

Yours for a great conference,
Mrs. V. H. STEPHENSON,
Missionary Supt.

CHURCH DEDICATION AT DE RIDDER, LA.

The Methodist church was filled to its utmost capacity on last Monday evening. The occasion was the dedication of this handsome edifice, which had been begun during the pastorate of Rev. Walter Henry, completed under Rev. Paul M. Brown, and the debt raised under the pastorate of Rev. C. E. Fike. The special service was under the supervision of the present pastor, Rev. C. E. Fike, and began with a beautiful anthem sung by the choir.

The presiding elder, Rev. C. A. Battle, opened with an impressive prayer, which was followed by the Scripture reading from the twenty-eighth chapter of Genesis by Rev. P. M. Brown.

Mrs. Kreeger sang in her lovely manner "Jesus, the Very Thought of Thee," after which a lesson from the New Testament was given by Rev. Walter S. Henry, former pastor, but now of Leesville; Rev. C. A. Battle gave an interesting talk on duties of our church, and was followed by Mr. R. J. Wilson, who is Lake Charles District Manager of the Education Campaign which is being put on by the Methodist Church.

The subject of Mr. Wilson's talk was, "The Educational Movement from the Business Man's Standpoint." Bishop W. F. McMurry, of Kentucky, then began an eloquent address. The text of this splendid sermon was, "The Lord Hath Built his House," and in a masterful manner he interwove the two movements, education and dedication, so completely that the one was lost in the other. Upon the conclusion of this wonderful lecture, Bishop McMurry called the official board of the church to the altar and received from their hands the title of this handsome building, closing the evening's program by a most solemn prayer for the protection and upbuilding of the church and its congregation.

Among the visitors for this occasion were: Mr. R. E. Bobbitt, president Mansfield Female College; Rev. L. P. Moreland, of Hornbeck; Rev. D. C. Bennett, of Noble; Rev. C. A. Battle, presiding elder of Lake Charles District, and Rev. Walter S. Henry, of Leesville.—De Ridder Enterprise of May 21.

FRECKLES

Now Is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots.

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as Othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots. Simply get an ounce of Othine—double strength—from your druggist, and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than one ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful clear complexion. Be sure to ask for the double strength Othine as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

Mr. Dodson, the "Liver Tonic" Man, Tells the Treachery of Calomel.

Calomel loses you a day! You know what calomel is. It's mercury; quicksilver. Calomel is dangerous. It crashes into your bile like dynamite, cramping and sickening you. Calomel attacks the bones and should never be put into your system.

When you feel bilious, sluggish, constipated and all knocked out and believe you need a dose of dangerous calomel just remember that your druggist sells for a few cents a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tonic, which is entirely vegetable and pleasant to take and is a perfect substitute for calomel. It is guaranteed to start your liver without stirring you up inside, and can not salivate.

Don't take calomel! It can not be trusted any more than a leopard or a wild-cat. Take Dodson's Liver Tonic which straightens you right up and makes you feel fine. Give it to the children because it is perfectly harmless and doesn't gripe.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

To the Presidents and Social Service Superintendents of our Auxiliaries:

Are you aware of the prominence that was given inter-racial work not only at our own annual meeting but also at the Council meeting? Let me urge you to read this page and act on the suggestions given. Appoint your Inter-racial Committee at your next meeting and organize your Community Club at once. The need is urgent. If I can assist you in any way in your organization let me know. Write me for programs. Sincerely yours,

Mrs. W. W. HOLMES, Conference Superintendent of Social Service.

From Miss Belle H. Bennett's Message to the Council, Richmond, Va.,
April 13-20, 1921.

Inter-Racial Commission.

The Inter-Racial Commission appointed at the last annual meeting of the Council has fully justified its appointment in the splendid, Christ-like, fraternal, educational work it has done. Last October a two day's Inter-Racial Conference of a select company of the leading white church women of the South and a small group of the outstanding Negro women, of the same section, was held in Memphis, Tenn. I quote here, with regard to that Conference, an extract from the Quadrennial Report of the Commission on Negro Work of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, made at the meeting of that great Council held in Boston, Mass., December, 1920.

"The Memphis Woman's Inter-Racial Conference in its deliverance will do more to bring the womanhood of the South into active service in behalf of the race than any other yet held. Their findings are worthy of permanent record. * * * As the group of representative women present pledge their hearty approval and support of the Commission on Inter-Racial Co-operation, its alliance appears to your Committee the strongest force yet organized in the nation in behalf of the colored race."

There are ten million or more of the Negro race, our life-long friends and our fellow-citizens, within the bounds of the fifteen Southern States (the natural territory of the Southern Methodist Church) representing about one-third of the population of these States. By every principle of justice, righteousness and mercy, we are debtors to these people. I would therefore urge that at the close of this quadrennium, one year hence, a Secretary of Negro Work be elected, and that this Secretary, in close co-operation with the Inter-Racial Commission, shall administer on all work among Negroes which is established and maintained by the Woman's Missionary Council.

3. That we endorse the action of the Executive Committee of the Woman's Missionary Council in session in Nashville, July 5, 1920, naming the Social Service Department as the channel through which the plans and policy of this Commission shall reach the Auxiliary.

Concerning Co-operation with Other Agencies.

4. In order that the Woman's Missionary Council may co-operate with women's organizations of other denominations and agencies dealing with the race question, we recommend:

(a) That we, the Woman's Missionary Council, endorse the inter-racial program of the Memphis Continuation Committee; and,

(b) That the Chairman of the Inter-Racial Commission represent the Woman's Missionary Council as a member of the Continuation Committee.

Concerning the Work of the Auxiliary.

5. That the following plans submitted by the Continuation Committee be adopted as a basis for working plans of the Auxiliary.

1. That the Social Service Department of each Auxiliary provide an additional Committee to be known as the Inter-Racial Committee, who shall be chosen with regard to their special fitness for this work. It shall be the duty of this Committee:

(a) To seek to know the leaders among the Negro women of the community, that a sympathetic basis of co-operation may be established.

(b) To direct a study of Negro community life in matters of housing, sanitation, neighborhood conditions, and the needs of Negro women and children.

(c) To adopt methods of co-operation with other agencies and with Negro women, that a constructive program of community betterment may be wrought out.

(d) To lead the Auxiliary in a study of Negro achievement in literature, poetry, music, art and other lines of endeavor, that there may be a sympathetic appreciation of the Negro's contribution to American life in these lines.

(e) To represent the Auxiliary in any local co-operative work that may be undertaken in the community and to have membership on Community Inter-Racial Committees when organized.

From Report of Social Service Committee, Annual Meeting, Baton Rouge, La., February 24, 1921.

6. Realizing as never before our duty to the Negro we urge a thorough unprejudiced study of their needs, and a determined effort on the part of our women to better their spiritual, moral and physical condition. For this purpose we urge the organization of Friendship Community Clubs and the use of the splendid programs issued by the Council.

10. We further recommend that we adopt the following recommendations of the Inter-racial Committee of the Woman's Missionary Council and other Christian agencies.

That an additional committee be appointed by the Social Service Superintendent of each Auxiliary, to be known as "The Inter-racial Committee" (preferably three) who shall be chosen because of their fitness for the work. It shall be the duty of this committee to

(a) To seek a knowledge of the Negro leaders among the women of the community, that a sympathetic basis of co-operation may be established.

(b) To direct a study of Negro community life in matters of housing, sanitation, neighborhood conditions, and the needs of Negro women and children.

(c) To adopt methods of co-operation with other agencies and with colored women, so that a constructive program or community betterment may be accomplished.

(d) To lead the society in a study of Negro achievement in literature, poetry, music, art and other lines of endeavor, that there may be a sympathetic appreciation of the Negro's contribution to American life along these lines.

(e) To represent the Society in any local co-operative work that may be undertaken in the community, and to have membership in Community Inter-racial Committees when organized.

many years it has appeared to me that the good women could do a splendid piece of service by supervising the training of the colored women and children for the work which most of them will do. I feel sure that you are quietly, and yet effectively, solving a problem which to many of us has seemed almost unsolvable. Your efforts to secure playgrounds for the children and to better equip mothers for the duties of the home and the training of girls to do the work which they are going to perform in the community, has given me as much encouragement concerning the relations of the two races as anything which has yet been undertaken. If I, at any time can, be of any service to you in this real Christian service which you are rendering to our city, do not hesitate to command me and I will gladly assist in every way possible and to the fullest extent of my ability.

Very cordially,

G. B. HINES.

Two years ago the Social Service Committee of the Woman's Missionary Society, First M. E. Church, South, called a meeting of the colored women to meet at the C. M. E. Church, an organization known as the "Community Club" was formed and has held monthly meetings since that time.

The programs are inspiring, the devotional exercises are made prominent and are very spiritual. The story hour attracts from one hundred to three hundred little eager black-eyed folk to say nothing of the interested mothers, and the talks and discussions on sanitary conditions, hygiene, home-making, care of the children and other live topics of to-day are made practical and instructive.

At first the talks were made by the women of the missionary society, then colored teachers and social workers helped and finally business men, doctors and trained nurses became interested and aided in the work.

We are more and more impressed with the importance of this work inaugurated by the Woman's Council of our church.

If there is anything that will overcome the antagonism of the races, it is this spirit of Christian helpfulness. Christ's spirit is always the only true conqueror. It is true that the colored churches represent the best elements of the race, but is not the same true of the white race and do not great movements begin in our churches? The eagerness of these people to learn, their deference and great respect for the women who have gone to them, their enthusiasm for the enterprises undertaken, the children's play grounds, the day nursery, the bureau for help, and other plans, have been very encouraging. The best element of the Negro race are not concerned with social equality; they are

SOME FACTS ABOUT THE EPWORTH LEAGUE CONFERENCE, HATTIESBURG, JUNE 7-10.

Special Car: A special car will leave each of several large points so as to arrive in Hattiesburg as early as possible on June 7. Plans are being made to have cars from Vicksburg, Jackson, Meridian, and Gulfport. Probably others will be arranged for later. All who can do so are urged to go on these specials.

Special Rates on Railroads: If a sufficient number of full fares are sold to the delegates, a return rate of one-half will be allowed. Be sure to get a receipt when you buy your ticket. Present this to the secretary upon arrival at the Conference.

Who Should Attend: Every pastor or member of the Mississippi Conference, all Conference officers, all members of the Epworth League Board, and all chapter presidents are members ex-officio of this Conference. In addition to those mentioned, each chapter should elect a delegate for every ten members. Any others who wish to attend are cordially invited. The number is unlimited. If your church has not a chapter, you should select several of your leading young people, and send them as delegates. Send names of delegates to Mr. J. H. Weems, Hattiesburg, and entertainment will be provided.

The Banner: The Conference has a banner which it awards each year to the district which is best represented. The chapter in that district which has the largest delegation becomes the custodian of the banner for the year. Capitol Street League, Jackson, is now in possession of the banner.

Recreation: The first night will be devoted largely to a reception provided the delegates by the Leaguers of Hattiesburg. Other features of recreation will be provided.

Sunrise Prayer Meetings: Sunrise prayer meetings will be each morning and it is in these services that a great part of the inspiration comes.

Mission Study Class: A mission study class will be conducted for those who wish to hold classes the following year in their own chapters.

Departmental Meetings: Meetings on methods of the various departments will be held simultaneously. Splendid instructors have been secured for these classes.

Bible Hour: Each morning Rev. M. L. Burton, of Jackson, will conduct a Bible Hour.

The Volunteers: The Volunteers will hold their third annual reunion in the form of a banquet some time during the Conference.

Music: The music of the Conference will be in charge of Dr. B. E. Mitchell, of Millsaps College. He will be assisted by a male quartette.

Registration: Do not fail to register upon arrival at the Conference. This is the only method we have of ascertaining which district should receive the banner.

Speakers' Personelle: The speakers' personelle has not been entirely completed at this time, but already it includes such people as the following: Dr. B. E. Mitchell, Rev. M. L. Burton, Rev. J. Lloyd Decell, Rev. S. F. Harkey, Mrs. F. S. Love (North Carolina) and Mr. Garfield Evans (Central Office Representative).

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE EPWORTH LEAGUE, JUNE 7-10.

Mississippi Conference Epworth League will convene in Main Street church, Hattiesburg, June 7, at 7:45 p.m., and will continue in session until the evening of June 10.

Our theme for the Conference is Social Service, and we will have several addresses along this line, and have group meetings on each of the mornings, studying the various departments of League work. Each department is in the hands of an efficient director.

The Bible Periods will be on "The Social Principles of Jesus," conducted by Rev. M. L. Burton.

Mrs. F. S. Love, of Wilson, N. C. (formerly Junior Superintendent in the Central Office), will have charge of the Junior and Intermediate work.

Professor Garfield Evans, of Nashville, will have charge of the missionary work.

Mission Study groups will be taught by efficient directors, using the two books, "Serving the Neighborhood" (Home Book), and "In Wembo Nyama Land" (Foreign Book).

The music will be a feature, under the direction of Dr. B. E. Mitchell, of Millsaps College, assisted by the Millsaps quartette, two local quartettes, and a large choir.

On the morning of the 8th, we will have the communion service at sunrise, conducted by Rev. W. W. Graves, assisted by the other six presiding elders.

The afternoon of the 9th has been given to the local chapters for their automobile ride and picnic supper.

Every pastor, presiding elder, and Epworth League president should attend, with a big delegation from every individual chapter, and where there are no Leagues, two or more young people are cordially invited to attend.

Reduced rates. All of the railroads have granted a one and a half fare, provided there are 350 regular certificates, properly signed, to Conference.

Send the names of your delegates as early as possible to Mr. J. H. Weems, 308 Second Avenue, Hattiesburg, Miss.

This promises to be the greatest religious gathering ever held in the State, and be sure you are there.

Some of the districts have arranged for a special car to take their delegates to Hattiesburg, and other districts are making arrangements for one. Get in touch with your district secretary, and find out about your car.

The program is nearly completed, and will be mailed to all the pastors.

W. D. HAWKINS,
President Mississippi Conference Epworth League.

ON TO THE SOUTHERN ASSEMBLY!

The attention of all our Epworth Leaguers is called to the advantages to be gained by going to Junaluska for the Epworth League Assembly, June 30-July 10.

Those who are looking for a place to spend their vacation can find nothing better than the opportunities afforded here. The railroad fare will be one and one-half fare for the round trip. Identification certificates may be had on application to J. Dale Stentz, Lake Junaluska, N. C. It is necessary to fill out these certificates before the special rate is obtainable. Board and room in the dormitories and cafeteria can be had at $10.50 and $12.50 a week. The hotels will furnish board at from $12.50 to $17.50 per week. You can't spend a cheaper vacation than that anywhere.

The program is of very high type. Just to hear Dr. Christian F. Reiser, New York City, will be worth the trip. He will make several addresses and conduct a group in the discussion of Recreation and Culture. Then there will be Bishops DuBose and Darlington, Dr. F. N. Parker, Rev. J. Marvin Culbreth, Rev. W. B. Hogg, Dr. Bennett, Dr. Few, Dr. McCarthy, C. C. Menzies, J. E. Ellis, W. G. Echols, J. B. Grambling, Mrs. F. S. Love, Mrs. Simeon Shaw, and others. Of the Central Office force, Dr. F. S. Parker, R. E. Nollner, and E. C. Harbin will be present.

And Stunt Night! Well, you just can't afford to miss it.

Then there is the recreation each afternoon. Remember the water baseball game last summer? Remember the baseball game between the girls and boys, when the boys wore girls' clothes? There'll be more fun than ever this year.

There'll be another big pageant and a Fourth of July trip to Eagle's Nest. There'll be a District Secretaries' Training School in session each day for thirty or forty-five minutes.

There'll be morning prayer hikes. There'll be ten days of rich fellowship with the finest body of young people in America.

Get up a party from your Conference. Make your plans to go. You can't afford to miss it.

Methodism Expects Every Man To Do His Duty

It was more than a century ago that the great Nelson faced the combined fleets of France and Spain off Trafalgar. Two giant Armadas were about to engage in a deadly and fateful struggle for supremacy. Tremendous consequences hung upon the issue of that dread conflict.

As the battle joined, Lord Nelson flung from the masthead his immortal pennant: "England expects every man to do his duty."

His comrades caught their commander's patriotic spirit, and they did their duty to a man. Nelson fell but England won. Every man did his duty, and the enemy was shattered. Britannia ruled the seas.

The Church Has Launched an Offensive

Today Methodism is in the midst of a struggle more momentous than Trafalgar. We seek to Christianize the education of the country--thereby Christianizing a whole generation and making "the kingdom come without observation." We seek to produce a multitude of Christian leaders for the world and workers for pulpit and mission field. We seek to stay the progress of that spirit which would teach our boys and girls that there is no God and that the hope of eternal life is a disordered dream. We seek to build the finest system of Christian schools and colleges in America, and enable them to receive the thousands they now are forced to drive from their doors.

He is a strange order of man who does not see in the Christian Education Movement the hope of Church and home and native land. He has read wrong the history of the past and the signs of the present who does not know that Methodism must educate or die.

Every Man to His Task

The Church expects every man to do his duty--every charge to meet its obligation to the full. There can be no failure if we catch the spirit of Wesley, of Whitefield, of McKendree, of the fathers of our faith. If we do not triumph in this it will be only because our hearts first quailed and lost their spiritual confidence.

What boots it that toil and struggle and unceasing sacrifice is demanded of us? Has it not been the price of all achievement? Why should conditions and exigencies purely temporal stay the onward marching of the King? The most brilliant chapters of our history were written in the face of difficulties a million times more severe.

Nelson fell but England held the field. So may we suffer anguish and weariness if through our toil the kingdom grows apace.

Methodism expects every man to do his duty. Let there be no faltering till the task is done. No cessation until every charge has reached its quota.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

WE REMEMBER THEM.

Friday, June 3, was observed as Confederate Memorial Day. The banks and public institutions generally were closed, and appropriate services were held in various places in memory of those who gave their lives for the cause in which they believed. Without a trace of the spirit that would exalt sectionalism above the interests of the land we ardently love as a whole, and without a single regret that we have in this country one great government instead of two, we reverently lay a flower upon the graves of those who wore the gray. They knew no other course of right than the one they followed, and we thank God for the men who were willing to die for their convictions in a day when mighty issues were at stake. They loved their country and they gave their lives in its defense. What more can men do? Their children have a rich heritage in the memory of their devotion—a heritage that inspires a patriotism that knows no geographical limits when the interests of their beloved nation are at stake. They are not less, but more loyal because of the heroic deeds of their sires.

SUBMIT THE CONSTITUTION.

There seems to be a very strong sentiment in the Constitutional Convention, now in session in Louisiana, in opposition to submitting the Constitution to the people of the State for adoption. In spite of all that may be said in favor of such a course, we believe there is one consideration in favor of submitting the document which ought to outweigh all arguments against it. In a republican form of government, after the government is set up, the people are content to let their representatives act for them; but since the sovereign authority resides in the people themselves, they certainly have a right to a direct voice concerning the fundamental document through which that authority is delegated. As we see it, the Convention is simply the agent of the people in drawing up for their consideration a Constitution—not clothed with authority to adopt it themselves for the people. To our way of thinking, the Constitution does not and cannot represent the sovereign will of the people unless the people themselves have directly adopted it. Authority under the Constitution can be delegated, but not authority over the Constitution. If an amendment to the Constitution has to be submitted to the people, why should not the Constitution itself be submitted?

A WEEK WITHOUT ACCIDENTS.

We do not use the above caption to suggest that any such week has actually been known, but to emphasize a campaign that is now being waged in New Orleans and throughout the country to lessen the number of casualties by exercising at least a reasonable degree of caution. One has only to watch the traffic for a few minutes on any city street to realize that a great many people apparently leave their minds at home when they go to town. Both pedestrians and drivers of vehicles seem to be afflicted with the mental disease vulgarly known as "nobody home." In New Orleans alone, scores of accidents are reported each month, some of them resulting fatally, upon which the verdict is passed, after due investigation, "unavoidable," meaning, as a rule, just the opposite. It is commonly reported that the lawyer who devised the warning used at railroad crossings, "Stop, Look, Listen," received a large fee for his services in composing such a perfect safety device; he deserved it—but his labor was largely lost so far as the average man is concerned. We suggest the following as a kind of slogan for those who would live to a ripe old age: "A careful fool is likely to live longer than a reckless philosopher."

MORALITY BY AGREEMENT.

We are not sufficiently learned in the technicalities of the law to know whether the proposed clause in the new Constitution of Louisiana to prevent the dissemination of racing news will put horse racing in the State out of business or not; we earnestly hope, however, that the great majority of the members of the Convention who stand for the protection of the people against the evils of gambling will insist upon a measure that is "hog tight, bull strong, and horse high." It is a strange thing that anybody can be found who will publicly oppose an enactment that will put an end to a "sport" that thrives upon gambling, that cannot exist without it, and that sends thousands of people to ruin every year because of it. So far as we have been able to learn, there is not a single argument in favor of racing except the fallacious one that it is a form of entertainment that attracts tourists, who contribute liberally to the welfare of the business community. The whole thing is evil, and that continually, and it ought to be outlawed both by constitutional and legislative enactments. In this connection, the attitude of the New Orleans newspapers would be amusing if it were not so pitifully weak. They agree that the dissemination of racing news is the one means by which the gamblers are enabled to ply their trade, and they agree that the city would be much better off without the operation of the handbooks; but because all will not agree to cease publishing the news, each one claims that it has to publish it in self defense. In our opinion, if they would stop flinging stones at one another and act upon the simple principle that right is right, those of them which oppose publishing such news would cease to publish it regardless of what the others did. If they cannot promote morality by agreement, they might develop backbone enough to stand for the right even if they do lose a few dollars by loss of circulation. As it is, they present the strange spectacle of good men pleading for the enactment of a law that will force them to do right because they refuse to do it voluntarily. We hope they will get what they want—full measure, shaken together, pressed down, and running over.

MAKING IMPROVEMENTS.

If a man should employ a carpenter to make improvements on his home, he would be considered very foolish if he did not tell the carpenter in just what respect he wanted changes made. The making of a change for the better always implies a knowledge of the things that are not right. Too many of us are striving to "go on to perfection" without knowing the exact points wherein we are weak. It ought to be possible for us, by careful examination, to discover even the little things that need to be changed in our lives in order that we steadily become better, and, having discovered them, it ought to be possible for us to change them, one at a time at least.

HE MEANS BUSINESS.

We know a man who pledged to the Christian Education Movement more than he is able to pay—according to some of his friends. But this man believes in the cause, and he keeps in mind the adage, "Where there's a will, there's a way." So, during the hot summer months he is saving five or ten cents a day on his lunch downtown and putting that amount aside to pay his pledge. We do not yet know the outcome of the educational campaign, but we do know that it is not too late for some people who thought they could not give to it to take stock of their resources and find that they can make a liberal contribution. A great many people could do that without denying themselves anything.

HOW FARES THE FIGHT?

How fared the fight with thee to-day?
Not well? Ah, nay,
Thou hast not lost; thou canst not lose.

However much they tear and bruise
The panting breast, the straining thews
Which are thy spirit's citadel,
If thou and faith upon the walls
Are comrades still when darkness falls.
Rest now! In sleep thy veins shall swell
With hope's new wine; and like a bell
From valley's deep heard on the height,
Thy leagured soul, throughout the night,
Shall call to thee, "All's well."

It is thyself along that may Thyself betray.
Arise again; arise and fight;
God's smile is in the morning light;
Lift thou thy banner brave and bright
Above thy spirit's citadel!
What matter if its fall be sure?
The pilgrim soul thy walls inure,
Clinging the wings of Azrael,
In face of all the hordes of hell,
Shall take, full-armed, its homeward flight,
And o'er thy ruins from the height
Shall call to thee, "All's well."

THE HIDDEN LOVE OF GOD.

By William C. Allen.

In western America, near the bases of the mountains, are great gullies—arroyos they are called—in which no moisture is visible, but under which flow streams of living water. Some men built a wall across an arroyo so deeply that the under-current was forced to the surface and, from the pool thus created, the life-giving fluid was distributed over the adjacent ground. The desert became prolific, the nearby waste blossomed with the beauty of the rose.

There are rocks hidden from view which we never look upon, there are drops in the depths of the ocean we never see, yet everywhere is the imperishable love of God. Every fragment of the universe, every quiet scene, every seething volcano, the remotest recesses of the creation are receptacles of the everlasting affection of a Divinity of love. We see the exterior of His handiwork—we rejoice in its magnitude and power. Do we pause to consider that deep in the solitudes of Nature where our vision can not reach and our imagination can not follow—beyond all intellectual conceit or understanding—rests concealed the endless mystery and presence of God?

And so, by simple analogy, we determine that beyond our finite comprehension and in depths we can not fathom is the ever-present, ever-exercised carefulness and sympathy of God.

We are glad when we hear of the compassion of Jehovah; we appreciate the wealth of material blessings He oftentimes bestows; but when our props fall down, when loneliness is intense, when riches take wings, when will-power diminishes and faith grows cold, we too often relinquish our grasp on the Hand that sustained us and withdraw our confidence in the Eternal Goodness that has upheld our souls. O, the pity of it all! Shall we yield to the temptation of thinking that because prosperity has diminished, God loves us no more?

Shall we forget the sufferings of the Savior—the lesson of the Cross? Are not the ways of the Infinite One, of necessity, profound? Truly He who names the heavenly hosts, whose caressing care penetrates the hidden things of earth, loves us too much to permit anything to befall us—body and soul—but what is for our good.

We to-day witness the truculence, the exploiting, the shamefulness, the wounds and the sorrows of many peoples. The world refuses to hear the ancient cry of Jehovah: "Thou hast burdened me with thy sins, thou hast wearied me with thy iniquities." It fails to accept the graciousness of the succeeding lines; "I, even I, am he that blotteth out thy transgressions for mine own sake; and I will not remember thy sins." Like the streams submerged in the deserts of America, flows the inexhaustible kindness of God. Some seek to check it with their follies, their passions, their greed—but the higher they build up against it, the more resistlessly it comes to the surface, the more it is revealed in its purity and power.
Our errors may have separated us from Jehovah, but his once hidden love will emerge triumphant in the end!

Be still my soul: Jehovah loveth thee;
Fret not, nor murmur at thy weary lot;
Though dark and lone thy journey seems to be,
Be sure that thou art ne'er by Him forgot.
He ever loves; then trust Him, trust Him still;
Let all thy care be this, the doing of His will.
San Jose, Calif.

SOME EMBARRASSING EXPERIENCES.

By Rev. T. W. Adams.

Divers and diverse experiences make up the life of an itinerant Methodist preacher. He has to deal intimately and confidentially with all classes and kinds of people. He frequently sees and hears things that trouble him. Many things that come to him give him real joy. He is always full to overflowing in the knowledge of the triumphs and tragedies in the lives of the people about him. He needs to be "as wise as a serpent and as harmless as a dove." By wisely using this knowledge his ministry becomes a great blessing; indiscretion hurts, if it does not destroy, his influence.

But I do not mean to write a homily on pastoral experiences. I want to narrate a few of mine that were specially embarrassing. My experiences in the main were free from any unpleasantness, and it would give me more pleasure to write of them, but likely as not we get more good out of the ones that were hard to bear.

In January, 1875, my young wife joined me at Osyka to go to our home near Franklinton, my first charge. I borrowed a horse and buggy for two or three days to make the trip. I had to go twenty-one miles, making a round trip of forty-two miles.
It took me nearly twenty days to get back. It rained and rained, and kept on raining. It looked like we might have a repetition of the Noah episode. The streams were swollen and would not go down. We spent the time, many days and nights, at the home of a Brother Hardy. It was painfully embarrassing, for he would not charge me, and if he had I did not have the money to pay.
I would have had to work it out. In that situation
I learned that some plain people could be mighty good. Corroboration of this has come to me many times since.

Then, too, I was greatly embarrassed by not getting the borrowed horse and buggy back on time. There was no possible means of communication with the owner. I had to hold myself down.
The rivers and creeks had me shut in. I made an effort to go anyhow, but got horse and buggy almost lost in quick-sand. That scared my wife worse than any other happening of our lives. I got the horse free from his entanglements, hitched him to the back of the buggy and pulled it out.

Then we made a more successful try of it. Since that time my wife has had considerable confidence in my ability to pull out of tight places—more, she has had unfaltering faith in God. We learned some useful lessons from that experience.

When quite a young preacher I made two visits during the year to the home of one of my members, an elderly widow. I was embarrassed at both visits. At the first one, after as religious conversation as a green young pastor could hold, I asked for the Bible to hold service. The sister made a vain search for her Bible, and seeing that she was troubled, I said "Never mind." I pulled my Discipline out of my pocket and read a few verses from the funeral ritual, and prayed. At the second visit
I called for her Bible. She looked at me and said, "Haven't you got that little book you had before?"
She never showed any disposition to entertain me in any way during the entire year—no meals, no lodging. A few years later I read her memoir in the Advocate in which the pastor spoke glowingly of the sanctity of her character, and said that her house was the home of the pastors. I thought when I read that memoir that preachers ought to be careful about their eulogiums of the dead. Memoirs and funeral sermons overtax the veracity of preachers, sometimes. I have been afraid of myself in rendering such service—I wanted to say all the good I could, and it was not easy to keep from saying too much.

I spent one night in an embarrassment that hasn't worn off for forty years. I was most cordially invited to stop at any time I could and stay with a certain family. Later it was quite convenient for me to spend the night there. For supper there was nothing on the table but a blackberry pie. I love blackberry pie, but I was hungry that night, having ridden quite a distance, and I was anxious for some substantial food, and a good cup of coffee. When bed time came I found that there was but one bed on the place. The family slept on pallets, and they gave me the bed. My protests were unavailing. It just had to be that way. That was a distressingly uncomfortable night to me. I never visited that home again.

Another incident proved still more embarrassing. One of the leaders of one of my churches was very anxious for me to spend the night at his home. His brother-in-law, a fine young local preacher, said that if I would go he would accompany me and we would have a good time. With some misgivings I decided to go. There were five adults and about six children of us. We cooked, ate, talked, read, prayed and slept in one room about 18 feet square. There was but one room to the house. My sense of modesty was shocked, and I decided never to go blindly into another such predicament. Since then I have been careful to do some scout work in the daytime to see the lay of the land before venturing at night. It pays to be careful.

I spent one very unpleasant night in one of my church homes. I never suspected that there was any domestic trouble in the home. But at supper it was plain to me that the husband and wife did not speak. It was too entirely delicate a matter for me, a fledgling in the ministry, to touch—I played low until I could get away next morning.
With a burdened heart I could only pray that God would help them. But the breach was past healing. I think I was helped by that experience, with all of its embarrassment and sorrow, to prize my own happy home the more. The contrast showed me the wisdom and joy of united hearts and lives at the head of the home.

I was greatly humiliated and distressed by a fuss I had one Sunday with one of my stewards, rather he had a fuss with me. I was just ready to begin the service when he became very angry with me and left the church. I followed him to the door and begged him to be reasonable and come back for service. He advanced on me, when on the steps, with a knife up his sleeve, as I learned afterward. He did not strike me, however. He insolently and wrathfully said, "I'll see you again."
I preached on the text, "O, taste and see that the Lord is good." I don't know that I ever felt more humble in God's hands, and realized more gratefully His goodness than in that service. I won a victory that day that amazed me, and did that church great good. Such things are hard to hear, but God can bring good out of ugly things if we will only let Him.

For several years I was greatly worried with the pastoral "naggers," who were veritable thorns in my flesh. They gave me many vexatious experiences. I talked to them and prayed for them, but nothing seemed to do them any good, and make them mend their ways. They said, "The church is dead," and "The preachers are afraid to preach their convictions, and 'The preachers court their rich members,' and many other such things. They wouldn't hear to reason. So I decided to change my tactics in dealing with them. I came to feel that it was my duty to them and to the cause to deal very candidly with them. I have told some of the poorer church members, "I have been to see you and the poor you mention as neglected many more times than the richest families in the church." A pastor can shut up the mouths of such croakers if he will only trouble himself to keep a memorandum and show it. "You say the church is dead," I answered. "Who are the dead church? Aren't you one of them?" "You ought to be ashamed to talk that way about the church of God; let us kneel down and pray for you and the rest of them." They can be saved from their "nagging" if we will use rebukes and exhortations in allopathic doses. It is not pleasant to give the medicine, but it needs to be done.

"I was sick and you didn't come to see me," was one of their popular complaints. I have asked them, "Did the doctor come to see you?" The answer would come, "Yes." "How did the doctor know you were sick?" "I sent for him," was answered. "Why didn't you send for me?" The answer, "I was sure you knew I was sick." "Well, I didn't—do you think I am a mind reader?" This line of talk generally brought them to their senses. I carried the matter into the pulpit and gave some wholesome instruction on the duty members owe to their pastors. I am sure we preachers owe a great deal of candor to our parishioners. The most of them mean well—they just don't know what their duty is.

I had a stubborn non-payer in my membership. I had heard the stewards talk about her in their meetings. They said she had paid no quarterage for several years—that there was no use to assess her. They turned her over to me. I had visited her home many times during the year. My last visit was a few days before Conference was to meet. The sister asked me if I were not coming back next year. I answered her very emphatically, "No madame, I am not coming back." "Why?" she asked. I replied, "I have been here all this year preaching and visiting industriously; I have visited you on several times, but you have not paid one dime." A collection proceeded at once.

MONROE-RUSTON DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The District Conference of the Monroe-Ruston District, Louisiana Conference, was held at Lake Providence, May 3-5.

Rev. K. W. Dodson, the presiding elder, presided with ease and dignity and dispatched the business in a satisfactory manner.

Lake Providence gave the district conference a hearty welcome, which was formally expressed in a few well chosen words by the pastor, Rev. T. J. Warlick, and supplemented in a splendid, appropriate and very much appreciated address by Mrs. A. S. Hill. The committee on entertainment left nothing undone for the comfort and pleasure of the visitors, adding to the pleasure of their guests by auto drives in the afternoons through the town and along the shore of beautiful Lake Providence.

The Educational Campaign was presented by our faithful and beloved Conference Secretary, Rev. A. S. Lutz, who is always welcome to our conferences, our charges, and our homes in this section of the State, having served very acceptably as presiding elder of the Monroe District four years. The afternoon session of the first day and the night service were devoted principally to this cause.

Gloom was cast over the district conference by the announcement that after Rev. R. V. Fulton, pastor at Farmerville, had left home to go to the conference, he received news that his wife had become suddenly ill and died. Fervent prayers were offered for him and his children and a telegram expressing the sympathy of all was sent to him.

The morning session of the second day was devoted to election of delegates to the Annual Conference, selecting the place of meeting for the next session of the district conference, and pastors' reports. The delegates elected to the Annual Conference are: R. O. Randle, Monroe; J. L. Compton, Rayville; C. E. Beard, Lake Providence; E. E. Williamson, Crew Lake; W. L. P. Henry, Willhite; Dr. G. J. Caraway, Oak Grove; R. T. McClendon, Lisbon; J. A. Hughes, Eros. Alternates: F. A. Miles, Delhi; T. I. Watson, Calhoun; W. M. Hunt, West Monroe; Miss Mollie Higginbotham, Mer Rouge.

There was lively interest in the selection of the place for the meeting of the next district conference. Mangham, Rayville, and Crew Lake, all in Richland Parish, and the two latter on the same pastoral charge, Mer Rouge and Eros were placed in nomination. Eros received more votes than any other place, and then, on motion, was made the unanimous choice.

The interests of the Methodist Orphanage at Ruston were presented in a forceful sermon at 11 o'clock by the superintendent, Rev. R. W. Vaughan.

The Sunday school interests were presented at the afternoon session by Rev. Alonzo Early and Miss Hess. The program was good and elicited considerable interest. During this session the district officers were elected as follows: Chairman, Rev. K. W. Dodson; District Secretary, E. L. Walker, Jonesboro; Elementary Superintendent, Miss Ruth Lane, Tallulah; Intermediate-Senior, J. H. Miller, Ruston; Young People-Adult, Mrs. M. E. Gilbert, Gilbert; Missionary Education, Miss La Valle Calhoun, Rayville; Teacher Training Superintendent, Mrs. Addie Holloway, Mer Rouge.

Rev. J. G. Snelling represented the Memorial Home, in New Orleans, at the evening service, which was in charge of Rev. J. B. Grambling, who gave an illustrated talk with stereopticon views in the interest of the Epworth League Assembly to be held at Mansfield Female College in June.

The closing session was that of the morning of the third day. Among other committee reports was one from the committee on boundaries (you see we had a General Conference committee) recommending that at least three new pastoral charges be formed at the next Annual Conference and that sufficient missionary funds be appropriated to man them properly.

Finally, we had one real gospel sermon at 11 o'clock, by Rev. J. M. Alford, who remained over to preach for the pastor that night. Thus the first Monroe-Ruston District Conference came to an end.

A. S. J. NEILL, Secretary.

THE HATTIESBURG DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Hattiesburg District Conference convened at Collins, Miss., May 25, at 9 a. m., Rev. W. W. Graves, presiding elder, in the chair. J. H. Jolly was elected secretary and Rev. D. R. Campbell, assistant secretary. A strong and forceful sermon by Rev. J. T. Leggett, of the Main Street Church, Hattiesburg, had been preached the evening before as the opening of the conference. Rev. W. W. Graves, our new presiding elder, presided with grace, dignity and ease, and in that pleasing manner which Brother Graves always maintains. At the opening hour the sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered by the presiding elder, assisted by Rev. L. Carley and Rev. G. R. Ellis. Besides Brother Leggett's sermon, splendid sermons were preached for the conference by Rev. H. Mellard, of Sumrall, and W. M. Williams, of Purvis.

The preachers of the district were all present except two, P. H. Howse, of Prentiss, and F. B. Ormond, of Richton. A splendid delegation of laymen and laywomen were present, representing the different charges, and all business of the conference was given due consideration and the committees did their work splendidly.

Wednesday afternoon was given over to the Sunday School Institute. Rev. J. C. Chambers, our field secretary, was in charge and rendered a helpful program. Wednesday night was given to the educational interest of the church, Rev. J. M. Morse in charge. Rev. J. W. Broom, financial director of the educational movement for the Mississippi Conference, was the first speaker, who gave us a message full of enthusiasm that showed his faith in the movement and gripped the audience. After this address, we had the stereopticon views of our educational institutions, accompanied by an inspiring message by Brother Morse. Other interests of the church were ably represented by the following men: Conference Hospital at Hattiesburg, Rev. G. S. Harmon; Child's Home Finding Society, and Memorial Home at New Orleans, Rev. John L. Sutton; Millsaps College, Prof. B. E. Mitchell. The following delegates were elected to the Annual Conference: John A. McLeod, Bura Hillburn, W. S. E. Tatum, James Hand, G. W. Holloway, Dr. G. L. Terrell, H. V. Waits, and Mrs. H. McMullan. Alternate delegates: F. L. Matthews, W. C. Corley, J. S. Thompson and D. R. Campbell. K. T. Moore was elected lay leader.

W. D. Hawkins spoke in the interest of the Epworth League work and urged a full attendance at the League Conference. J. T. Leggett, J. E. Williams, C. M. Crossley, and S. C. Moody were appointed as the licensing committee. Main Street, Hattiesburg, was chosen as the place for the next district conference. Our efficient Centenary representative, W. D. Hawkins, presented in a most forceful manner the needs of this great work, and showed pictures illustrating the splendid work being done in the foreign field.

All were praising the good people of Collins for the generous way they entertained the conference. The presiding elder said, "Every one says he has the best home." Rev. W. M. Williams read resolutions of thanks to the people of Collins for their kind hospitality, and to Rev. J. M. Lewis, their pastor, for his untiring efforts to make our stay pleasant. These resolutions were adopted by a rising vote.

J. H. JOLLY, Secretary.

DON'T READ THIS IF YOU ARE BEHIND WITH YOUR CENTENARY PLEDGE.

By R. S. Stewart.

Three years ago a representative body of Southern Methodists advised, and the General Conference authorized, a Missionary Campaign for $35,000,000. This news sent a shock throughout the religious world. The minds of some were stupefied. Such a sum was unheard of in the history of missionary enterprise. But a year later the hopes of the faithful were realized. Without "credits," the vast sum was over-subscribed and an epoch had been marked not only in the history of Methodism, but in church history. The Methodist Centenary and the movements which it inspired in other denominations will be one of the mountain peaks of history as future men look back to count the significant things of progress. Well may Southern Methodism thank God for her high privileges of Christian leadership. She is standing on holy ground. May she give careful heed to God's voice that "no man take her crown."

The news of Southern Methodism's faithfulness to her Centenary responsibilities is the property of the world. We would not detract from the sacrifice of our people; but, "honor to him whom honor is due." There is another Methodist Church which has surpassed us and the world knows nothing about it. Their record is written in heaven. To the Japanese a dollar represents considerably more in value than it does to the American. Notwithstanding this, the Japan Methodist Church has subscribed sixteen dollars and

HISTORY OF THE ALUMNAE ASSOCIATION AND OF PORT GIBSON FEMALE COLLEGE.

By Mrs. Maggie Williams Musgrove.

In the beautiful old town of Port Gibson, Mississippi, there has just occurred an event of very real significance to the community, and, it is to be hoped, to the State at large. Certainly it was an occasion that threw into splendid relief the present effort of the church to promote Christian Education throughout our land. It was a rallying of the alumnae and former students of the Port Gibson Female College, to promote the good, preserve the history, and compile for future generations the records of the historic old pile that has nurtured and sheltered the daughters of our Southland through a century of time.

The Alumnae Association, which was organized a year ago with Mrs. Mary Lum Reagan, of Rocky Springs, Honorary President; Mrs. Mattie Willis Galloway, of Jackson, Miss., Honorary Vice President; Mrs. Maud Kennard Shelby, President; Mrs. Annie McGilvary Heath, Vice-President, and Miss Norine Schillig, Secretary and Treasurer, sent out invitations to all members and former students in the Vicksburg District, as well as to those of the colleges of Millsaps and Brookhaven, Seashore School and Mississippi Conference Training School, to be present at a reunion on Friday, April 22.

In spite of the storm of the night before that made the roads difficult for automobiles, a large crowd assembled at eleven o'clock on that day. The old chapel had been made beautiful by a most artistic arrangement of flowers and plants, and every one was presented with pansies—the college flower, Mrs. Reagan, the student of seventy-seven years, receiving hers from little Laura D. Satterfield, the student of one year. The exercises were opened by a prayer by the Rev. Mr. Harmon of the Methodist Church, which was followed by the singing of "America," and a short address by Mr. M. M. Satterfield, Master of Ceremonies, after which he requested the students of each college to stand as the roll of colleges was called. It was extremely gratifying to Port Gibson when such a number rose from P. G. F. C., and it caused a genuine thrill when, at the request that every one who had been educated at a church school rise, only three in all that assembly remained seated. Dr. A. F. Watkins, President of Millsaps College, was then introduced, and taking for his subject, "What Does the Church Propose To Do for the Colleges, and Why?", delivered the most masterly address heard here in many years. He was followed by Dr. W. R. Bourne, who in happy vein spoke on "What Should the Alumni Do for the Colleges and Church, and Why?", summing it all up in the word "Love!"

Having reached the noon hour, there followed a most delightful lunch served amid a bower of pink roses in the college dining room. Though there were many present both eminent and learned, the place of honor was given to Mrs. Mary Lum Reagan, the oldest living graduate, and quite a diversion was created when Miss May Russell, of the class of 1879, took from Mrs. Reagan the fork she was using and holding it up, told the story of it. It had been brought to P. G. F. C. by Mary Lum when she came, a young girl in 1811, and had been used during her four years' stay. Later, during the Civil War, it had been stolen by a Yankee soldier, and after thirty-three years, through his advertising in a Washington paper had been returned to Mrs. Reagan. Following the luncheon, toasts were given by Mr. Herbert Crisler for Millsaps, Mrs. Roy Wilson of Vicksburg for Brookhaven, Miss Pearl Sartor for Mississippi Conference Training School. They were all apt, interesting and greatly enjoyed.

Adjourning to the chapel, ten-minute talks on the needs of their respective colleges were given by the residents present. So closely had the occasion drawn all together, that the enthusiasm for P. G. F. C. aroused only friendly and amusing comment from the heads of the larger schools. Mr. Hunt, of P. G. F. C., during his talk read a letter from Mrs. Matilda Jones Holloman, of the class of 1862, suggesting that the name of Port Gibson Female College be changed to Port Gibson College. This was enthusiastically received and throughout the remainder of the day no other name was used.

Just here was given a paper on "The Early History of the College," by Miss Norine Schillig, of the class of 1900, and Secretary of the Alumnae Association. This had been placed later on the Alumnae program, but was asked for at this time by those who were compelled to leave on the afternoon train. Mrs. Maud Kennard Shelby, President of the Alumnae Association, then made a short talk, after which she turned the meeting over to the writer as Chairman of the Program Committee. After explaining the work planned and undertaken by the Association, she proceeded to call the roll of classes, covering a period of seventy-three years, beginning with the class of 1818, represented by Mrs. Mary Lum Reagan, of Rocky Springs, Miss., and ending with that of 1921, represented by Miss Esta Trapp of Philadelphia, Miss.

Mrs. Reagan, fearing that she would be unable to make herself heard, requested Miss May Russell to speak for her, which Miss Russell did most graciously. After paying a beautiful tribute to the life and character of this dainty, flower-like little representative of "other days that bloomed along the years," she gave Mrs. Reagan's memories of a large class, only two members of which are living: Kate Coleman—Mrs. Judge Henry T. Ellet, of Memphis, Tenn., the daughter of one eminent jurist and the wife of another, both leading members of the bar when the bar of Port Gibson led the State; and Elizabeth Hooper—Mrs. Dr. Winter, of Jackson, Miss. Then followed the most beautiful and striking event of the day, the presentation of an armful of white lilies to Mrs. Reagan, the graduate of 1848, by Esta Trapp, the graduate of this year. On receiving them Mrs. Reagan, her daughter, Mrs. Lum, and her great-granddaughter, Roberta Lum, all stood in acknowledgment. Could the granddaughter, Mrs. Dudley, of Utica, Miss., have been present, four generations of scholars would have been represented within the old college walls.

Then came the roll of later classes, the one at the beginning of the Civil War having been omitted through a misunderstanding. This was unfortunate, for from a historical point of view it was the most important of all, it having been a patriotic gathering, the graduates wearing homespun dresses, and singing the war songs of the Confederacy.

Coming on down the years, class after class was called, and name after name of distinguished and saintly women who had become a part of the history of our country and the world; of Blanche Perkins, afterward Lady Richey, of Winchester, England, who made such a wonderful record in the class of 1864, and who with the splendid courage and self-sacrifice of the English nobility in the late world war, worked in the field at the age of seventy that English soldiers in France might be fed; of Miss May Russell, of the class of 1879, who has given her life and talent as a lecturer in the cause of temperance, and lives to see her heart's desire fulfilled; of Addie Gordon, of the class of 1881, who went out as a missionary to China, married Rev. Wm. Burk, and going with him to the new and untried field of Sung Kiang, left there an impress never to be effaced; of Miss Nell Drake, of the class of 1892, who is erecting in the Sung Kiang of to-day a splendid structure on the foundation laid by Addie Gordon; and of a long line of noble women who have taken the precepts and training of P. G. F. C. into all lands and all parts of our own land and have given gladly and freely of that which was committed to them.

History of Port Gibson Female College.

So much for the day. As for the school itself, it is inconceivable that the Methodist Church should not take advantage of the history and traditions of the college, the beauty and culture of the old town that surrounds it, to build anew in this new day and time. Port Gibson is one of the oldest towns in the State of Mississippi, well on to two hundred years having passed over it, each year adding something to its charm. Saved from the torch in 1863 by General Grant on account of its beauty, it has retained its atmosphere through all the blighting changes that have swept the world since 1914. Rich in the finer graces of life, its poor soil indeed for Bolshevism, and therefore the place of all others where trust and virtue may be taught.

The early history of the Port Gibson Female College is obscured in the mist of years. The first record we have of it is in the will of Samuel Gibson—for whom Port Gibson is named—where, under date of November 21, 1817, he leaves the property to his wife Rebecca. It passed from her to one Ann Minor in 1822 for the sum of $2,700; then to Mr. T. B. Magruder in 1826; to Horace Clark in 1828, and from him in 1829 to the Trustees of Clinton Academy, as it was called, for $3,100. These were P. A. Van Dorn (father of Earl Van Dorn, the Confederate general), A. C. France, James Nicholls, Dan Greenleaf, Benj. Hughes, Isaac Leaning, James Moore, A. B. Wooley, and James Cotton. In 1842 it was bought by Henry T. Ellet (Judge Henry T. Ellet) for the sum of $2,956.43 cash. The school at this time was under the control of the Presbyterians, the Trustees being A. H. Putnam (a grandson of Israel Putnam), Passmore Hoopes, Benj. Hughes, Zebulon Butler and Horatio Spencer; and we find at this time an act providing that the taxes on billiard tables and the money from the sale of estrays should go to the academy. The erection of the main brick building put the Trustees so in debt that a new set of men, chiefly Methodists, took charge, bought the property from Henry T. Ellet for $2,450, and paid off the indebtedness. These men were David G. Humphreys, D. S. Humphreys, Jos. Davenport, Evan S. Jefferies, Nathaniel Jefferies, George H. Humphreys, John S. Chambliss, Elias Bridges, James H. Maury, Sarah L. Barnes, Samuel Coburn (who succeeded to the home of Blennerhasset, about eight miles from town, and made famous by Aaron Burr), Peter Chambliss, P. R. Tallaferro, Alfred Barnes and Benj. G. Humphreys, afterward Governor of Mississippi. That they established the school on a sound financial basis is seen in the following advertisement in the Port Gibson Chronicle of October, 1842:

"Port Gibson Female Academy."

"E. P. Strong, Principal.

"Sarah T. Russel, Assistant.

"El. K. Knauff, Music Teacher.

"Each pupil, bed and board.....$60.00

"Tuition, First Class..... 30.00

"Tuition, Second Class..... 25.00

"Tuition, Third Class..... 20.00

"Music 35.00

"Washing 7.50

"Bed and Bedding 7.50

"Btu for board and tutelage is due in advance, and in all cases must be secured by a note or draft on New Orleans."

In 1849 the property was sold again to John Taylor Moore for $3,000; and in July, 1854, was resold by him and his wife Eloie to the Port Gibson Collegiate Academy, for $2,000. John Taylor Moore was one of the richest and most influential men in Claiborne County at that time, and his wife, Eloie, was a Miss Bowle, the best known members of the family being Resin P. Bowle, inventor of the Bowle knife, and James Bowle, of Alamo fame. The school was finally decided by D. George Humphreys, President of the Board of Trustees, to the Mississippi Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, on October 14, 1869, when the name was changed to Port Gibson Female College.

The value of the College to-day, financially, is about $25,000. And from the very first it has gone steadily forward, even the Civil War not interfering. We see in an old letter of Lady Richey's that on November 7, 1864, there were one hundred girls in attendance. After the battle of Port Gibson, May 1, 1863, it was used as a hospital, all the cushions from the various churches being

THE ANIMAL PAINTER.

By William Thompson.

Ten thousand years or more ago,
When birds were white or black,
There lived a wise old Indian,
Whose name was Bung-ga-back.
One day he called the birds to him,
And said, "You will agree
You are not quite so beautiful
As you would like to be."

"You're right," said Robin Red Breast,
"You are a wise old man;
And if you can improve our dress,
Please let us hear your plan."

"Tis well," replied old Bung-ga-back,
"I'm glad that you agree.
Please call around on Saturday
At quarter after three."

At the appointed time, the birds,
With keen anticipation,
Met their old friend, Chief Bung-ga-back,
With anxious contemplation.

"First, Mr. Peacock I'll adorn
With tints of sunset and the morn.
And whosoever may desire,
I'll paint their wings a flaming fire."
And so the birds came, one by one,
And stole the beauties of the sun.
The artist laid his tools aside,
And all the birds were satisfied.
And if to-day they beauty lack,
It's not the fault of Bung-ga-back.

RHODA'S FAITH.

By Mrs. Geo. S. Brown.

In these glad days when the gospel of Jesus Christ is preached in every language and tongue, we hardly know what persecution means. We have to take down our histories and read what the Christians had to suffer when they confessed Christ. The disciples knew all about it and although Peter denied his Lord, he more than atoned for it—scourgings and prison bars no longer held any fears for him and he was ready to lay down his life in order to preach the gospel any time.

When Herod killed James, the brother of John, with a sword, it pleased the Jews so much he began to lay plans to kill Peter also. Accordingly, he put him in prison and had him guarded by many soldiers, intending after Easter to give him over to his enemies. James had, no doubt, finished the work given him to do, but God had more for Peter to accomplish, so He kept a better watch over the prison than all the soldiers could keep.

All the church people were praying for Peter and many little children added their prayers to those of the parents, for they all knew and loved Peter. One of these young girls was Rhoda and every morning when she woke, her first question would be, "Mother, is Peter out of prison yet?" One day her father asked her why she always asked that, when he was guarded by four quaternions of soldiers? "Why," she answered, "Isn't that what we are all praying for? What do the soldiers matter if God is there, when He is stronger than all of them?"

Her faith was so implicit she would run to the door every time she heard any kind of commotion in the street, feeling sure Peter was making his escape. She did not know how he was to get out, but she imagined the soldiers were to be overpowered and Peter would come marching through the streets with a procession.

One day Rhoda's mother told her that the good people of the church were going to have a prayer meeting at Mary's house. "O, may I go and pray too?" Rhoda inquired eagerly. "I wouldn't be surprised if there was an earthquake or something of the kind when we are praying, and Peter will join us there." "You must not expect such great things, Rhoda," her mother said. "Of course God answers prayer and if it His will, He will deliver Peter to us, but in His own good time." Rhoda was too dutiful a daughter to argue with her mother, but she did not see why they should pray and then not expect an answer, so she went to Mary's house, confident that Peter would worship with them.

All the while John and Mark and Mary and all the others were praying, Rhoda was listening—she gave attention to the prayers and echoed every word, but she kept her ears open, for she was expecting an answer. After awhile she heard a knock at the door of the gate, and she went to open it, her face lit up with eager anticipation. It was Peter and when he spoke she was so glad she forgot to open the door, but ran back, crying "I knew it—I knew it—our prayers are answered. Peter is here!"

Now, would you believe it? Those people actually doubted it. Here they had been for days praying God to deliver Peter, and when He did so, they said, "It cannot be—it is his spirit." Rhoda kept calling out, "It is—it is Peter," and they told her she was mad—the excitement had proved too much for her. But Peter kept on knocking and great was their astonishment when they opened the door and he walked in.

Rhoda's faith had been rewarded—she had been the first to see him and she felt that she would always love to be a door-keeper in the house of her God. She slid quietly down on a stool in the corner and listened while Peter told them how the Lord had sent an angel while he was bound in chains between two soldiers, and touched him, telling him to rise up quickly. With the implicit faith of Rhoda, he rose, his chains fell off, the soldiers and keepers did not wake, and he noiselessly followed the angel through the prison to the iron gate of the city, which opened of its own accord, and on into the street where the angel left him, and he had come on to Mary's house to tell them of his wonderful escape.

When Rhoda had an opportunity to speak to Peter she asked, "Is not this what the Master meant when he said if we had faith, we could remove mountains? Iron chains and prison doors are like mountains." Peter placed his hand tenderly on the girl's head and said, "Yes, my daughter, and your faith is what He meant when He said, "Except ye be converted and become as little children, ye cannot enter the kingdom of heaven."

JACK'S COURAGE.

Crash! Bang!

Jack's heart nearly stopped beating, and his eyes grew wide with horror; there was mother's best vase on the floor broken into hundreds of pieces.

"People shouldn't put vases on little tables just where a fellow couldn't help bumping into them," muttered Jack. Still, he had been told not to go into the drawing-room in his heavy boots, and he began to feel rather queer. "Oh, well, they'll think it was the cat," he said to himself, and off he went.

Every one had started supper when Jack came in again, and he slipped quietly to his place.

"Where's puss?" he asked.

"Oh, she's in disgrace," answered Margaret; "we've shut her up in the cellar. She knocked over mother's new vase."

"No one seems to know anything about it, so we thought puss must have done it," said mother.

"Oh," said Jack, and nothing more was said about the vase.

Jack took out his lesson books, but somehow he could not study. What was it that new teacher had said, something about courage? Oh, yes! he remembered. "Courage consists not only in bearding a lion or facing a mad bull, but in the quiet performance of unpleasant duties or the cheerful acceptance of deserved censure."

"Acceptance of deserved censure." Yes, that meant taking the blame on yourself; he remembered that.

"Miaow, miaow," came faintly from the cellar, and that settled Jack.

He cleared his throat and began manfully, "I say, mother."

"Yes, Jack," answered mother, softly.

Why would that queer feeling come in a fellow's throat!

"I—I knocked the vase over."

"I'm so glad you told me, son," she smiled back at him. "I don't mind so much about the vase, but I'd hate to think my boy wasn't truthful. Wouldn't you like to let puss in?"

"My, won't I work hard for father in the garden this summer and buy her a new vase!" thought Jack, as he went to the door and called puss.—Lillian Ladymian, in Jewels.

DIRECTIONS.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after three or four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise, use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least an inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

THE CAMPAIGN NOT CLOSED.

As was naturally to be expected, a great many churches were not able to complete the every-member canvass in behalf of the Christian Education Movement in one week; and, for various good reasons, others have not yet begun the canvass. For the benefit of these, it has been distinctly understood that the time could be lengthened, and the official announcement is now made that the time has been lengthened, so that there may be no excuse for a failure to present the matter in every charge in the connection.

The reports that have already come in are encouraging, and it is evident that the interest of many of our people in the Movement was not overestimated. Practically without exception, those pastoral charges in which the matter was presented according to the official plan have reported liberal pledges, not a few of them going considerably beyond their assigned quotas.

We do not believe there is a church in the whole of Southern Methodism that does not want to have a part in the great program of promoting Christian education. So much is dependent upon the outcome of this Movement that every member in every church ought to have a part in it. Let no one, therefore, cease his efforts until the entire amount asked for—$33,000,000—has been secured. The reports to be made on Sunday, June 12, should carry the fund even beyond the goal originally set.

PREPARING FOR SERVICE.

It is so well recognized that efficiency in church work depends upon adequate preparation for service, that we will not undertake to emphasize the necessity of such preparation at the present time. We do want to call attention, however, to the fact that just now every possible opportunity is being given those who really desire better to equip themselves for more efficient service in the various organized activities of the church.

In the North Mississippi Conference, the Epworth League Conference is now in session at Grenada, with a program that cannot fail to be exceedingly helpful to those who take advantage of it. The North Mississippi Conference Training School for Sunday school workers and the Wesley Bible Class Federation will meet in Grenada, June 19-25. The courses that will be offered and the teachers who will present them are equal to the best in the church, and hundreds of those who are interested in Sunday school work should take advantage of these splendid opportunities.

In the Mississippi Conference, the Epworth

League Conference is also in session at Hattiesburg, and it is offering a most attractive bill of fare to those who are in attendance. The Conference Standard Training School is also in session at Millsaps College, Jackson, and every facility is being afforded those present to increase their efficiency in Sunday school work.

In the Louisiana Conference, the State Epworth League Assembly and Conference is in session at Mansfield Female College, Mansfield, to be followed immediately by the Standard Training School for Sunday school workers, and both of these are offering a feast of good things.

In addition to all these, the Seashore Divinity School will begin its sessions at the Seashore Camp Ground, Biloxi, Miss., on June 14. This School furnishes unusual opportunities for undergraduates in the Conference courses of study to complete their work, and for all pastors to receive such instruction and inspiration as will greatly help them in their ministry. The program this year is unusually rich, both in the faculty and lecturers, and in the subjects that will be discussed.

With these opportunities at our very doors, there is no excuse for our failing to develop within our own territory men and women who will be thoroughly qualified for every good word and work in the various departments of the church. It will always be true that a call to service is a call to get ready for service.

USE THIS OPPORTUNITY.

Some of our churches are including in their annual budgets a definite amount for the Christian Education Movement. This gives opportunity for those members who cannot now see their way clear to make subscriptions to have some share in the Movement, and provides, also, for those members yet to be received.

This is an admirable plan, provided it is safeguarded in the following way: The Board of Stewards to take formal action, providing for a definite amount annually for five years in the regular budget; sign a pledge card certifying that such action has been taken. In cases where the full quota has not been pledged no church should fail to make such provision. And, if desired, the church can direct its pledge. Relate your church to some school—by its gifts to a scholarship or loan fund, or some other definite object. And do this not later than Sunday, June 12.

THE THANK OFFERING.

The Method Book of the Christian Education Movement calls for a thank offering from each congregation at the close of the every-member canvass. This is to be used in taking care of the expense of the Movement, that the schools not be required to carry this expense. The schools of the church provided the funds for expense, with the understanding that these amounts would be returned out of moneys collected later—the churches to provide the funds for such return. Of course it was understood and agreed that such amounts as were not covered by thank offerings would in the end be deducted from the askings for each school.

The full amount asked is needed by our schools. The church should take care of the expense of the campaign and this can easily be done if each congregation makes its offering. If your church did not do this last Sunday, see to it that the opportunity is given next Sunday.

"AFTER ALL, IT IS THE ADVOCATE."

Under the above caption, the Western Christian Advocate recently said some very timely things concerning the value of the circulation of the church paper. Since its words are as applicable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate as they are to the Western, we take the liberty of reproducing them. They are worth considering.

"Yes, after all it is the Advocate. What do we mean? This: If the leaders of the church are going to reach the homes of the membership, they must depend upon the church papers. In a recent meeting held in a Centenary office the question was asked, 'To what extent is the leaflet literature promoting the Centenary read?' This information was sought because there is now being sent out, and has been for that matter, during the past months, almost tons of tracts and leaflet literature promoting the interests of the church. From one pastor after another came the answer to the question, 'The people do not read this kind of literature.' We became interested at once because we are related to all these efforts to carry information concerning the program of the church down to the rank and file of the membership. Could it be possible that these men were right, that when literature is distributed in the church or sent out through the mails, that it is consigned to the waste basket or permitted to lie on the library table until it finally passes into the junk? We questioned the truth of the statement, but were assured by one after another that if our promotion program had to depend upon the leaflet literature produced in its behalf, it would not get even the least support. Here lies a problem that must not be disposed of by a wave of the hand, or a flat and open denial. If it is true, as we are now inclined to believe, it must be acknowledged that the Advocates are more and more the only reliable means by which the membership of the church is to be reached.

"There may be two ways by which the information contained in the pamphlets and leaflets may be gotten to the people, but they cannot be found apart from the personal solicitude and direction of the pastor. An unemphasized or undirected piece of literature of either of the two above named types does not get results commensurate to the cost of their production unless their value is emphasized by the pastor of the church. If he appreciates this medium of dispensing information, he must do one of two things. He must read the pamphlet or sections thereof in his pulpit or prayer meeting and call the attention of the people to the same. Or he may organize Centenary study classes and through them get out to the people information that will enable them to be informed on the greatest movement that has yet come to a body of Christian believers.

"In the midst of this perplexity about just how to reach the members of our churches comes along the Advocate with its weekly visits, regular, steady, and uninterrupted. If it is once known, it is always welcome. If a taste for it is formed, it is always anticipated with pleasure and awaited with enthusiasm. It is the old reliable dispenser of church information and spiritual inspiration. When a pastor promotes the circulation of the Advocate, he is not working for it, but for himself and the interests of the kingdom of Christ. Let those church leaders who are seeking the best means for the distribution of knowledge about world conditions and Centenary objectives remember that the Advocate never fails."

SOME FIGURES OF THE EDUCATION CAMPAIGN.

Only incomplete reports are available at the time of our going to press, but we feel, from the reports that we have, that victory should be in sight in the Education Campaign, provided a supreme effort is made to complete the task. From the meager reports to hand by June 8, we find the results in some of the leading Conferences to be as follows:

Alabama—quota, $1,088,000; pledged, $750,000; North Alabama—quota, $1,342,000; pledged, $713,000; Florida—quota, $774,000; pledged, $728,000; Virginia—quota, $1,978,000; pledged, $1,100,000; Texas—quota, $948,900; pledged, $675,000; Louisiana—quota, $1,027,000; pledged, $774,500.

It will be seen from these figures that Alabama, Florida and Virginia are leading in the campaign, and there seems no doubt that these Conferences will reach their full quotas within a few days.

From individual charges and sections have come fine reports of success. Rev. W. M. Sullivan, presiding elder of the Seashore District, Mississippi Conference, reports that the campaign is being pushed with great zeal in that district and that some of the charges have already reached their quotas.

A telegram from Lafayette, La., brings the welcome news that the Wesley Baraca Class there, composed largely of young men students of the Southwestern Industrial Institute, a State institution, subscribed $1,330 to the Education Campaign, and that the Lafayette church has gone far beyond its quota.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

A good report comes to us of the work at Meadville, Miss., where Rev. Paul H. Grice is pastor.

A note from Rev. W. E. Akin, of Jena, La., brings encouraging news of the work in his charge.

The Board of Education will hold its annual meeting at McKendree Church, Nashville, Tenn., on June 22.

Dr. C. M. Chapman, Poplarville, Miss., called at the Advocate office last Monday. The editor regrets that he was away and did not see him.

We acknowledge the receipt of $10 from Brother W. A. Price, of Carpenter, Miss., for the China Famine Fund. The amount was promptly applied as directed.

The revival meeting at Duck Hill, Miss., Rev. W. J. Wood, pastor, will be held June 15-25. The preaching will be done by Rev. J. A. Wells, of Gloster, Miss.

Rev. Briscoe Carter, our pastor at Minden, La., has received official notification of his appointment as a delegate to the Ecumenical Conference, to be held in London, September 6-16.

At Foxworth, Miss., where Rev. W. W. Nelson is the pastor, the work of painting the church has just been completed. A revival meeting was announced there for the present week.

Brother J. R. Abels, of Ponchatoula, La., paid the Advocate office an appreciated call on Tuesday. He reported that a fine revival was in progress at Ponchatoula, the pastor, Rev. A. J. Coburn, being assisted by Rev. L. I. McCain.

The pastor, Rev. J. H. Jolly, was recently assisted in a good meeting at Heidelberg, Miss., by Rev. A. M. Broadfoot, of Fernwood, Miss. Brother Jolly states that it was the best meeting held at that place during his pastorate.

In sending in three renewals to the Advocate Rev. J. A. McCormack, our pastor at Dubach, La., writes that he and his family have been made happy by the gift to them of a Ford Sedan car. This splendid gift came from Mr. and Mrs. T. L. James.

The Back Bay Church, Seashore District, is nearing completion, according to the report which reached us on Tuesday. The roof was on, the flooring was down, and most of the weatherboarding had been put on. Good! The cornerstone will be laid on June 17. Rev. W. W. Moore is the pastor.

All the work of the church at Lumberton, Miss., is moving along nicely, according to the report of the pastor, Rev. J. M. Corley. One splendid sign of interest is the increased attendance at all the services. We thank Brother Corley for an invitation to visit him and preach to "the best people in the land."

Col. J. A. Randolph, chaplain in the U. S. Army, honored the Advocate office with a call on Thursday of last week. He was en route from Atlanta, Ga., to San Antonio, Texas, to attend a reunion of the Second Division, at which he was to deliver the memorial address. Col. Randolph is one of the best known and most efficient chaplains in the service.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Blaylock, of Dallas, Texas, celebrated their golden wedding on June 1. Brother Blaylock has been for many years the publisher of the Texas Christian Advocate and he is well known and greatly beloved by Texas Methodism. We extend hearty good wishes to this noble Christian couple in connection with this significant event in their lives.

Under date of May 31, Rev. F. J. McCoy, of Houma, La., writes: "We have this morning finished the canvass of the membership of the Educational Campaign, and we go over the top. Our quota is $2,000 for the five years." This achievement at Houma, in the very heart of our French mission territory, ought to inspire every other church in the Conference to do its best.

Rev. J. C. Price, of Bernice, La., wrote recently to President Hunt, of Port Gibson Female College: "I am very much pleased with the improvement in my two daughters since they have been in Port Gibson Female College. I realize more than ever the value of Christian schools." It is this test of experience that demonstrates the necessity of maintaining such schools.

Rev. J. W. Faulk, of LeCompte, La., has secured Prof. D. L. Teckell, of Alexandria, La., to lead the singing in two of his meetings. Prof. Teckell uses the Methodist Hymnal in his song services—a fact which will commend him to a great many of our pastors. He is open for additional engagements after July 15. Brother Faulk states that the work is progressing nicely on his charge.

A note from Rev. C. A. Battle, presiding elder of the Lake Charles District, Louisiana Conference, pays high tribute to the services of Bishop W. F. McMurtry in the bounds of the district in promoting the Christian Education Movement. Reports already in show that Lake Charles will secure its quota of $16,000, Crowley its quota of $12,000, and Lafayette its quota of $6,000, and the indications are that the whole district has done well.

During the present semester of this year, that is, since March, the Department of Teacher Training has issued the following awards of the General Sunday School Board for the successful completion of units of the Standard Training Course to a class of 61 young women in Woman's College of Alabama, Montgomery: 350 certificates, 12 diplomas, 41 blue seals, and 16 gold seals. This class has been taught by Prof. C. A. Bowen. There are great opportunities for teacher training in our church colleges.

Under recent date, the Vicksburg Evening Post, in its editorial columns, had the following to say: "When the Rev. Harmon, in Hattiesburg the other day, held a mob at bay at the point of a pistol he taught the citizenship of his State two unforgettable lessons at least. First, that a determined man with an automatic in his hand and the love of God in his heart and not afraid to die, can put the chill of fear into the hearts of men who allow themselves to attempt to take the law in their own hands. Second, that as unthinkable as the crime was, and in spite of the brute who committed it, this man of God was thinking more of protecting the law than he was of giving a thought to the cruel monster who committed the deed. Men like Dr. Harmon, possessed of the Spartan spirit to carry on, always have been and will continue to be the bulwark of American citizenship, and the preservers of our society."

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: Rev. P. H. Grice, Meadville, Miss., 2; Rev. R. H. Clegg, Raleigh, Miss., 2; Rev. J. A. Poe, Lexington, Miss., 6; Rev. F. J. McCoy, Houma, La., 2; Mrs. W. T. Rehse, Vicksburg, Miss., 4; Rev. W. E. Akin, Jena, La., 4; Rev. J. M. Corley, Lumberton, Miss., 2; Miss Camilla Garlington, Reids, La., 2; G. W. Russell, Paris, Miss., 2; Rev. W. W. Nelson, Foxworth, Miss., 2; F. A. Howell, Lexington, Miss., 2; Rev. W. C. Beasley, 2; New Albany, Miss., 2; Rev. J. A. McCormack, Dubach, La., 3.

AN APPEAL IN BEHALF OF BRAXTON METHODISM.

The Advocate readers will call to mind the fact that on the 26th of last April the town of Braxton, Miss., was visited by a tornado, which left that thriving village in ruins. In almost the twinkling of an eye, stores, shops, churches and dwellings were swept away, only two or three residences being left standing. A number of lives were lost, scores were badly injured, and the people of this sadly stricken community have lost practically everything. The people of Mississippi, especially those living in near-by towns and cities, responded quickly and generously to the call for aid in this emergency, and in spite of many difficulties, the work of rebuilding the town is being prosecuted with vigor. Steps are being taken to rebuild our house of worship, one generous-hearted Methodist layman having offered to donate the lumber needed.

On account of the heavy losses they have sustained, our faithful Methodists at Braxton will not be able to raise the usual amount for pastoral support this year, but in spite of their destitute condition they have heroically pledged $300 on the pastor's salary, and expect to do their best to raise it. This amount needs to be liberally supplemented from the outside in order to save the pastor and his family from embarrassment and hardship. In view of these facts, the Executive Committee of our Conference Board of Missions has decided to issue an appeal to Mississippi Methodists for $300 as a "special" for Braxton, which is a part of the Florence charge. The pastor, Rev. C. H. Strait, has stood by the people nobly in their misfortunes. Let us not fail to come to his relief in this emergency. Who will be the first to respond?

Please send all contributions for this purpose direct to Rev. A. M. Broadfoot, Treasurer Conference Board of Missions, Fernwood, Miss.

M. M. BLACK,

President Board of Missions, Miss. Conference.
Jackson, Miss., May 31, 1921.

NOTICE.

The President of Whitworth College will leave June 11 for Palestine, Egypt, Greece, Italy, France, Belgium, Switzerland, Scotland, England, Holland. He will leave New York June 18 on the Rochambeau, and will sail from Liverpool September 24 on the Carmania for home.

Rev. H. M. Ellis will act as president of the College, and Rev. W. H. Lewis as vice president. Miss Asa Ramsey will have charge of the office, and Miss Lois Cooper will act as dean.

HISTORY OF PORT GIBSON COLLEGE.

taken and used as mattresses. The Chapel was built after the war, and the frame building used as a dormitory was erected about 1900. Until the last few years, when it was torn down, there was a small wooden structure just back of the chapel, for many years used for class and music rooms. This little building was the home of Samuel Gibson and it is most unfortunate that it could not have been preserved and used as a museum for relics of the school and of the town in general. Mr. Hunt, the present President, appreciates the value of these things and hopes for a room for this purpose in the new buildings we feel sure the church will provide.

It would take a volume to tell of the many interesting occurrences associated with the College through all these years: of the wedding in the parlor of Elizabeth Allen, one of the teachers, and Dr. Wm. Russell—the parents of Irwin Russell, the dialect poet—and others well worthy of record; but this is enough to give the members of the Methodist Church in Mississippi an idea of how valuable a possession is the Female College at Port Gibson, Miss., and how necessary it is that they perpetuate and extend the efforts of these notable men to send forth in the life of the world women worthy of the church, the College, the town, and the Bible.

WINSTON PETTUS MOORE was born at Morton, Miss., August 8, 1869, and died May 10, 1921. His parents, Lodawick Robert and Pattie Pettus Moore, moved to Mississippi from Alabama. His mother, now in age and feebleness, lives with her daughter in Jackson, Miss. His father preceded him to the glory land many years. Brother Moore's parents, being devout Christians, gave to the nine children, by precept and example, wholesome training for life. When Pettus was quite a youth he was converted and joined the Methodist Church, having been baptized in infancy. Brother Moore was twice married, the first time to Miss Rosa Moore, of Morton, Miss., who, on the thirteenth marriage anniversary, passed to her eternal reward. On October 13, 1911, he was happily married to Miss Kate Byrne, of Lula, Miss., who, with their nine-year-old daughter, Rosa, survives him. Brother Moore was educated in the public schools at Morton, Miss., and attended the A. & M. College at Starkville, Miss., one year. In 1895 he moved to Lula and entered upon a very successful business career. He was diligent and frugal, and soon took rank as one of the leading citizens of this part of the great Mississippi Delta, always interested in the progressive development of his community interests. For twenty-six continuous years he was an efficient employee of the Y. & M. V. Railroad as agent and operator here. He was engaged extensively in farming, having acquired valuable plantation property. Brother Moore was a conscientious steward in the Methodist Church and met every call the church made upon him with a ready and glad response. He loved the church and her ministers. In his relation to the church he was quiet and reticent but thoroughly dependable. He was charitable and often ministered in his unostentatious way to the needs of others. His remains were laid to rest in Oakdale Cemetery at Clarksdale, Miss., after religious services at the home of his brother, Dr. Oliver Moore, conducted by his pastor. The burial was with Masonic honors. Brother Moore was a good man and true, and will be sadly missed. May the God of all grace comfort and sustain the bereaved ones and sanctify his influence to the good of all his friends. S. A. BROWN.

Mrs. EMMA LAFAYETT WHITWORTH was born August 4, 1834; died May 2, 1921; married to Dr. John S. Whitworth, December 26, 1855; joined the Methodist Church at Soule Chapel, 1861, and remained in the same for sixty years. On June 12, 1868, her husband died, leaving to her care four sons and one daughter whom she raised to become honored citizens and worthy members of Soule Chapel, in which she had lived for sixty years. Her life closed in quiet and peace, lovingly and tenderly cared for by her children. On May 3 she was buried in the Concord cemetery. The large number present and the abundant floral offerings laid upon her grave were a tribute of love and esteem. The cords of love binding us to the past are being broken, and we look to the opening future in joyful satisfaction of the many mansions in the Father's house, where the redeemed of all ages and all lands shall meet to part no more. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord; yea saith the Spirit, for they rest from their labors and their works do follow them." C. H. ELLIS.

On July 7, 1920, Brother L. J. GUY left this world. A good man has gone to his reward. Brother Guy suffered many months. The writer was with him several times, and he told me more than once he was not afraid to die. He was always in his place at church. Brother Guy was born August 15, 1850. He joined the Methodist Church in the summer of 1871. His only regret was leaving his family. He leaves a wife and six children to mourn their loss, but they weep not as those that have no hope. On July 8 we laid his body to rest in the family cemetery to await the resurrection morn. His pastor, ALGIE S. OLIVER.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, the hand of death has entered the home of our much esteemed and greatly beloved friend, Mrs. I. S. Osborn, and so ruthlessly taken her loving and devoted companion from her, herefore be it resolved:

1. That we, the members of the Woman's Missionary Society of Gilbert, La., do hereby extend to Mrs. Osborn and relatives our deepest sympathy and love in this, the darkest portion of their earthly life.

2. That while we must bow in humble submission to the will of our Heavenly Father, at all times acknowledging His supreme power and wisdom, our hearts bleed at the thought of our dear friend's great bereavement.

3. That we pray that this great grief and sorrow may only sweeten and mellow her great heart of love and life of true service, and may the heavenly Father, in whom she so implicitly trusts, guard, guide and keep in sweet peace, this lonely companion and wife.

"Rest comes at length, though life be long and dreary;

The day must dawn, and darksome night be past;
All journeys end in welcome to the weary,
And heaven, the heart's true home, will come at last.

"Angels, sing on! Your faithful watches keeping;
Sing us sweet fragments of the songs above,
Till morning's joy shall end the night of weeping,
And life's long shadows break in cloudless love."

4. Resolved further, That a copy of these resolutions be given to Mrs. Osborn, also a copy placed on our Minutes, and a copy sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication. Signed:

Mrs. JOHN S. CHENAULT.

RESOLUTIONS.

Death's messenger has again made a silent entry into our quiet little village, his visit being in the parsonage home of Rev. and Mrs. A. D. George, summoning the pure, sweet soul of their beloved infant daughter, Mary Alfreda, to the arms of our Maker. Whereas, God, in His infinite love and wisdom has chosen this angelic flower, in its freshness and purity, to add grace to His heavenly throne; therefore be it resolved:

1. That we, the members of the Woman's Missionary Society of Gilbert, La., extend to her submissive and devoted parents and other loved ones, our heartfelt sympathy, thanking God for His precious promise to comfort and sustain them in bearing the weight of this, their heavy cross.

2. That we, together with her fond parents, bow in humble submission to His will, realizing that God ever moves in a mysterious way His wonders and blessings to perform.

3. That while we sorely miss her bright face and cheery presence, we will cherish the memory of her short life of sweetness and purity, and strive so to live that we shall meet her in our promised home eternal.

"Jesus, while our hearts are bleeding,
O'er the spoils that death hath won;
We would, at this solemn meeting,
Calmly say, 'Thy will be done.'

Though cast down, we're not forsaken;
Though afflicted, not alone;
Thou didn't give, and thou hast taken;
Blessed Lord, 'Thy will be done.'

"Though to-day we're filled with mourning,
Mercy still, is on the throne;
With thy smiles of love returning,
We can sing, 'Thy will be done.'

"By thy hands the boon was given;
Thou hast taken but thine own,
Lord of earth and God of heaven,
Evermore, 'Thy will be done.'

4. Resolved further, That a copy of these resolutions be given to the bereaved family, also be spread upon our Minutes, and a copy sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication. Signed:

Mrs. JOHN S. CHENAULT.

RESOLUTIONS.

Miss Ella Speeg, of Slaughter, La., died Saturday, May 21, 1921, after a short illness. The following resolutions were unanimously adopted by the members of the Slaughter Methodist Church:

Whereas death has removed from our midst a faithful and beloved member of this Sunday school; therefore be it resolved:

1. That in the death of Miss Ella Speeg, this Sabbath school and this community have sustained the sad loss of one of its truest and most worthy members; that while we bow in submission to the Divine Will, yet we bow in sorrow at our loss.

2. That this Sunday school tenders its most sincere sympathy to the bereaved family, with the prayer that He who tempers the sorrows of life will in His love, give strength to bear their great grief.

3. That a copy of this expression be conveyed to the family, and the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

CORNERSTONE LAID.

Dear Brother Carley: Permit me to state through the columns of the Advocate that the cornerstone, or in fact centerstone, of the elegant new Methodist church at West Point was laid last Friday evening at six o'clock by the pastor, Rev. Carroll Varner, with impressive ceremonies, before a large concourse filling the streets adjoining.

The order provided in the ritual of the church was followed, and assisting the pastor there were present, Rev. A. T. McIlwain, P. E.; T. E. Gregory and T. H. Lipscomb, of Columbus, and W. R. Liming, of Cedar Bluff. Very appropriate music was rendered by the choir, and Rev. B. P. Jaco, a member of the General Church Extension Board, delivered an able and inspiring address.

The church is advanced to the placing of the framing for the large Gothic windows, and bids fair to be a model of architectural beauty and appropriateness, retaining the churchly form and yet making every provision needed for the various organizations of a modern church.

We congratulate our West Point pastor and people on their good taste and generosity (it will cost $100,000), and pray that a work so happily begun may rapidly be completed and long stand to the glory of God and the proclamation of his grace to men.

FROM COALVILLE, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: Just a few lines from Coalville. Things are moving along fine with us. I am going in and out amongst our people doing all the good I can. I have baptized forty babies since Conference.

We have just closed a gracious revival meeting at Bethel church. The preaching was done by Rev. Van R. Landrum, of Harleston, Miss. Tho

A GOOD MEDICINE

FOR LOSS OF APPETITE

General debility and that tired feeling is Hood's Sarsaparilla. This highly concentrated, economical medicine is a great favorite in thousands of homes. It is peculiarly successful in purifying and revitalizing the blood, promoting digestion, restoring animation, and building up the whole system.

Get this dependable medicine today and begin taking it at once.

If you need a laxative take Hood's Pills. You will surely like them.

Headaches Vanish

Sick or nervous headaches, backaches, woman's aches, etc., almost instantly respond to the liquid remedy—Capudine. It stops the pain by removing the cause, giving quick relief. Every home should keep a bottle handy. Sold by druggists in three sizes. Insist upon the liquid remedy—Capudine.—Adv.

Rub-My-Tism is a powerful antiseptic; it kills the poison caused from infected cuts, cures old sores, tetter, etc.

Holy Spirit was present in each service and many were made to rejoice in the glory of God. Brother Landrum is fine. The preaching was scriptural, logical and powerful, coming from a heart filled with the love of God. His presentation of the claims of Jesus Christ our Lord was such as to deny any excuse for sin.

Most everybody belongs to the church up there, but one little orphan boy joined the church and gave his heart to God. The church was greatly revived, and time only can tell the good that was done.

We are repairing our three churches and expect to paint them. We want God's house to be no more a reproach because of outward appearance.

We expect a great year in the work and ask all the brethren to pray that the kingdom of God may go forward in this part of the vineyard. Pray for us.

Your brother,

L. FAYARD, P. C.

A GREAT DAY AT EDEN.

Last Sunday, May 29, was a big day at Eden, Miss. The Men's Bible class of the Methodist Church at Yazoo City came over to visit the Methodist church and Sunday school at Eden. Their mission was to "put pep and enthusiasm into Sunday school work," and to get men to go to Sunday school.

The day was a very successful and enjoyable one for all concerned. At eleven o'clock, after Sunday school was over, the pastor preached a short sermon on the "Come and Go of the Gospel." After the sermon, a delicious and bountiful dinner, prepared by the ladies of Eden, was served on the church grounds. In the afternoon there was another delightful service, of which the Yazoo City men had charge. Mr. John Bennett, president of the Bible class, acted as chairman. Several speakers were introduced and each one gave a very inspirational message to the attentive audience. The meeting closed with pledging of the Eden men to organize themselves into a Bible class similar to that one at Yazoo City, which is doing such a wonderful work both in Yazoo City and in the surrounding towns which they visit from time to time to help them organize Sunday schools and Bible classes.

B. W. LEWIS.

FROM BERNICE, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: We had a Sunday school rally yesterday at Bernice, consisting of the Sunday schools of Dubach and Bernice charges. There was an effective program for the day, carried out according to schedule time, with some substituted speakers. Brother Early, our Conference Field Sunday School Secretary, was with us and rendered efficient service on the program as substitute. We had a great day. In conclusion, we organized a Bernice and Dubach Charge Sunday School Institute, with A. B. Raily, of Dubach, president, and D. W. Caldwell, of Bernice, secretary and treasurer. The institute is to meet quarterly, rendering an effective program on improved methods of Sunday school work.

Two of the outstanding features of the day were the reports of Harmony Chapel, and Lisbon Sunday school, Rev. J. E. Napper reporting for Harmony Chapel. He stated that their Sunday school had an unbroken succession of thirty years. R. T. McClen-don, reporting for Lisbon, stated that their school had been running without vacation since 1870—fifty-one years of unbroken history in Sunday school work. Mr. Editor, I think these events are worthy of comment. I am not surprised when I see and hear of so many good men and women going out from these communities and being a blessing to other neighborhoods.

I would like for this to start a little inquiry throughout our Conference, as to the unbroken succession of our Sunday schools. If any church can beat Harmony Chapel or Lisbon, speak out and let us know who you are and how you did it.

Mr. Editor, I wish you could have been with us, and helped us eat that great dinner. You just ought to have seen Early. The only thing I fear about him is that the General Board will take him away from us. They haven't any one in the general work that can beat him. J. C. PRICE.

DODSON TELLS THE HORROR OF CALOMEL

You Don't Need to Sicken, Grip, or Salivate Yourself to Start Liver.

You're bilious, sluggish, constipated. You feel headachy, your stomach may be sour, your breath bad, your skin sallow and you believe you need vile, dangerous calomel to start liver and bowels.

Here's my guarantee! Ask your druggist for a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tonic and take a spoonful tonight. If it doesn't start your liver and straighten you right up better than calomel and without griping or making you sick I want you to go back to the store and get your money.

Take calomel today and tomorrow you will feel weak and sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day. Take a spoonful of harmless, vegetable Dodson's Liver Tonic tonight and wake up feeling splendid. It is perfectly harmless, so give it to your children any time. It can't salivate.

LESSON FOR JUNE 12.

Lesson Topic: Christian Patriotism and International Brotherhood.

Scripture Lesson: Isaiah 2:2-4; Acts 1:6-9

Golden Text: "The earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea." Isaiah 11:9.

Home Readings: Monday, The Coming of the King, Isaiah 11:1-10; Tuesday, The Call to the Nations, Isaiah 55:1-13; Wednesday, The Great Commission, Matt. 28:16-20; Thursday, "That the World May Believe," John 17:18-26; Friday, Beginning at Jerusalem, Acts 1:3-9; Saturday, Salvation Open to All, Romans 10:9-17; Sunday, The New World, Isaiah 65:17-25.

Teaching Points.

1. The prophets look forward to the time when an ideal state of society will exist on earth.
2. This ideal state of society is conditioned upon the perfect doing of the will of God.
3. This must have been one of the thoughts in the mind of Jesus when he spoke of the Kingdom of God.
4. There can be no real international brotherhood until the spirit of Christ rules the hearts of men.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Remember, class work begins Monday morning, June 20. The General Sunday School Board requires six days of study, twelve recitation periods, forty-five minutes each. We cannot afford to lower the standard of work done in these schools.

The Wesley Bible Class Federation will begin at 2:30 p.m., Monday, June 20, and will close at the evening hour. It is to be short, sharp, and to the point every minute of the time allotted. It is not too late to organize your class, enroll it, and send a representative to take part in the first federation of Bible classes in our conference.

When you receive the catalog of the Training School, please pass it on to some one that ought to attend the

Now Is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as Othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots. Simply get an ounce of Othine—double strength—from your druggist, and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is so simple that more than one ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful clear complexion. Be sure to ask for the double strength Othine as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

federation and the training school. We want trained helpers; this is your opportunity to help provide them. All I have to say is, look at the schools in the Conference that have trained teachers.

Last year several churches were wise and generous enough to offer to pay the expenses of the teachers who would attend the school. The teachers who accepted the offer testify that the instruction and high fellowship were far beyond anything they had imagined. Several said, "Why didn't you tell us what a great thing this was to be?" You have to get into it to find out what it means. I can't tell its worth, nor can any one. Once more, permit me to appeal to the men of good business sense, men who love the children, the children who are looking to us to give them the best instruction, to see to it that one or more teachers attend the school at Grenada. The teacher spends time and money in the interest of your children, why not the school spend a little money for the sake of the children?

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The Mansfield Standard Training School is almost here. You will miss a most excellent opportunity to get a course in religious instruction if you fail to enroll. This is the first Methodist Standard School ever held in the State. Please do not get it confused with schools of other sorts. If you have any credits from courses you have taken directly with the Teacher Training Department at Nashville, Tenn., you will not take them again, but select another. We will help you select your course.

Ages to Enroll.

Exceptional cases should not be less than 16 years, and 17 is better. We are anxious to have our most promising young people in this school. Let us have a full enrollment at an early date. Send your name to me at once. Epworth Leaguers in attendance at Assembly can remain over for the additional expense of $12. All pastors and Sunday school superintendents will do wisely to investigate and help secure the extra money to meet expense for Training School.

The Baton Rouge District Sunday School Meeting was held in District Conference at Amite, May 25. The attendance was fine and the department of Sunday schools was presented by the Field Secretary and Elementary Superintendent, Miss Hess. The following district officers were elected: District Secretary, O. H. Cline, Baton Rouge; Elementary Superintendent, Miss Nell Richardson, Baton Rouge; Intermediate-Senior, R. M. McGehee, Hammond; Young People and Adult, J. R. Abels, Ponchatoula; Teacher Training, Mrs. James Moore, Slaughter; Missionary Education, Miss Mamie Reams, Kentwood.

All Sunday schools will do well to have a Sunday School Day program and make a great Rally Day. Make returns of your offering to C. V. Breithaupt, Alexandria, at once.

ALONZO EARLY,

Sunday School Field Secretary.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL BOARD.

Last Sunday I was with Rev. Otto Porter at Lone Pine. The three superintendents of the charge were present. We had a great day. They agreed to help create a sentiment for Sabbath observance. The three schools proposed to study the question of Evangelism and inform themselves that they might be able properly to care for the children in their community. Most of the day was headed up in the Educational Campaign.

Sunday night was spent at Madison Station. Brother McClellan received us kindly. Sabbath observance and home religion were the departments emphasized. A hearty response was given and we feel that another school is added to our list to create sentiment for Sabbath observance.

Wednesday it was our pleasure and profit to beat Collins and conduct the District Institute for the Hattiesburg District. Twenty-one out of the twenty-two charges were represented. Eighteen delegates were present and one hundred and fifty in the audience. The district was 95 per cent.

The following officers were elected: Herbert Gillis, Hattiesburg, Secretary; Miss Bernice Watley, Collins, Elementary Superintendent; Rev. J. H. Jolly, Heidelberg, Teacher Training; Rev. D. R. Campbell, Sunrall, Missions; Mr. E. L. Calhoun, Mt. Olive, Y. P. A.; W. B. C.; Mr. B. S. Cats, Hattiesburg, Int. Sen. W. B. C.

The Hattiesburg District was very responsive. They agreed to a goal of membership in the Sunday school to equal the church membership.

From reports of the pastors the work in the district seems to be in good shape.

Don't forget the Conference Standard Training School, Jackson, Miss., June 7-14. Board and books $10. Many are registering. Be sure that you are not left out.

Out of the forty schools that have observed Sunday School Day, only seven came under our request for an offering. We appreciate this hearty support.

Rev. O. S. Lewis, Superintendent of the Young People-Adult Wesley Bible classes, gave us a fine lecture at the Hattiesburg District Institute. This was a most profitable occasion.

Pray for the work and the workers. God bless you. Yours in Him,

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

FROM THE COUNCIL BULLETIN.

Thought For The Month.

To seek the truth wherever it leads,
To live the life of love whatever it costs,
This is to be the friend and helper of God.

"We talk about the spirit of international righteousness. At the same time it was seriously proposed that we spend five million dollars a day for war purposes."

"Mr. Hoover says that the cost of one modern battleship would save the lives of all the starving children of Europe."

"Of every dollar of revenue received by the United States government last year, it is estimated that ninety-three cents was spent for war purposes—less than one cent being spent for education."

"Meanwhile schoolhouses and churches are being closed by the hundreds for the lack of public money to keep them going. Millions lack food while billions are spent for bullets. The way to stop war is not to prepare for war."

"It is up to the women voters to bring about international disarmament. You are the voters now, and what you have to say will command respect."

"Make it your business to bring the issue before your Representative in Congress. Write to him yourself. Get your friends to write to theirs. Get your women's clubs and church organizations to write. It is not only your privilege, but your duty, to yourself, to your family, to your country. But do it!" (Ida Clyde Clarke: Editorial in Pictorial Review.)

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE Greenville District Meeting.

The following report of district meeting of the Missionary Societies of Greenville District has been sent in by the efficient secretary, Mrs. B. P. Woollard, Cleveland:

The meeting was at Lula, May 12 and 13. I never saw a more interested, enthusiastic meeting and the attendance was most unusual, 140 delegates, visitors and ministers were present. On Friday a lovely luncheon and fish fry was given us by these hospitable people at their beautiful Moon Lake.

The program, except for the much-regretted absence of Mrs. Neblett, was just what our people needed. Mrs. G. B. Taylor, of Cleveland, Juniors, ably presented Mrs. Neblett's work. Mrs. J. M. Wyatt, of Shelby, conducted a round table on missionary problems and how to solve them, which will prove wonderfully helpful. Mrs. Fant brought a splendid message from Council. The Clarksdale Auxiliary gave an excellent program on "Christian Education."

A beautiful spirit pervaded the whole meeting, the presence of God was with us, and I am convinced that each person departed with a vision and a higher conception of individual responsibility. I am full of hope for our work for this year. The program adopted by our presiding elder, Brother Felts, "Greenville District knows no retreat," means that our work will go forward. Greenville invited us to meet there next year. Our Young People's Rally will be at Hollandale, June 9 and 10.

Nothing was left undone by our hostess, Mrs. Rhodes, president of Lula Auxiliary, assisted by Mrs. Harris Riley, chairman Entertainment and her committees, as well as Brother Brown, our pastor host, for our pleasure and benefit.

Mission Study classes should be reported to Mrs. H. R. Steele, Nashville, when organized.

SCHOOL OF MISSIONS AT MONTEAGLE.

"For years at Monteagle, Tenn., a one week School of Missions has been part of the annual program of the Assembly. During this week, mission work in all its phases is emphasized. At 9 a.m. each day there will be a Bible Study Hour. At 10 a Mission Study class for adults. Able speakers will give addresses on missionary themes at the 11 o'clock hour. Study classes for the young people have been arranged for each afternoon at 5. There will be a devotional service each evening at the twilight hour, followed by a pageant and moving pictures to make real the knowledge and need of missions. The date this year for the Mission School will be July 17-22. There is a comfortable and well kept bungalow on the assembly grounds, known as Missionary Home, where missionaries of any denomination in need of rest may come and spend several weeks as guests of the Monteagle Woman's Missionary Association; others who wish to attend the School of Missions can find comfortable accommodation at a reasonable sum."

ANOTHER S. O. S. CALL!

(This message was sent to the Alexandria District Meeting at Rochelle, May 16-18, and by request of this district, has been printed, that all the other districts may also receive the message.)

Dear Women of our Alexandria District:

I wonder how many of you are mothers! However, if you are not mothers, I know that there is some dear little child in your family, in your heart—so I'll just address you, all, as mothers.

And now that school days are fast drawing to a close, you are so anxious over Jack and Mary's grades. How much it means to mother if they pass or fail! I look about me now, at the little books, the same books that are in your home—the old ragged-back Geography—little half-dirty hands have smeared each page and angrily snatched out pieces here and there in a frantic effort to learn, perhaps, that the Amazon River is the widest in the world! How anxious we have been that they should learn, and how we have tried to help them! But this is what I am wondering, friends—there is a Book I know, which tells of "a PURE RIVER of the water of life, proceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb"—have we been as anxious each day to help little minds and hearts learn about THIS wonderful river? Has God's dear book in your home a ragged back and worn pages because you have pored over its life-giving message? There is a map in this book of the heavenly home, and many a description of the WAY—was there ever more wonderful geographical knowledge in the world!

And then I see the old battered American History—many of its leaves are gone and, really, one is almost afraid to pick it up for fear of immediate disintegration. Oh, it bears the marks of a fierce battle, greater than any of the conflicts it describes, when Tommie learned to name the skirmishes of the Revolution! Do you remember how brave little eyes were filled with tears over the cruel winter at Valley Forge, when "Faithful-unto-death" soldiers left their bloody foot prints in the snow? Oh, we have been so careful that our little ones learn these things! Let me ask, have we been as careful to teach them of the bloody foot prints of the ONE who trudged up Calvary's Hill and died there that we might live?

Are the pages of His history loose and tear-marked with the stress of constant wear, as we have tried to get some little loving conception of the greatest sacrifice that the world has ever known?

And then I see a little book within our homes with back completely gone—it just will last until the end of the term, so great have been the ravages upon its contents. Oh, it was difficult because everything had to be dead true. There could be "no variable-ness' neither shadow of turning." 7x5 could only be exactly 35 not a fraction more or less. Great mathematical truths! How we helped "Sonny Boy" to get them into his, at first, bewildered brain! Oh friends, have we been as faithful in our efforts to help our little ones KNOW and UNDERSTAND the One who says, "I AM THE TRUTH?" Have we worn and torn the pages of "God's Arithmetic" in our earnest desire to realize and to help our own precious children realize that,

God's love for a lost world equals the sacrifice of His only Son; that Salvation equals joy and peace and the only true happiness in this world; that Salvation equals a heavenly home hereafter.

Dear friends, as you look at the little ragged, worn, leaf-torn school books and remember how glad you were to have had knowledge enough to help a precious little mind master the contents—I ask you, as we turn to God's Wonderful Words of Life, were you as prepared with knowledge of the greatest text books in the world to help a precious little heart understand God's messages?

Have you made the effort there? Are there tear-strained, finger-marked, torn leaves in your copy of God's Word?

Go home and place your Bible by the side of "Sonny Boy's" school books—what is the comparison between them, in effort, and time, and struggle for comprehension? Oh, the

Mrs. McCumber Avoided a Serious Operation by Taking Lydia E.
Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in Time

Georgetown, Ill.—"After my first baby was born I suffered so with my left side that I could not walk across the floor unless I was all humped over, holding to my side. I doctored with several doctors but found no relief and they said I would have to have an operation. My mother insisted on my taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I soon found relief. Now I can do all my own work and it is the Vegetable Compound that has saved me from an operation. I cannot praise your medicine too highly and I tell all of my friends and neighbors what the Compound did for me." — Mrs. MARGARET McCUMBER, 27 S. Frazier St., Georgetown, Illinois.

Mrs. McCumber is one of the unnumbered thousands of housewives who struggle to keep about their daily tasks, while suffering from ailments peculiar to women with backache, sideaches, headaches, bearing-down pains and nervousness, —and if every such woman should profit by her experience and give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial they would get well!

Epworth League.

EPWORTH LEAGUE PLANS BIG CONFERENCE.

The Mississippi Conference Epworth League will hold its Eighteenth Annual Session at Hattiesburg, June 7-10. A delegation of at least five hundred is expected and great preparations are being made for their entertainment. Special cars have been chartered to leave each of the seven districts with the exception of that of Hattiesburg. Should the expected number of delegates attend, a special rate of one and one-half fare will be granted by the certificate plan.

The personnel of the program for this Conference includes some of the very best of the State's speakers, besides some very excellent talent from elsewhere. Some of those prominent on the program are: Hon. V. M. Scanlon, Rev. M. L. Burton, Rev. J. Lloyd Decell, Rev. J. T. Leggett, Rev. G. H. Thompson, Dr. A. F. Watkins, Rev. S. F. Harkey, Mrs. F. S. Love, of Wilson, N. C., and Prof. Garfield Evans, of Nashville, Tenn. Dr. F. S. Parker, General Secretary of the Epworth League, is expected to be present also.

The music of the occasion will be in charge of Dr. B. E. Mitchell of Millsaps College, assisted by the Millsaps quartette and two local quartettes of Hattiesburg.

All Methodist young people and those who are interested in the work of the young people, are cordially invited to attend. If names are sent to Mr. J. H. Weems, Hattiesburg, entertainment will be provided. Don't fail to come.

knowledge of the school books was necessary for the training of the little mind, as it once was for yours, but the knowledge of the Bible is vital to your SOUL and to your CHILD'S SOUL.

Surely—"Render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's," but do not forget also to "Render unto God the things that are God's." ROMANCE AND OLD CLOTHES.

No movement in the history of our missionary endeavor is more unique than the Polish Relief work. In one week from the time the folder was issued the packages began to come from all directions, in every conceivable shape and size. Tobacco hogsheads, bales, bags, boxes, big and little poured in.

As one looked into the immense warehouse piled high with these gifts, it seemed a sordid, unromantic business to unpack every garment, fold it into a former, bale it in paper and burlap and cord, and tag it for shipment. The task not only seemed uninteresting, but impossible and unending.

The packing had not progressed far, however, before I found an intense human interest developing in the work. Day after day there were revealed the generous hearts of folks who gave more than clothes—a great wealth of love poured forth for the unseen sufferers, as was Mary's ointment of olden time. * * *

Many, many instances I might relate of real heart gifts that I stumbled upon in the busy days and weeks of packing. Each day there was something to invest the work with romance. No names revealed the identity of the senders, but we knew that to each came the reward, "Inasmuch as ye did it unto the least of these, ye did it unto me."—Miss Daisy Davies, in Missionary Voice.

A GOOD PLACE TO LOSE THINGS.

Unfortunately, the idea among many people is that all Mexicans steal, but I do not know of any place where it is as safe to lose things as it is at Laurens Institute, our great school for Mexican boys here in Monterrey. There are many very poor children here, yet last year I lost my penknife out on the playground three times, and each time it was returned at once to the teacher who takes charge of lost articles.

A week or two ago two of the boys who are working their way through school found a five-pesos gold piece when sweeping out the classrooms. They have no money of their own and visions of what that would buy for them must have danced through their heads. No claim had been made for it, but it was at once handed in at the office. A short time before, one of the American boys dropped two one-dollar bills out of his pocket. He never expected to find them again, but when he went at the office the money was already there waiting to be claimed.—Missionary Voice.

BIBLE STUDY IN OFFICIAL WASHINGTON.

By Annabel Lee.

We are accustomed to think of the nation's capital as a place of political and social activity, a center given over entirely to worldly affairs and marked by a corresponding decadence of religious life. How refreshing then is the assurance that this view of Washington, D. C., is incorrect and that the true spirit of official life is one of hopeful religious tendency. The widening of religious activities was particularly manifest in the official life of the Capital through the efforts of Mrs. Selden Spencer, the wife of the junior Senator from Missouri, who introduced to the official set a "Bible Reading Class" which she has been conducting each week in the ball-room of the Willard Hotel, and which has had an attendance well up toward the thousand mark.

Mrs. Spencer is the daughter of Rev. James H. Brooks, D.D., who presided over a Presbyterian flock in the same St. Louis church for forty years. She found in Washington, as elsewhere, that the spirit of the age and the variety of activities inclined even the religiously minded toward mental unrest and had a tendency to keep them outside the church door. She saw that ignorance of the Bible was getting to be a dangerous thing, and she embraced the opportunity to gather into one studious assemblage, the wives of Senators and Representatives.

But the story of this interesting work is best told by the little woman who inaugurated these Lenten services.

"Our Bible Reading Class," Mrs. Spencer explained, "developed from Dr. Charles Wood's inspirational suggestion to me—'Throw out your anchor.' I was entertaining the pastor of the Church of the Covenant and when he asked me how I was enjoying Washington life, I replied: 'I fear I am slipping.'"

"Then why don't you throw out your anchor?" were his next words. "But what can I do in this vortex of social and political life?" I asked. "It is so difficult to refuse the social pleasures and so easy to go along the lines of least resistance. What can I do? The only thing I can think of would be to start a Bible reading class, and I don't know just how great a task that may be."

"Dr. Wood encouraged me by saying that 'rank imposes obligation' and by suggesting that if the wives of our national lawmakers should set the admirable example of studying the Bible, it might have a far-reaching effect when it became known. The next day I had a conference with Mrs. J. I.

France, wife of the Senator from Maryland, and we immediately sent out invitations to the wives, daughters and mothers of all Senators and Representatives in Washington to participate in a Bible reading class. We met at first in the home of Mrs. Stephen B. Elkins, who was the daughter of a Senator, the wife of a Senator, and now is the mother of a Senator. Mrs. Elkins gave us the use of her ball room, which was large enough to seat comfortably the few who made up our first audience, and then we had to move to the Washington Club to accommodate the increasing number. Mrs. Elkins assumed the rental and we were quite comfortable in the club house until our membership reached the seven hundred mark, when once more we were forced to look for larger quarters. It was then that Mr. Hight, the manager of the Willard Hotel, offered us the ball room. The attendance is still steadily increasing and the enthusiasm for the work convinces us that all Christian women must have breadth of view, while the union of their sympathies in our scriptural reading is one of the hopeful signs of our efforts. It is the amount of service they give and the spirit with which they give it rather than the creed they profess which widens the religious activities of Washington's official life.

"The members of the class usually do all of the reading and the seriousness of the study is made obvious by the close application to the topic and prompt attention to the hour for the service. There are no stragglers arriving late. There is no music, nothing to distract from the concentration on the lesson at hand.

"While the Lenten season will close the class reading in the Willard for this season, it does not end organized Bible reading among the women in Washington by any means. I am in charge of a Bible class of the Business Women's Council which meets every Friday evening from 6 to 7 o'clock and this instruction goes on during the whole year. There are 1800 members of the Women's Council, of which Miss Ethel Bagley, sister of Mrs. Josephus Daniels, is the head. The work done by this civic organization is indeed praiseworthy. Emphasis on creeds has given place to emphasis on work, and these members are practically applying to daily life the spiritual gain from their close study of the Scriptures."—The Christian Herald.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

NEEDS TO BE REGULATED AND MORE.

Lord Byron wrote of the night before Waterloo: "On with the dance! let joy be unconfined; No sleep till morn, when Youth and Pleasure meet To chase the glowing Hours with flying feet."

But an ominous sound broke in upon the revelers. It was the cannon's opening roar! Thus the deadly imminence of things a thousand times more grave cut short the dance at Brussels before the breaking of the morn. Now the women of Atlanta, in a mass meeting of mothers at the women's club, according to press reports of last week, have declared that "fox trotting," beside which the dancing at Brussels a hundred years ago would look very tame, must end promptly at midnight and must be conducted with a chaperone in attendance. This action was taken because in the Georgia capital balls had been lasting until the dancers could see the "morn in russet mantle clad" walking over the dew of the eastern hills. A thing which so easily leads to abuse, and which must be strictly regulated by those who allow it with their children, can not be as harmless as some would have us believe.

VACATION TIME.

We do not wonder that the school children are looking forward with great eagerness to the close of school, when they may enjoy their well-earned vacation. The steady grind of studying lessons by night and reciting them by day has become an irksome procedure, and they are rejoicing over the prospect of a little rest. We older people, too, are thinking that perhaps we shall have a chance to lay aside our usual tasks for a week or so, to enjoy the pleasure of a visit to the country or some quiet spot where we may recuperate to our heart's content. Well and good. But why not plan to make that vacation count in the accumulation of resources that will better equip us for the other work we shall have to do when we settle down again? There is infinitely more rest in a change of occupation than there is in doing nothing, and there are many places where we can improve our minds while we renew our bodies. Maybe some of us have been taking a "do-nothing" vacation all the year—and didn't realize it!

ACCIDENTS DURING NO-ACCIDENT-WEEK.

Comment was made in these columns last week on the campaign put on in New Orleans and elsewhere at the time to emphasize the need of greater caution that the number of accidents may be reduced. It seems like the "irony of fate" that such an effort should have caused or rather provided the occasion for one of the worst accidents this city has known in some time, and one that was due to the carelessness of some who were engaged in giving a lesson of caution to the people. Two large fire trucks, being used in a demonstration on Canal Street in the interest of No-Accident-Week, crashed into each other at Canal and St. Charles Streets, with some loss of life to the firemen and many injuries, while automobiles parked in the street were damaged, and great consternation reigned. This seems a sad commentary upon the frailty of human nature and the fact that the "good we would, we do not." What a necessity is laid upon so to live that we may not fall into the errors of which we warn others, and that men may read a gospel, according to us, that shines true and clear.

VACATIONAL BIBLE SCHOOLS.

One of the objectives of the Education Campaign is to give a larger knowledge of religion to the youth of this and succeeding generations—to bring them, first of all, to the knowledge of God. The lack of religious education among Protestant children at the present time, in comparison, with others, is truly alarming. The Bulletin of Missionary News says: "The startling revelation that one million and six hundred thousand Jewish children in the United States have an average of two hundred and fifty hours of religious instruction annually, and eight million Catholic children receive two hundred hours annually, has aroused and gripped the attention of the thinking men and women of our churches wherever it has been made known. In every urban community within the bounds of Southern Methodism a Daily Bible School Commission should be formed and an earnest Christian teacher or teachers employed." It is time we were taking the above revelations to heart, and the Vacational Bible School is a move in the right direction. Other churches are giving attention to this plan, and we know of two churches in the city of New Orleans that have already successfully conducted such a school for several summers past—our St. Mark's Hall, and Salem Evangelical Church, which has the largest Sunday school in the city. Such a school continues through a month, and three hours a day for five days in the week is the schedule of work. It is easy to see that the vacational school, besides giving our own children more hours of religious instruction, is calculated to keep the church in closer touch with them during the trying summer months, while one great design is to reach other children and other homes in the community. In some cases, it is said, parents who had never been interested in sending their children to the regular Sunday school have sent their children to the vacational school. It is worthy of trial.

ELIJAH AND JEZEBEL.

It has been said more than once that when a woman threatened Elijah he "ignobly fled." So it was not surprising when a prominent man in the church recently took occasion to say to a group of campaign workers, the majority of whom were women, that when a woman got after Elijah he "ran like a scared rabbit." Such a statement is humor at the expense of a grave injustice to Elijah and a reflection upon womankind. No prophet of God would refuse to flee when, as in this case, no principle but only personal safety, was involved. The strange old Tishbite, who came out of the hills of Gilead, from place and parentage of which no man knows, united with great courage a Bedouin caution that served him well. It was this caution which caused him, when he had run for sixteen miles across the plain before the king's chariot, to stop at the "entrance to Jezreel." Elijah was too good to die at the hands of a murderous queen—the chariot of fire was reserved for him. He had indeed the caution of his native hills, but when God commanded, woman, man nor devil could make him run. When we are told that he ran like a scared rabbit from a woman the inference is that Elijah was a coward; and nothing is said of the Carmel tops on which he dared to stand when God commanded. And certainly every woman should want to forget that one woman in history was so infamously cruel that no man's life was safe in her hands.

SEASHORE DIVINITY SCHOOL.

The thirteenth session of the Seashore Divinity School at Biloxi, Mississippi, June 14-23, offers a fine opportunity for recreation and profit to the members of our patronizing Conferences. Rev. G. L. Robinson, Ph. D., preacher, teacher and author, and Bishop William A. Quayle, D.D., LL. D., will each deliver a course of lectures. Bishop W. F. McMurtry, D.D., and Bishop James Cannon, Jr., LL. D., are also expected, while the classes for undergraduates will be conducted as usual. This is a good opportunity for boards of stewards to give and provide for a vacation for their pastors. Members of our churches will also find the Seashore Camp Ground at this time an ideal place to enjoy a profitable vacation.

THE WATCHER.

She always leaned to watch for us,
Anxious if we were late,
In winter by the window,
In summer by the gate.

And though we mocked her tenderly,
Who had such foolish care,
The long way home would seem more safe
Because she waited there.

Her thoughts were all so full of us—
She never could forget!
And so I think that where she is
She must be watching yet.

Waiting till we come home to her,
Anxious if we are late—
Watching from Heaven's window,
Leaning from Heaven's gate.

ALL RECORDS BROKEN, THANKS TO THE CENTENARY.

Mission Board Appropriations Five Million Dollars.

By Robert B. Eleazer.

In 1918 the General Board of Missions appropriated for the following year a total of $1,112,840 for all phases of its work, at home and abroad. In 1919, the total, thanks to the Centenary, jumped to $3,423,995, and in 1920 to $4,801,154. Astounding as these advances were, a longer step yet was taken at the Board's annual meeting in Nashville a few days ago (May 4-6), when a total of $5,051,401 was appropriated for 1921, as a measure of Southern Methodism's missionary interest. Of this vast sum the Centenary supplied $3,558,514. For the work on our nine great fields abroad (counting Europe as one), there will be expended $3,673,283, and in our vast home field $1,378,118. Of the total, the Department of Woman's Work gets a total of $1,399,751, of which the Centenary supplied $795,020.

All but five of the sixty-odd members of the Board were present and seven crowded sessions were held. Mr. John R. Pepper, the President of the Board, occupied the chair. A distressing feature of the meeting was the sudden death of one of the members, Dr. T. E. Sharpe, of Memphis, which took place on the night of the 5th. A memorial session was held next morning, at which tributes were paid to his life and character.

Gratifying Progress Reported.

The survey of the work, as presented by the secretaries in their reports on the first day, indicated gratifying progress along all lines. From all the foreign fields came reports of revival conditions, rapid extension, and a growing spirit of evangelism and self-support on the part of the native membership. The news from Korea in particular indicated a condition almost Pentecostal, eight thousand new believers having been enrolled since the last Conference, and a hundred and sixty new groups organized. The native church everywhere has responded magnificently to the stimulus of the Centenary, spiritually and financially. At the same time the Centenary building and equipment program has been going on rapidly, especially notable results having been attained so far in Brazil.

The Home Department reported a good beginning toward a well-rounded program of rural work, and a comprehensive rural church policy was adopted by the Board.

Relief for Poland and China.

Miss Daisy Davies, Director of the Polish Relief Mission, reported the collection throughout the church of a million garments, worth $2,000,000 or more, which were promptly forwarded to Poland to clothe the destitute multitudes.

Dr. Pinson reported contributions to China Famine Relief aggregating $220,000. The Board expressed appreciation of the splendid response made by the church to these two appeals.

The report of the Candidate Committee indicated that ninety-four candidates for foreign service had been accepted during the last year, and that most of them had already gone to the field.

Bishop Du Bose made a statement with regard to conditions in Seattle and requested that the Board refer to the Executive Committee the question of re-entering that field, from which we withdrew some years ago.

Eight Thousand Specials.

Dr. Pinson reported for the Bureau of Specials that there are now in effect 8082 assignments of missionaries and other definite objectives to churches, Sunday schools, Leagues and individuals; aggregating $8,418,867. The Board voted cordial appreciation of the work of this Bureau and of its efficient head, Miss Carrie Porter.

Religious Facilities for State Schools.

One of the important matters brought forward was the pressing need of providing religious facilities in connection with the twenty-five or thirty great State educational institutions in the South. It was clearly evident that the Board recognized the necessity that the church take steps to meet this vast need, hitherto largely neglected. It was voted that the matter be taken up jointly by the Boards of Missions, Church Extension, and Education.

"The Standard Year."

Another matter of great interest was a statement concerning the Standard Year, presented by a delegation from the Woman's Missionary Council, the contention of the Council being that the Board should abrogate, in so far as it affected the Council, the Standard Year plan by which all increases in the regular income of any department over the income for 1918 should be counted as Centenary funds and prorated to the several departments. The matter was referred to a committee composed of Bishop Moore, Dr. O. E. Brown, P. D. Maddin, Miss Belle Bennett, and Mrs. J. C. Handy, in the hope that an adjustment might be reached at an early date.

Revival Campaign in Bohemia.

Owing to the phenomenal revival conditions now prevailing in Bohemia, it was felt that vigorous steps should be taken to conserve this movement. Dr. O. E. Goddard was therefore asked to go to Bohemia to conduct an intensive evangelistic campaign in July and August. It decided also that one of our outstanding preachers should be sent to Prague for evangelistic work, if a suitable man can be found.

It was voted that a new mission station should be opened in the Congo at Loja, or such other place as may be selected, and that the Board cooperate in providing a home for missionaries on Stanley Pool, where missionaries en route have to await their steamers.

The Board voted approval of a plan to establish a school of high grade at Campinas, Brazil. It also expressed its endorsement of a movement to establish a union theological seminary in Brazil and its readiness to co-operate in such an enterprise as soon as the other denominations are ready to proceed.

International Disarmament Favored.

The following resolutions respecting international disarmament were adopted by unanimous vote, and sent to the President and members of Congress:

"Resolved: 1. That it is the sense of this body that the providential hour has arrived in the history of the nations for the curtailment of armaments, looking to the permanent preservation of peace.

"2. That we believe the United States of America is in position from every standpoint, both of opportunity and of obligation, to take the lead in such a movement.

"3. That we, therefore, request President Harding to call at any early date an international congress looking toward progressive disarmament.

"4. That we call upon Congress to lend all possible aid to this movement."

CHINA: AN INTERPRETATION.

An Appreciation.

By Bishop Walter R. Lambuth.

A truly great book must be the product of a great mind. Great men do not think in a small way; they think in a big way. They move along the circumference of things, not along diameters. In the direction of their lives they illustrate Carlyle's saying, that while we may be working at parts, we must be able to see wholes.

"China: An Interpretation," is a great book. It is the product of a master mind and of a great soul. In giving us this volume, Bishop J. W. Bashford has rendered China and the civilized world a notable service. The Chinese needed an interpreter—one who could both understand and appreciate them at their best, for nations like individuals must be measured by their best and not by their worst. Like Cecil Rhodes, the bishop thought in continents, but thoroughness of detail was never sacrificed for magnitude. Here is no superficial view, nor are these hasty generalizations. His industry in note-taking makes one think of Walter Scott, Darwin or David Livingstone. For the space of twelve years he interviewed hundreds of Europeans, Chinese and Japanese. He filled forty-two notebooks, traveled seventy thousand miles in China and read five hundred volumes on China and the Chinese before he was ready to commit his thoughts and conclusions to paper.

The Human Race at a Crisis.

President Henry Churchill King, after a personal study of post-war conditions on both sides of the Atlantic, has asserted that: "The human race now stands at perhaps the greatest crisis in its history." Western civilization has had a fearful strain put upon it, but he reminds us that chastened and tempered, we must prepare to enter a new age, the characteristics of which will be a growing world solidarity, prodigious increase in resources of wealth and power, forced co-operation on a gigantic scale, "The almost world-wide trend toward democracy and universal education, the establishment of a League of Nations, a steady growing internationalism, and a deepening sense of the necessity of large and more significant goals than humanity yet cherished."

It is a happy thing in this crisis that we have in Asia, a constant and loyal friend, a sister republic whose constitution was fashioned after our own, with enormous natural resources, a national history as honorable as it is ancient, a people four hundred million strong, the most patient, the most industrious and the most frugal on the face of the earth, virile as they were four thousand years ago, always democratic in spirit, always with an ethical basis for education, and always standing for peace rather than for war. What the Chinese now need is a dynamic which can make their ethical standards real and realizable. Christianity possesses that dynamic, and it does not require more of faith than is possible to believe the Chinese attitude of mind is such that they will one day accept Him who is the mainspring and the basis of all ethical and spiritual life.

We can feel the more sure of China after reading the words of Bishop Bashford, who was no less a Christian philosopher than statesman. His was no hasty observation, but the thorough and deliberate investigation of one who took "the measure of the deep main current which reveals the trend of a race and forecasts its goal."

Two years ago, I stood with Dr. H. H. Lowry of Peking before the marble altar of the Temple of Heaven. There arose before me the majestic figure of the Emperor of China's teeming millions, clothed with pontifical robes and prepared to offer burnt offerings and sacrifices on behalf of his people to the Supreme Ruler of the universe. Is there nothing here to touch the imagination and reach the religious sensibilities of thoughtful men? Nay more, are there not suggestions here of a national consciousness of sin and of shortcomings, of aspirations which penetrate the interstellar spaces and unquenchable desires for immortality?

A Seer and Prince Among Men.

The author himself, a seer and prince among men, shall give his own interpretation of the life and character of this wonderful race. "Any profound study of this people reveals, with some marked variations, the same fundamental type of civilization; the same strong craving for fellowship manifested in the desire for home and social life; the same uneasy sense of sin, and the same need of spiritual peace; the same imperious demands of conscience; the same lasting longing for immortality; the same deep desire for a knowledge of and reconciliation with the Creator of the Universe and Preserver of souls which exists in the hearts of the white races. These two principles, therefore, the marked variations in races and in civilizations on the one side, and the fundamental unity of humanity on the other side, should guide us in an interpretation of the Chinese."

Turning to other phases of the author's daily study, we are attracted by his love of nature. Many were the hours spent in the collection and preservation of specimens of Chinese flora. This was one of his favorite diversions. Rare and instructive are his notes, many of these being found in Appendix XIV. The botanical names of 478 species of plants were recorded, including nuts and tubers, which are used for food.

He finds China exceedingly rich in flowering plants—91,000 species—nearly one-half of which are not found in any other country. The discovery by Meyer of a grove of wild apple trees on the borders of Tibet seems to confirm the belief that the apple originated in Asia. The strawberry tree of Szechwan bearing a flattened round red fruit, very juicy, is an interesting find. So is the seedless persimmon, one species of which weighs more than a pound, is non-astringent and can be eaten green. The oil extracted from the persimmon "is much used in varnishing paper umbrellas."

Bamboo for Industry and Food.

The bishop notes the fact that the bamboo is indigenous, the sprouts being used for food, the stem entering into some 600 different articles of domestic and everyday employment, and the inner fiber furnishing such excellent pulp that it could be a valuable addition to the paper supply of the world. He suggests the cultivation of the bamboo in our Gulf States as an article of commercial value.

At a time when famine stalks abroad in five of China's most populous provinces, and foodstuffs are under discussion, his observations on Chinese millet are much to the point. "Panicum uniaecum, or panicled millet, is supposed to be that mentioned by Shennung as cultivated B. C. 2700. Another variety, Sorghum vulgare, Kialiang, or the Kafir corn of Africa, is largely cultivated in North China, stands droughts, grows rapidly after the summer rains, and often reaches a height of ten feet. The leaves are stripped off for fodder, the seeds threshed out for food for both the farmer and his stock, and the coarse stalks converted into fences, thatch and fuel. It is estimated as being next to rice in value." The tragedy of the hour is the total failure of this crop, as well as of wheat, for the past two years, and the consequent sequent absence of both food and fuel during the winter months while 15,000,000 men, women and children face starvation.

Customs of Orient China.

R. K. Douglas is cited as authority for saying that Chinese history is reasonably reliable as far back as B. C. 1766. The Chinese Herbal mentions the use of tea as far back as B. C. 2700, though it did not become common until the sixth century A. D. The iron industry assumed importance eleven hundred years before the Christian era, that metal being used for both tools and money. Silk worms were raised, the fiber spun from the cocoon and clothing made of this material in the time of David and Solomon. Fans were in use then, metal mirrors, flat-irons, umbrellas, chopsticks, lamps and candles made from the oils of certain trees, etc.

In point of vitality and persistence of type they are equally remarkable. Theirs is the oldest continuous civilization on the globe, but there are no signs of serious and permanent degeneration. In brain and brawn they are the peers of any race. A coolie on a diet of rice, fish and beans will carry an eighty pound load thirty miles a day, or push a wheelbarrow the same distance with five times eighty pounds, his only food being Kialiang and beans with an occasional mess of pork. In brain power they are not one whit behind. A professor of English in one of our universities remarked that a Chinese student, a young woman in one of his classes, had the brightest intellect he had ever encountered.

As artisans and merchants, farmers and colonists they "have captured industries and trades from the Russians, at Vladivostok and along the Trans-Siberian Railway, and have led in industries and commerce in competition with Japanese, Indians, Arabians, Europeans and Americans in every neutral port in Malaysia. The Chinese probably can labor more continuously under extremes of heat and cold than any other people on earth."

There is much homely philosophy in the proverbs of a people. Here are a few from the author's collection:

"Better go than send."

"Great profits; great risks."

"Without a smiling face do not become a merchant."

"Of all important things, the first is do not cheat conscience."

"The good looking woman needs no paint."

"In the husband fidelity, in the wife obedience."

"Man cannot reach perfection in an hundred years; he can fall in a day with time to spare."

"Just scales and a full measure injure no man."

"Kindness is greater than law."

"It's a little thing to starve to death, it is a serious thing to lose one's virtue."

High Estimate of Chinese Women.

Bishop Bashford has a high estimate of Chinese women. He thinks the domestic employment of the masses, the training in weaving and sewing, the discipline and self-restraint, have given Chinese girls an education in the art of living which helps to account for the long continuance of Chinese civilization. He mentions their fondness for flowers, their politeness and spirit of service, then adds these significant words: "Owing to the Confucian teaching and the rigid practices of the Chinese, the women of China probably are freer from immorality than any other class of pagan women on earth. Indeed, in this fundamental virtue, they surpass the women of some of the Christian nations."

In the remarkable chapter "China and Japan," it is argued that Japan has the choice of two policies—either to conquer and govern China or to treat her as a friend and a neighbor, and reaches the following conclusions:

1. Japan's overlordship of China is not necessary to her own growth.

2. Japan is in no condition for the heavy military expenditure which her exercise of overlordship would demand.

3. The military career demanded by Japan's overlordship means in the end the downfall of Japanese civilization.

4. Other nations will not permit Japan to hold the overlordship of China.

5. China alone will defeat Japan's plans for her conquest by the toughness and strength of her character and civilization and by her powers of assimilation—the Mongol and Manchu conquests are an illustration.

6. The chief positive political consideration is Japan's need of the Chinese to help her secure fair treatment by the white races. Her present treatment of China is suicidal.

7. Japan has a vastly higher and nobler destiny than can possibly arise from the savage program of military conquest. He admits Japan's leadership in the Far East industrially and commercially, and a possible leadership in civilization, humanitarianism and applied Christianity for centuries to come. Will she do it?

China faces the world. Her population doubles every eighty years, her man power is boundless, her coal and iron measures greater probably than those of any other country. She could land pig iron in San Francisco in 1913 at $10.78 per ton against the American product at $21 per ton.

The growth and expansion of this and other Asiatic races prompts the remark: "However great the problems which confront the various members of the white races in Europe to-day and to-morrow, all men of foresight are beginning to recognize the problems which will confront the white and yellow races the day after to-morrow. If the white races attempt to solve the race problem with selfish motives and through military power, we may witness a race war in comparison with which the present European struggle will prove only a skirmish."

In conclusion, the good bishop denies that self-preservation is the first law of nature. He asserts that service is the first law of nature. Service prompted and inspired by love—the love of Jesus Christ, the only force that can save China and save the world.—The Christian Advocate (New York).

PRESIDENT HARDING PLEDGES AID IN RENEWED FAMINE APPEAL.

President Harding again showed his deep interest in the effort America is making to save the lives of starving famine victims in China, when, on June 1, he received at the White House forty prominent men from different parts of the country who had volunteered their services in a renewed appeal in behalf of those still destitute.

"I am indeed glad," he said, "to have been of any service to this most appealing and worthy cause, and I mean to do everything in my power to help it."

The members of the delegation addressed by the President were in Washington attending an all-day conference preliminary to a series of speaking tours, under the auspices of the American Committee for China Famine Fund. These tours began the following day in several cities, and will be continued for about a fortnight. They were inspired by the new famine crisis in China resulting from the continuing drought in the province of Chihli, where 2,000,000 men, women and children will remain dependent until August on relief from America.

The above, which comes to us from the China Famine Service, should carry an appeal to all of our people. We should never grow tired of giving, when there are people starving to death.

CONSCIOUSNESS OF MERCY.

And now we beseech of Thee that we may have every day some such sense of the fullness of God's mercy and of the power of God around about us, as we have of the fullness of the light of heaven before us. Our tapers we trim, and we fear lest the lamp shall go out without oil; but none of us have ever had a thought or a care lest the sun should be emptied, or lest the air should be exhausted. The supply is over-abundant, and the waste is infinitely more than that which we use.—Beecher.

THE NEW IDEA OF LAKE JUNALUSKA.

By Elmer T. Clark.

For several years the laymen of the church have possessed in the mountains of North Carolina a resort and an institution of unusual beauty and merit. To the Southern Assembly have flocked great multitudes of the most loyal people of Methodism, and the various boards of the church have conducted there training schools and conferences which have exerted a far-reaching influence. The history of this Assembly has amply justified all the expenditure, investment, and time that have gone into its development.

Those who have visited Lake Junaluska from time to time, however, must have been impressed with the fact that it had possibilities of usefulness yet undeveloped and depths of service not yet sounded. For one thing, it was not fully accomplishing the real purpose of its founding. While it was of vital value to the boards of the church, it had not been made the center of the activities of the laymen. And yet it was founded and projected under the auspices of the Laymen's Missionary Movement and largely as a lay proposition.

In this field, it was easy to be seen, rested the greatest possibilities of future advancement.

This fact was early grasped by Mr. W. H. Stockham, the great Alabama layman, who has been deeply interested in the Southern Assembly, and who has now become its moving spirit and general manager. The first forward step which he has taken has been in the direction of realizing to the fullest possible extent the original plan and purpose of the institution.

According to the announcement which has recently been made, Lake Junaluska is to become the great rallying ground for the laymen of the church and the center of the new movement which seeks to bring them to a position of greater influence and efficiency in all ecclesiastical affairs, without in any sense limiting the large activities which the various boards have always carried on.

It is significant of the new life and spirit now moving in the very heart of the M. E. Church, South, that this announcement comes at the very time when the place of the laymen is more important than it has ever been before. He is a man with little insight who does not understand that the wonderful advances made by the church in the past few years has been due in a tremendous measure to the work and co-operation of the laymen.

It has been estimated that more than one hundred thousand of them were actually in harness for the church during the Centenary Campaign, and a number equally large have done service in the Christian Education Movement. Certainly these enterprises could not have succeeded without the interest taken by these men and the energy put forth by them. In the Christian Education Movement, the director-general, the associate director, the advisory director, the business manager, and all of the regional field men, with one exception, were laymen.

To-day the position occupied by such men in the church is of the most tremendous importance. Without them the pledges which have been made to these great movements cannot be collected. Without them no similar movement can ever again be put on with success. And without them no local congregation of Methodists can measure up to their fullest responsibility and meet the tremendous issues and problems that face them in such a day as this. We might as well face the fact that the day has come when a vast proportion of the church's work must be shouldered and performed by the men in the pew, and, having faced that fact, we must proceed to act upon it and make our plans accordingly.

In this situation there is an imperative demand for a place or institution where the activities of the laymen can center. We need a place where a man from one section of the church can meet men from every other section. We need a forum where these men from the various sections may air their opinions, voice their sentiments, and add their experience to the experiences of every other man. There is needed an institution where laymen from everywhere may sit down together and discuss between themselves all the various phases of the different problems which they face. And we need a center where these same laymen may perfect the most efficient methods by which these problems may be met and solved.

It is such an institution that Lake Junaluska is now destined to become. Under Mr. Stockham's leadership it is expected that an ever-increasing stream of men will seek the precincts of the Lake for the purposes just enumerated. They will frankly face the situation in which they are placed, and ask themselves the straightforward question, "What are we going to do about it?" And having arrived at some conception of what should be done, they will then proceed to answer the further question, "How shall we do it?" When the "what" and the "how" of the laymen's service has been satisfactorily outlined, there will be a new Methodism in the South.

This new idea of Lake Junaluska will begin to function this year in a period that has been set apart as Laymen's Week. Between the dates of August 8 and 13, these men will gather at Junaluska for a great conference. What the exact program will be has not yet been announced, but it will doubtless be in harmony with the high nature of this new conception. The committee in charge is composed of such men as Mr. Stockham, Mr. Pepper, Bishop Cannon, Bishop Atkins, and Mr. A. C. Marts, the advisory director of both the Centenary and the Christian Education Movement, who has become one of the important laymen of our church. Dr. Beauchamp, secretary of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, is co-operating heartily with this committee. A layman's office, with a secretary and clerical force in charge, has been established at Southern Assembly, and these preliminary preparations preface the great success of the new enterprise.

Those who are interested in enlisting the laymen for a larger degree of service and activity in the church will doubtless hail with delight this new departure. And the laymen themselves will certainly welcome the opportunity which is thus presented to them. For many years it has been their custom to declare their willingness to shoulder as much responsibility as the church would entrust them. They now have an opportunity not only to accept a full measure of such responsibility, but also to prepare themselves for its efficient discharge and to assume the foremost place of leadership in Methodist affairs.

ALEXANDRIA DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The fifty-first session of the Alexandria District Conference met at Oakdale, La., May 10, at 10:15 a.m., Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., presiding elder, in the chair.

After devotional service, conducted by the presiding elder, and after some statements made by him; Revs. H. T. Young and W. W. Perry were nominated for secretary, and W. W. Perry was elected.

The roll was then called, announcement of committees made, and the Chairman proceeded to the work of the Conference by calling for reports from the charges. The reports were generally hopeful and progress was noted in the Sunday schools, Epworth Leagues and Missionary societies of the district. Congregations are increasing with the better weather, and some charges have had good revival meetings with numerous accessions to the church, Standard and Olla charge having had 42 accessions, and Alexandria 94, without any special effort.

Emphasis was laid upon the observance of the Lord's Supper and it was discovered that this sacrament is not as regularly attended to as it should be. Prayer meetings were reported from nearly all the charges and it seems that Boyce is the banner charge for the mid-week service.

Reports from the charges showed a healthful condition of the Woman's Missionary Societies throughout the district.

Rev. Alonzo Early, the Conference Field Secretary, and Miss Caroline Hess, Elementary Superintendent, had a carefully planned program for the district Sunday School Institute. The larger part of the afternoon of the 11th was devoted to this program and Dr. R. A. Cummins of Natchitoches made the principal address. At the close of the Institute district officers were chosen for next year.

The Christian Education Movement was given much attention during the Conference and we had the pleasure of the presence of Rev. A. S. Lutz, Conference Commissioner of Education, who delivered a strong speech in behalf of this cause.

Rev. R. W. Vaughan represented the orphanage and reported that notwithstanding the financial pressure, the Easter offerings had been very gratifying.

Rev. W. D. Kleinschmit, of New Orleans, spoke in behalf of the Memorial home maintained by the Methodists in that city. The Conference passed a resolution asking the pastors of the different charges to take a collection at the earliest convenience to meet the needs of this institution.

A matter of interest to the district was the selection of a district committee to look after the affairs of the district parsonage and, if at all practicable, to sell the present property and buy or build another home, in a more desirable part of the city, for the convenience of the presiding elder's family.

The Chairman announced as the Ad Interim Licensing Committee: Rev. Alonzo Early, Rev. W. H. Jordan, Rev. J. W. Faulk and Rev. T. L. Edwards.

Delegates to the Annual Conference are as follows: S. M. Abels, R. W. Oglesby, Mrs. W. T. Cunningham, W. G. Banks, M. R. Ernest, T. W. Holloman, and J. T. Sandlin; alternates: Mrs. H. G. Owens, H. H. White, T. L. Edwards, and Mrs. T. L. Owens.

There was no one recommended to the Annual Conference for Admission, but Rev. A. E. Barrett, serving the Elizabeth charge, was recommended for re-admission.

While the attendance at this Conference was not so large as we had hoped it would be, yet it was pleasant and helpful. Our new presiding elder was diligent in attending to all the claims of the church and at all times showed himself ready to help and direct the interests committed to his oversight. He is indeed a fellow-laborer, and insists that first things shall be first. At the close of the Conference, on the evening of the 11th, he made an earnest plea for consecration of all our powers to the interest of the kingdom of God and called upon the congregation to spend some time upon the knees in meditation and prayer.

The preaching of the first evening was done by Rev. D. B. Boddie, who brought an earnest and helpful message. We were stormed out the second evening, and the service and conference were closed by the benediction by Rev. W. H. Jordan.

The Conference will meet next year at Pineville.

Our duty would not be met if we did not speak of the cordial hospitality of Rev. J. L. Evans, the pastor at Oakdale, and the citizens of that thriving little city. Every courtesy was shown, and more homes were in waiting than there were delegates to enjoy them.

We shall be glad to visit them again.

W. W. PERRY, Secretary.

LITTLE THINGS.

We read this statement the other day: "The automobile of to-day was not possible until men could measure the five-thousandth of an inch as easily as a carpenter does a foot." When we stop to think about it, the five-thousandth of an inch is a mighty little thing—but the automobile industry is one of the greatest business enterprises of the age. It may be that there is some apparently insignificant defect in our lives that is making it impossible for us to develop anything like the power we might possess if the defect were removed. Even a mote in the eye can start some pretty big tears.

THE "DRIVE" IS OVER WHEN THE QUOTA IS PLEDGED.

The report on the results of the every-member canvass of the Christian Education Movement appears elsewhere in this paper. In the face of adverse conditions the church has attempted to carry through an enterprise that is the greatest Southern Methodism has attempted until now. Many congregations and many individuals have made records worth while; many others have failed to use the opportunity given and have failed of their obligation. If our Methodism lives and grows it will be because of the faith and the devotion of the Methodists who answered the call of God in this day of testing.

Let no congregation feel that the "drive" is over until its quota has been reached. First, it is not fair to the congregations that have secured their quotas to have other churches as well able fail to meet their obligations. Then, the amount asked represents the minimum of the needs of our schools; we must provide the $33,000,000 if our schools meet present day demands. We must complete this task, must redeem the pledge made by our church, if the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, shall have the right to be counted among the live churches of to-day.

These are trying times, it is true. But it brings us our opportunity for sacrificial giving—sacrificial, at least, as compared with former giving. It is our opportunity to make a venture of faith—to give what we believe will be ours under the blessing of God. What right have we to ask for a return of prosperity unless we pledge to use it in helping to build the Kingdom of Christ? The times demand men and women of faith. If we come out of this period of depression, let us attempt something worthy of a great church and thus prove our right to live.

If your Conference is over on its quota the record is not clear if your church has failed to meet its obligation. Take up in earnest the task and keep at it until the work is done, until the record of your church is clear. Do not have it written that in the suprema test for Southern Methodism your church failed to make good.

A STIRRING APPEAL.

(The following letter has already gone to our leaders in Louisiana and we feel that its stirring appeal for the completion of the great task in which we have been engaged should reach all the readers of the Advocate.—Editor).

"The M. E. Church, South, is now in the midst of a strenuous testing time. The success or failure of the Christian Education Movement will determine whether or not we shall be true to our duty, our genius, our history.

"Shall we put our hand to the plow and then turn back? Shall we fail in the greatest thing we ever called to do? Shall we prove recreant to our highest and holiest trust? Shall we throw up our hands in despair and slink away to let Christian Education perish from our program?

"It must not be so. Our people are made of sterner stuff. They will not let the Kingdom's most important cause go down to defeat, and then plead in extenuation the purely temporal and secular excesses of hard times, unfavorable conditions, declining markets.

"Gird up your loins for a new effort in these days. Put your church on the triumphant side at any cost. Let no failure besmirch a record written so brilliantly in the blood of sacrificial consecration. The honor of the church is at stake. Methodism expects every man to do his duty. Let there be no faltering until the task is done. No cessation until every charge has reached its quota.

"If you have reported over the top, then go and give the other fellow a lift on his charge. Be sure to make a full report. Yours for Victory.

ALBERT S. LUTZ,

Louisiana Conference Secretary of Education."
Shreveport, La., June 8, 1921.

A NOTABLE VICTORY—THE CAMPAIGN CONTINUES UNTIL ENTIRE QUOTA IS RAISED.

The Christian Education Movement has achieved marvelous results. The church has gone forward on its knees and in faith has subscribed millions. Our people have shown new faith in Christian Education as an essential part of the work of the church and their set purpose to raise the entire thirty-three million dollars. They have done this in the face of the greatest financial depression in history. The people of America have lost thirty billions in the last nine months and the American farmer has received the hardest blow in history.

Many people have felt it unwise in these times to subscribe more than they could pay the first year; they purpose to continue payments each year as circumstances will permit. Many other people, while in deep sympathy with the cause, have conscientiously felt that they could not at this time incur further obligations, but have given assurances that later on they will make liberal contributions. Many churches that have not yet reached their quotas do not know what failure means; they assure us that they will take care of it later on. Leaders all over the church insist that they will "fight it out along this line" until their churches, districts and conferences contribute their full quotas.

Let the whole church, therefore, be assured that a great victory has been won, and that the campaign will be continued, perhaps with rest periods, until the full thirty-three millions are raised. Of course, the every-member canvass should be continued in every church until every member has been given an opportunity to subscribe.

General Campaign Director.

A SPLENDID ACHIEVEMENT.

Dear Advocate: We are glad to report that we raised our quota and more for the Christian Education Movement. We have worked hard to do it but no harder than our hearts desired. We have believed all along that God was in this movement and therefore we have been unafraid to proclaim its needs. You may call it boasting if you please when we tell you that Moorhead was the first charge in the Greenwood District to go "over the top." We do not look upon it as a boast but as a great work on the part of the splendid congregation at this place.

It was an inspiring sight to see the line up on Sunday p.m., as we made ready for the drive that was to reach the very last member in the church together with the friends of the church. There were five teams for the charge and each team was 100 per cent present. After earnest prayer they went forth and came back with 100 per cent of the quota. Some more has been secured since. It has, indeed, been pleasant to carry out the cultural program and to see the steady development in the entire membership who had written on their faces, "Nothing but VICTORY will satisfy."

"Our church has been blessed by the movement in more than one way. Of course we know more now about our property as related to Christ. But aside from this we have had forty-five additions to the church here this year, several being upon profession of faith. We are glad to say to our brethren that we are happy in the work and thankful to God who has showered so many blessings upon us.

I earnestly ask the prayers of my brethren upon this splendid people whom we serve on the charge and upon the pastor that he may truly be a spiritual leader here. Fraternally,

J. D. WROTEN, Pastor.

HOW NOT TO GROW OLD.

Youth is a quality, a spiritual energy, and, properly speaking, there is no "old age," but spiritual decay. "The foot less prompt to meet the morning dew" is no valid evidence of growing old, any more than to lose a leg in battle. Frisky physical activities are not the only tests of youth. That brain of Sophocles which gave us his greatest play at ninety, is more to the point, as also that famous saying recorded of him, in reference to the cooling of the passions with the years, that to grow old was like being set free from service to a band of madmen.

Because we grow wiser and stronger, less selfish, and generally more useful to our fellows with the passage of the years, is not to say that we have lost our youth. It only means that we have learned how to employ it. We do not run in every direction as we did. We know a little better what we are doing, or what we want to do; but the motive force that enables us to do it is that same energy which once drove us to make fools of ourselves at the beginning, and still provides the same "swift means to radiant ends."

Decay, disillusion, weariness: we mean these things when we speak of "growing old" but we fail to realize that these are no necessary accompaniments of the years. We may, unfortunately, inherit them, or acquire them, like bad habits or through neglect of a proper care and exercise of our spiritual selves. Spiritual and intellectual laziness makes most people "old before their time." If we lose interest in life life will soon lose interest in us; and it is just as possible to achieve a precocious senility in the twenties as at any later period of our lives.—Richard Le Gallienne in Harper's Magazine for April.

BUDDHISM COPIES CHRISTIANITY.

By this time Outlook readers should be fairly familiar with the Daily Vacation Bible Schools. They were started twenty years ago on the East Side of New York to bring together idle children, idle churches, and idle students during the summer vacation. Manual work, organized play, and Bible study have gone on together. From the start the schools have been successful. From one school they have grown to over fourteen hundred. Canada has copied them and now has seven hundred and fifty. During the past two years Japan and China have in turn copied them. Japan has seventeen schools now and China no less than a hundred and forty. The Chinese schools are the result of the efforts of eight hundred native Christian students.

Some students who were not Christians also responded. These were Buddhists. They, too, established daily vacation schools. They followed the call to service in their own fashion. They adopted the general program of the Daily Vacation Bible Schools, but substituted Buddhist ethics for the Gospels.

The rest of the program was too good not to be taken up—the songs, the kindergarten work, the talks on health and callsthetic exercises, the stereopticon story, the manual work such as basketry, hammock-making, and other weaving and sewing, the Red Cross hospital and home work, the first aid and hygiene, and, finally, the afternoon hours devoted to open-air games and excursions.

If service is the real test of religious faith, the Bible Vacation Schools, in spreading the spirit of human service to those who bear another name, have met that test successfully.—The Outlook.

PROGRESS.

Man is not God, but hath God's end to serve,
A master to obey, a course to take,
Somewhere to cast off, somewhat to become.
Grant this, then, man must pass from old to new,
From vain to real, from mistake to fact,
From what once seemed good now proved best,
How could man have progression otherwise?

—Robert Browning

SOMETIMES A STRAIN.

Sometimes a strain comes floating through one's brain

Of half forgotten music, dimly sweet.
Yet gone before one's lips its notes repeat;
Or some vague line of poetry, uncaught.
Taps at one's mind, then slips away to naught.
Or some faint, wistful fragrance softly blows
Across one's musings, and as swiftly goes,
Vainly through one's disturbed remembrance sought.

Whence come these fragments? Are they flotsam tossed

From depths remote, unfathomed, of one's brain,
Striving their uttermost to make it plain
That beauty lives, though lesser things are lost,
And these frail wraiths of loveliness must be Reminders of its immortality?

TWO WEEKS OF INTENSIVE EVANGELISTIC WORK IN MEXICO.

By Rev. J. H. Fitzgerald.

During my twenty-four years of service as missionary in Mexico the ever-present problem has been, how to reach the people with the message. There are no people on earth more disposed to receive it than the Mexican people, once they are brought face to face with it. But in order to reach them, a wall of prejudice, built through all the period of Catholic domination, must be scaled. A point of contact must be found. For the present at least, the problem is solved, as the following facts will demonstrate:

On the invitation of Rev. L. B. Newberry, I left El Paso the 6th of April with a stereopticon outfit to help him in an evangelistic campaign in the western part of the State of Chihuahua. On the 8th Brothers Newberry, Risen, Bible colporteur, and I left Chihuahua City in a Ford car. The first town reached was Santa Isabel, a very fanatical place, where there never had been a Protestant preacher. After finding a place to spend the night, we interviewed the Mayor and asked permission to exhibit some religious and educational views for the benefit of the people. The request was granted, and he suggested the outside wall of his office fronting the main plaza as the most appropriate place. Then everybody co-operated in disseminating invitations, so that by the time it was dark the major part of the population was present. A series of pictures on the Life of Christ were placed on the screen, and each one was explained in evangelical terms as it was put on. Everything said was intended to present Christ as the only and all-sufficient Savior of men from sin, the only way to heaven, and the only medium of approach to the Father. Although the service was in the street and the audience composed of all classes, the attention was rapt, and the behavior perfect. A cathedral audience could not have been more solemn, attentive and respectful. After the presentation of the Life of Christ, I put on three temperance pictures. Brother Risen commented on them and made a telling speech for the cause of prohibition. Then he offered Bibles, portions, Testaments and temperance literature for sale. It all sold like hot cakes to hungry men. I asked Risen when we got through what he thought of it. His reply was, "Wonderful!" Brother Newberry affirmed that "such a stunt had never been pulled off in Mexico before."

We spent the next night in Cusiniriachic, a considerable mining town, and held preaching service in a private home with a small group of church members, without the pictures. After that we visited the towns of Padernales, Guerrero, Minaca, Bachiniha Cruces and San Buenaventura.

The authorities and people co-operated everywhere lending service gladly without charge. In two places we used private corrals, as there were no suitable auditoriums. In Guerrero we used the casino and the municipality furnished the electric light for the occasion (they had not had light for a month previously) without charge. In Cruces the public school building served. We agreed that a conservative estimate of the audiences would range from three to five hundred. In all of the places visited we did three things, viz: gave the gospel message through the pictures and viva voce, sold Bibles and portions, and taught prohibition.

Brother Newberry was afraid that false impressions might be made by not announcing that we were Protestants. It was, therefore, decided that between the presentation of the two sets of pictures the announcement should be made. If it made any impression at all on the audience, there was no visible manifestation of it.

From San Buenaventura the brethren returned to Chihuahua in the Ford, leaving me to find my way back to El Paso by a different route. I naturally felt tired and lonely, and there were long distances and two days between me and home. I took the road for Casas Grandes in the open Ford that carried the mail. The ride through the sun developed a first-class headache. But after an hour's rest I decided to take the train for Pearson. In conversation with the conductor, I learned that the moving picture man from there was on the train. He was interviewed and permission obtained to use his hall and machine for the night, provided his associates were willing. He would let me know at the telegraph office thirty minutes after arriving. We got there at 7 p.m., found my man, got his permission to use the hall and his promise to operate the machine, leaving me free to take the platform and comment on the pictures. The next thing was to get the audience. I took a turn through the town, down one street and up another, scattering invitations and asking everybody I met to invite everybody else. When I got back to the hall the movie man had opened the doors and turned on the lights and the people were coming. We took the pictures back to the operating room and arranged them in order so there would be no trouble in putting them on. I returned to the front, entered and mounting the platform faced a full house. While the people were still coming I began speaking on the Life of Christ as the pictures were thrown upon the screen. These were followed by a set on the Good Shepherd. I talked for more than an hour and never in my life have I had greater liberty in presenting the Christ, nor a more appreciative audience in receiving the message. The memory of that service will remain with me always. When the service was over the people left as if they were going out from the presence of God. I spoke to many of them as they passed out. As I stepped out I met the movie man with the pictures all arranged and a wonderfully happy smile on his face. I slept in the train and left at 7 o'clock the next morning. A young man on the train who was present and to whom I again preached Christ, said there were at least six or seven hundred people present.

CIRCUIT SUNDAY SCHOOL LEAFLETS AVAILABLE.

There are approximately fourteen thousand superintendents of Methodist circuit Sunday schools. There are about 70,000 teachers associated with these superintendents.

To meet the needs of these workers the General Sunday School Board is giving special attention to the development of a leaflet and pamphlet literature which may be placed in their hands. Through the Department of Circuit Sunday School Work the following free literature has been published and is available. Requests may be sent either to Mr. M. W. Brabham, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn., or to the Conference Sunday School Field Secretary.

A Program of Work for Methodist Circuit Sunday Schools; The Four Times a Year Circuit Sunday School Institute; Report forms and advertising posters for use in connection with the foregoing; The Circuit Sunday School Superintendent; Some Opportunities of the Teacher in the Circuit Sunday School; The Story of Miss Joella; How Some Presiding Elders Have Helped the Country Sunday School to Better Things; Keeping Open All the Year; Keep the Church Fires Burning; The Farmer's Creed; The Country Boy's Creed; What Books Do you Read?; Supplying Some of the Needs of the Circuit Sunday School; Singing in the Circuit Sunday School; Big Enough for a Big Opportunity; Two Kinds of Country Sunday Schools; A Circuit Training Class Plan; The Workers' Council in the Circuit Sunday School; The Standard Program for Circuit Institutes; Preparing the Lesson in the Circuit Sunday School; Manual for Leaders of Organized Classes; Round Table leaflets for discussion in institutes on various subjects, such as: The Organized Bible Class, Sunday School Organization, Training a Leadership, The Home Department and the Cradle Roll, The Sunday School Teacher.

In addition to these there are several other available pamphlets which will be found helpful, such as Elementary Work in the One Room Church, Sunday School Architecture, Grading the Sunday School.

"The Methodist Superintendent and His Helpers" is a twenty-four page monthly publication selling for twenty-five cents a year. This is prepared from the standpoint of practical Sunday school work, and may be ordered from Smith & Lamar.

THE BEATITUDES.

By David Keppel.

It is interesting to inquire what idea our Lord was elaborating in the Beatitudes and the rest of the Sermon on the Mount. And it is even more interesting to find that idea, in the message that both He and John the Baptist had been proclaiming: "Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand."

We believe that the Beatitudes are simply the expansion of this idea; the "poor in spirit," "they that mourn," "the meek," those who "hunger and thirst after righteousness," "the merciful," the "pure in heart," the "peacemakers," are simply people who have taken successive steps in repentance. They are "blessed" in getting into the kingdom of heaven, where they find comfort for their mourning, the "earth," for which in their meekness they will not struggle, given them as an inheritance, their hunger and thirst after righteousness fully satisfied, mercy, and the vision of God, and sonship to God bestowed upon them.

We see then that the Beatitudes, and the same is true of the entire Sermon on the Mount, are the expansion of our Savior's first proclamation, "Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." The qualities which our Lord pronounces blessed are successive steps in repentance; and the reasons He assigns for that blessedness are stages in the kingdom.

Another noteworthy fact about the Beatitudes is that their teaching is not only ideal but actual. Jesus is not merely telling the qualities men ought to have to enter the kingdom, and the advantages they ought to enjoy; He was talking to men who actually had those qualities, and therefore were in the kingdom, and enjoying its benefits. Peter and James and John and Andrew, urged by their sense of poverty of spirit, had repented and been admitted to the kingdom; they had mourned and were comforted; were meek but had inherited the earth; hungered and thirsted for righteousness, and were being filled; were merciful, and had obtained mercy; were pure in heart, and saw God; peacemakers and were called His sons. In short, these men, having repented, had been admitted to God's kingdom, and were enjoying its privileges.—Christian Advocate (N. Y.).

A PLEA.

God grant me these: the strength to do
Some needed service here;
The wisdom to be brave and true;
The gift of vision clear,
That in each task that comes to me
Some purpose I may plainly see.

PRAY, GIVE, GO.

Three things the Master hath to do,
And we who serve Him here below,
And long to see His Kingdom come,
May pray, or give, or go.

He needs them all—the open hand,
The willing feet, the asking heart—
To work together and to weave
The threefold cord that shall not part.

Nor shall the giver count his gift
As greater than the worker's deed,
Nor he in turn his service boast
Above the prayers that volco the need

Not all can go; not all can give
To 'qup the others for the fray;
But young or old, or rich or poor,
Or strong or weak—we all can pray.

Pray that the full hands open wide
To speed the message on its way;
That those who hear the call may go,
And—pray that other hearts may pray.

MR. DOWNY ARRIVES.

By Winthrop Packard.

Mr. Downy came to our house one stormy February day. Where he had been before, no one can tell, but it was evident that wherever it was the menu had been scant and the calls to the dining car few, for if ever bird had the lean and hungry look of Shakespeare's Cassius, he did. He lighted on the trunk of the big ash by the dining room window and searched nervously upward and along the branches, but not a bite did he find. No wonder, the tree had been systematically searched and looted of its good things by a score of birds of half a dozen species before he arrived. Disconsolate, he slanted into the air toward another tree, then whirled sharply and alighted on the suet-holder packed with suet that hung on the lilac bush by the window.

His very feathers were expressive, first of incredulity, then amazement at such a find, and finally of pure joy and satisfaction in the feast, as he bored and bored into the suet and ate and ate until he could hold no more. Then, like a tired child, he just curled up over the top of the suet cage and went to sleep—a dangerous thing to do right out in the open, where hawk or butcher-bird might see him. To be sure, while he slept, he didn't look like a bird. His feathers fluffed out and blew in the breeze, and to the casual glance he was just a fluff of something strange that had blown into the bush and caught there. I have seen a nuthatch, full to repletion, hang himself to a tree by one claw and swing there, head down, asleep, to all the world looking like a browntail moth's nest as he fluttered in the breeze. No winged enemy touched him. I doubt if such could have recognized him as edible.

After that, a dozen times a day, Downy came to the suet and filled up, getting husky and happy in figure and manner. About the middle of May he appeared with another that lacked the red mark on the nape. We suspected a romance immediately, and so it proved. To our joy they chose the dead limb of an elm not far from the house, where they hammered out a nest, and where successive broods of young downies have appeared in due season for several years. The limb is over the highway where autos by the hundred hoot past every day, but that hasn't mattered. We had often wished for woodpecker tenants in our trees, but none had come until we put out the suet. Verily, it pays to advertise!—In Our Dumb Animals.

SNOWFLAKES.

Once upon a time, a little raindrop thought it had played long enough up in the clouds, and said

It would go down to earth and see what it could do. So it started.

When it was falling, writes Josephine Jarvis, it had to pass through a cloud that was very cold, and this funny little raindrop, instead of shrinking together as we do when we are cold, stretched out and stretched out, until it was not round any more, but was long and thin, and hard like a needle; and that is just what it was—a little ice needle.

As it went on falling, it met another just like itself.

The second said: "Little Ice Needle, where are you going?"

"Down to earth, to see what I can do."

"I'll go, too."

So the second ice needed joined the first, and they fell together.

Pretty soon they met a third, who said: "Little Ice Needles, where are you going?"

"Down to earth, to see what we can do."

"Then I'll go, too."

So it joined the others and they fell together. Then they met another, and another, and another, who all joined them. Then there were six little ice needles, falling together, and they had a new name—"Snowflakes."

Little Snowflakes met others, who asked where it was going. "Down to earth, to see what good I can do."

"We'll go, too. But where shall we go?"

"I know," said one of the little flakes. "Last summer, when I was round and warm, I saw a place where a little boy had planted some seeds, which a kind lady gave him. Let us fall on that place and keep it warm, so that the seeds in the ground may not freeze, and the little boy may have some flowers next summer."

"Oh, so we will," said they all; and they fell faster, so that they might get there all the sooner. Other snowflakes saw them and went too, and the ground was covered with more to keep the seeds from freezing during the winter.

When the weather began to be warm, the snow turned into water and ran down into the earth, and the seeds drank it and swelled until by and by little leaves came out above the ground from each seed. Then other leaves grew, and when summer came little Frank had his flowers again, and all because one little raindrop wanted to do some good in the world.—Exchange.

DIRECTIONS.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after three or four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise, use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least an inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

Editorial

JUSTLY HONORED.

The Advocate has a new editor! This information did not come through the Publishing Committee nor has it yet been confirmed by that committee. It came first through expressions in letters that came into the office, such as "Congratulations," etc. But toward the end of last week all doubts were removed, by a letter which came from Millsaps College. Now we would not have the readers of the Advocate become alarmed over this. For the old editor is the new editor—DOCTOR Henry T. Carley, the degree of D.D. having been conferred upon him last week by Millsaps College, Jackson, Miss.

Now it is not certain that the Editor knows that Millsaps College has thus honored herself in honoring one of the most distinguished of her alumni. The Editor preached the sermon on Sunday night, June 5, for the young people's organizations of Millsaps, but left Jackson before the awarding of degrees. Since leaving Jackson he has been in Montgomery delivering a course of lectures and at the time of this writing has not returned to his office and has not seen the correspondence which has come in during his absence. Therefore he does not know that these lines are being written, and his every-now-and-then unofficial assistant editor, whose instructions for this week's issue of the Advocate from the Editor were: "Do just exactly as you please," takes advantage of the opportunity to tell our readers of this honor so justly bestowed—a thing the Editor himself would fail to do were he here.

Our Editor is held in high esteem by the readers of the Advocate and they will rejoice to know that he has been thus honored. Surely he is eminently worthy of such an honor. He is a man of broad culture and of broad sympathies. His native ability and the thorough training which he has had in the schools and the experience of several years which he has now had as Editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate fit him for the important position he so ably holds in the church. We consider him one of the great editors of the country. Progressive, yet conservative, the interests of the church are safe in his hands. His broad scholarship and his mastery of good English are evident in the literary finish of the columns he edits, while his editorial work shows that he is alive to all the issues of the day and that his views of the needs of the church are to be trusted. We all will heartily agree that his great services to the church entitle him to the honor which has been conferred upon him.

Millsaps also honored herself in honoring two other distinguished ministers—Rev. J. R. Countiss, president of Grenada Female College, and Rev. Charles W. Crisler, pastor of Galloway Memorial Church, Jackson, Miss.

LORD, INCREASE OUR FAITH

Some one has remarked that we have only the Acts of the Apostles—that their resolutions have not come down to us. And in that stirring book of tremendous activity in the building of the Christian church, there are some intensely human and instructive chapters for the builders of the church to-day.

Take the account of Peter's deliverance from prison. "Herod had stretched forth his hand to vex certain of the church." And he killed James with the sword; and, when he saw that it pleased the Jews, he proceeded to shut Peter in prison. A virile Christianity will ever make enemies and arouse opposition. In a convention which renominated Mr. Cleveland for the presidency an old man from the Middle West arose to speak. He said that the young men of his section honored Mr. Cleveland—that they honored him for the enemies he had made. Mr. Wesley would ask his preachers if they had made anybody mad. It is an evidence of the mightily effective acts of the apostles that "Herod stretched forth his hand to vex certain of the church."

Now when Peter was put in prison "prayer was made without ceasing of the church unto God for him." And on a certain night a prayer meeting was being held in a place where prayer should ever be natural—in a Christian home. And it is evident that the deliverance of Peter was the burden of the prayer. The astonishing thing is that they refused to believe the answer that speedily came.

Peter himself was slow to realize that prayer had been answered. For he stood in the open street like a man in a dream. But when he came to himself and had considered the thing he went to the house of John Mark.

The damsel Rhoda answered the knock, and when she knew Peter's voice, she opened not the gate for gladness, but hastened back to tell the prayer meeting that their prayers had been answered, in flesh and blood—that Peter stood at the door. And they would not believe it, but said: "Thou art mad." And when the believing maiden insisted that it was even so, they said she had seen a ghost—"It is his angel." "But Peter continued knocking: and when they had opened the door, and saw him, they were astonished." And so they were finally brought to open the door and to let in the answer to their prayer, and still when the answer entered, they were astonished. Is it true that, to-day, we are slow to open the door and admit the answer to our prayer?

Such a lack of faith, it is to be feared, may be found in the church to-day, both as to individual needs and as to the work of the kingdom. Many Christians do not live according to the faith which they profess and do not act according to the things they affirm that they believe.

The church is just ending a campaign which, in its broad vision, is the most comprehensive and constructive the church has ever undertaken. If the final figures show that we have fallen short of the mark it will be a grave reflection upon the faith of our people—at least of those who have not done their part.

For many have taken counsel of their doubts and not of their faith. They have made a compact with their fears and parted with their trust. They have talked of the financial depression. They have spoken of the Lord's great work as they would speak of a doubtful business proposition in which they were asked to invest money. They have spoken as if the present depression would last five years, or forever. They have not dealt with the great cause as men of real faith should deal with a compact which they are asked to enter into with the Lord. Some have said that they were not willing to pledge themselves at all for the future—that it is too uncertain. That can only mean that they were not willing to enter into a compact with the Lord, that they were not willing to trust him. Recently a financial expert, speaking to a large number of business men in New Orleans, said that the great need of the hour is for business men to give their hearts to God. It may be that the remedy for the present depression is in the latent faith of those who profess to be God's people, and that we shall have to bring the tithes into the storehouse that the windows of heaven may again be opened. "Lord, increase our faith." And give us the faith to bring thee what is due, in time, in talents, in material possessions.

"I'LL TRY, SIR!"

One of our preachers said that, while he was returning from his mission work in Mexico, he saw at one station a ragged old Indian soldier. Scarlet and gold, if such had ever adorned him, were all bedimmed, and his uniform was in tatters. But as his chief rode by he instantly drew himself up proudly in a military salute—that ragged old Indian soldier of Mexico. And the preacher said there was something in the incident which touched him as being fine and noble. And we'll say that the old Indian drew himself up proudly, for there can be nothing but pride of the right kind, and not a menial thought, in the mind of the man who, in any way, expresses his allegiance to a great cause which he has espoused. We should never forget the story of Captain May in the Mexican War. General Taylor asked him if he could take the Mexican batteries, and he answered: "I'll try, Sir!" With that he and his dragoons charged through a perfect storm of grape-shot, rode over the Mexican batteries and captured the commanding general of the enemy. This is a time which calls for loyalty among the people called Methodists. We should straighten up and salute those who have the leadership among us. There is not a question that the Education Campaign comes with the full authority of our church through the General Conference, a delegated body composed of both ministers and laymen. The delegates to that Conference are elected by all our people in their representative voice in the District Conference and the Annual Conference. Then brother pastor, brother steward, brother member of the church, you will not have expressed your full loyalty to your church, in this crucial hour, until you have carried the Christian Education message to the last man in your church and given him an opportunity to enter into the fellowship of a mighty enterprise. There yet is time to complete this great task.

A CHIP OFF THE OLD BLOCK.

On Wednesday morning, June 8, Mr. Calvin Joyner was graduated from the Tulane University of Louisiana. Announcement had already appeared in the daily press of this city that Mr. Joyner would enter missionary work in China, sailing in the early fall. He will go under the Mission Board of our own church, and no finer spirit ever answered the call to a great service. His fine character is held in great esteem by his friends of the university and of the First Methodist Church of this city, where he holds membership. Mr. Joyner, as many of our readers know, is the son of Rev. N. E. Joyner, our pastor of First Methodist Church, Baton Rouge, La. Mr. Joyner was born in Mexico, while his father was serving there, and it was his ambition and his expectation that he would be appointed to teach in a school only a few blocks from the house in which he was born, but he freely yielded to the call to a great task in distant China. He is a chip off the old block.

EDUCATION CAMPAIGN TO JUNE 10.

We give below a report from the Nashville office of the progress of the Education Campaign to June 10. As to the patronizing conferences, we have reports from the Conference Secretaries of Education which increase the amounts reported below for North Mississippi and Louisiana Conferences. North Mississippi to the above date had raised $381,000, while the last report from the Louisiana Conference showed that nearly $800,000 had been raised.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Announcement was recently made that Dr. I. W. Cooper and Miss Jane Howard Drake were to be married in the Washington church, near Natchez, June 11, and would immediately leave for Palestine.

Rev. W. H. Gilles, pastor at Slidell, La., was in the city Monday and was present at the luncheon given the Methodist ministers on Monday in the home of the presiding elder, Rev. J. G. Snelling.

Rev. Henry M. Andrews, of Wetumpka, Ala., a member of the Alabama Conference, called at the Advocate office Monday morning, and the Editor regrets not seeing him. Brother Andrews is one of the instructors of the Seashore Divinity School.

At a recent meeting of the Protestant pastors of Greenville, Miss., the pastor of the Methodist church, Rev. E. S. Lewis, was elected president for the ensuing twelve months. Plans were made for union evening services in Greenville during July and August.

Rev. R. P. Neblett, Durant, Miss., writes that the Epworth League Conference at Grenada College, June 9-11, was a great success. Rev. S. H. Caffey, Webb, Miss., was elected President for the ensuing year, and Miss Lillie Mullins, Holly Springs, was elected Secretary.

Rev. W. H. Saunders, our pastor at Natchez, Miss., paid the Advocate office an appreciated call on Tuesday morning of this week. He was on his way to Biloxi, Miss. He is one of the instructors of the Seashore Divinity School now in session.

The editorial pen beaded Brother Wroten's letter on another page: "A Splendid Achievement," for such was the fine work done in his charge in the Education Campaign. The full quota for his church was secured on the afternoon of the Sunday on which the drive began, and since that time the quota has been exceeded.

In sending in copy for his third round, Rev. W. W. Graves, presiding elder of the Hattiesburg District, Mississippi Conference, writes that the work of the district is moving along well. Brother Graves considers the recent Epworth League Conference at Hattiesburg the greatest in the history of the Mississippi Conference.

We are in receipt of an announcement by Rev. and Mrs. Lastie N. Hoffpaul, Amite, La., of the marriage of their daughter, Hettie Lue, to Mr. George W. Bankston, Tuesday evening, June 7. May God's blessings be upon these young people who have laid the cornerstone of a home that they may build its walls with joy and love.

The Texas Avenue Church, Shreveport, La., is enjoying a very fine growth under the pastorate of Rev. R. S. Walton. Sixty-five members have been added to the church since Conference. The Sunday school is in good condition. Since April 1 the attendance has not fallen below two hundred and on one occasion there were two hundred and seventy present.

Brother F. A. Howell, one of the faithful officials of the church at Durant, Miss., always in attendance at the Annual Conference, and deeply interested in the Advocate, is in the Baptist Sanitarium in Jackson, Miss. He has just had an operation for appendicitis and, despite his advanced age of eighty-one, is doing well. We trust he will soon be perfectly well.

In writing to ask that the address of his Advocate be changed, Rev. R. E. Simpson, who has been at the Southern Methodist University, Dallas, Texas, states that he is going to take charge of our church at Leachville, Arkansas, but that he expects to return to the university to complete his B. D. degree. He writes that the work at the university has been fine and profitable. Three other Mississippians beside himself have been in the Dallas school this year.

Rev. W. E. Thomas, formerly connected with our city missions as superintendent, who has been spending some time at his home in Kentucky, recently returned to New Orleans for a few days. He is engaged at present in conducting revival meetings and he expects to continue in that work until the session of the Louisiana Conference.

Rev. and Mrs. J. G. Snelling entertained the Methodist pastors of New Orleans at a luncheon at their home on Prytanis Street, this city, on last Monday. The occasion was a very delightful one.

The Advertiser of Lafayette, La., carries an article about the fine work being done by the Lafayette church under the pastorate of Rev. H. W. Rickey. Comment has been made elsewhere in these pages upon the excellent work done in exceeding the Education Campaign quota. The church has also been active along many lines and the presiding elder of the district, Rev. C. A. Battle, declared the recent quarterly conference of the Lafayette church was an exhibit of a very fine report and astonishing variety of activities on the part of the local church.

The Secretary of the Board of Church Extension, Dr. S. H. C. Burgin, reports additions to the Loan Fund capital as follows: A Loan Fund for $10,000 has been established by John A. George J. and Alice Faucetta, of Hillsboro, N. C.; the Robert Newell and Ann Elizabeth Wright Loan Fund for $300, to be used within the bounds of the Kentucky Conference, has been established by Rev. J. A. Wright and other members of the family, and the R. L. and Julia Jones Loan Fund, previously established for $5,000, has been increased by a bequest of $3,383.31, which has just been paid by the administrator of Brother Jones' estate at Los Angeles, Cal.

There was a meeting of pastors and church directors in the Education Campaign in New Orleans, which met at Rayne Memorial Church last Sunday afternoon to consider the results and plan any future action that might be necessary. Reports showed that Louisiana Avenue, Epworth, St. Mark's, and Mary Werlein had raised their full quotas, while the other churches of the district, with one or two exceptions, had made a fine showing. It was unanimously agreed by the directors and pastors that the campaign shall be continued with great vigor until July 3, when results will be reported. It is confidently expected that the New Orleans District will complete the raising of its quota by that time.

In the death of Murphy J. Foster Louisiana lost one of her most distinguished citizens. He was formerly governor of the State, then representative of the State in the United States Senate for many years. At the time of his death he was Collector of the Port of New Orleans. Senator Foster will ever be remembered for his service against the Lottery. He ran for governor on the Anti-Lottery ticket, and as "The Man from St. Mary" achieved a notable victory. From that time on he was a power in Louisiana politics. Senator Foster was a member of the Methodist Church, and the funeral services were conducted by Rev. John F. Foster, our pastor at Franklin, La.

The Times-Picayune of Monday morning devoted much space on the front page to the sermons of the Baptist and Methodist pastors of Amite, La., last Sunday night. The churches were thronged to hear the pastors preach the gospel of law and order. The murder by several Italians of Dallas Calmes in the course of their attempt to rob the Bank of Independence, La., and the feeling aroused against the Italians in that section provided the occasion for these special sermons. The messages were well received, and there is an evidence of a disposition on the part of the citizens of Tangipahoa to allow the law to take its course in the trial of the Italians now going on. Rev. Lastie N. Hoffpaul is the Methodist pastor at Amite, and it was he who officiated at the funeral of the murdered man.

From Rev. S. L. Pope we learn of the generous action of the stewards of the Greenwood (Miss.) charge to pay all the expenses of their pastor, Rev. V. C. Curtis, to the Ecumenical Conference in London, and to give him quite an extensive tour through Europe. Brother Curtis will have a two months' vacation, beginning about the first of July. Brother Pope writes thus of the work at Greenwood: "Greenwood church has never in its history done the work it is now doing. The Sunday school rooms have to be used at the morning services for the overflow congregations. The Sunday school is about three times larger than ever before, and they have built new rooms to accommodate this increase; the Epworth League has grown from a membership of twelve or fifteen to one hundred and fifty, and Greenwood church has perhaps the greatest choir in the North Mississippi Conference. Brother Curtis is in great favor with his church and with the whole city of Greenwood."

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: Mrs. R. G. Bullock, Benton, Miss., 2; Mrs. W. T. Rehse, Vicksburg, Miss., 2; Rev. P. M. Caraway, Stelly Island, La., 3; Rev. F. H. McGehee, Tyro, Miss., 2; J. C. Jackson, Campti, La., 2, and Rev. R. I. Collins, Shannon, Miss., 5.

NOTICE.

The brethren of the Mississippi Conference, desiring my help in revival meetings during the summer will correspond with me at Newton, Miss.
REV. E. L. ALFORD.

HELP FOR REVIVAL MEETINGS.

My Dear Brother Carley: Please let the brethren who may need help for their revival meetings know that there are three excellent evangelists on the Brookhaven District who may have some open dates yet. They are: Rev. W. T. Griffin, Summit, Miss.; Rev. J. V. Bennett, Brookhaven, Miss.; Rev. W. L. Spinks, Brookhaven, Miss.

I send this reminder because I know the revival season is now opening in full blast.

But let all the preachers attend Seashore Divinity School first—June 14 to 23—and hear Dr. Geo. L. Robinson and Bishop William A. Quayle.

Yours cordially,

H. M. ELLIS.

KATHLEEN CHAMBLISS STARNES was born in Jefferson County, Mississippi, July 25, 1903, and died at Natchez, Miss., on February 8, 1921. Her father was William Calvin Starnes of Jefferson County and her mother was Miss Julia Fairman of Crystal Springs. She was received into the Methodist Church at Washington during the spring of 1915 under the ministry of Rev. J. H. Jolly, at the close of a meeting conducted by Rev. H. B. Watkins. It was from this church that the funeral services were conducted by the pastor, Rev. E. D. Simpson, and fittingly so, because to the services of this church she gave the best years of her life. Almost always at church, at Sunday school, or at any other meeting, she gave generously of her strength in order that the church might prosper and go forward. Scarcely more than a child she gave always willingly of her small means to the regular collections of the church, to the Centenary, and the fund for repairing the church, having signed a pledge card to tithe, and was enrolled among the Methodist Million. She was one of the charter members of the League at Washington and its secretary from the first until her death. She attended as a delegate a Centenary group meeting and a Sunday School Institute, both at Fayette in 1919, and was an alternate delegate to the district conference at Vicksburg in 1920, probably being the youngest member of that body. Having suffered long and patiently with some nervous disorder I do not know that she left any special dying testimony but she left that which is better, a useful, happy life in the Master's service.

J. B. CAIN.

MRS. CORNELIA KNOX LACY passed to her reward May 20, 1921. Her life on earth extended through nearly sixty-three years. She came to Shreveport with her husband in 1887, where they continued to live until death claimed them, her husband having passed on in 1911. While living in Georgia she was converted and united with the church. She placed her membership, on arriving at Shreveport, with the first Methodist church. When the congregation that is now the Texas Avenue congregation was organized she became a charter member of this church and continued her membership there until she joined the church triumphant. Sister Lacy loved her church and was a regular attendant while in health at the public worship. She was also a devoted mother. God blessed her with two children, Charles and Bessie, who now reside in Shreveport, and to serve them was her joy. She was not unmindful of her fellow man; for the poor, the maimed, the blind found in her a friend. But God has called her. She is now at home with her other loved ones. May her children follow on and be with father and mother after awhile. Peace to her memory.

Her pastor, R. S. WALTON.

On May 15, 1921, the grim angel of death claimed our schoolmate and friend, SUSIE RAY. She was 14 years, 6 months and 21 days of age. At an early age she united with the M. E. Church, South, and was a charter member of Wilhite Epworth League. She did her duty towards her friends and God. Schoolmates, parents, and friends, we have a great deal to be thankful for; she shared with us equally our joys and sorrows. In her home there is a vacant chair, in school, a vacant desk, but in Heaven a vacancy has been filled. It is sad to give her up while yet in the very prime of life, but the Heavenly Father doeth all things well, and he has called her from earth to dwell with Christ, and his angels, where no sorrow can enter, and pleasures never die. To the parents, let us say her life's work is ended, she has filled her earthly destiny. Her life was one of blessedness, and to-day you can look beyond this vale of tears towards Heaven's brighter home, and say, "We have a loved one in Heaven to guide us to a brighter home." Then dry your tears, and drive away your fears, for she is in Heaven's great bliss.

How Coca-Cola Resembles Tea

If you could take about one-third of a glass of tea, add two-thirds glass of carbonated water, then remove the tea flavor and add a little lemon juice, phosphoric acid, sugar, caramel and certain flavors in the correct proportion, you would have an almost perfect glass of Coca-Cola.

In fact, Coca-Cola may be fairly described as "a carbonated, flavored counterpart of tea, of approximately one-third the stimulating strength of the average cup of tea."

The following analyses, made and confirmed by the leading chemists throughout America, show the comparative stimulating strength of tea and Coca-Cola stated in terms of the quantity of caffeine contained in each:

Black tea—1 cupful.....1.54 gr.
(hot) (5 fl. oz.)

Green tea—1 glassful.....2.02 gr.
(cold) (8 fl. oz., exclusive of ice)

Coca-Cola—1 drink, 8 fl. oz......61 gr.
(prepared with 1 fl. oz. of syrup)

Of all the plants which Nature has provided for man's use and enjoyment, none surpasses tea in its refreshing, wholesome and helpful qualities. This explains its almost universal popularity.

The Coca-Cola Company has issued a booklet giving detailed analysis of its recipe. A copy will be mailed free on request to anyone who is interested. Address:

FROM QUEENSBOROUGH CHURCH,
SHREVEPORT, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: The Queensborough church has subscribed its quota to the educational fund. We are also laying the foundation for our new brick building. We hope to have the new building completed by fall.

One hundred and seventy-five new members have been added to the church roll since our last Annual Conference. The Queensborough Church has taken her place among the most progressive churches. Two of our intermediate girls have expressed a desire to be missionaries, and one boy has expressed a desire to enter the ministry. Several other boys and girls have pledged themselves to definite Christian service.

TWO GREAT MISSIONARY CONFERENCES.

By Robert B. Eleazer.

Our Board of Missions is promoting two great missionary conferences this summer. The first is to be held at Blue Ridge, N. C., June 24-July 4, at the famous Y. M. C. A. summer assembly. It is the same as that which has been held annually for several years at Blue Ridge under the auspices of the Missionary Education Movement, but has now been taken over by the Territorial Committee, representing the several Mission Boards of the South. This Conference is interdenominational and has an annual attendance of five hundred or more. It draws its leaders from the ablest of the several denominations and offers many great platform addresses and also normal training in the new mission study books. Several of our own leaders will be represented on the program. All those who desire to add to their missionary in-

It is not necessary to say much in recommendation of our own General Missionary Conference at Lake Junaluska, July 29-August 7. That it will be worthy of the series of splendid meetings that have preceded it for a number of years is sufficient. This Conference is always an event of moment in Southern Methodism. In many lives, annually, it marks the beginning of a new era of missionary vision and interest. The program this year will be up to the usual high standard, presenting many of the leading speakers of the country. There will be in connection, also, a School of Missions with a full curriculum and experienced teachers. This, added to the rare physical attractions of Junaluska and the Blue Ridge mountains, should make an unusual appeal to all who can get away for a few days of rest and inspiration. For program and rates write J. Dale Stentz, Lake Junaluska, N. C.

A GREAT DAY AT BELDEN.

Dear Brother Carley: On June 4, Brother Randolph held our third quarterly conference on the Sherman charge at Belden.

The conference was unusually good, the sermon splendid, and each church on the charge well represented.

On Sunday, June 5, Brother Randolph preached one of the finest sermons it has ever been our privilege to listen to, and after the sermon he dedicated our new church, which the people of Belden have succeeded in building this year regardless of many obstacles which had to be overcome. Belden church stands finished to the least detail and the people, pastor and presiding elder are justly proud of the accomplished fact.

The Sherman charge as a whole, is a splendid place in which to work, the people are fine, fellowship is good and we are doing our very best to build the charge up in every way.

The New Orleans Christian Advocate is being read and enjoyed by quite a number of our people.

Sincerely,

J. L. NABORS.

SOUTH IS TURNING AGAINST CALOMEL

Mr. Dodson, the "Liver Tone" Man, Responsible for Change for the Better.

Every druggist in town has noticed a great falling off in the sale of calomel. They all give the same reason. Dodson's Liver Tone is taking its place. "Calomel is dangerous and people know it." Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by every druggist who sells it. A large bottle doesn't cost very much but if it fails to give easy relief in every case of liver sluggishness and constipation, just ask for your money back. Dodson's Liver Tone is a pleasant-tasting, purely vegetable remedy, harmless to both children and adults. Take a spoonful at night and wake up feeling fine; no biliousness, sick headache, acid stomach or constipated bowels. It doesn't gripe or cause inconvenience all the next day like violent calomel. Take a dose of calomel today and tomorrow you will feel weak, sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day.

Sunday School

LESSON FOR JUNE 19.

Lesson Topic: Christianity Transforming the Social Order.

Scripture Lesson: Luke 4:16-21; Matthew 25:34-40.

Golden Text: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." Matt. 25:40.

Home Readings: Monday, In the Nazareth Synagogue, Luke 4:16-21; Tuesday, Jesus and Child Life, Matt. 18:1-10; Wednesday, The Baptist and Social Responsibility, Luke 3:9-20; Thursday, The Story of Dorcas, Acts 9:36-43; Friday, The Church at Antioch, Acts 11:27-30; Saturday, Paul and Demetrius, Acts 19:23-34; Sunday, The King's Test, Matt. 25:32-40.

Teaching Points.

1. If the world had been what it ought to have been, it would not have been necessary for Jesus to appear on earth.

2. The mission of Jesus was to save the lost.

3. As those who were lost are reformed—transformed—by the saving power of the gospel, a new force is made operative in the social order.

4. It is this transforming power of the gospel upon which we are dependent for the redemption of society.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The fifth Sunday in May three circuit Institutes were conducted. Rev. J. M. Morse, Christian Education Secretary, made the principal address at High Hill for the Homewood charge. I received a good report from this Institute and appreciate the progress made.

FRECKLES

Now Is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots.

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles. An Othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots. Simply get an ounce of Othine—double strength—from your druggist, and apply a little of it at night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than one ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful clear complexion. Be sure to ask for the double strength Othine as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

for the Harrisville charge. I was present at the Institute for the Scotland charge held at Caseyville. The following officers were elected:

Mrs. S. R. Towns, President, Union Church, Miss.; Pink Godbold, Secretary, Union Church, Rt. 2; Mrs. Grady Callender, Treasurer, Wesson, Miss.

They have adopted remarkable goals on this charge and I do not know of a charge that has adopted such definite and specific goals as this one. They are as follows:

1. Enrollment to equal church membership.

2. Average attendance 100 per cent of enrollment.

3. Every person in reach of church a member of Sunday school.

4. A job in the Sunday school for every member.

5. Each class doing some social service work.

6. Something definite toward the development of at least two new teachers.

7. Every teacher bringing at least five to Christ.

8. One young person a volunteer for special service.

I appreciate the effort on the part of these fine workers to meet the situation with which they are dealing and to measure up to the privileges and opportunities that are before them.

The first Sunday in June was spent with Rev. W. W. Hopper on the Montrose charge. I was with him at Louin in the morning and Montrose in the afternoon. Both of these schools agreed to put on a forward movement and I trust that under wise leadership they will succeed.

As I am writing this our Training School is practically finished. It has been very successful in instruction and interest, and I believe that quite a large number will get credit.

Don't forget to observe Sunday School Day and send in your offering to Mr. G. M. Lester, Jackson, Miss., P. O. Box 548.

Pray for the work and the workers. God bless and keep you.

Yours in Him,
JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

A Correction.

In the list of officers sent in from the Hattiesburg District there appears the name of B. S. Catq as Intermediate-Senior Wesley Bible Class Superintendent for the Hattiesburg District. His name appears B. S. Cats. We were sorry to make this mistake.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

I have received announcements of training schools in different sections of the church. The one to be held at Grenada will cost the teachers less than any. This is due to the business management of Rev. J. R. Countiss. I am sure no school will fare better than the North Mississippi Conference Training School.

One of the pastors said, "I cannot afford to miss the training I get at the school; for some of my people are going to attend, and I am not going to let them know more about my business than I do." He is right about that.

Mothers attended last year for the sake of their own children. Wise mothers! We need to have some fathers studying the nature and needs of their boys that they may know how to give the boys what they need in the way of companionship and guidance. The church is doing more to save, and to save for intelligent service, than ever in the past. It is cause for gratitude that so many are taking advantage of such training.

More than two hundred pastors attended the school for leaders at Dallas last year. We ought to have as many east of the Mississippi to attend Lake Junaluska in July. The Social Teachings of Jesus to be taught by Dr. Andrew Sledd; a program of Social Service for the Sunday School, by Dr. E. P. St. John; Sunday School Management, by Dr. Wade Barclay; A Methodist Church and its Work, by Prof. A. M. Trawick; Bible and Missions, by Dr. Ed. F. Cook, are some of the subjects pastors want.

North Mississippi has twenty reservations at about fourteen dollars a week. If you would like to secure one of these places write me at once and you will be cared for in the new Sunday school dormitories. If you do not secure a place before going you will have to pay considerably more than the amount mentioned.

When you come to Grenada, if no one is at the station to meet you, make yourself at home and take a car for the College. Some one will meet all trains that arrive in the day time. Come with a smile, come expecting a good time, come with a prayer on your heart that we may have a genuine revival of vital religion, come with the hope of making your life a channel of blessing for others and you will always be glad you did come.

The Federation of Wesley Bible Classes is the big event for Monday, June 20. You will miss a great blessing if you fail to attend, and we shall miss your help more than you think.

REVIVAL AT CHARLESTON.

Dear Advocate: On Monday, June 6, we closed a most satisfactory revival here in Charleston with twenty additions on profession of faith and more to follow.

Rev. W. A. Wilson, Conference Evangelist of North Mississippi Conference, did the preaching. Brother Wilson is a man of deep piety and strong faith in God. His preaching is plain, forceful and convincing. Brother Wilson condemns sin in all its forms and manifestations and makes clear the fact that Jesus, alone, can save one from sin. There is no compromise with sin, even the least of sin, in Brother Wilson's preaching. The fact is made plain that sin, unless repented of, will damn souls eternally in hell, and that God makes no distinction as to big and little sins.

God used Brother Wilson, by the power of the Holy Spirit, to stir Charleston as she has not been stirred for years. It is the belief of the Christians of our city that Brother Wilson's coming to Charleston was of the Holy Spirit.

As Brother Wilson goes on in his work he will have the good wishes and prayers of many here in Charleston who were greatly blessed by his ministry among us.

A LETTER FROM MISS ELIZABETH ILES.

Africa, Sunday Night, Mar. 6, 1921.

My Dear Friends: This has been a good day with us. There were 403 in Sunday school, 97 in the class for women. Mrs. Mumpower teaches this class, and I assist all that I can, which as yet is not very much, owing to my limited knowledge of the language. You will be glad to know, however, that the language is not as hard as I feared it would be. The natives tell me I am getting it quickly. But for all that, I have much to learn and many struggles to meet. Please pray hard for me, and think of me as trying to do my best for those needy people.

I feel that you want most of all to know about the natives with whom we are working, their customs and characteristics etc. In many ways they are like our own home "niggers."

Of course, they are not as cultivated, and that, in many ways, is to our and to their advantage. They are devoted to us, and would I truly believe, die for us. Just to serve a white person is their highest ambition. But of course, we and the missionaries who preceded us are showing them that they must first, last and always want most to tell their own people the story of salvation; and they love to do that. Right here let me add that too much credit cannot be given the missionaries that have gone before us. We readily recognize that even at this early date we are reaping their sowing. It is no task whatever to get any of the Christians to pray in public; and we were told that it was not always thus. Many of them offer beautiful and pathetic prayers.

I have one hundred and two mission boys in charge. They are boys that come in from other villages to stay and go to school and learn to teach and preach that they may return to tell their own people the story of redemption; or go out as evangelists as we send them. They range in age from ten to eighteen years. The appropriation at home provides for eighty boys. But we missionaries are giving part of our tithes to pay for the support of the others. There are four houses of two rooms each in which these 102 boys live. They cook outside. Their beds are made of boards and on each bed is a mat made of split reed. Three and four boys sleep on a bed. I have to inspect their quarters frequently to see that they are decently clean. Have seen many stables at home that looked better for comfort—as I see it. And yet, it is better than anything they have ever had before. Then too, we can't give them too much here and thus suddenly raise them above what they can not possibly get when they return to their own villages. We have an eating house or shed for them, with long tables and seats. We have just finished another house, which we call their club-house. The smaller room has tables and seats and will be used as a reading room for them at night; and the other for a play-room or gymnasium. We have a lantern for each room. We let them enter it one night last week for the first time, and I shall never forget the scene. I was sitting here writing and enjoying their hymns, when they ceased singing hymns, and broke into one of their own weird chants and clapping their hands. Of course, I had to go and see—with some of the other workers. We walked up without their seeing us; and there in the light of the two lanterns, in the smaller room were gathered those one hundred and two boys—all jumping up and down and flinging their hands and arms up and out, and keeping perfect time, and chanting at the top of their lungs. Miss Foreman turned to me and said, "O, what does it remind you of?" I quickly replied, "Of the pictures of the imps in Hades." And really, they made just such a picture in that dim light with their half-clad sbody bodies, and their weird chants and wild gestures. But when we could catch sight of their happy shiny faces, the resemblance vanished. They were just genuinely happy, far more so than most of white people ever look to be.

We didn't mean to take so many in this term, but it is so hard to turn them away when they come begging to enter, and they are naked and dirty, and look so pitiful. And we know only too well what they are going back to, if we do not take them in. So this term, I just took them in on faith, and am sure that with the tithe we can pull them through.

We give them two yards of cloth apiece which must last them six months. We give them a tablespoonful of salt every Saturday morning with which to buy the following week's rations. Then we also give them each a small piece of soap with which to wash their clothes every Saturday. Once every two weeks we buy a goat for them to eat. It costs about ten dollars a year to support a boy.

Results are very evident when we chance to pass through a village during vacation and find a mission boy there; he is always so much cleaner and there is just a difference in his looks and his manners. He is always a power for uplift in so far as we can find out, in his own village. Of course some, but only a few, go back and disappoint us. My! but I have written at length about these boys, but I love them and they are really the hope of the mission. Some of them go out to other villages and teach in the afternoons. We only have morning school for them, but most of them remain on the grounds and work.

I could write you just that much about the women and perhaps I shall another time. They go to their fields or gardens very early in the morning, and work there till noon, when they return to pound their millet into flour and cook it, along with greens, and worms, if they have been fortunate enough to find any. The native eats only twice a day, in the morning, sometimes nearly noon, and late in the afternoon. They eat out of a common wooden bowl with their hands.

Most of the men in this village work for the mission—sawing lumber, cleaning grounds, working in carpenter's shop, and building houses. But the non-Christian native man does but little in the way of real labor. His wife or wives get the food.

We have an afternoon school for the women. Of course, they have to bring their babies, and that makes for disorder, but we have to bear with it in order to give these poor women an opportunity. A few of them can read now, and they have been having school for seven years.

Now, I'd like to tell you about the girls' Home, where are gathered nineteen little girls for training. Miss Henderson has charge of this Home. It is wonderful how God raises up workers for certain places. Miss Henderson spent most of her childhood in an orphanage, so who could better train and mother these girls? Some of them have been redeemed by the missionaries, but some of them are already bought by men. But their fathers have consented for us to keep them, and we will not let these husbands have them until they are old enough to be wives; and in the meantime, we are trying to win them for Christ and a higher standard of living.

Miss Foreman of Stratford, Texas, is the nurse. She said with a sigh the other day as she came in from the hospital, "Now I understand why Livingstone always referred to Africa as the open sore of the world." There are so many awful cases of syphilis and a few of leprosy, and many many tropical sores and itch, to say nothing of other horrid diseases such as sleeping-sickness and elephantiasis and dysentery. Thus far, however, we have escaped dysentery. Miss Foreman and Dr. Mumpower are doing a wonderful work. I am so ashamed of myself that I can no longer stand the sight of blood. I just turn sick and faint at the least sight of it. That is one thing the tropics have done for me.

As regards the natives and the missionaries, as I said before; they are devoted to us. Wish you could have seen how carefully thirty men of a caravan, that took Miss Foreman and myself to another village recently, looked after us. Our fathers and brothers could not have watched over

BEFORE AND AFTER CHILDBIRTH

Mrs. Williams Tells How
Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Kept Her in Health

Overpeck, O.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound helped me both before and after my baby was born. I suffered with backache, headache, was generally run down and weak. I saw Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised in the newspapers and decided to try it. Now I feel fine, take care of my two boys and do my own work. I recommend your medicine to anyone who is ailing. You may publish my testimonial if you think it will help others."—Mrs. CARRIE WILLIAMS, Overpeck, Ohio.

For more than forty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been restoring women to health who suffered from irregularities, displacements, backaches, headaches, bearing-down pains, nervousness or "the blues." Today there is hardly a town or hamlet in the United States wherein some woman does not reside who has been made well by it. That is why Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is now recognized as the standard remedy for such ailments.

us more carefully. Of course, we do not yet realize all the dangers of Africa; so we wanted to sleep outside rather than in the chief's house that he had vacated for us; but nay, nay, they would not have it so; and then we wanted to leave the doors open, but that wouldn't work either, and two sentries were provided to sit just outside that hut by an open fire all night. It was hard to realize that some of the men of this caravan had eaten human flesh only a few days ago. But it's very hard to get away from these natives. One has to get accustomed to the fact that always or nearly so, the natives have their eyes upon one. I have yet to inquire as to the whereabouts of one of the other missionaries and not find out at once from some native. One gets used to it and there is a kind of a safe feeling in the thought after all. How they love to just stand around and watch us. They are so proud of us when we dress up. No matter what the white person does they do not marvel at it. To them he is a very superior creature and can do anything. So many funny things happen, and I hope I don't forget them before getting home. 'Twould take so long to write them, but they surely help in the day's work.

Do I miss my "ain countree" and all that goes with it? You know I do. Do I ever get lonely? Well, of course; wouldn't you? But there is a quiet and lasting satisfaction in knowing I can serve my Lord here to a needy people and to know that you are praying for me and thus helping and working more than you can yet realize.

It has grown late and I must go to other things. Many of you will go with me in the round of duties that as yet have not become irksome. I want you, too, to know the joy of service. God our Father, bless and keep you in His path.

Faithfully yours,
ELIZA ILES.

Renwar vs. Rheumatism.

It is certainly a pity that so many people suffer year after year the intense pains of rheumatism when it can be so easily expelled from the system by the simple treatment of taking Renwar Rheumatic Salts. Rheumatism is caused by uric acid in the blood; and in order to effect a complete cure, it is necessary to entirely eliminate this acid from the blood. Renwar is guaranteed to relieve or your money is refunded. It contains no injurious drugs. It is the one sure remedy, and it does not in the slightest degree injure the stomach or affect the heart. Mr. Joseph L. Boehmer says, "One 50c bottle has done me more good than all sanatorium treatment, and what it did for me, why should it not do the same for others? Should any one doubt the virtue of Renwar and the certainty of curing this malady, refer them to me." For sale by druggists, price 50c; or by mail on receipt of price from WARREN DRUG COMPANY, NASHVILLE, TENN.—Adv.

FROM LAUDERDALE, MISS.

Mr. Editor, We have such splendid people to work with this year, and we want to tell you of some of the things they have done for us. We never could tell you of all the little acts of kindness shown us since we came here last December. They're acts of kindness not like the old woman's morning dance,—soon over with, but they continue to come. As a token of their love and kindness this week the people of Lauderdale sent us enough groceries to last us some time. Only a Methodist preacher's folks know how to appreciate such acts of kindness. Before we had thanked them, the people of Lockhart sent us a car load of more nice groceries and a nice purse for their pastor.

We are praying every day that we may be able to minister unto them all in spiritual things as they have ministered unto us in material things.

All four of our churches are progressing nicely. We have a good Sunday school in each one. We are especially proud as of all others, of our Sunday school superintendent here at Lauderdale. He has not missed but one Sunday from Sunday school in over sixteen years, and every one loves Brother Naylor. We know there are not many Sunday schools that can say as much for their superintendent.

For several years the parsonage has been without a well. We told the people a few days ago we wanted a well put down. It is almost finished (thanks to them all), especially Mr. Honeycut, and we will have nice good water right at the back door. It will be so convenient for us.

We are planning for a revival meeting at each church. Pray for us that success may attend our efforts.

We will bring up a full report at the end of the year.

A LETTER FROM BROTHER SCARBOROUGH.

Dear Brother Carley: It has been a long time since my friends in Mississippi heard from me through the New Orleans Christian Advocate. Through this paper I have kept pretty well up with the affairs of the church back there, since we left our native State nearly nine years ago. We have wondered far from the scenes of early life, but to this day our love for the friends and brethren in the old home conference has not been diminished in the least, by the formation of new friendships and the associations of other good people. I often have a longing to see the brethren of the Mississippi Conference, and I cherish the hope of visiting them at some future session of the Conference. I have noticed, with sadness, from time to time, the passing away of some whom I knew and loved in those other years, but rejoice in the hope I have of meeting them in the better world some glad day.

I had the great pleasure of spending a few hours among former parishioners at Fernwood and South McComb two years ago. How I would appreciate the privilege of mingling for a while among old friends at Hawkins Memorial and Fifth Street churches in Meridian! It would be a real delight to renew friendships in Neshoba County, at Forest, Home-wood, and Pulaski. How glad I would be of an opportunity to visit the friends of other days at Fayette, Leakesville, and Court Street, Hattiesburg! Many of my former parishioners in these pastoral charges have crossed over the river since I saw them, but many yet remain who may read these lines in the Advocate. To all of them I wish to say that I am still happy in the work of the Lord, and expect to spend the balance of my life preaching the gospel of Christ, which is the supreme need of this sorrowing troubled world to-day.

When we started west in October, 1912, we kept going till we struck the Pacific Ocean and had to stop. For seven years I was a member of the Los Angeles Conference. The first three years were spent in a most delightful pastorate at Santa Ana, California, where I have many warm friends to-day. My next appointment was the Arizona District, which I served for four years, living during the time in the beautiful, growing city of Phoenix. At the end of my quadrannium as presiding elder, I felt that, an account of certain conditions in our work in the far West, it was best for me to move further back towards the South land. I transferred to the West Texas Conference in October 1919. This is one of our great conferences, and our Methodism is unhampered in this country. The latitude in which we are living is about one hundred miles south of New Orleans, and in my opinion this is the finest country that I have seen in Texas, and I have been pretty well over the state.

We are pleasantly situated here in Victoria, a splendid little city of seven thousand people. It is called "The City of Roses," and is the most beautiful town that I have yet seen in Texas. We have a splendid church building here and our membership is composed of a fine lot of people.

My earnest prayer to-day is that I may be a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, always rightly dividing the word of Truth. In these trying times I want to be a true prophet of God and ever a vigilant watchman upon the walls of Zion. To that end I ask an interest in the prayers of all my friends and brethren in the good old state of Mississippi, the state of my nativity.

Yours cordially,

D. SCARBOROUGH.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

A BRILLIANT ACHIEVEMENT.

In spite of the fact that the full amount of $33,000,000 has not yet been pledged to the Christian Education Movement, we consider the pledging of practically $20,000,000 to the present time one of the most brilliant achievements in the history of the church. The raising of millions of dollars is no easy task at any time; it is tenfold more difficult when undertaken in the midst of such conditions as confronted us when the active campaign for funds was launched in this great Movement. Business was worse than at a standstill, the whole industrial situation was badly disorganized, and the psychological attitude of the people was not favorable to the prosecution of an intensive campaign for the pledging of a large sum of money to be paid during a period extending over several years. But the logic of the situation was such as to compel the carrying out of the program as originally planned. The leaders of the Movement faced the issue squarely, manifesting a courage that was nothing short of heroic; the people responded to their call with a loyalty and devotion that can be explained only upon the ground of their appreciation of the greatness of the cause and the urgency of the need; and the whole church threw itself into the work of providing adequately for the needs of our educational institutions in a way that was inspiring to the last degree. The ultimate goal has not yet been reached, but there is every reason to believe that the work so nobly begun, so courageously carried forward, and so generously supported will not be laid down until vastly more than $33,000,000 has been secured to make sure the Christian training of our young people for generations to come. The record is glorious in that many of our churches have raised or more than raised the quota allotted them, many others are pressing toward the mark, and among all of them there is a new interest in Christian education that will show itself in substantial contributions for years to come. We would not deceive ourselves into believing that all has been done that must be done for this great cause; but we rejoice in the brilliant achievement that has already demonstrated our determination to make Christian education a possibility for all our sons and daughters through all succeeding generations.

THE FREEDOM OF THE PULPIT.

The recent action of the Pittsburgh Employers' Association in urging the business men of that community to withhold financial support from the Y. W. C. A. and the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America because of their industrial programs has produced considerable comment throughout the country as to the function of the church in its mission to society, and as to the right of the pulpit to speak on social and industrial problems. The Pittsburgh Ministerial Union adopted resolutions on the local situation, from which we take the following: "Resolved, That we, the Pittsburgh Ministerial Union, resent this attempt of a commercial organization to prescribe limits within which alone the church and other religious organizations may move; that we reaffirm the historic right and the duty of the church to proclaim the whole truth in Christ as revealed in the Scriptures and as applied under the Holy Spirit to every relationship in life; that we deny to any political, commercial, industrial, or any other group or agency the right to set any restrictions on the freedom of the Christian church or its agencies to apply the spirit and standards of the Kingdom of God to the whole life; that we declare it our solemn duty and purpose to defend the liberty of the Gospel." In our opinion, the declarations contained in the resolutions are clear-cut and in keeping with the responsibility that rests upon the Christian ministry to-day. We do not interpret the resolutions to mean that the pulpit is called upon to take sides on partisan issues; but if ministers are not to have the right to apply the principles of the teachings of Jesus to all possible conditions of life, they might as well surrender their credentials and abdicate the high position to which God has called them. The church is foredoomed when it undertakes to become the mouthpiece of a class or faction, or when it becomes subservient to the will of any other than God. Especially is it incumbent upon the church to-day to preach with all boldness, though in the spirit of love, the gospel of Christ.

WHY THE DELAY?

On Friday of last week, two young men were hanged in New Orleans for one of the most diabolical crimes in the history of the State, committed more than a year ago. They were arrested immediately after the crime was committed, the evidence against them was overwhelmingly conclusive, and they themselves confessed its commission. The trial was duly held, a verdict carrying the death penalty was returned by the jury—and yet the execution of the sentence was delayed many months. We would not favor any modification of the law which would take away from even the most hardened criminal any of the rights to which he is entitled, but we are strongly in favor of some plan by which evident justice cannot be cheated by an appeal to technicalities, pure and simple. We do not hold the lawyers at fault—they must use the legal means at their command in behalf of their clients—but we do find fault with the system which makes it impossible to say whether a criminal will finally be brought to justice or not. The assurance of speedy justice through the courts would go a long way toward discouraging mob violence.

"HOLD FAST THAT WHICH IS GOOD."

That an idea is new is no proof that it is worth while; neither is it a reason for refusing to entertain it. The world progresses by ideas, and the customs growing out of new ideas soon become a part of our everyday life. The following enumeration of new things that have become old may help some of us to keep our minds open for additional light: "Bathing in a bathtub, as late as 1842, was condemned as a corrupting luxury, and denounced by the medical fraternity, as brakes were installed on trains only after the inventor had been called a fanatic when he first suggested the plan to a railroad president, William Harvey, who discovered the circulation of the blood, enjoyed a lucrative practice before he announced his discovery, but thereafter he was called 'crack-brained,' and his practice fell off; the Royal Society of England did not consider Benjamin Franklin's account of his experiments in electricity of sufficient importance to be printed in the Society's transactions; Luigi Galvani, who experimented on frogs and discovered galvanic electricity, was thought to be crazy; Ignace-Louis, inventor of the daguer-type, was put in an asylum for saying he could transfer the likeness of human beings to a tin plate; the British Royal College of Physicians declared that railroads would ruin the health of the people because the rapid motion would give the travelers brain disease; Professor Lovering, of Harvard, demonstrated mathematically the impossibility of sending a telegram 200 miles under the ocean and several parties also 'proved' that the long range gun was an impossibility at the very time Paris was being bombarded; Napoleon refused to consider Fulton's steamboat, and later, when the first steamboat did cross the ocean as a result of Fulton's invention, it carried an essay 'proving' the impossibility of the undertaking; printers broke the windows of the first plants that installed Linotype machines; the introduction of the spinning jenny, the power loom, and other textile machinery in England caused nation-wide riots; farmers built barricades to obstruct automobiles; iron ships were decried a quarter of a century after they came into use."

THE HEART OF COLLEGE BOYS.

By Rev. Thos. H. Lipscomb.

(There is nothing which the church at large is more concerned, especially at this time, to know than the attitude of the modern college student toward the Christian revelation when presented in its moral and spiritual as well as intellectual appeal, with unqualified emphasis upon it as authoritative and divine. The following symposium is, we believe, an answer from college men themselves; showing, too, that, despite the modern tendency to make Bible study a purely intellectual exercise, the type of teaching which appeals to them is that which emphasizes also its great message to the sensibilities and will, and the momentous issues involved.)

We had been studying the life of Christ together. We had been seeking vividly to portray that wondrous personality upon which the light of heaven shone, from the first intimations of his appearing, on through birth, life, death, and resurrection until he entered again into the glory which he had with the Father before the world was.

Step by step we had followed him, listened to his words beheld his deeds, noted carefully the spirit which was in him under every variety of circumstance—amid applause, opposition, neglect, love, hatred, persecution, peril—and we had seen in him an unsullied purity, a love which even ingratitude could not quench, an unerring discernment of absolute truth, and unflinching loyalty to that truth in the face of blindness and error long dominant and deeply entrenched.

We had seen in him a sublime courage unparalleled on any battlefield in which he walked deliberately, not to a death of glory, but to mockery and a cross of shame. We had seen him bring all this upon himself by uncompromising fidelity to duty and devotion to the will of God, with whom he knew and asserted himself to be One. We had seen him tranquil amid all storms and with power to still all tempests, yet those which gathered around his own devoted head he would not stay. We had seen him calmly go down in seeming defeat before the fury of the blast; with all for which he had stood prostrate about him, with truth now surely forever on the scaffold, with wrong securely enthroned—even his tomb sealed and guarded by imperial power.

But we had seen also things even more wonderful. We had discovered in him resurrection power, triumphant over death itself. We had stood by an empty tomb and had heard angelic voices ask: "Why seek ye the living among the dead?" "He is not here; for he is risen, as he said. Come see the place where the Lord lay." We had looked, and then with wonder and awe had met him in the way; had heard his voice again; had seen his hands and his feet; had even gathered with the eleven upon the mount and seen him ascend again to his Father and our Father, to his God and our God.

And now the year's course was ended and the final examination must be held. The questions testing the students' knowledge of the record given had all been asked. But concerning the effect of it all there was no inquiry, and I could not refrain from adding yet one more—a personal question which I made optional, leaving entirely with the student the answer. This final question was: "What will you do with Jesus which is called Christ—crown him or crucify him?"

They were typical twentieth century American college boys. Two hundred and twenty-two of them, mostly freshmen in government khaki. They were boisterous, full of manly vigor and fun; rather disposed, many of them, to treat lightly and make a "crip" of a Bible course if possible; ready to laugh uproariously at all ignorance of Scripture displayed by the other fellow; yet kindly and respectful at heart. We had had our ups and downs with them: discouraged sometimes by seeming irreverence and indifference, cheered again by earnest, thoughtful looks and serious attention. What would they do with that question? Ignore it, revealing that the course had been to them merely a required*unwelcome intellectual exercise, meaning nothing to them spiritually? Or would there be evidence of noble hearts within, and that as Christ had been lifted up they had been drawn unto him?

Personally I was greatly rejoiced to find abounding evidence, as I believed all along, that the heart of youth (when uncorrupted by sophistry and intellectual pride) beats ever true, and is responsive to appeals to the nobler self within. And feeling assured that others also are deeply interested, I give herewith a summary of the answers received, quoting in full as many as the limits of this article will allow. In doing this I shall, of course, betray no confidence, as no names are given and only the spirit of the young men is made apparent. It may be well to add that not to theological students, but to students in the school of liberal arts the course was given and the question asked.

Well, what voluntary answer did two hundred and twenty-two modern college boys make to the question: "What will you do with Jesus which is called Christ—crown him or crucify him?" Of the total, sixty-five made no answer. Eighty-nine answered briefly, "Crown him," with variations as follows:

"Crown him King of Kings and Lord of Lords."

"Crown him Lord of ALL."

"I pray every night that I may crown him."

"I will crown him in all his glory and call him King of Kings."

"I will crown Jesus Lord God of Hosts."

Sixty-eight elaborated more or less on this, evidencing in their answers many varieties of Christian consciousness. The note of humility, so rare these days, was found in quite a number:

"I believe and hope that I have crowned him King of my life."

"Weak and unworthy I know I am, yet it is my fervent desire to crown him. My experience is that unless he is crowned in my life, my life will be useless. To serve him, to work for him, and to follow him manfully is my earnest prayer and plea."

"I have tried to crown him, and yet realize that I have not suffered in his service."

"I have been a very-timid student in class, but have got more out of this year's Bible than any other course. I feel that by studying of Christ I want to be closer to him and lead a more Christian life."

"Personally I have endeavored to subject my life and place it in the hands of Jesus that I might in my own feeble way help to glorify him and crown him. Feeling unworthy of my 'sonship' in Jesus I beg that I may grow stronger in courage, deeper in faith and mightier in spirit."

One will be a Christian layman: "Throughout my life I am resolved to try in my feeble and humble way to crown my Lord as King. I do not expect to enter actively into Christian work, but I expect to be 'the man behind the gun.' I am going to try to live a steady and devoted Christian life, but I realize the temptations, and my prayer is that God may help me to withstand them, and that finally I may hear, 'Well done, thou good and faithful servant, enter thou into thy joy!'"

Another commits himself to foreign mission work: "It is my purpose to crown Christ in my life—to make him my Master in spreading his gospel in the far lands of earth."

Another expresses the purpose to go as a medical missionary: "I was converted when I was seven years old and have been trying to serve my God ever since. I have accepted Christ as my Savior and Master and crown him King of Kings. Some day I hope to go to China as a missionary. I have never felt called to the ministry, but I can be a Christian doctor, and help in that way to bear my part in his great work."

The note of personal assurance and gratitude for Christ's redemptive work is heard in others: "I have already crowned him and made myself his own."

"About a month ago, although I had been a member of the church since a child, being reared in a Christian home, I was genuinely converted, and promised God that if he would forgive my sins I would crown him as Lord and Master of my life. And I know that my sins were forgiven, and since that time there has been a peace and happiness in my life which I had never felt before."

"All of us will crown Christ instead of crucifying him if only we think of what he has done for us."

"What will I do with him who has done everything for me? I will live for him as best I can, and try to show men with whom I come in contact that I am walking with him."

"He died for me, and thus saved me from everlasting death. For this cause I want him to be my Master."

"I can humbly and hopefully say that it is the greatest ambition of my life to crown Jesus which is called Christ as my personal Savior."

The sense of obligation, yet failure; and in a few cases unwillingness to yield appears in some. The following is tragic and pathetic. We may well pray for this young man:

"Shall we in the boxes turn our thumbs down on a Christ who is trying to save us, as the Roman populace was wont to turn down its thumbs and condemn the gladiator in the arena? NO, we should not; but I fear that I cannot say personally I am not. I am putting off my answer, and I know deep down in my heart that I am crucifying him who died to save me. And not until I wake up with a jolt and take a definite stand will I be able to sing without hypocrisy—'Crown him Lord of all.'"

Another: "I have always believed that to reject Christ was in a sense a crucifixion of him, and although I know I am not what a man who professes Christianity should be, I do believe in Christ and intend to follow him and serve him, despite the many temptations of life, to many of which I too frequently yield."

"There is no need to go into detail about this question. I have tried to crown him, but have fallen down sometimes. I can sincerely and truly say that crowning him will be my dominant purpose in life."

There is a touch of humor in this: "I am trying to crown him, although my exam. doesn't look like it. I just can't think of one or two questions very much."

There is tragic peril in this attitude: "I believe the Bible and in Christ, but because of youth and many things, I can't make him supreme yet, but I hope to some day. Those that are not against us are for us."

"My ambition in life is to crown Jesus. I have crucified him and am not what I should be now."

"With God's help I will crown Christ instead of crucifying him."

One young man, in more literary vein, quotes the Atlantic Monthly as expressive of his faith, as follows:

"Does he save you from your sins? Call him Savior!"

"Does he free you from the slavery of your passions? Call him Redeemer!"

"Does he teach you as no one else has taught you? Call him Teacher!"

"Does he mold and master your life? Call him Master!"

"Does he shine upon the pathway that is dark to you? Call him Guide!"

"Does he reveal God to you? Call him the son of God!"

"Does he reveal man to you? Call him the son of Man!"

"Or, in following Him are your lips silent in your incapacity to define his influence upon you? Call him by no name, but follow him." A parenthesis is added—"This is his message, not church dogma and creeds about second comings and raisings of the dead."

If the parenthesis suggests a skeptical attitude on the part of one, the following affirm the general faith and purpose sure and steadfast: "I will endeavor to crown Christ. I believe that he gave his life to save the world from its sins; that he was crucified, buried, rose again from the dead after three days, ascended, and sitteth at the right hand of God the Father Almighty, whence he shall come to judge the quick and the dead."

"What will I do with Christ? This question, which faces every person at some time in life, cannot go unanswered. I am thankful that I have been able to say I will strive to crown him as King of my life, that I will seek to subject all personal desires to his service; and try to devote this short life in work which will be the greatest blessing to humanity, and worthy service to the Master."

There is earnest purpose in this also: "I shall crown him King of Kings and Lord of Lords; and give what I have of intellect, energy, and talent to making His kingdom supreme in the world in which I live."

Several utter words which it would rejoice the hearts of their parents to hear, this father for instance:

"I shall try to pattern my life after his in every way. If not after him, after my father, and shall crown him king of my life."

"As I have been reared in a Methodist parsonage, taught the truths and reality of a living God, and in my later years have been able to think and come to conclusions of my own, there is but one sensible thing to do, to say the least concerning the matter, and that it—Crown Christ."

Many other clippings lie about me, equally expressive of earnest purpose, gratitude, felt need, and consecration of life to Christ's service; but already we fear we are trespassing on editorial judgment. For these we pray, "Woodman, spare!"

Such is the revelation of the heart of college boys as it came to me at the close of a year of contact with them. It successfully refutes the prevalent theory that college men care nothing for religion, and that Bible instruction must be given in barely intellectual form, else it will not be tolerated. It is my experience both as a student and teacher that Bible study is relished only as its appeal to mind and heart and will alike are all emphasized, and that in transparent sincerity and fidelity to the Word of God as revealed.

I may add that I found scarcely a higher critic among them. Higher critics are made not born; and the artificial stimulant to an already cold heart which produces them is intellectual pride; which sees distinction in advocating the new, often with but superficial inquiry into the profounder questions—the true. "For every one that is of the truth heareth my voice," says Jesus; and "If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine."

REPORT OF THE MEETING OF THE COLLEGE OF BISHOPS.

Through three days in April the College of Bishops was in session in Louisville, Ky., and, in addition, a meeting was held in Nashville. Except Bishops Morrison and Kilgo, who were detained at home by sickness, and Bishop Waterhouse, who was present only at Nashville, all of the bishops attended these meetings.

Delegates and reserves to the Ecumenical Conference were elected, and the list has already been published.

Two addresses to the church were issued, one referring to the Christian Education Movement and the other to the Sunday school work.

Bishop McMurry was elected chairman of the Committee of Appeals.

In view of the fact that a tablet of Bishop Asbury is to be unveiled in Richmond, Va., October 27, 1921 (the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of his landing in America), the College of Bishops agreed to hold the fall meeting in Richmond, beginning on the evening of October 26. Bishop Asbury preached his last sermon in Richmond, and the tablet will be placed on the wall of the building occupying the site of the church in which this sermon was preached.

Bishop McMurry and the bishop in charge of the Louisville Conference were asked to look into the practicability of placing a tablet in Louisville, Ky., on the site of the church in which the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was organized under the Plan of Separation adopted by the General Conference of 1844. If practicable this tablet will be unveiled in 1922 during the time the Board of Church Extension is in session.

J. B. Fishburn, of Roanoke, Va., was elected a member of the Executive Committee of the Ecumenical Conference in place of T. T. Fishburne, deceased, and Bishop Darlington was elected as an alternate to Bishop Denny on the same committee when Bishop Denny cannot act.

The forms of official papers were carefully considered, and such changes in these papers as were found advisable were made. The new forms will be published in the next edition of the Manual of the Discipline. The ordination certificates of our native preachers in foreign fields are to be translated into the language of those preachers, the translation to be made under the supervision of the bishop in charge. The name of the church in these certificates is to be given in the English language.

The bishops who may attend the Ecumenical Conference were authorized to act for the College in filling vacancies and in other matters in which it may be necessary to take action.

In view of the fact that by an oversight the last General Conference failed to provide for our portion of the expenses of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, Bishops Hendrix, Lambuth, Moore, and Cannon were appointed a committee to appeal to the church for contributions, the time and manner of the appeal to be determined by the bishops named.

In paragraph 780, page 313, Discipline of 1918, the words "Manual of Discipline, Fourteenth Edition," are to be changed to "Manual of the Discipline, Last Edition."

The last General Conference directed that a vote should be taken by each Annual Conference to determine whether the Twenty-Third Article of Religion should be changed in the Discipline used in Conferences outside the United States. A number of Annual Conferences have not yet voted on that proposed change, and the vote is to be taken in those Conferences on the next round of the Annual Conferences.

In connection with the course of study for those who apply for a license to preach the College concluded that Paragraph 191, Discipline of 1918, is sufficiently explicit to meet the requirement of the General Conference touching such a course.

For postgraduate reading during the year just beginning Garvie's "The Christian Preacher" and Sheldon's "Sacerdotalism in the Nineteenth Century" were selected.

In connection with the plan of episcopal supervision it was unanimously agreed that the "associated" bishops are to bear equal responsibility in every respect and to have equal authority in all the work of the Conferences, including the making of appointments.

The following resolution was adopted:

"The European war ended earlier than was expected, and the conditions following compelled the modification of our work in Europe and constrained it into some lines which the General Conference did not have in mind when it projected the work. Unsettled conditions have prevailed until the present, so that it has not been possible to fix a definite policy for our European work. But the time has come for settling definitely this important matter, and the General Conference will have a right to expect the most thoughtful counsel when it comes to pass upon this important subject.

In view of all these considerations, Bishops Atkins, Darlington, McMurry, and Minworth were associated in the European work. This will entail little additional expense, inasmuch as the bishops named will attend the Ecumenical Conference in London, and either before or after the conference they may visit the points on the Continent at which our church has work, inspect what has been done, and determine what should be done in the future in the light of all the facts. The expenses of the associated bishops from London to the Continent and back will be paid out of the episcopal funds."

THE CHURCH PAPER ON THE JOB.

By Elmer T. Clark.

Publicity Secretary, Christian Education Commission, Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

I have been engaged in some sort of propaganda all my life, and always for some religious or social enterprise.

I have been connected with the very smallest and "dinkiest" weekly newspaper imaginable, and I have worked for one of the world's greatest dailies.

From the "tank town" in the remote Ozark hills to the rightest cities of America and Europe I have wandered in search of the material of publicity. I've advertised my little local churches, and I've "played up" the doings of the vastest armies that ever marched on mundane soil.

I've "publicized" to raise $19 to repair a fence, and I've agitated to secure a hundred million for welfare work.

So I modestly assume that I know something about the matter of publicity for social agencies, and I am in duty bound to say that the finest example of loyalty, the highest degree of fidelity, the most unfaltering faithfulness, the most thorough abandon to a task, that I have ever witnessed was displayed by the various Advocates of the M. E. Church, South, in their appeal for the Christian Education Movement, just closing its first phase.

I handled both of the great forward movements of our church, and I know whereof I speak.

Always these papers kept their columns wide open to our organization. And they did more than that; they crammed their pages with excellent material of their own, and they admitted every person who had an additional word to say.

It was magnificent this spirit of unalloyed fidelity to the greatest thing the church ever asked her people to do. And I'd like to have some stars—and some gold—so that I could bestow the crowns of the editors with the one and place their papers beyond the handicap of need with the other. This is their due. Out of sheer admiration and gratitude I'd like to do it.

The shame of it is that Methodists do not appreciate such a service as this. Think of it! Only ten per cent of our members ever read their own journals: nine out of ten never see an Advocate, unless they borrow it from a neighbor.

So when the church wants to launch a forward enterprise she must spend thousands upon thousands for literature with which to reach these people—and it could all be saved if the rank and file of Methodists displayed one tithe of the loyalty which characterizes these organs.

These delinquents do not know what they are missing—what values they are leaving out of their lives. Neither do they understand that they are really blinding the Kingdom's progress.

I'm a specialist in propaganda. And I'd welcome a chance to expend some of my energy on the cause of Christian education through the medium of the religious press. I'd like to have the job of awakening and electrifying the religious world with this idea. Perhaps I could in that way adequately express the gratitude I feel toward our church papers and in some measure discharge the church's debt of obligation to them.

HAS IT BEEN WORTH WHILE.

By John S. Chadwick,
Secretary Religious Press Division.

As we "take stock" following the every-member canvass of the Christian Education Movement, we find that the church failed to reach the goal fixed in the financial objective of the Movement. This does not necessarily mean that the goal will not be reached, for opportunity will be given to churches and to individual Methodists to have part later in the enterprise. In some of the Conferences the canvass will be continued without a break. Others will delay until fall the carrying through of the enterprise. But for the present the total will perhaps be below $20,000,000.

To come within easy reach of $20,000,000 is no small achievement, when we compare this with former achievements of our church. This sum to-day means more, on the basis of financial ability, than $200,000,000 would have meant one year ago. It is true that the church would not have given that larger sum twelve months ago, but it could have been given with less of real sacrifice than the giving of the one-tenth in 1921 demanded. In that is a suggestion that our people will do well to consider—if we could lose $200,000,000 and far more within a year and still live and meet our ordinary obligations to the church, on what kind of basis was our giving during the days of prosperity? Have we any right to complain because of our losses? Have we any right to ask for the return of prosperous times?

And it is no small achievement to add within the period of a few weeks more than sixty per cent to the resources of the schools of our church. This we have done; and to the Head of the church we give thanks. It is a beginning in the great task of building an educational program worthy of our inheritance as a church. If we can do this in times such as these, what may not Southern Methodism do if God sees that he can again trust us with prosperity?

Other objectives of the Christian Education Movement were realized in larger measure than we hoped for at the beginning of the cultural period of the Movement. By many thousands the family altar pledges were made. Life service, decisions numbered more than five-thousand. The number of titheers was increased by a large percentage. Our church will not go back to the old standards of living and giving with pledges such as these on record.

And then we will "think" Christian education as we have not before done. The startling fact was faced that as a church we had not given emphasis to this vital thing. Many preachers and laymen came to see that the church had practically no conscience as touching Christian education, and this awakening on the part of ministry and laity was the best sign of promise that has come to Southern Methodism within a generation. Our people see as they did not one year ago, "What is the place of Christian education in the life of the church, of the nation, and of the world." It will be fatal to Southern Methodism if we fail to press this matter on through the days to come.

Our schools will have henceforth a larger place in the thoughts, affections, and prayers of our people. We see now, in some measure at least, what contributions they have made to all the enterprises of the Kingdom, and also, what heavy burdens the men and women who have given themselves to the work of Christian education have carried for us. This new understanding of their value to the church and the nation will mean more to our schools than the money we now pledge. The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will strengthen its schools for the larger tasks awaiting them. To fail to do this is to show itself unequal to its future tasks and unworthy to ask for a larger place in the program of world service.

The faith of our people could not at this time see beyond the "hard times." All realized that our church had undertaken a job that called for more of faith, of prayer, of sacrificial giving than in any previous enterprise. We knew that the church had undertaken this at a time when we must look to other sources of help than human agencies. It was our best chance until now. Whatever others may say, I must here declare that I believed my church would carry through this enterprise. I have not surrendered that faith, for I believe that my church has yet a large place in the plans of our Lord for the bringing in of his Kingdom. We must see this through. We gave our pledge that during the last two years of the present quadrennium this program would be carried through; and that pledge was given when we did not expect that financial conditions would be even so favorable as now. We cannot recall that pledge. We must take up the work with the coming of better financial conditions throughout the country. Our schools need the money that we pledged to them. And the church, more than the schools, needs to carry through this undertaking. Our faith is pledged to it, and we cannot consider any other outcome than that the church complete this task.

THE ABERDEEN DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The fifty-second session of the Aberdeen District Conference was held at Houston, Miss., June 14-16. Thirty laymen, twenty-four of the twenty-six pastors, and one superannuate, Rev. J. M. Massey, answered to roll call.

After proper organization, Rev. T. H. Dorsey, P. E., called for reports from the charges, in which a very optimistic note was sounded. Most of the pastors are hard at work, pushing more efficient organizations in Sunday schools, prayer meetings and other lines of church work. Many good revivals have been held and a number of converts reported. Anticipations for a great revival season throughout the summer are very bright. Two of our rural pastors, Revs. W. B. Baker and B. F. Bullard, will attend the Summer School for Pastors at Lake Junaluska. The determination to stress the Education Movement till we have attained our quota if it takes all summer was very manifest.

The conference recommended three for admission into the Annual Conference, namely, Revs. George Edwin Williams, Tinsley Brock Thrower, and Ernest C. Driskell.

R. H. Furr, Pontotoc, Miss., was chosen District Lay Leader.

Eupora was selected as place for meeting next year.

The following lay delegates to the Annual Conference were elected: W. A. Boone, R. H. Furr, W. L. Atkins, P. W. Shell, C. B. Baker, Mrs. Jeff Buzby, W. T. Reeves, and C. A. Lamb.

The interim licensing committee appointed consists of J. A. Hall, W. B. Baker, R. I. Collins and E. R. Smoot.

Connectional interests were well represented by the presence and addresses of J. H. Holder for Education, B. P. Jaco for Centenary and Dr. J. M. Sullivan for Millsaps College.

The Conference passed strong resolutions in favor of law enforcement and the breaking up of illicit distilleries over the State, a copy of which resolutions is herein enclosed for publication in the Advocate.

The preachers selected to preach before the conference were H. P. Lewis, A. A. Martin, E. R. Smoot, and J. E. Cunningham.

The hospitality of the Houston pastor, E. M. Shaw, and his people was delightful and refreshing. They made the stay of the delegates in their midst a real pleasure.

Taking it all around, your reporter considers this one of the best, most helpful sessions of a district conference he has ever attended.

H. P. LEWIS, Secretary.

Resolutions on Law and Order.

Whereas, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has always favored temperance, and, acting in concert with other Christian churches, was largely instrumental in procuring National Prohibition after long and arduous labor, and

Whereas, since the Constitution of the United States has been amended, making National prohibition of the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors effective, North Mississippi has been honeycombed with illicit distillers, thus menacing our Christian civilization with lawlessness, drunkenness, and bloodshed, and

Whereas, lately the courts and officers of the law in some sections by their vigilance have succeeded in bringing to justice a number of these distillers, and in Chickasaw County alone nine men were sentenced to the penitentiary in the month of April this year, some convicted by jurors of the best men in the county and some in the pleas of guilty, and

Whereas, in less than two months from the date of their convictions petitions for the pardon of some of them are being circulated and many people are signing same, some through sympathy, and some without thinking of the moral effect of such pardons;

Now, therefore, be it resolved by the Methodist District Conference now assembled at Houston, Miss., That in the name of our Christian citizenship, in the name of our mothers, wives, sisters, and daughters, we most solemnly and earnestly protest against these men or any others connected with these serious offenses against decency and good order being pardoned and turned loose on our long-suffering people. In the name of our Lord and Master, the churches and our civilization, we beg of the State Board of Pardons and our Governor to refuse to pardon these criminals.

Resolved, further, That we call upon other churches and all religious organizations to join us in our appeal to the authorities to let the law take its course.

Resolved, further, That the newspapers be requested to publish these resolutions and that copies hereof be sent the State Pardoning Board and his excellency, Lee Russell, Governor of Mississippi.

H. P. LEWIS, Secretary.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON RELIGIOUS LITERATURE AT THE HATTIESBURG DISTRICT CONFERENCE, HELD AT COLLINS, MISS., MAY 25-26.

Your committee on Religious Literature beg leave to report as follows:

We have listened attentively to the reports of the pastors and have been led to certain conclusions.

1. There is very little religious literature in circulation among our people.

No Bibles and no other religious books have been distributed in this district by the preachers, or by any one else under their direction. Some of the preachers, but not all, take the Methodist Quarterly Review and the "Nashville" Christian Advocate, the general organ of the church. The Missionary Voice seems to be regarded as a woman's periodical, and not intended, as it claims to be, for the membership of the whole church. Its circulation is very limited and is confined almost exclusively to members of the Woman's Missionary Society.

The number of our own Conference organ, the New Orleans Christian Advocate, taken by our people is lamentably small. Only 453 were reported by the pastors and the time of many of these had evidently expired. It is safe to say that not more than 350 copies of the New Orleans Christian Advocate are taken in the Hattiesburg District. We have a membership in the district of 8,941. Counting one Advocate to every five members as sufficient to supply their needs, we should have at least 1,788 subscribers in the district.

2. Our preachers themselves do not seem to be as thoroughly alive to the importance of distributing religious literature as they should be.

What the pastor encourages usually prospers, and what he neglects dwindles and dies. We would not bring against our brethren "a railing judgment," but, considering the small amount of religious literature in circulation in the district, we must conclude that our preachers and other leaders among us do not have a "realizing sense" of the value of this line of service. What was true in the days of the prophet Hosea when God said, "My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge," may become true in the fields committed to our care. By some people doctrinal papers and books are distributed among our people that are pernicious in their influence. Errors are persis-

The Home Circle

AROUND SOUTH AFRICA

By William C. Allen.

There are two outstanding means of determining the temperaments and habits of foreign peoples when visiting them. One is by going to their markets—there you see the people as they are without subterfuge, paint or polish. The other is discovered in the methods of transportation or the sort of railway systems they have. To me the most fascinating part of Cape Town was the fish market. As you stand on the beautiful pier at the foot of Adderley street and look toward land you see in the blue waters beneath you little boats dancing in the vivid sunlight, curious old-fashioned carts submerged to their hubs and pulled by fat little horses out in the quiet sea, beyond them the white, tangled thread of tiny wavelets breaking into bits on the shelving beach. The sands are thronged with men and women bartering fish, among the many fishing boats that are sprawled round them in all directions. Behind is the broad street with shops and houses penetrating into the city toward the background. The background itself consists of the superb Table Mountain and the noble Lion's Head, great masses of rock-tinted, greenish-blue towering against a sky of faultless sapphire. Oh! the fish market of Cape Town is a captivating scene of a golden summer's day.

As to the South African railways: the visitor from America must remember that the country is new and that the war has dealt hardly with them. The trains, excepting a few local ones, seem very, very dirty. The narrow gauge and relatively wide carriages combine to make so great an overhang that the lightly-constructed vehicles rock and sway like little ships in a nasty sea. But the officials are invariably polite and do the best they can with the means at their disposal. The handsome country platforms at wayside stations put to shame the narrow, little wooden stands that profess to serve the small country stopping-places in the sparsely settled parts of America. However uncomfortable may be the South African waiting rooms, the platforms are generous and broad, made of gravel or concrete, with pretty gardens and well-kept shrubbery planted all about, this being on railways where there is hardly any traffic and when only two or three trains halt each day. The sights in these desert country districts are often funny. The jolly natives swathed in gaily colored blankets curl up and talk and laugh and seem to enjoy themselves infinitely more than do the grim-visaged Europeans who do not permit the negroes to ride in the same carriages with them. As for those blankets—how the natives hate them when the days are warm! How quickly they come off when their wearers get a little distance from the stations and then how comfortable look the smooth, shiny chocolate-colored skins in the quivering heat of summer. Civilization can, in some ways at least, become a cruel tyrant to the simple folk of hill and jungle.

When in Cape Town I visited the leper colony, which is on Robben Island, out in the Atlantic, about one hour by steamer from the city wharf. In foreign work I cannot forget these outcasts—my heart goes out in strange pity for them. Few, if any one from the outside visits them—the nature of the disease tends to keep visitors away. In such villages are the sorrowful folk who have been torn from the arms of those who love them and who are necessarily consigned to a fate worse than immediate death. Disfigurement, blindness, distortion, rotting away of their members slowly, come upon them, and unless they are treated at the very beginning there is no hope. Robben Island is, I believe, an exceptionally well-conducted institution. Brother Ackerman, the Dutch chaplain, acted as interpreter for the Dutch patients at the service held in connection with the visit. How thirsty are the afflicted the world over to drink of the consolations of the Gospel—they are very good!

After the meeting a man came up and shook hands with me, announcing that although he had no visible signs of leprosy, he had been diagnosed as being afflicted with it, and that he was unjustly detained on the island. He claimed American citizenship, and besought me to intervene on his behalf. Upon further investigation, I found that the United States consul had his case in charge. Although his lot was hard, there was nothing I could do. The sincerity of his belief as to immunity from the disease seemed beyond dispute. Not infrequently I have met countrymen in distant parts of the world who, often through no direct fault of their own, during their wanderings have fallen into temptations or trials from which they would have been exempted had they remained at home. When young people go abroad they should have, not wander-lust, but a definite object in view, and this re-enforced with Christian principle. They little appreciate the physical or other dangers that lurk on every hand when they tread foreign soil.

One day near Durban, as a friend was conducting me through the matted grass to view a Hindoo Temple, he exclaimed, "Look out for snakes!" Snakes abound everywhere and occasion many deaths. Some are so exceedingly poisonous as to cause collapse in a few minutes. Wild animals are often hunted not many miles from the larger cities. Of late elephants have been the special objective of sportsmen. The elephants of Africa are not tamable as are those of Asia. Herds of them dwell in the bush not far from some of the newer settlements and engage in wild night forays to the great loss and peace of mind of the white people. Hunting them is a dangerous sport. While the hunter must handle his gun at a great disadvantage in the thick underbrush, the enraged animal will easily rush through it at his human foe.

As one travels through the Union of South Africa one is impressed with the hard problems the new settlers are compelled to solve. Around Johannesburg, the gold ore is transported in big Dutch wagons pulled by spans of oxen, often made up of 12 to 16 each. As these ponderous affairs slowly move across the country, it looks as if smaller teams could do the work quite as well. It is to the stranger a novel sight to see these oxen lie down by the dusty roadside to rest a while. How different from the active motor trucks that whisk about the minling centers of America! Comparatively few people live in simple homes that are equipped with labor-saving gas or electric appliances. Although the delightful climate would seem to make possible the growth of an infinite variety of fruits and vegetables, the English-speaking portion of the population generally clings pretty closely to the use of such foods as potatoes, cabbage or turnips to which they had been accustomed in good old England. Securing money for tremendously-needed irrigating schemes is apparently a hard task. During our voyage between Cape Town and Southampton an address one evening by a professor of South Africa revealed a striking illustration of the indignation of conservative people when a scientist endeavors to arouse them to action for their own good. Some of his hearers did not like his statement that the decreasing rainfall and continued widening of the desert area of the southern end of the continent would surely result in depopulation of their land unless extensive systems of irrigation shall be soon inaugurated. This recalls an address of an eminent citizen of the colony wherein he compared their methods of farming and ways of marketing products in South Africa with the practices that obtain in California. My memory went back to the plaint of some citizens of Australia who declared that the money spent by the Empire one day during the Great War would have been sufficient, if applied to irrigation schemes, to have created happy homes for hundreds of thousands of people in that land.

The Union—made up of Cape Colony, Orange

Free State, Natal and The Transvaal—is happy in the possession of two capitols 1000 miles distant from each other. This is said to be a result of the jealousies succeeding the Boer War which time has failed to heal. In the South are the Houses of Parliament, surrounded by pretty gardens, in the center of Cape Town. This constitutes the legislative capitol. In the North are the "Union Buildings," consisting of a splendid modern edifice lifted high on a charming hill-side overlooking the little city of Pretoria with her 30,000 people. The Afrianders have reason to be proud of this noble structure. In Pretoria the old and new meet. There still stands the little old house in which lived President Kruger of the Dutch Republic, who, for years, stood off the British before they took the country.

A few men directly or indirectly made much fame or money out of the Boer war. Cecil Rhodes was one of them. His talents and nobler characteristics cannot be questioned. He was a man who thought and acted in terms of imperialism, who acquired enormous wealth, whose zeal for riches led England into a struggle that saddled a burden on the masses of his countrymen which they have suffered from unto this day. A few miles out of Cape Town is his magnificent estate, Groote Schuur. Soon after completing it he died. Now he sleeps in peace in the arms of a country that became politically torn and gold-hungry of his ambitions. Great visions he had, a real yearning to help some of his fellow-men at times possessed him but—when the balance is struck was he profited? We care not to judge but we can wonder!

Some sixty miles distant from Cape Town at Wellington is the home of the late world-honored Andrew Murray. He, too, had visions. How precious to him were the spiritual treasures! How his little devotional books were read and cherished in many lands! How his pen pleaded for the sweetness of the life that rests in Jesus! We wandered through the rooms where he had held communion with God and looked at the little garden heaped up with the sort of summer flowers he had loved so well. His monument is not a peerless memorial of massive stones, his memory is one of loving service for his fellow men. Hard by is Huguenot College, which Dr. Murray founded long ago. Here over 300 young women and girls, and a few young men, receive their education in the most favorable Christian surroundings. The extended influence from this center is admitted to be of the most exalted character. The meetings I addressed there were made up of earnest young people representing the best of the land. The beginnings of the institution were almost romantic. In some way a pamphlet advertising Mt. Holyoke Seminary (United States) fell into his hands and he resolved to start a similar school in South Africa. He wrote to America for a teacher. The reply came back that his correspondents in the United States did not wish to send a young woman by herself to such a far-away land, but they would send two. "There," exclaimed the indefatigable man of faith, "that is the way the Lord answers our prayers—we asked for one teacher, and behold, He gives us two!" The Huguenot College with its spacious grounds, its fine buildings, its staff of Christian instructors is a fitting memorial to Andrew Murray.

GOD'S LOVE IS FOR ALL.

The sun does not shine for a few trees and flowers, but for the wide world's joy. The lowly pine on the mountain-top waves its sombre boughs, and cries, "Thou art my sun;" and the little meadow-violet lifts its cup of blue, and whispers with its perfumed breath, "Thou art my sun;" and the grain on a thousand fields rustles in the wind, and makes answer, "Thou art my sun." So God sits effulgent in heaven, not for a favored few, but for the universe of life; and there is no creature so poor or so low that he may not look up with childlike confidence, and say, "My Father, thou art mine."—Beecher.

PRAYERS AND POTATOES.

An old woman sat in an old arm chair,
With wrinkled visage and disheveled hair,
And hungry, wan features.
For days and for weeks her only fare,
As she sat in her old arm chair,
Had been potatoes.

But now they were gone; of bad and good,
Not one was left for the old woman's food
Of those potatoes.

And she sighed and said: "What shall I do?
Where shall I send, and to whom shall I go
For more potatoes?"

And she thought of the deacon over the way,
The deacon so ready to worship and pray,
Whose cellar was full of potatoes.
And she said: "I will send for the deacon to come,
He'll not much mind to give me some
Of such a store of potatoes."

And the deacon came over as fast as he could,
Thinking to do the old lady some good;
But never once of potatoes.
He asked her at once what was her chief want,
And she, simple soul, expecting a grant,
Immediately answered: "Potatoes."

But the deacon's religion didn't lie that way;
He was more accustomed to preach and pray
Than give his hoarded potatoes,
So not hearing, of course, what the old lady said,
He rose to pray with uncovered head;
But she only thought of potatoes.

He prayed for patience, goodness and grace;
But when he prayed, "Lord, give her peace,"
She said audibly, "potatoes."
And at the end of each prayer which he said,
He heard—or thought he heard in its stead—
That same request for potatoes.

Deacon was troubled, knew not what to do;
'Twas very embarrassing to have her act so,
And about those carnal potatoes.
So ending his prayers, he started for home,
The door closed behind him, he heard a deep groan,
"Oh! give to the hungry potatoes."

And the groan followed him all the way home;
In the midst of the night it haunted his room,
'Oh! give to the hungry potatoes."
He could bear it no longer; arose and dressed,
From his well filled cellar taking in haste
A bag of his best potatoes.

Again he went to the widow's lone hut;
Her sleepless eyes she had not yet shut,
But there she sat in her old arm chair,
With the same wan features, the same wan air,
And entering in, he poured on the floor
A bushel or more, from his goodly store,
Of choice potatoes.

The widow's heart leaped up for joy,
Her face was pale and haggard no more,
"Now," said the deacon, "shall we pray?"
"Yes," said the widow, "Now you may."
And he knelt him down on the sandy floor,
Where he had poured out his goodly store;
And such a prayer the deacon prayed
As never before his lips essayed.
No longer embarrassed, but free and full,
He poured out the voice of a liberal soul;
And the widow responded a loud—"Amen!"
But said no more of potatoes.

And would you, who hear this simple tale,
Pray for the poor, and, praying, prevail?
Then preface your prayers with alms and good deeds.

Search out the poor and their wants and needs,
Pray for their peace and grace, spiritual food,
For wisdom and guidance—all these are good,
But don't forget the potatoes.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

Pope, an Englishman of some poetic fame, has informed us that, "The proper study of mankind is man." I suppose this author of succinct and wise proverbs would therewith confine our thought to the principles, being and destiny of the race. If so, he was unfolding to thinking men a volume as vast as the books the loved evangelist said might be written of the things Jesus did and taught.

For the nature of man—human nature—is not a static thing. The great law of growth, development, outward reaching, and inward longing, is continuous like the flight of time. No mariner of the seven seas has ever sailed an ocean more changeable and tempestuous than the vast, far-flung reaches and depths of the heart of man.

Out of it are the issues of life, and no living, pulsing, ever-moving thing can be analyzed and crystallized into finished form. No man in his life, in his thought, in his conduct is a finished product. The formative powers of the yesterdays are realized in the harvest of the to-days. Yet the seedtime and the gathering are only measured by the need of one's years. Sowing, reaping, and ever sowing again in the wide, wide field of human thought and endeavor—that is human nature—the great endless volume you and I are reading.

The modern picture show is doing untold harm. I do not make a practice of attending them—I have other things to do which, to my way of thinking, are more worthy and important. But a few days since I saw on the bill board that the welcome given Madame Currie, on her arrival in New York, would be portrayed. I went in and was disappointed. Two reels were spun off. One was a caricature of a poor farm, and the other a travesty on the so-called blue laws and a fling at prohibition. Then followed a so-called heart scene—but I had enough. I did not see the discoverer of radium. No wonder there are so many fearful tragedies in our modern life. Men and women commit crimes that are seemingly contrary to nature, and apparently causeless. Satan has a new lease of power and his ways of wrecking lives and damning souls shock and amaze us. My heart is saddened by the fact that so many are disregarding the only means which can save from such fearful tragedies. Religion plays no part in their lives, and evil finds them unarmed and defenseless. The maelstrom of worldliness whirls on and its victims are hurled downward to the black depths of despair and death. Senseless crimes against self and the poor victim's family are so frequent that we sometimes ask, What next? The good men and women who, through faith in the Son of God, know the merciful heart of the Father, are the world's only hope. We would reach out helping hands, but too often, I fear, can not touch or reach them.

What's the matter with the Jews again? There comes a booklet to me arraigning this people for all manner of crimes—great and small. The history of Israel is one of the saddest records of failures ever written. At the same time it is a record of patient suffering and wonderful endurance. Materialism, in one form or another, has ever been the curse of this race. It has produced some of the greatest geniuses of all time. Its sons have also been guilty of black, sordid crimes against God and man. Moral heroism, rare spiritual insight, stand closely related to sins that are red like crimson and dark as Hades. Wonderful people! God's chosen just so long as they chose God. Israel's history is an epitome of world history. It is ever making; it is writing new chapters to-day.

THE GOD OF THE FIELDS.

God's world is a very beautiful one, and the power to appreciate it is one of the greatest gifts that men possess. To fail to use and cultivate the gift, to go through life as if there were no June mornings or golden sunsets, no rippling sheen on lake and river and no mystery and glory over wood and field is to be a traitor to our own soul's high endowments, and an ingrate to Him who bestows with such a lavish and unrestrained hand. The coming of the summer and the opportunity it gives most of us of seeing more of the great world out-of-doors, should be used to the full in renewing our intimacy with and love for the great world of nature, so beautiful in sight and sound and perfume because it is the outgoing and expression of the thought of God. A fresh touch with nature is one of God's own ways of giving freshness and strength and renewed vitality to life.—Christian Guardian.

DIRECTIONS.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after three or four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise, use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least an inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

Editorial

"HONOR TO WHOM HONOR IS DUE."

We are sure our readers discovered an unusual excellence in the Advocate last week. That excellence was due to the fact that Rev. R. H. Harper, the brilliant and brotherly pastor of First Methodist Church, this city, had entire charge of the paper for that issue, kindly consenting to assume the responsibility and do the work in order that the editor might answer a call for service in Montgomery, Ala. Brother Harper brought us under great obligations to him by his kindness—and we feel that we conferred a distinct favor upon our readers by giving them the benefit of his genius.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT.

It was not our privilege to be present throughout the commencement exercises of Millsaps College, another engagement making it impossible for us to spend more than one day—Sunday, June 5—in the enjoyment of the program. That gave us the opportunity, however, of hearing the commencement sermon, preached by Dr. Franklin N. Parker, of Emory University, in the College Chapel on Sunday morning. That great utterance gave us a fine appetite for the other fine things on the program, and we regretted that we could not stay to appease it. According to the newspaper accounts, the baccalaureate address by Dr. Fitzgerald S. Parker, of Nashville, Tenn., was as great of its kind as was the sermon by his distinguished brother on the preceding Sunday.

All reports indicate that the session just closed was one of the most prosperous in the history of the college. The freshman class numbered 137, and the college enrollment was 251. A strong college spirit was manifest throughout the session, and the standard of work was unusually high. It is worthy of note that 97.5 per cent of the student body were members of some branch of the Christian church—a fact which lays tremendous emphasis upon the place of the Christian college in our whole scheme of education.

The graduating class this year was a large one, four young ladies being members of it. It was an inspiration to look into the faces of these fine young people who go out into the world with the approving stamp of a Christian institution of learning upon them. Millsaps graduates have already made a fine record for themselves and for their Alma Mater in various walks of life, and there is every reason to believe that these new sons and daughters will make large places for themselves in their chosen vocations. In addition to the academic degrees, three honorary degrees were conferred.

In order to meet the urgent need for additional dormitory space, the Board of Trustees ordered the immediate construction of Murrah Hall, the unit that will complete the present dormitory, which was crowded to capacity during the year. It is expected that the new dormitory will be ready by the opening of the next session.

The absence of the late Rev. T. B. Holloman, D.D., brought a tinge of sadness to the occasion that was made happy for so many years by his genial presence. In recognition of his beautiful character and splendid services the Board of Trustees unanimously adopted the following resolutions:

"Whereas, the Rev. T. B. Holloman, D.D., was for many years a member of the Board of Trustees of Millsaps College; and

"Whereas, he was loyal in his interest, regular in his attendance upon its meetings, and faithful and efficient in the discharge of his duties as a trustee,

"Resolved 1, That we, the members of the Board of Trustees of Millsaps College, do hereby record our deep appreciation of his long and efficient services, our cordial esteem of him as a man of honor and a Christian minister of distinction.

"2. That we express our sense of loss in his death, which deprives us of his genial fellowship and wise counsels.

"3. That we bow in humble submission to the will of the Father who doeth all things well.

"4. That we extend our most hearty sympathy to his bereaved family."

Announcement was made that Mr. W. S. F. Tatum, of Hattiesburg, Miss., had contributed $100,000 for the establishment of a chair of Christian Education in Millsaps College, and the Board of Trustees adopted the following resolutions in recognition of the munificent gift:

"Whereas, Mr. W. S. F. Tatum, a generous-hearted and devoted Methodist layman of Hattiesburg, Miss., has made a contribution of $100,000 to the endowment fund of Millsaps College for the purpose of establishing a chair of Christian Education therein, same to be known as the Tatum Chair, courses in connection with which are to be offered in the English Bible, Church History, Sunday school work and methods, and the principles of religious education; and

"Whereas, Mr. W. S. F. Tatum is making an additional gift of $12,000 representing interest in advance on said endowment, in order that said chair may be established at once, and an experienced and able instructor may be engaged for the ensuing session of the College; therefore be it

"Resolved, That we, the Trustees of Millsaps College, hereby express to Brother W. S. F. Tatum our grateful and heartfelt appreciation of this generous gift, which will enable Millsaps College to give thorough instruction and training in matters of vital importance to the highest development of Christian manhood and womanhood and to the welfare of church and State, and in the preparation of efficient and consecrated leaders in religious work; and we hereby pledge to Brother Tatum our faithful and hearty co-operation in executing the purposes of his gift."

The close of the twenty-ninth session of Millsaps College marked a history that can but bring pride to the friends of Christian education in Mississippi; and its future is bright with promise. President Watkins and his fine faculty are giving themselves unstintingly to the great work in their charge; the Board of Trustees is careful and business-like in the administration of the affairs of the college; the alumni are increasingly active in promoting its welfare, and the student body is enthusiastic and loyal. With the increased resources that will come as a result of the Christian Education Movement, Millsaps will retain her place as one of the great institutions of the church.

A COWARDLY ATTACK.

From several sources we have received an account of the recent cowardly attack upon Rev. E. G. Mohler, our pastor at Sardis, Miss., as a result of Brother Mohler's denunciation in the local press of the establishment of a public dance hall near Sardis. One of the promoters of the dance hall, meeting him on the street and making inquiry concerning the authorship of the article that had appeared, assaulted him viciously, rendering him unconscious for a considerable time. Feeling against the perpetrator of the assault was intense for awhile, but cooler judgment prevailed, and the assailant was brought before the courts a few days later to answer for his crime. After testimony was taken, the accused was given the limit of the law, the penalties aggregating a $600 fine and seven months' imprisonment. Of course an appeal to a higher court was taken, so the issue is not finally decided.

Brother Mohler was badly injured, but has recovered slowly from the hurt. He has received many letters of sympathy from his brethren throughout Mississippi; and, in a personal note to us, he desires to express through the Advocate his grateful appreciation of these evidences of support in the fight he has made against an impending social evil.

Taking this incident in connection with that other one at Hattiesburg, Miss., where Rev. G. S. Harmon, revolver in hand, held back a mob that was intent upon taking a wounded prisoner who had been brought to the Methodist Hospital for treatment, we have vivid illustrations of the fact that the ministry to-day has in it red-blooded men who will fight evil to the last ditch, even though it be at the expense of life itself. This is no day for a negative ministry. Lawlessness in many respects has become rampant, and the criminal element in our society seems to hesitate at nothing to carry out its nefarious purposes. When the pulpit is facing issues upon which hang the destiny of our sons and daughters, our homes, and society as a whole, it cannot afford to follow the line of least resistance. The ministry has met boldly every crisis in the past when evil was threatening to overthrow righteousness, and we rejoice to know that it is as bold and courageous to-day as it ever was. The violators of the law have "reckoned without the host" if they imagine they can carry on their wicked schemes without determined and vigorous opposition on the part of the ministry of the church. All honor to Mohler and Harmon and those like them who will be true to their convictions at the expense, if necessary, of life itself!

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Mrs. Marion Money, of Biloxi, Miss., will be in charge of the restaurant at the Seashore Camp Ground during the summer. The rates for meals will be very reasonable.

Rev. E. B. Troy, a local preacher of Newburn, N. C., formerly an itinerant minister and for one year in charge of the Acadia circuit, Louisiana Conference, called at the Advocate office Monday. Brother Troy was a chaplain during the recent war.

Rev. J. E. Crooks, our pastor at Greensburg, La., has been in this city, since Thursday of last week, with his little boy Paul, who was operated upon for appendicitis on Saturday at the Presbyterian Hospital. We rejoice with the father that the little patient is doing well.

A note from Rev. I. T. Reames, our pastor at Vivian, La., informs us of the death, on June 13, of Mrs. Olivia Browning, one of the elect women of the Vivian Methodist church. The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to those who are in sorrow because of her going.

We acknowledge the honor of an invitation from Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Hawkins to attend the marriage of their daughter, Marjo, to Mr. Albert Sidney Eggerton, at the Hawkins Memorial Church, Meridian, Miss., on June 16, at 11:30 o'clock. Blessings upon the young couple!

Rev. W. T. Griffin, of Summit, Miss., has just closed a good meeting of ten days' duration at Logtown, Miss., where he assisted the pastor, Rev. H. L. Norton. The meeting resulted in reviving the membership and in adding five to the church. Brother Norton and his family are now enjoying a splendid new parsonage.

The honorary degree of Doctor of Laws was conferred upon Bishop W. F. McMurry by three colleges during the commencement season: Centenary College, Shreveport, La.; Kentucky Wesleyan College, Winchester, Ky.; Central College, Fayette, Mo. The commencement sermons of Kentucky Wesleyan and of Central were preached by the Bishop.

Rev. W. D. Bennett, of Courtland, Miss., writes that things are moving along fairly well with him.

Dr. Theodore Copeland writes that he is engaged in a great revival meeting at Uvalde, Texas.

Miss L. Pearl Saunders, Director of the School of Art and Applied Design, Nashville, Tenn., will have classes in drawing and painting at Lake Junaluska, N. C., this summer as heretofore.

Dr. R. H. Crossfield, for thirteen years president of Transylvania College, Lexington, Ky., has resigned the presidency of that institution to become one of the secretaries of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America.

Rev. A. G. Shankle, of La Grange, Ga., with his family, is visiting Rev. and Mrs. C. D. Atkinson, this city. Brother Shankle underwent an operation at Touro Infirmary a few days ago, which, while not serious, will keep him indoors for a week or so.

Brother Byron Smith, of Peoria, Miss., in renewing his subscription to the Advocate, addresses the paper as "My Dear old Friend." The Advocate has been a regular visitor to his home since 1874 or 1875—no wonder he speaks of it with affection.

The editor of the Advocate conducted the class in Bible study at the recent Conference-wide Standard Training School of the Alabama Conference, held at Montgomery. He hopes to be able to give some account of that institution in the next issue of the paper.

Centenary College, Shreveport, La., conferred the degree of Doctor of Divinity upon Rev. Briscoe Carter, our pastor at Minden, La., at its recent commencement exercises. The same degree was also conferred upon Rev. C. W. Webdeil, who preached the commencement sermon. These honors were worthily bestowed.

The Lake Arthur Camp Meeting, Lake Arthur, La., will be held July 1-10, with Rev. Chas. M. Dunaway, of Atlanta, Ga., as the preacher, and Mr. Allen W. Caley, of Asbury College, Wilmore, Ky., as chorister. We make this announcement at the request of Mr. J. W. Fontenot, of Crowley, La.

Professor W. O. Excell, known throughout the world as a leader of religious song, died recently at his home in Chicago. He was associated with the late Sam P. Jones for many years, and his name was a household word throughout the country. He took part in many revival meetings in the South.

Since the conclusion of the world war, the Business Men's War Council of the Pocket Testament League has given Testaments to about 100,000 working men in the great Philadelphia industrial district. Of these, 17,503 have put "I. A. C." on the cards they signed, signifying, "I accept Christ."

Announcement has been made that Dr. Fitzgerald S. Parker, General Secretary of the Epworth League, has been commissioned by the Board of Missions to visit China, Japan, and Korea in the interest of the Young People's Movement in those countries. He will leave in July, to be gone about four months.

The Advocate has received from Rev. A. R. Beasley, of the Corinth circuit, North Mississippi Conference, $4.10 for the China Famine Relief Fund, and $9.38 for the Near East Relief Fund. These amounts were promptly forwarded to Mr. J. D. Hamilton, Nashville, Tenn., treasurer of our Board of Missions, to be applied as directed.

Rev. H. P. Lewis, our pastor at Pontotoc, Miss., will be assisted in a revival meeting, beginning on July 18, by his brothers, Rev. J. M. Lewis and Rev. O. S. Lewis, both of the Mississippi Conference. Mississippi Methodism owes a great debt to the preachers named Lewis who have served and are now serving it so faithfully and efficiently.

A splendid meeting was recently closed at Grand Cane, La., in which the pastor, Rev. S. J. Davies, was assisted by the well-known Kelly brothers. There were twelve accessions to the Methodist Church, with several to other denominations. Brother Davies is holding a meeting at Keatchie, La., this week, being assisted by Rev. Leland Clegg.

One of the best records we have heard of in connection with the Christian Education Movement was the pledge made by the Wesley Baraca Class at Lafayette, La., composed largely of students at the Southwestern Industrial Institute, the pledge amounting to $1,330. This information came to us through a telegram from Mrs. Crow Girard.

We acknowledge the honor of an invitation from Rev. and Mrs. Geo. H. Thompson to attend the marriage of their daughter, Katie Ruth, to Mr. Robert Spurgeon Mathis, in the Centenary Methodist Church, McComb City, Miss., on Thursday afternoon, June 28 at 4:30 o'clock. The Advocate extends best wishes to the young couple in advance of the happy event.

Rev. R. P. Fikes, formerly of the Mississippi Conference, but now pastor at Biltmore, N. C., writes us a note to the effect that he has recently attended the commencement exercises of Trinity College, Durham, N. C., and the Summer School for Preachers, held there. Both of these were great occasions. Brother Fikes sends his love to the Mississippi brethren.

Under date of June 13, Rev. G. A. Morgan, of Jonesboro, La., writes as follows: "We have just closed a very successful meeting at Jonesboro. The pastor was assisted by Rev. W. A. Hart, pastor, of Castor circuit. Brother Hart preaches the gospel with great power. A number were converted and the church was greatly revived. Four young people joined the church."

Many friends will read with interest the announcement of the marriage of Miss Lafayette Lampton, daughter of Mrs. I. W. Lampton, of Magnolia, Miss., to Mr. E. D. McLean, of Gastonia, N. C., on June 15, at the Methodist church in Magnolia. The ceremony was performed by Rev. C. F. Emery, of Tylertown, Miss., assisted by Rev. J. Early Gray, our pastor at Magnolia.

Gipsy Smith has been secured for a meeting in New Orleans, to begin on January 5, 1922, and continue four weeks. Various denominations in the city are co-operating in the arrangements for the meeting, and plans are already under way for a great religious campaign. The laymen of the city are especially active in getting everything ready for the coming of this great evangelist.

Dr. J. B. Gambrell, one of the great leaders of the Southern Baptists, passed to his final reward on June 10. He was born in South Carolina, but came to Mississippi in early childhood, where he spent many years of his eminently useful life. He achieved distinction as a preacher, editor, college president, and leader of the missionary forces of the Baptist Church. He was nearly eighty years of age at his death.

The editor of the Advocate is overwhelmed by the kindness of his friends in congratulating him upon the honor recently conferred upon him by Millsaps College. A ten-days' absence from the office with an attendant accumulation of work, has made it impossible for him thus far to acknowledge the receipt of all the letters he has received. He will do it at the earliest opportunity. In the meantime, he would have these friends know that his appreciation of their kindly expressions is as great as his unworthiness of the honor conferred upon him.

The marriage ceremony of Dr. I. W. Cooper and Miss Janie H. Drake was performed in the Methodist church at Washington, Miss., on June 11 by Rev. W. H. Lewis, assisted by Rev. J. M. Morse and Rev. W. H. Saunders. Immediately after the ceremony an elegant luncheon was served the bridal party and guests at Duncan's Park, in Natchez. Dr. Cooper and his bride left that evening for New York, whence they sailed for Europe on June 18. They will tour Palestine, getting back to London in time for the Ecumenical Conference in the fall.

The editor had the privilege of officiating at the marriage of his niece, Miss Alleen Kling, to Mr. George Sargent, in the Methodist church at Safford, Miss., on Tuesday evening, June 21. Miss Kling is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Allen B. Kling, who have long been prominently identified with the work of the Methodist Church in Yazoo County. Mr. Sargent is a recent graduate of the Mississippi Agricultural and Mechanical College, where he made a notable record in various school activities. The young couple will make their home in Little Rock, Ark.

Rev. W. L. Spinks, of Brookhaven, Miss., has decided to give himself exclusively to evangelistic work, feeling that that is in line with God's call, and he will be glad to assist any of the brethren who may desire his services. Those who desire references concerning his work are invited to write to Rev. H. M. Ellis, presiding elder of the Brookhaven District, Rev. W. H. Lewis, pastor of the First Methodist Church of Brookhaven, and Mr. A. B. Furlow, vice president of the First National Bank of Brookhaven. Brother Spinks has had unusual success in building up a men's Bible class in Brookhaven; beginning with a membership of sixteen, the enrollment has gone to one hundred, and for more than a year the average attendance has been about fifty.

SOME GOOD RECORDS IN THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION MOVEMENT.

As has been announced the Florida Conference was the first to reach its quota in the Christian Education Movement. On a quota of $774,000 there was reported some days ago $784,000. And in addition to this, citizens of Lakeland and contiguous territory have given $245,000 to Southern College. The Florida Conference total goes beyond $1,000,000, and this total will be increased by churches that have not yet reached their quotas. Florida Methodism thus holds the place of leadership in this greatest enterprise of our church.

In total amount pledged the Virginia Conference holds first place, with $1,302,500 reported to June 15. This is approximately two-thirds of the Conference quota, and when the final returns are in the Virginia Conference will go well beyond the figures named. Conferences that have gone beyond two-thirds of their quotas, according to reports to June 15, are: North Alabama, $907,000; Alabama, $750,000; Louisiana, approximately $700,000; Texas, $675,000; Northwest Texas, $425,000; New Mexico, $32,000. Other Conferences that have made good reports in total amounts pledged are: South Georgia, $879,000; Holston, $810,000; North Georgia, $700,000; Western North Carolina, $700,000. None of the Conferences named have made final reports. The canvass is being continued, as in other Conferences not here named. And it is known at Nashville that in practically no report does the total represent the full amount pledged to date.

Perhaps the best record made by any city is that of Birmingham, with $455,000 pledged by the churches of the district. Four churches in the city are in another district and are not included in the total named. Birmingham Methodism will likely give more than $500,000, and this does not take into account the amount given to Birmingham-Southern College by citizens other than Methodists.

Many churches made records worthy of special mention. These were in every section of our territory and were in city, town and country. These have shown what can be done in the face of adverse conditions, and they call to other congregations to do likewise.

CAPT. JAMES B. ENOCHS.

Captain James B. Enoch, one of Copiah County's splendid citizens, has answered the "roll call of Heaven," and passed to his reward, and as we sit quietly by and mourn his departure and think of his long, useful life, days that were filled with good deeds and loyal service to his country and his God, then it is we feel more keenly the loss we have sustained at his going.

Some one has said, "God buries workmen and carries forth his work," and this may be true; but when men like this die their places in the home, in the church and in the community are never filled.

Captain Enoch was the younger of a family of eleven children, the son of John R. and Polly Enoch. He was born in Rankin County, Miss., April 1, 1835. In early youth he professed faith in Christ, and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, remaining a faithful and active member until he joined the church above.

In 1866, when the bud of youth had bloomed into manhood, he was happily married to Miss Fannie P. Jones, of Copiah County, Mississippi. God blessed this union with twelve children, seven girls and five boys. Five of these, with the wife of his bosom, have preceded him to their eternal reward. Three girls and four sons remain to mourn their loss.

In 1871 he moved from the home of his childhood and early married life, in Rankin County, to Copiah County, near Crystal Springs, Miss., in the Bethesda church community, and it was there with the eldest son, Walter Enoch, he lived until the time of his death.

Some days prior to his death he visited, as he no doubt felt, for the last time, the happy hunting and fishing grounds of his boyhood days, and while there, among friends and relatives, in old Rankin, he was stricken with paralysis from which he regained consciousness but partially. The children were speedily summoned to his bedside, and when they knew the end was near, being fully aware that his greatest desire was to make final departure from the old home near the little church he loved so well back in Copiah, they undertook to carry him back, and while on the way aboard the fast rolling wheels of the railroad train, the angel came and his blessed spirit wended its flight to a brighter home above.

In person, Captain Enoch was slender in build, eyes that were blue, and complexion fair. He was graceful in movement and gracious in manner, and all who knew him fully realized that he was worthy of the title he wore as "Captain," for even unto the day of his impotency he was a leader in the community in which he lived.

At the beginning of the war between the States, while not a secessionist at heart, he was among the first to offer his service to the Confederacy; in which he took a leading part in organizing Company A of the Sixth Mississippi Regiment. He went out as one of the officers of that company. In the battle of Shiloh he was wounded four times, two of which were very serious and dangerous wounds. After this battle and upon the reorganization of the Sixth Mississippi, he was made captain of that company, and served throughout the war with the exception of the time lost in regaining health and strength from wounds received.

As a faithful and loyal soldier of his country as well as a true soldier of the Cross, we may well say in the language of another:

"Servant of God, well done,
Thy glorious warfare's past;
The battle's fought the race is run
And thou art crowned at last."

Captain Enoch was the last of the older generations of the Enochs to go home, leaving behind a large company of relatives, among whom are the well known Enoch connection of Jackson and Fernwood, Miss., a people who compose an excellent citizenship.

The spirit of this good man seems to be resting in a double portion on one of his worthy sons, Captain T. M. Enoch, who for a number of years has given his service to his country in the Navy Department, and is commander of that splendid battleship, the "Pennsylvania." And, in fact, all of the children have made useful citizens and to them we would say: In the grief and sorrow at this separation, rely on the goodness of God and His unchanging love; and may the lessons, precepts and holy examples of the father who has died in the Lord be remembered in the years that are to come.

The funeral services were conducted by the pastor, Rev. J. S. Abney, and the writer. A great company of friends and relatives were in attendance. After the service the body was consigned to the tomb in the cemetery near the little church, with Masonic honors. A blanket of beautiful flowers covering the length and breadth of the mound erected there, was gently laid in token of love and friendship. And there we left the body to await the resurrection morn.

"Let faith exalt her joyful voice
And now in triumph sing.
O, Grave, where is thy victory,
And where, O Death, thy sting."
C. A. SCHULTZ.

Mrs. MAGGIE WOODS was born July 3, 1865; married to Mr. J. H. Woods, January 2, 1884; died May 16, 1921. She was happily converted to Christ early in life, and joined the Baptist Church. After her marriage to her husband, who was a Methodist, she joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, with her husband at Chapel Hill near Redding postoffice in Grenada County, Mississippi, where she held her membership the remainder of her life. She was laid to rest in the family lot in the Chapel Hill cemetery, on the 17th, her pastor, Rev. W. J. Wood, conducting the funeral services. She leaves a husband, Mr. J. H. Woods, three sons, J. W. Hamilton, and Steward, three daughters, Mrs. Annie Bell Curl, of Holcomb, Miss., Mrs. Lula Doolittle, of Cateretta, Miss., and Miss Maggie Nell Woods, who was her youngest daughter, with an aged mother, Mrs. Ann Lipe, with several brothers and sister, and a host of friends, as was shown on the day of her burial. The writer never saw more friends attend a funeral. The grave was absolutely covered with flowers, friends showing their appreciation of her clean Christian life. In the departure of Sister Woods from earth to heaven, another sweet and beautiful life has gone home. But she has left us a legacy. No one can look on her well-spent life without feeling and knowing that there is such a life as a God-filled life, for she lived this life. The church, home, and society lose heavily when such a life takes its flight. Her many friends feel that she is the happier and we are all made better in heart, and richer in soul, when we reflect on the blessed life she lived. No one who knew her could help but know that she had found the secret to that happy life. She had a Christian's face and language, a love that melted out all that sounded harsh or cutting. She was indeed a Christian wife, mother, and friend. She had a Christian hope. To her, death was not a door which shut out life, but one which opened into a larger life. It was a clear call to come home, an honorable discharge from labor here, a clasping of hands of loved ones who had gone on before. She lived a beautiful life, and died a triumphant death. Our loss is her gain. Let us all resolve to meet her there in heaven where there are no more sad partings. To the heart-broken husband, children, aged mother, brothers, sisters, and friends, we can but point you to Jesus, the great Burden-Bearer who is ever ready to share your burden with you. May we all meet this good woman in heaven is the prayer of your humble friend and servant, and her pastor.

W. J. WOOD.

Duck Hill, Miss.

Our Heavenly Father saw fit to remove from our midst our beloved sister, Miss WINNIE ST. AMANT, on May 23, 1921, aged fifty-five years. She was a life-long resident of St.

Amant, La., and a staunch, loyal member of New River Methodist Church. Hers was the true Christian life. It was a fulfillment of our Savior's exhortation to do good. Looking back, we see her many years ago, taking a mother's place in her home. Youthful pleasures were cast aside that she might assume the responsibility of the household. The care and tenderness which she bestowed upon her younger sister and brothers could hardly have been equaled. To know her was to love her. Children were "at home" in her presence, always, and the aged found comfort in the ministrations from which her loving hands never wearied. She leaves to mourn her departure a sister, eight brothers, three aunts, one uncle and a host of friends. To the Christian, death means a ceasing of pain and sorrow and an entrance into the glorious presence of our blessed Redeemer. Let our grief assuage itself in the thought of a meeting in the Great Beyond. May our lives be so moulded as to emulate the virtues that she so beautifully set forth during her lifetime.

ONE WHO KNEW HER AND LOVED HER.

MOMENT BY MOMENT.

Never a trial that He is not there;
Never a burden that He doth not bear;
Never a sorrow that He doth not share,
Moment by moment I'm under His care.

Never a heart-ache, and never a groan,
Never a tear-drop, and never a moan,
Never a danger but there, on the throne,
Moment by moment, He thinks of his own.

Never a weakness that He doth not feel;
Never a sickness that He cannot heal.
Moment by moment, in woe or in weal,
Jesus, my Savior, abides with me still.

GOD'S HEALING.

By William C. Allen.

There's healing by the waters,
 There's healing in the trees,
 There's healing with the blossoms,
 There's healing in the breeze,
 There's healing on the mountain,
 There's healing in the light,
 There's healing 'neath the hemlock,
 There's healing in the night.
 There's healing in the city,
 There's healing where 'tis still,
 There's healing on the ocean,
 There's healing by the rill.
 There's healing in the desert,
 There's healing in the rain,
 There's healing by the fountain,
 And in the rustling grain.
 There's healing all about us,
 In sunshine and in storm;
 God heals His weary children,
 When they of strength are shorn.
 Thank God for all His healings—
 For the flutter of the trees!
 Thank God for all His healings—
 His winds, His flowers, His seas!

GENERAL PERSHING'S TRIBUTE TO THE Y. M. C. A.

There is just one man who can speak officially and with authority concerning the welfare work of the Y. M. C. A. in France during the world war. That man is General Pershing, and he spoke in the straightforward and then why make them take it? Why cling to the old idea that a medicine must be unpleasant in order to be good?

Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets

unequivocal manner which the people have learned to expect from him, at the thirty-fourth annual meeting of the International Committee of the Y. M. C. A. at the Waldorf in New York City. In the presence of a notable gathering of 1200 men and women he paid a rare tribute to the Association, for he had seen its work not only in France but in earlier days among the Army men on the Mexican frontier and in the Phillipines Islands. He made it as plain as positive declaration can make it, that the canteen business was taken over by the Y. M. C. A. by his request at a critical juncture of affairs in France; that the canteen failures were due to lack of transportation for which the Y. M. C. A. was not responsible and could not help; and that criticism for alleged shortcomings in France was unjust, and taken undue advantage of by rival organizations with far less responsibility and covering only special areas. He said this feature of the Y. M. C. A. work deserved great praise instead of criticism, and he expressed his deep appreciation of the results obtained. Received with an ovation when he rose to speak, he was greeted with repeated applause as he made his strong statement regarding an organization which he hoped would have not one million but ten million members. In the great audience before him were the men of affairs from all sections who had invested their money and themselves as well in the building up of the Y. M. C. A. into an institution of world-wide outreach and helpfulness as a branch of the Christian church set for a specific task.

This was the largest dinner the International Committee has ever given. Since 1917, when we entered the war, there has been no meeting. Features of the work were presented by Arthur Rugh, of the Foreign Department; C. R. Towson, of the Industrial Department; Arthur Cotton, who is doing a remarkable work with high school boys; E. T. Colton; of the Religious Work Department, and David Porter, of the Student Department. Dr. John R. Mott gave a comprehensive view of the aims and scope of the Association, with vision of its wonderful possibilities. He has never presented this work more effectively, and was heard with profound interest. It was a fine preparation for the sincere words of praise that followed.—Bulletin.

WONDER LAKE.

"I think the next thing I wanted to speak of was Wonder Lake," says H. H. Lumpkin, writing of "A Hike in Alaska" in Boys' Life for January. "It is not such a tremendous sheet of water, not nearly so large as many other Alaskan lakes, being some three miles long by a half mile wide. It lies in a sort of depression, its surface about three or four hundred feet above the level of Moose Creek. Its bed was evidently scooped out by glacial action somewhere back in those dim ages they tell us about. You can see, even now, the evidences of the glacial moraines. Some plough, those glaciers!

"Now, here are the things they tell of that lake. One, that it has fish so large that a specimen that a man hooked pulled him out of the boat into the lake. If that isn't a good fish story, then you try to go me one better. Other stories that I think are well authenticated are these. That in winter, under the ice is heard a rumbling, groaning sound. So much so that, although the winter trails straight across it, the Indians refuse to travel it, and go all the way round. That in summer there rise periodically great bubbles of gas of some kind, that bubble, and bubble, and finally die away. I talked with those who have seen this phenomenon. Then two things I found for myself. First, the lake is very deep. It is sparkling and clear, and shelves rapidly, a few feet from shore, to an unknown depth. Second, it does teem with fish, because I saw them, although I do not know the variety, for having no proper tackle, we did not catch any. The ones I saw would average two to three pounds. No monsters. But who can say what may inhabit those sparkling depths? 'Gh!'"

LESSON FOR JUNE 26.

Lesson Topic: Brazil's Need.

Scripture Lesson: Luke 24:36-48.

Golden Text: "Ye are witnesses of these things." Luke 24:48.

Home Readings: Monday, Living with Others, Romans 12:9-21; Tuesday, Working with Others, II Thessalonians 3:6-13; Wednesday, Jesus and Wealth, Mark 10:17-31; Thursday, Jesus and the Sabbath, Luke 6:1-11; Friday, The Christian Home, Colossians 3:14-25; Saturday, Jesus and His Nation, Luke 19:37-48; Sunday, The Great Commission, Luke 24:16-20.

Teaching Points.

1. Jesus died for the redemption of the whole world.
2. As the disciples were to be "witnesses" of his redemptive work, so we, too, must bear testimony to his saving grace.
3. The validity of testimony is conditioned upon personal knowledge—not upon hearsay; we, therefore, first of all need to know in our own lives the power of the gospel.
4. Brazil is one of those countries which need the gospel of Jesus Christ. It is a part of our mission, therefore, to give to Brazil what she so urgently needs and what we possess.

Now Is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots.

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as Othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots. Simply get an ounce of Othine—double strength—from your druggist, and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than one ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful clear complexion. Be sure to ask for the double strength Othine as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

Those who attended it came for work and applied themselves. The teachers made very fine impressions upon the students. The spirit of the school was exceptionally fine and the student body unanimously voiced their determination for better things in their home school.

Already we are planning for next year. We are praying and trusting for a bigger and better school.

We had the pleasure of being at Capitol Street Sunday morning and at Millsaps Memorial Sunday night. Capitol Street is buying the large lot adjacent to their present building to put up an annex. This will give them an unusually fine piece of property. Brother Ware reported $800 raised in the Educational Campaign from Millsaps Memorial charge. Those of you who are acquainted with the charge will rejoice with him in his success.

Don't forget Sunday School Day. It is never too late to observe the day. We are anxious that you send your offering in as early as possible. If you need more programs let us know.

We have in the office several sets of The American Home Series pamphlets, selling from 15 to 25 cents each and postage. We will be glad to supply you from this office.

Write us about your troubles and your successes. Pray for the work and the workers.

Yours in Him,
JNO. C. CHAMBERS.

FROM OAK RIDGE CHARGE.

Dear Brother Carley: We have completed our campaign with a very modest subscription. With better executive leadership on the part of the pastor much larger results would have been attained. We were indebted for valuable assistance in the campaign to Rev. J. R. Jones, Rev. R. Selby, Dr. Hunt, Prof. Brown, and others. All of these gave themselves without reserve to the movement. It is a great cause. Sincerely,
J. B. CAIN.

"What a happy world this would be if everybody were cheerful."

FOREIGN ADMINISTRATIVE SECRETARIES SEND LETTER TO PRESIDENT HARDING.

Nashville, Tenn., May 20, 1921.

Honorable Warren H. Harding.

President of the United States of America, Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir:

We view with dismay the present competition of the nations of the earth in making large plans for increase of their armies and navies, and are especially distressed that our American nation should seem to have entered into this rivalry and to be making plans for the increase of its armament, thus setting an example to the world of believing in the settlement of disputes by armed force at this time when the eyes of all nations are upon her for leadership in world peace.

As administrative secretaries of a Board of Missions having work in seven great mission fields, we feel very keenly the menace of such a policy on the part of our nation to the well-being of the world. During recent visits to Oriental and Latin-American countries, we have had the opportunity of seeing at first hand the effect of our nation's attitude and actions upon Japan, stimulating her to a similar war program and thus threatening the peace of the East, and the integrity of China. We also know that the strengthening of our army and navy is creating suspicion of our country's motives in the minds of the people of the Latin-American republics, and is weakening our commercial relations and threatening the ultimate peace of this hemisphere.

We are writing, therefore, to urge upon you, as President of these United States, the great desirability of calling immediately a conference on World Disarmament. We feel that nothing less than this will arouse the attention of our nation to the seriousness of the policy that it is pursuing.

Assuring you of our loyalty to our Government, and our earnest desire to advance the good of our nation and the peace of the world, we are,

MABEL K. HOWELL,

Administrative Secretary, Oriental Fields, Woman's Missionary Council.

ESTHER CASE,

Administrative Secretary, Latin-American and African Fields, Woman's Missionary Council.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

I hope each District Secretary and every Woman's Missionary Society in the bounds of this Conference will take this message as an appeal in behalf of our Young People. I look over the records and find the number of adult Societies in our Conference, and then I see that the number of Young People's Societies is alarmingly few in comparison. Let us put forth renewed effort in this great work so we might hear on that Great Day, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant."

Our Young People are looking to us; let us not fail them, but march forward with this great work that lies so close to the heart of our Lord and Master. The church is calling its Young People to-day as never before, and is also calling in as loud tones for leaders for them. Did you know, friends, the noblest work, the grandest privilege that could be granted to any woman, is that of leading our boys and girls to Christ and helping to implant in their hearts love and service for the Master?

As Conference Superintendent of the Young People, I want you to feel that I am ready to do all I can for you in your home auxiliary to organize the Young People if they are not already organized. Mine is a great task—a task in which I must have your help, prayers and co-operation and the leadership of God's Spirit. I appeal to you as a sister in the work that we do our full duty and see that in our church there is a Y. P. M. S.

MRS. J. M. SMITH,

Mississippi Conference Superintendent of Young People's Work.

District Meetings.

The Monroe-Ruston District meeting was held at Rayville on May 12.

A large number of delegates were present from all over the district. It was a splendid meeting.

The morning session was mostly given over to reports. In the afternoon Mrs. Henry, of Ruston, presented "The Family Altar," in a most wonderful way. Miss Ellison, deaconess from St. Mark's Hall, came with a message, inspiring and instructive, concerning her work in New Orleans.

The ladies of Rayville Auxiliary served luncheon in their new American Legion Hall.

Our new Secretary, Mrs. Darby, is to be congratulated upon the success of her first District Meeting.

MRS. W. D. CARROLL.

The Alexandria Woman's District Conference was held in Rochelle May 16, 17, 18. The members of the Rochelle auxiliary gave a cordial welcome to all, and their serving of coffee the first session and the reception given in the hotel were delightful.

Total Adult Auxiliaries in Dist. 16; Total Adult Members, 444; Total Y. P. Auxiliaries, 1; Total Junior Auxiliaries, 4; Total Baby Divisions, 1.

Nine of the sixteen auxiliaries were represented and brought written reports.

Features of interest were: a message by Mrs. Bobbit, of Mansfield College; two short pageants presented by the young people of Rochelle; an address on Christian Education, by Rev. A. M. Shaw, of Trout, La., and a message from Mrs. Hyams, of Natchitoches, sent and read by Mrs. Cunningham.

We were honored in having Mrs. Cunningham, State Supt. of Mission Study, and Miss Mary Werlein, of Alexandria, with us.

The meeting closed with a precious experience and consecration service. The conference will convene next year at Winnfield.

HOW INDUSTRIAL CONDITIONS AFFECT A BABY'S CHANCE OF LIVING.

How industrial conditions affect a baby's chance of living beyond its first year is described in a report on "Infant Mortality in New Bedford" issued to-day by the Children's Bureau of the U. S. Department of Labor.

Unskilled and semi-skilled occupations predominate in the cotton industry, and at the time the survey was made, wages were low. A low income was accompanied, as in other industrial cities studied by the Bureau, by poor home sanitation, congestion, lack of adequate medical care, and a mother who was overworked, either in the factory or at home.

Over half of the New Bedford babies lived in the river section where the worst living conditions in the city were to be found. There families of from 15 to 18, including lodgers, were in many cases crowded together in 5-room tenements.

Practically all the mothers working in the cotton mills of New Bedford were in families where the father earned less than the amount necessary to maintain a decent standard of living. Almost half of all the mothers were gainfully employed, chiefly in the cotton mills, during the year before the baby was born, and two-fifths during the year following the baby's birth. Most of these mothers worked during both periods. The harmful results of depriving a young baby of its mother's care and nursing is shown in the fact that among the babies whose mothers left them to go out to work when the baby was less than 4 months old, the mortality was nearly twice the average rate.

The low income group showed a high mortality rate while the group having incomes sufficient to insure proper care and surroundings for the mothers and babies had a low mortality rate. In the low wage group 20 babies out of every hundred born alive, died before the end of the first year. In the highest wage group only 6 out of every hundred babies died.—Bulletin.

A FINE MEETING AT ARTESIA, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: As we have passed through a fine meeting here at Artesia, I am constrained to write you about it. Brother W. M. McIntosh is the man who did the preaching, in his own usual and earnest way. Much was also done by his good helper, Brother Cooper, in song. He is a splendid leader, and is always ready with the song needed to inspire the message. This is a good team.

Artesia is a small town, and our membership is less than one hundred members, and those who know our environments know that there are few communities doing the work of the church so well as Artesia.

We were gladdened in reaping six noble children into our church, and this is a good work; for the fact is, almost all the people are members of some church who live here. I feel sure of a steady advancement from the inspiration which has come to our community on all lines of spiritual development.

We are confident that our reaping has not ceased, and that others will join our ranks who are more mature in years. However, there are but few of them, and they have heard the message before; but somewhere in some way we are hopeful that prayers for them will be answered and knowledge of their release shall come to gladden our hearts. Our hearts are full of joy for our success in our meeting.

H. M. YOUNG, Pastor.

SUFFERED ALL A WOMAN COULD

Mrs. Meyer Finally Found Relief and Health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Orange, Cal.—“I always feel very grateful to you, as some twenty years ago three doctors said I had to have a serious operation. I had a tumor, and ulcers which would gather and break. I had displacement so badly that I could hardly sit down at times, and it seemed as if I suffered everything that a woman could suffer. Then some one advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I took it until I was cured and saved from the operation. I have told women of your wonderful medicine times without number, and I am willing that you should use these facts and my name if you like. I also used your Compound during the change, and I can do all my own work but the heavy part, and can walk miles every day as I help my husband in the office.”

—Mrs. J. H. Meyer, 412 South Orange St., Orange, California.

It is quite true that such troubles as Mrs. Meyer had may reach a stage where an operation is the only resource. On the other hand, a great many women have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

FIVE MILLION BIBLES ISSUED.

A California paper reports that “the American Bible Society issued over 5,000 new Bibles last year, not counting the old one we keep on the desk to throw at irate subscribers when they come in to chew the rag about who wrote that article.”

The typesetter must have thought that zeroes didn't amount to anything, for he left off three of them. The figure should have been Five Million instead of five thousand. In addition, the American Bible Society reports that since the war there has been a pronounced increase in the demand for the entire Bible, instead of for the New Testament alone.

The purpose for which most of them are used is probably not the one for which the California editor keeps his. —American Bible Society.

MR. DODSON WARNS USERS OF CALOMEL

Says Drug Acts Like Dynamite on Liver and You Lose a Day's Work.

There's no reason why a person should take sickening, salivating calomel when a few cents buys a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone—a perfect substitute for calomel.

It is a pleasant, vegetable liquid which will start your liver just as surely as calomel, but it doesn't make you sick and can not salivate.

Children and grown folks can take Dodson's Liver Tone, because it is perfectly harmless.

Calomel is a dangerous drug. It is mercury and attacks your bones. Take a dose of nasty calomel today and you will feel weak, sick and nauseated tomorrow. Don't lose a day's work. Take a spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone instead and you will wake up feeling great. No more biliousness, constipation, sluggishness, headache, coated tongue or sour stomach. Your druggist says if you don't find Dodson's Liver Tone acts better than horrible calomel your money is waiting for you.

LOUISIANA EPWORTH LEAGUE ASSEMBLY HELD AT MANS-FIELD, JUNE 7 TO 14.

Assembled at Mansfield for eight lovely June days were 158 promising young people from all over the State, and with them were some of the church's choicest leaders and teachers.

No more suitable place could be found, should we search throughout the whole of Louisiana, than our Mansfield College. Looking out over a beautiful expanse of hills, green forests and pleasant fields, one is drawn close to nature and to nature's God and breathes in constantly the charm of the great out-of-doors. Here the college is in convenient proximity to the modern town of Mansfield and is near the church, showing in its physical aspect the proper relation between church and school.

Christian education is carried on here throughout the school year and it is so fitting that this great special effort for intensive training and for spiritual inspiration should go on here each summer.

The Epworth League Assembly was in every way a full success. Mr. Grambling put into the preparation for it painstaking care, precision in arrangement for every detail, for his part, and was assisted, for their part, by the many State officers and League leaders, throughout the Conference. It can well be said that in the living of those days the First Department of Epworth League work was exemplified. Christian culture, spiritual teaching and expression were emphasized in the morning chapel exercises, the gentle vesper services, in Bible teaching, talks on personal salvation and consecration, and finally at the bedtime hour, in group prayer meetings led by the young people themselves. Among the girls there were many who led in prayer, and of the boys' groups it was said they were 100 per cent outspoken for the Master. Hours of recreation were full of spirit and action; practical demonstrations were given of games and wholesome amusement. The hours for Bible, social service studies, and missions were carried on regularly and promptly—every one kept time with the ringing of the bell which called for class shifts, for the meal hour and the play time period. Words of welcome were given by Rev. H. W. Bowman, with response by Dr. W. W. Drake. The faculty and the text books used were:

(1) "The Story of the New Testament," Carter, taught by Dr. P. L. Cobb.

(2) "The Social Principles of Jesus," Rauschenbusch, taught by Dr. Alonzo Early.

Mission Study. (Three Groups.)

(1) Medical Missions, taught by Prof. Stephen S. Thomas.

(2) "The Bible and Missions," taught by Prof. D. B. Rawlins.

(3) "The Negro Problem in the South," taught by Rev. Mr. Hines.

Social Service Study. (One Group.)

"Christianizing Community Life," Ward, taught by Rev. W. W. Holmes.

Informal Demonstration of Games, led by Miss Cecil Hughes.

Institute Period. (Five Groups.)

First Department, Department of Spiritual Work, led by Rev. Leland Clegg and Miss Warrena Harlow.

Second Department, Department of Social Service, led by Mrs. R. H. Wynn and Miss Audie Reynolds.

Third Department, Department of Culture and Recreation, led by Miss Cecil Hughes.

Fourth Department, Department of Missions, led by Miss Julia Reid and Prof. Garfield Evans.

Junior and Intermediate Workers, "Making Men and Women," Robinson, led by Miss Monita Goldsby and Miss Katherine Campbell, Nashville, Tenn.

"Council and Business Meeting," discussion led by Jas. A. Grambling.

Administrative problems, led by Mr. Grambling, Prof. Garfield Evans, Miss Monita Goldsby and Miss Katherine Campbell.

Business meetings were carried on after the rest hour in the afternoon, each Conference officer in his or her place, assisted by a number of committees.

"Stunt Night" furnished much amusement. All of the stunts were good, but the best was given by the Leagues of Lake Charles District; they were awarded a beautiful Epworth League banner. There is to be a handsome Epworth League shield, and to the New Orleans District Leagues was given the honor of having "Orleans District" engraved upon the shield, because of their largest number of points for efficiency.

One of the very interesting and instructive features of the Assembly program was a series of lectures given by the noted archaeologist, Dr. Edgar A. Banks. The hospitality of Dr. and Mrs. Bobbitt and Mr. and Mrs. Sharp at the college and the local leaders was deeply appreciated by all.

The sweet morning services in the chapel by Dr. Wynn, the eloquent sermon on Sunday by Dr. Drake, and the persuasive plea of the message on "Life Service," by Prof. Garfield Evans on the closing night, were soul-stirring calls to the lives of our young people, and will leave impressions which cannot be effaced.

Several changes were made in the Conference officers: Rev. Leland Clegg was elected president and Mr. Grambling, Field Secretary; with Mr. Grambling in the field, we are assured of tremendous growth in the Epworth League all over the State. Too much cannot be said in appreciation and commendation of the work that has already been done by Mr. Grambling. Dr. R. H. Wynn was elected Dean of the Assembly. The "Life Service" department, under the leadership of Prof. Garfield Evans, of Nashville, and Mrs. Wynn, is being greatly used of God in helping our young people to hear the call of the church and to consecrate life for His service. Is it not true that we have all been up to a place of strength and renewing and flowing out from this source where Jesus was honored in work and in play, the lives of our young people shall be like streams of clear water, making all life around them purer and better? The State will feel the impact of this intensive Christian education from the Assembly at Mansfield.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

THE MORAL RISK.

It is a well-known fact that some men who have plenty of money are poor risks in a business way, while others who are limited in their resources enjoy an extended line of credit. The explanation is to be found in the fact that character counts for more than cash. This is a fine lesson for the young man just starting in business to learn. He may not have much money, and his chances of accumulating a fortune may seem small, but if his word can be absolutely relied upon and if his moral character is above reproach, he will find many a helping hand extended to him as he fights his way toward success. Good character is an asset that all men may enjoy, because it is conditioned upon what a man is, and not upon what he has. A sprightly writer in a recent number of the Credit Monthly, a magazine devoted to the interests of the National Association of Credit Men, uses Job as an example of the value of the moral risk in business—God could count on him in misfortune and poverty as in health and prosperity; and he "came back!"

AN HONEST (?) BUSINESS.

We take the following from a New Orleans daily newspaper dated June 26: "What prohibition agents declare the biggest beer raid in the country's history was staged in New Orleans Saturday afternoon when thirty government men swooped down on six New Orleans breweries and carted off thousands of cases and bottles of beer worth something around $35,000—real kickful, pepful beer, they say, with considerably more than the allowable one-half of one per cent alcoholic content." We do not quote this item with any thought of its news interest, but simply to emphasize the fact that in dealing with the liquor traffic we are dealing with men who apparently have no regard for the law—men who deliberately and willfully violate the law for the sake of the money they may make thereby. These breweries are great business institutions in this city so far as capital invested and volume of output are concerned, owned largely by men who presumably stand high in the business community. In order to engage in the production of "near beer," they had to secure a license from the government and give bond that they would not manufacture an illegal article. Yet, as soon as the number of men appointed to enforce the law had to be reduced because of lack of funds to pay them and the risk of detection was thereby lessened, these reputable (?) business men, prominent citizens of the community, seize the opportunity, according to the evidence in hand, to violate the law, disregarding the license under which they were allowed to do business and their pledged word to keep within legal bounds. We have heard their pitiful pleas that the brewers were brought into disrepute by the whisky manufacturers and the criminal saloon keepers—that theirs was an honest, reputable business and should not be classed with that of these confessed and convicted violators of the law—all of which "sounds well, but it doesn't mean anything." The government thinks—and we are of the same opinion—that it has caught these same brewers in a flagrant violation of the law that they have pledged themselves to keep. If this opinion is correct, what does it mean? Simply this: There can be no kind of compromise, no sort of halfway measures in dealing with those who contend for the right to produce alcoholic drink of any kind. There ought to be such a demand from the genuinely law-abiding citizenship of this nation for the appropriation of a sufficient amount of money to enforce the Eighteenth Amendment that Congress would not dare hesitate a moment in providing the necessary funds. If only one brewery had been charged with violating the law, it might have been possible to suppose that it was an isolated case; but six of them at one time—it could not just happen that way! We very much fear that all the honest brewers are like all good Indians, according to the old saying—dead.

YOUNG BUSINESS MAN, READ THIS.

In the current American Magazine is an article by the president of one of the largest banks in the world, under the caption, "What I Consider The Most Important Thing In Business." Among other things, the writer says this: "The only thing that has ever interested me was whether I was going to accomplish something. The man who works on that basis will find life worth living, no matter what his job is. I wish I could make every young man realize this; for it is the key to happiness. It probably is a waste of time to tell a young man that money does not bring happiness. He would like to find out for himself whether it does. But if we can tell him that accomplishment will bring happiness, and if we can get him to find that out for himself, we shall have done him the greatest service we can. Tied up with this belief that to accomplish something brings the deepest possible satisfaction is my conviction that work is a privilege. I like to work. I often get down to my office at half-past eight in the morning and I often stay there until after six o'clock. I believe in recreation. I play golf sometimes although I believe the way some of my friends put it is that I 'work at playing golf.' But, as a rule, I am too busy. Another thing I believe is that the best kind of life is the simple one. I find my greatest pleasure in spending my evenings at home with my family. My boy is away at school, but that doesn't keep us from being the closest 'pack.' My little daughter is my elum. I believe in family ties, in the integrity of the home, in friendship, and in simple pleasures." There is some mighty good material for a business creed in this statement by an unusually successful business man.

A POOR OPINION OF CONGRESS.

According to recent press reports, the Anti-Blue Law League of America, with headquarters at Washington, D. C., has launched a campaign against the enactment of "a national blue law." The secretary of the League is reported as saying: "The reformers are trying to jam these bills through Congress as they did the prohibition law. Their main object is to get a test vote in Congress to see how representatives stand on the blue laws. If the Myers and Hilman laws are passed, they will press for a national law." The claim that the prohibition law was "jammed" through Congress is, of course, puerile. And the assumption that Congress can be stampeded into passing any law that is not favored by the great mass of the people indicates an opinion of the intelligence of the members of that body that is not altogether flattering. As a rule, if there is any one thing a member of Congress does want, it is to retain his seat, and he knows he cannot do that unless he fairly represents his constituents. If a blue law is passed, it will be conclusive evidence that the people want that kind of law. It is our opinion that the anti-blue law agitators have misnamed the kind of laws they are opposed to—they are opposed to "white" laws, laws that will help make it possible to keep fair the bodies and minds and souls of the oncoming generations in this fair land. The greatest fanatics we have ever known were those who insisted that their "personal liberty" was infringed upon by measures that were for the good of all the people.

WHILE THEY ARE YOUNG.

A few people are saved after they reach mature age. This makes it impossible to despair of any life, but it is a warning against delay in bringing our children into the Kingdom.

WHAT LIES AHEAD OF US.

These are momentous days. The ties which have held nations and empires together for centuries are being strained, and in many cases snapped. The thrones of kings have been bowled over like ninepins; great national readjustments have been effected, and new empires have sprung up upon the ruins of old ones: the centre of gravity of world finance has been mightily disturbed, and may possibly shift from Europe to America: and amid all these changes, new and startling doctrines are being proclaimed that threaten to overturn our present economic system with disastrous consequences to all concerned. And at the height of the tumult some of our good brethren point eagerly to certain passages of Holy Writ, and declare, "The end of all things is at hand."

And yet after all there is nothing in all this that is so very strange. To-day is but the natural outgrowth of yesterday. Despite all forebodings, chaos has not arrived, and will not arrive. There have been convulsions in Europe which threatened to wreck all governments; but when the convulsions ceased we found that still there existed really stable governments, and even the very centres of the political volcanoes were trying to stabilize themselves. And this process will go on, with interruptions, until we reach a more stable state than we have known for centuries. No doubt there will be persistent efforts to change national boundaries to correspond more nearly with racial aspirations, but such changes will probably come without such tremendous continental upheaval as we have just witnessed.

But what about Communism and Bolshevism and all the isms that glare red in the eyes of the man whose interests lie chiefly in the preservation of the present economic and political system? We think perhaps we have feared these things too much: not that they were not a real peril, but they were never quite so great a peril as we thought. But everywhere the red wave is subsiding, even in Russia; and it would not be so very surprising if Russia herself should swing back again to the ideas which for a time she so emphatically repudiated. For, after all, our great political and economic systems are really gigantic experiments and each age must convince itself by its own experience, although if it is wise it will not ignore the great lessons of past years.

So far as we can see, humanity is on the whole exceedingly sane, and the theorists who loudly proclaim their special theories as sure cure-alls for economic and political ills are seldom taken very seriously. We may try these theories, but it is usually on a small scale, and their failure once demonstrated we never try them again. For a time it really seemed as though constitutional government were in danger of being overturned by Soviet government, and even some fairly sane men predicted that constitutional government had had its day and must give place to its latest rival. But a change has come over the spirit of men, and now we begin to realize that the Soviet was only a passing fancy, and the Government of the future must rest, as constitutional government has rested in the past, on the consent of a free and enlightened democracy. This does not indicate that our present system of constitutional government is not capable of improvement, but improvement must come in the direction of making that government a more perfect representation of the people, and not a few of the people but of all the people.

And as in government, so in education. We hold firmly to the belief that our present educational system can be vastly improved and we think that the future will register many and momentous changes, but those changes will probably come rather slowly and after repeated experiments. The ideal must be, as before, not an educated few but an educated people, and with this ideal we shall surely make progress.

And the church has ahead of it its very best days. We do not question that ahead of us lie some hard and long battles. We do not doubt that there will be changes in our methods, and in our teaching. We do not hope to outlive the pessimist nor even to reach a state where some will not say: "The former days were better than these," but we do confidently anticipate for the church of God an ever-widening circle of influence, and an ever-increasing power to bless men as she becomes more willing to receive her Lord and better able to understand his will. And we look to see the day when man shall do business to "the glory of God" to a degree surpassing anything the past has known. We look for a day when the gospel of human brotherhood shall be wrought into our laws and incorporated into our social life, and when the common man shall come to his own and, free and contented and happy, he shall thank God that he was born into a Christian civilization. We face the future not with fear but with joy.

There have been bright days in the past, but there are brighter yet to come. There have been miracles wrought in the past, but there shall be greater ones in the days to come. The future will be more glorious than all the glorious past.—Christian Guardian.

THE COLOSSAL TRAGEDY IN CHINA.

By Bishop Walter R. Lambuth.

Spring has come and millions in the famine area are still in the throes of starvation. The tragedy is by no means ended. This is the crucial hour for North China. Tens of thousands are dying as the result of this long-drawn-out disaster. The explanation is at hand. The Hon. Chas. R. Crane, United States Minister to China, who is serving as Chairman of the General Famine Committee, has just transmitted a cable message to our State Department embodying the following information: That the spring crop in the Province of Chihli, covering about twenty per cent of the famine area, would be almost a total failure; that in addition to the five million victims already recognized as America's responsibility until next harvest, this situation necessitates caring for a further 2,000,000 in the Province until the summer harvest in August arrives; that there is imminent danger in other provinces that people in their desperate needs will devour growing crops unless aid in large measure is continued to them until the harvest arrives late in June; that the funds hitherto contributed from America have saved millions of lives.

Upon receipt of this message a meeting of officers of Foreign Mission Boards was called in New York City and after due consideration of the situation the following action was taken:

"Resolved, That in view of the acute and tragic situation in the famine stricken provinces of China—where millions who have thus far been saved through American generosity are, after all, in danger of death by starvation unless adequate help is continued until harvest arrives—this meeting urgently requests the American Committee for China Famine Fund continue with unabated energy its national, State and local organizations, with the full program of activities until such time as the relief work has resulted in the permanent saving of the millions of people in China who have thus far been sustained by the generosity of the American people."

Mr. Thomas W. Lamont, Chairman of the American Committee, was communicated with in Paris. He responded by cable as follows:

"Have learned with deep concern that serious crop failures again imminent in Province Chihli, and that relief for a further period must be provided for upward of the two million people.

"In view of extraordinary devotion and effective service shown by every member of organization, and by all co-operating bodies, I have greatest reluctance to urge further sacrifice upon these unselfish friends, yet I feel that the need is so imperative and that China is still looking so hopefully to us in America, that we should make every effort to continue our organization intact, and carry on the campaign unabated for a further sixty days. By that time I am sanguine that our report will show that the pressing necessity for relief has been met.

"The public response to the appeal and work of the organization has been quick and generous. The relief granted by America has already worked untold good. For the final stretch of the campaign I beseech once more the unstinted effort of our organization, and a bountiful response from the public. I myself, shall after arduous work over here, be back with you in a fortnight. Accept again for all committee members my warmest admiration for their work, and my heartfelt thanks."

In reviewing the situation as it now presents itself, Mr. H. W. Thirkield, Director of Publicity for Famine Relief, summarizes some "cold, hard facts in contrast to the cheering report of 6,946,220 starving Chinese saved":

That thousands of industrious Chinese farmers, women and children, are dead; that child-life has virtually disappeared in some of the worst affected districts; that the horrors of the situation cannot be overstated, the missionaries having reported "unspeakable suffering"; that in numerous cases shortness of funds has forced relief workers to turn away the aged and infirm in order to care for those who were strong enough to recuperate; that Dr. Sao-Ke Alfred Sze, Chinese Minister to the United States, who has just completed a long speaking tour of the United States for the American Committee, while he reports the raising of a Famine Fund in China of $17,000,000 silver, and while the Government is co-operating in every way, giving free transportation for foodstuff and to all authorized Famine Relief workers, he described the burden as too heavy for the nation to bear alone.

Mr. Thirkield concludes by saying: "The situation leaves only one question to answer: shall these victims, given hope by America, be abandoned now before they can support themselves, after having been saved through the winter?"

Of course, they will not be abandoned! America never abandons her friends. Neither do her people turn back when once they have put their hands to the plow. Those poor unfortunates in China, suffering from a four years' drought and tortured by anxiety, as well as by hunger, shall not look to us in vain. We have given, and given generously, when we consider the many calls made upon us, but we will give again.

HATTIESBURG EPWORTH LEAGUE CONFERENCE.

The nineteenth annual Conference of the Epworth League of the Mississippi Conference came to a close on the night of June 10, after a very successful session.

Although the attendance was a record breaker, Hattiesburg very splendidly entertained the delegates and showed them every possible courtesy. Four hundred delegates registered and there were others, who came in for only part of the time, who did not register.

Officers elected and appointed for the ensuing year were as follows:

President, W. D. Hawkins; Vice President, Truman Lewis; Secretary, Miss Erma Kilc; Treasurer, Rev. L. F. Alford; Era Agent, Henry Sullivan; Supt. 1st Dept., J. H. Weems; Supt. 2nd Dept., Miss Mavis Williams; Supt. 3rd Dept., Miss Alda Stanton; Supt. 4th Dept., Miss Laura Rankin; Supt. Jr. and Int., Mrs. T. D. Hendrix; Supt. Life Service, Miss Louise Preston.

District Secretaries: Meridian, Ralph Hays; Jackson, T. D. Hendrix; Brookhaven, Lee Craft; Vicksburg, Wray Bowie; Newton, Gladys Smith; Seashore, O. J. Power; Hattiesburg, B. F. Harrell.

For the first time in the history of the Conference, the entire company was divided into groups for Mission Study and Department Methods Study. The faculty consisted of the following: Mrs. F. S. Love, of North Carolina; Prof. Garfield Evans and Dr. F. S. Parker, of the Central Office, at Nashville; Dr. B. E. Mitchell, of Millsaps College; Rev. S. F. Harkey, Rev. O. S. Lewis, Rev. J. B. Cain, Rev. H. G. Hawkins, Mr. W. D. Hawkins and Miss Erma Kile. This method of procedure proved very successful in consideration of the fact that it is a departure from the regular order.

After considerable earnest discussion on the floor as to the advisability of a change in methods, it was decided that steps would be taken to turn the Conference into an Assembly next year, the place to be selected by a committee composed of the president and the secretary. We feel that this is a forward step and that greater efficiency in League work can be produced in this way.

It was our pleasure to have with us during the Conference, our new missionaries to Africa, who will sail before next year's meeting. They are Rev. and Mrs. S. F. Harkey and Miss Willie Hall. The Conference asked the privilege of adopting these missionaries and such request will be made of the Mission Board.

Africa special pledges were taken for more than $3600. This considerably exceeds our quota but since our organization is growing it is fitting that our missionary pledge should grow also.

During the Conference and especially at the early morning life decision services, one hundred and forty made a complete consecration of their lives. Four of these became volunteers for life service. This alone would have made the Conference worth while, aside from the many other enjoyable and profitable features.

Among the resolutions passed were the following:

Resolutions.

Whereas, the main purpose of the Christian Education Movement is the training in Christian leadership, and

Whereas, this is the specific task of the Epworth League in the Methodist Church, and a task that cannot be fully performed by any interdenominational agency, no matter how worthy;

Therefore, be it resolved by this Epworth League Conference That we respectfully recommend to Mississippi Methodist schools that recognition be given the Epworth League in such schools both by courses of instruction in League work and by the organization and operation of Leagues in such schools;

Resolved, further, That the President and Secretary of this Conference be authorized to bring this resolution to the attention of the schools that are under the control of the Mississippi Conference.

Signed by: S. F. Harkey, W. M. Williams, G. H. Thompson, J. B. Cain.

Whereas, God has seen fit to take from our number, Rev. H. B. Watkins, who for years has been one of our co-workers, having attended the first League Conference and served on the program at various times;

Be it resolved, That we express our appreciation for the influence of his life and for the work that he did for our Leagues; and that we express our sympathy to the bereaved family;

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread on the minutes of this Conference and a copy be sent to the Christian Advocate for publication and a copy be sent to the family.

Signed by: J. F. Campbell, W. M. Williams, J. E. Neely.

Resolved, That it is the sense of the Mississippi

Epworth League Conference that the Leaguers should set the standard in each community, of social purity, decent dress, wholesome recreations and entertainment.

Resolved, second, That the Leaguers should enter a formal protest against indecent picture shows, all worldly amusements and Sabbath desecration; that they stand for everything for which the church stands.

Signed by: Henry P. Sullivan, Cresley Hagan, M. B. Gage, Edna Earle Latham, Grace Jones, Katie Boutwell, Erma Kile, Lilybec Phillips, Heard Walker, W. S. Phillips, Sexton Hayden, Leland Holland, Ralph Hayes, Casper W. Avery, Lucille Stockstill, Nettie Stockstill, John Neely.

Although you may not have had the privilege of attending this year, begin now to make your plans for next year's assembly.

AN OLD WAR HORSE.

One of the most inspiring stories that have yet come to light is the campaign made by Rev. D. W. Babb on the Prairie and Strongs circuit, Aberdeen District. Brother Babb is now about eighty years old. He began the campaign when the new year began, with faith in spite of the most discouraging conditions in Mississippi. Never for once did he waver, never once did he cease his efforts. He followed the line of work carefully. When the Every-Member Canvass was made, he found the results beyond the most sanguine expectations of his neighbors, but not of the faith of the "Old War Horse." In the Centenary this charge raised Twenty-Seven Hundred Dollars. In this Campaign they have already raised nearly Three Thousand Dollars—Nine Hundred in Cash. When his Director turned in the signed cards he said, "Brother Preacher, this is a work of faith, for no more money is in sight. We are trusting God to make us able to meet these obligations. We have done our best." One man said, "I never make debts for my family expenses, but I am making this obligation for my church." Brother Babb has not ceased to preach Stewardship and Tithing and Faith in God. "May his tribe increase."

NOW FOR A WORK OF GRACE.

Dear Dr. Carley: At the risk of being called "old foggy" and "a back number," I am going to venture a few lines setting forth my convictions, which I strongly suspect are the convictions of many of your readers.

First—I am not unmindful of, nor would I disparage the efforts of good people to-day that are producing good results, but I am persuaded there is great need for the people to revert to true principles of righteousness, such as governed the best Christians of a generation ago. Their piety, fervor and joy as evidenced when they engaged in the mid-week prayer meeting and the stated worship on the Sabbath, as well as their godly walk and conversation, were calculated to create a profound impression. I seriously doubt if many of our children and young people are being impressed with the reality and power of religion, notwithstanding this is a great day of Leagues, Sunday schools and young people's societies. Contests, banquets, organization of classes and much activity will never take the place of wholesome teaching and godly example of pious members of the church and Sunday school. Is it possible we are raising a generation of church people who will "have the form of godliness, but deny the power thereof?"

Second—I am persuaded there is a degree of love for the world among young and old that is not compatible with religion and is greatly hindering the progress of the kingdom. The influence of the dancing which begins when our boys and girls reach home from school, sometimes held in so-called Christian homes, sometimes in vacant stores and clubhouses, is distinctly hurtful to the morals of the youth. Not infrequently some of our boys who have been living outwardly clean lives yield to the temptation to take strong drink at these dances, and often tell of a carnival with comparative strangers whose conduct is positively bad. The card party is doing the same influence, and sapping the piety of some of the most richly-endowed women of the church. Some who are members of the Missionary Society, officers and Sunday schools of our church belong to the card parties, and regularly engage in the game as though it were not a worldly amusement; and seemingly you are waiting your breath when you try to convince them they are wrong. I have known a few who are teachers in the Sunday school who have brought this reproach upon the church.

Third—I am persuaded the people are growing, or have grown, very weary of "drives," "campaigns," and "movements" in the church. We all know that missionary endeavor is the life of the church, and Christian schools and colleges are essential, but people are charging to-day that they can't go to church to hear the gospel preached without hearing money, money, money. Many of our best people refused to sign pledges in the Educational Movement, which is an indication, we think, that we have made one too many calls upon an already burdened people. In reality, there is little time or place left for the preachers to prepare and preach ringing, evangelical sermons after all the financial matters have been presented, and the multitudinous days have been observed. May we not be allowed now to call upon the people to "awake out of sleep" and with hearty repentance, renew their covenant and pay their vows to the Almighty? I could wish the ministry might be freed of every thought of money for a long time, and preach Repentance and Faith and Regeneration to the people who have been caught in the whirlwind of covetousness, idolatry and worldliness.

TO LAW-ABIDING MEN AND WOMEN ONLY.

Please see your representatives in the Louisiana Legislature at once. Request them to support a bill giving all our State courts the power to enforce the prohibition law as written in the Volstead Act, when our Legislature meets September 15, 1921.

It is no longer necessary to argue the prohibition question—that is settled. The question for you to put to your representative is, "Do you want to see the prohibition law enforced in your parish and State? If so, support such a law as referred to above."

Pastors will please publicly call attention of their congregations to the importance of immediate action. We must have relief from the criminal element and our local courts will act if given the authority by the Legislature.

I will appreciate a line giving the result of your conference with your legislators. Don't overlook your State senator.

This is a request to you personally; don't depend on some one else, but act yourself.

Yours to serve,

A. W. TURNER,

State Superintendent Louisiana Anti-Saloon League.

PERFECT IN LOVE.

"Perfect in love!"—Lord, can it be,
Amidst this state of doubt and sin?
While foes so thick without I see,
With weakness, pain, disease, within:
Can perfect love inhabit here,
And, strong in faith, extinguish fear?

O Lord! amidst this mental night,
Amidst the clouds of dark dismay, —Arise! arise! shed forth Thy light,
And kindle love's meridian day.
My Savior, God, to me appear,
So love shall triumph over fear.

THE NEW CHAIR IN MILLSAPS COLLEGE.

Dear Mr. Editor: Thanks to the splendid generosity of Mr. W. S. F. Tatum, of Hattiesburg, an honored layman of the Mississippi Conference, Millsaps College is to have a well endowed Chair of Christian Education. Brother Tatum has subscribed $100,000 for the maintenance of this chair, and fixed it so that instruction in this new department will begin with the opening of the next session of the College. It is contemplated that as soon as is practicable two men—a Professor and an Assistant Professor—shall be named for this work; but only the former is expected to be provided for the session of 1921-22. The election of the man for this professorship was left by the Board of Trustees in the hands of the Executive Committee of the College, which is composed of Bishop Murrah, Dr. Watkins, Rev. W. W. Woolard, Mr. W. M. Buie, and Mr. J. B. Streater. This Committee will doubtless meet in the near future and fill this important Chair. Applications for the place should be sent to Bishop W. B. Murrah, Memphis, Tenn., or Dr. A. F. Watkins, Jackson, Miss. For one, I hope that there may be a number of applications, for the reason that when there is a number of persons to pick from a better selection is apt to be made.

In my opinion, it would be difficult to exaggerate the importance of the establishment of this new Chair, and the need of exercising the utmost possible care in designating the man who is to occupy it. Though it is generally admitted to be the mightiest and most influential volume of all the ages, the ignorance existing concerning the Bible is very great. Ever and anon we see where students in some prominent educational institution are put to the test concerning its contents, and the answers that they give to the queries propounded are most astounding. Such ignorance would be deplorable, if nothing more were involved than the question of literary culture; but when the fact that the Bible is a Divine revelation and the world's greatest generator of moral and spiritual forces is taken into consideration, the absence of information concerning it becomes vastly more alarming. Under such circumstances, is it any wonder that in many lands things are drifting into such a state that Mr. Gilbert K. Chesterton's observation that the "very foundations of society seem to be giving way," appears to a considerable extent to be justified?

And even those who essay to expound and teach the Word of God too often have a very superficial knowledge of it. The mastery of the great Book of books, which is a library in itself, is not an easy task. It is far less difficult to become a great Shakespearean scholar than it is to become a great Biblical scholar. One may diligently study the Bible for a lifetime, yet he is certain to find that within the unfoldings of its pages there are still depths into which he has not penetrated and heights that he has not yet scaled.

Lightly filled, as it would have been filled by the late Dr. H. M. Hamill, or Bishop E. E. Hoss, or Bishop John H. Vincent, a Chair of Christian Education in Millsaps can exert an influence for good that will be far-reaching and immeasurable. It can give to the church in the coming years ministers who truly know the Scriptures and are sound in the faith—"workmen, approved unto God, that needeth not to be ashamed," and laymen of like soundness and large usefulness. Not simply trained men, but properly trained men, are the crying need of the times in which we are living. There is a training that makes a man, and there is a training that unmakes him—a training which, however pretentious may be its claims, he would be better off without.

It would be an irreparable calamity to the Methodism of Mississippi to have the Chair of Christian Education in Millsaps College occupied by an "evolutionist" and a devotee of the "higher criticism." To put such an instructor in that place would be to give him an opportunity to spread his subtle poison all over the State through the young men attending that institution. It would imperil the orthodoxy and the true efficiency of our ministry perhaps for generations. To be sure, we want a scholar for this Chair; but it does not take adherence to these vagaries to constitute scholarship. The lamented Bishop Hoss was admitted to be one of the most accomplished scholars that our church has produced, yet he was unaffected by these widespread contagions. "Evolution" has had a wide vogue for many years, and has found its way into great encyclopedias and many colleges and universities. Even some Methodist celebrities have been prating it, and bidding less favored itinerants who have not accepted it to keep silent concerning it. Yet the Nashville Christian Advocate of June 17 quotes Dr. Etheridge, of the British Museum, as having said: "In all this great museum there is not a particle of evidence of the transmutation of species. Nine-tenths of the talk of evolution is sheer nonsense, not founded on observation, and wholly unsupported by fact." The same journal represents a report of the Smithsonian Institution at Washington as saying: "Evolution was expunged from the pages of science so completely that it seemed it were forever buried beyond the hope of resurrection." Can it be that clericals smitten with a mania to be accounted learned are destined to be the last lone battlers—"the bitter-enders"—for this unscriptural "lost cause?"

I am aware in writing these lines that there are those in the church who will affirm that I am a narrow and needless alarmist. In anticipation of such a charge, I beg leave to quote the following pronouncement from that Christian statesman and worker, the Hon. W. J. Bryan, taken from The Commoner of June, 1921:

"Christian parents may not be aware of the extent to which the religious faith of their children is being undermined by an hypothesis—a guess—without a fact in the Bible or nature to support it. It rests wholly upon imagination and is defended with fiction that surpasses the wildest flights of the Arabian Nights. Having had an opportunity to make a personal investigation, I feel it my duty to warn the lovers of the Bible of the insidious attacks which are being made upon every vital part of the Word of God. A father tells me of a daughter educated at Wellesley who calmly informs him that no one believes in the Bible now; a teacher in Columbia University begins his lessons in geology by asking students to lay aside all that they have learned in the Sunday school; a professor in the University of Wisconsin tells his class that the Bible is a collection of myths; a professor of philosophy at Ann Arbor occupies a Sunday evening explaining to an audience that Christianity is a state of mind and that there are only two books in the Bible with any literary merit; another professor in the same institution informs students that he once taught a Sunday school class and was active in the Y. M. C. A., but that no thinking man can believe in God and the Bible; a woman teaching in the public schools in Indiana rebukes a boy for answering that Adam was the first man."

Nor can we truthfully say that these things happen only in State and private schools. Mr. Bryan further remarks: "A young man in South Carolina traces his atheism back to two teachers in a Christian college; * * * a professor in a Christian college writes a book in which the virgin birth of Christ is disputed." Rumors not a little alarming have been coming from some of our own Southern Methodist institutions; so it well behooves us to be on our guard.

In the sorely needed campaign for Christian education which has been made throughout our church, we have represented with repeated emphasis that our institutions are going to stand for a pure and soundly Scriptural instruction and training. Thousands of our communicants have given to this cause believing this to be true, and there could be no baser betrayal of a sacred trust than to fail to keep faith with our confiding people.

We have a great Methodism in Mississippi—a Methodism that is evangelical and true to the faith of our fathers. In this respect it is probably not surpassed by any Methodism in the world. Let us see that it is kept up to this high standard. The theology that is to-day lighting revival fires and ushering men into the Divine kingdom is the theology of the Apostles and of Wesley. The preaching of the plain truths given us in the Inspired Gospels, with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven, is, and has ever been, humanity's greatest need and the world's mightiest lifting power.

This article is not a protest against the election of any particular man to the Chair in Millsaps, nor an expression of distrust in its Board of Trustees or the Executive Committee of the College. It is only a plea for caution at this time when there is so much insidious error abroad in the land, and vigilance is the price of safety. In his memorable address at the dedication of Millsaps College, Bishop Charles B. Galloway, who had so much to do with its founding, said:

"The Christian sentiment of this college, for which we ask the patronage of church and State, must be positive and prominent. An institution in which the wild vagaries of an irresponsible liberalism are taught and the Word of God is handled ruthlessly, if not deceitfully, is no place for a boy to develop his expanding powers. The Christian character of a young man or young woman needs special care during college days. Away from home, away from the family altar and the parental eye, away from the home Sunday school and the family pew at the church service, and exposed to manifold temptations, there is demand for every possible safeguard and Christian help. If these collegiate days are safely passed without faith being unsettled or the life corrupted, the future is assured."

To this strong utterance I most heartily subscribe, and I pray that it may ever find practical illustration in Millsaps College, the pride of Methodism.

R. A. MEEK,

A Member of the Board of Trustees.

THINGS TO REMEMBER.

Dear Brother Carley: While determining how soon we will subscribe the balance on the Educational fund, we should remember:

1. The supreme value of our children.
2. That generally seasons of financial depression last only a short time and that we have several years in which to make payments. If we have little or nothing now, we may have later what is needed, and we "should show our faith by our works."
3. That we must either pay for making education Christian or we must pay for its remaining unchristian. The necessity is upon us. To say nothing of results in character and service, which bill would we rather pay? I heard a man say he had no money for a good book; that the meat and bread question was the first question at his house; that his family had to live. His family broke his heart and he paid out thousands of dollars in expensive lawsuits to keep his sons out of jail and from the gallows. His queenly daughter went to the bad. What has German education cost Germany? What has it cost mankind? We can not even go to the drug store to buy medicine to save the life of a dying babe without paying tribute to the god of War. We groan to-day under taxes grievous to bear, but ninety-three per cent of these taxes is because of war past or war feared. Which bill would we rather pay—to let education remain unchristian or to make it Christian? If we are not able to pay for Christian education, how are we going to settle the other account? How long will it be before we learn that godliness is the cheapest thing in the world and that ungodliness is the most expensive?

If it is the last thing we do in this world, let us put over the rest of this subscription and die decent. This is one of the momentous duties that we can not afford to dally with.

Cordially yours,

ROLFE HUNT.

Port Gibson, Miss.

LET US BE UP AND DOING!

By Rev. H. P. Lewis.

It looks as if Southern Methodism should be ashamed of itself. Here we are a great church and have only paid about one-fifth of our Centenary pledges, when three-fifths should be paid; and only about half of the Education quota has been subscribed. The Southern Baptists have already paid about $26,000,000 on their $75,000,000, and they began their movement six months after our Centenary. Of the amount they subscribed, $28,000,000 is set apart for education. And, today, the hammers are humming, the saws are buzzing, the stones and brick are slipping into place as they are enlarging their educational resources, while Southern Methodists are laying down on the job, crying, "Inopportune" and "Hard Times." Some are talking about quitting the church. We had better pull down our shingle and declare to the world that we are not in it when it comes to forward movements during these momentous days of world reconstruction.

Where is the heroism of our forefathers? Why won't our people underwrite the future of Southern Methodism so she may do well her part in this new day in bringing in God's Kingdom? I am ashamed of our present showing and alarmed for the future. Satan rejoices as Methodists grow indifferent and defiant towards the Education Movement. "Put on thy strength, O Zion." Let us no longer hesitate, but shoulder our part of the responsibility for bringing in Christ's Kingdom among men. As the revival fires are lighted in every charge this summer, see to it that the revival reaches the point where each church will joyfully assume its part of our great Education program, and there will be no defeat.

A GOOD NAME.

The man who gauges success by dollars is a fool. Not long ago a big contractor in a certain city, who had become wealthy by hard toil, forgot to be honest, became mixed up in a big building scandal, and was tried for perjury. The jury disagreed, and he had to face the prospect of another trial. The disgrace of it all preyed on his mind, his health gave way, and now he is dead. The head officer of the greatest United States bank in the western world had to retire because of a scandal, and his many millions could not protect him. In another case a man of wealth and great political power, who had been notorious for his defiance of public opinion, broke down recently in his club and cried like a child. He didn't care, he said, for himself, but he would give all he had in the world to save his wife and daughters from the secret and open affronts to which they were subjected. The man who thinks that wealth will atone for everything does not understand public opinion.

Long ago a Jew, who knew quite well what money meant, wrote thus: "A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches;" and to-day men are finding it to be true. Of what use is great wealth if we know that our honesty is impugned, our integrity scoffed at, and our patriotism openly challenged. It is easy enough to say that a good conscience is sufficient approval, but it is wormwood and gall to a man to know that his fellows despise him as a dishonored man, and hold his very wealth as a sufficient proof of his dishonor.

These facts should be brought very clearly and fully before our young people especially, for not a few of them will probably be tempted to think that success cancels all sins, and that if we can only amass enough wealth, we can snap our fingers at public opinion. But public opinion is not just the trifle some of us imagine. Many and many a time it has proved potent enough to shut every door to advancement, and to bring a man, with his millions, to the position of a social and political pariah. And this feeling is increasing rapidly, so much so that, in some cases, to be rich is held to be synonymous with being dishonest.

There may have been a time when wealth passed unchallenged, but it is not to-day, and on every hand we hear men freely discussing not principally how rich a man is, but how he made his wealth. And more than ever a certificate of character is being demanded of every man before he is entrusted with any office of public responsibility. And the good name is coming to its own. To be known as an honest man, a man who will accord to every one a square deal, a man who puts his country and his community first and himself last, a man who is fair and thoughtful and temperate and clean, a good father and a good citizen, is worth more than millions of money. And this choice is open to each one of us. We may miss the millions even after we have perjured our souls to get them, but if we choose the clean Christian life we shall certainly, by God's grace, attain it. — Christian Guardian.

MAKE IT THE CLIMAX!

July 3 is Americanization Day. Shall we not make it the climax of our Christian Education Movement? We have been calling our people back to true Americanism and trying to rally them to drive out false ideals in our education and to restore the Christian education of our fathers. Will we make one more supreme attempt to put our churches over the top? Let us get on our knees and pray, pray, pray! Then, rise from our knees and work, work, work!

We need the baptism of the Holy Ghost to help us to make sacrificial pledges in the interest of His Kingdom. "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it." Can we claim the promise?

We are anxious to have all the reports and pledge cards in as soon as possible. We are counting on every charge bringing up its quota some day in the future, if not now. God wills it and it shall be done!

Yours in Christ,

ALBERT S. LUTZ,
Conference Secretary of Education.

MESSAGE OF THE COMMISSION TO THE CHURCH.

From the beginning the leadership of the church has recognized the Christian Education Movement as perhaps the most important task which Southern Methodism has ever undertaken. Its objectives have caught and held the mind of the thoughtful men and women throughout the whole connection and engaged their support as nothing else has done. No other cause has appealed to bishops, preachers and laymen as this cause has appealed. The general result is that the Christian Education Movement in what it has accomplished up to this time presents a profoundly impressive record of achievement and promise.

1. Approximately $18,000,000 have been pledged to the carrying out of the Objectives of the Movement, and there is a deep and widespread determination on the part of the people not to stop until the full $33,000,000 have been pledged. The pledging of so much money in times like these and under conditions of financial loss and a consequent depression of mood, such as the world has never before experienced, is an accomplishment of extraordinary significance. It means, among other things, that a people can do anything they desire to do under any conditions whatsoever, if they have the will to do it, and the spiritual forces of faith, courage, loyalty, consecration, sacrifice are mightier than any combination of material forces. In a word, our task was fundamentally not a financial one, but a religious one, and that where the great religious motives were reached financial success followed.

2. It is clear that when we begin to reckon important results, Southern Methodism has been to a great school during these recent months and has learned lessons of tremendous significance. These lessons have been brought to the mind of the church through the printed and spoken word in such a way that we may say that our membership has been educated into new conceptions of Christian education and its need of the necessity of the application of educational processes to the development of a conquering religious life, of the supremely important place of the Christian college in the progress of the church and the saving of the world, and of the fact that these institutions cannot render the service they are expected to render without adequate equipment and endowment, and that the church is under the compulsion of a divine call to furnish the necessary means. Furthermore, this phase of the campaign has been wonderfully successful in the conviction it has wrought into the minds of the real leadership of the church that the success of the Christian Education Movement is vital and fundamental to the future efficiency of the work of the church. Our thoughtful preachers and laymen are realizing as never before that it is almost entirely from our own institutions that are to come the men and the women who are to carry forward the activities of the church and that, therefore, the duty of furnishing the money needed by these institutions is a duty just as imperative as that of furnishing the money needed by any other work of the church, or even of the support of the members thereof.

3. Our men and women of heart and intellect have, therefore, acquired the conviction that the Christian Education Movement now has a continuing program for all the objectives, financial and spiritual, and that we dare not cease our efforts till all of them are realized. It is clear that we have now not only a thinking and an understanding church, but a church with convictions and a conscience. And this of itself must be reckoned as an achievement of immense importance, because a church so minded cannot fail to carry forward to full completion all the plans and purposes of the Movement. Therefore, the Commission feels that it would not be faithful to the great task if it did not give to every charge in the church opportunity to complete its quota when conditions become more favorable. Scattered throughout the connection are charges which never before failed in any duty which the church put upon them. Such charges only await another opportunity to show how true and loyal they are in heart.

4. With such a heroic achievement behind us, with the promise of so much ahead of us, with such immeasurable gains in hand to build on, the Commission is confident that the whole church is inspired to go forward and triumphantly realize every objective of the Movement. The Every-Member-Cavass will close with the individual church when it raises its quota, and with the church at large when it raises the full $33,000,000, and the movement will close in Eternity.

BACK BAY METHODIST CHURCH.

Last Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock Rev. Waldo W. Moore held the first service in the Back Bay Methodist Church at Biloxi, Miss. This church was enterprised by Brother Moore in the early part of the spring, and work was begun on it in May. The edifice will be completed when the windows and doors are swung, which will probably be done this week. No provision has as yet been made for seating the church, and the money with which to purchase pews is not in hand. Brother Moore has organized a Sunday school with an enrollment of 60, but no effort has as yet been made in the direction of organizing a church, it being deemed wise, to wait until the building is completed. There are a great many Protestant people living across the bay from Biloxi and this is the only Protestant church in the neighborhood. Quite a few Methodists live in and around Back Bay, and Brother Moore is in high favor with the residents of the community. He says that when the edifice is finished and completely furnished there will be a debt of about $150, but he is hopeful that friends will come to his assistance and subscribe this small amount. The members of the Biloxi Methodist Church, of which Rev. M. B. Sharbrough is pastor, have assisted greatly in making the enterprise possible. Brother Moore serves the Wesley Memorial circuit, which includes the Wesley House work at the east end of Biloxi.

WATER BAPTISM.

Matt. 3:11.

(A Sermon preached by Rev. J. D. Wroten, at Moorhead, Miss.)

Because we Methodists do not find time to preach denominational doctrine, we have often been accused of having no doctrine. The Methodists however, have, in these latter years felt that our doctrines are so broad and convincing that we do not need to defend them every time we preach. We feel also that any denomination whose doctrines have to be defended all the time is likely to fall to pieces at any moment. Furthermore, we feel that doctrinal sermons should not be preached often because such preaching always causes hard feelings between the churches. Methodism was born in a revival and all the way her mission has been to preach repentance, faith, and obedience to God. Consequently we find little time to carry on disputes with other denominations.

Why am I preaching on "Water Baptism" to-night? In the first place, if I may be frank, I am preaching on it because a doctrine contrary to that of Methodists on this subject has recently been put very pointedly to me and my congregation when visiting our sister church (Baptist) across the bayou.

In the second place, I am preaching on this because some of our Methodist young folk have been told recently by some persons of another faith that if they were not immersed they would be lost. This disturbed those young minds and of course in the face of all this I could not remain silent.

What is water baptism? Let me read you Mr. Webster's definition. Here it is: "Baptism is a baptizing; an application of water to a person as a religious ceremony, initiating him into the visible church of Christ." Aside from this, it is a symbol of what the Holy Spirit has done to our spirits. I do not suppose that any one of any order would dispute this. This being true, then the water should be used as God uses His Spirit. And we read: "And it shall come to pass in the last days, saith God, I will pour out my Spirit upon all flesh." Acts 2:16. Again: "While Peter yet spake these words the Holy Ghost fell upon all them that heard the word." Again we read that on the Day of Pentecost the Spirit came down upon the people's heads as cloven tongues of fire, and at the baptism of Christ, the Spirit, as a dove, came down upon Christ, etc.

You will pardon me to-night if I refer to the sermon preached last Sunday night by our Baptist brother, because he advanced some arguments that will have to be touched upon to make this subject clear. I shall make these references in a friendly spirit, and because that it is essential that I do so. I was glad that the brother used John the Baptizer as his proof of immersion. Why was John called Baptist? Because he was a baptizer WITH water. He was not a Baptist and founder of the Baptist church, for the Baptist church was founded fifteen hundred years later by Roger Williams in Rhode Island. You likely noticed in to-day's Commercial Appeal where President Harding shoveled the first dirt away from the place where they are building in Washington a $500,000 memorial building to Roger Williams, "the founder of the Baptist church." So our good brother should not have referred to John the Herald of Christ as the founder of the Baptist denomination.

The speaker last Sunday night said that Christ accepted the work of John and that his work was preaching and baptizing. Further on we were told that the baptizing was immersion. In his Scripture lesson he read the first ten verses of the third chapter of Matthew and got from this that John was immersing because it said that John was baptizing "in the Jordan." All of you who have studied physical geography know that a river is not the water alone but the basin and the water. When the river is not full of water, you have to go down into the river even to stand by the edge of the water. Like the priests of old when they were carrying the Ark across the Jordan, it says that they came into the Jordan and stood at the edge of the water, and so on. All his ideas here as to whether John was immersing or not could have been cleared up if he had only read one verse further in Matthew, third chapter, for that verse is John's own words telling us plainly just how he was baptizing over there. Let's read it. "I indeed baptize you WITH water—." It seems to me that John, that good old Methodist bishop, could come more nearly telling us just how he was doing that thing than we preachers who live two thousand years later than his day. He says that it was with water. If you do not want to believe John about it, then we will bring another witness on the stand, a witness that was never known to lie or to sin. His name is above every name—his name is Jesus. He was accepting John's baptizing, and let's see what mode he, the Son of God, said John was using. Acts 1:5 we have it: "John truly baptized WITH water—." You know I am inclined to believe John and Jesus in preference to any man or men I ever heard preach. Even in the version of the Bible which puts this preposition to mean "IN" instead of "WITH," they add in the marginal note this statement, "OR WITH." The translators of the King James Version put it "WITH" water and those of the Revised Version put it "IN" water with the marginal note, as said above, "OR WITH." You see then that all these highly educated men are unwilling to say positively that "IN" water is the only meaning, but admit that "WITH" is just as good. The King James translators put it "WITH" water and use no marginal reference saying that "IN" is just as good. And all of us know that the King James Version is the version accepted among most all Bible readers as the most desirable version. In the face of all of this, how can any man stand up and say that immersion ONLY was meant!

"One faith, one Lord, and one baptism." The baptism spoken of here is an essential baptism. Then, if it is water baptism, it is not essential that we have the baptism of the Holy Spirit. To see which is the important baptism, the essential baptism, let's bring John and Christ on the stand again. Listen to John. "I indeed baptize you with water unto repentance: BUT He that cometh after me is mightier than I, whose shoes I am not worthy to bear: He SHALL baptize you WITH the HOLY GHOST." Hear also Jesus. "John truly baptized WITH water; BUT ye SHALL be baptized WITH the HOLY GHOST." If you do not say that the one baptism spoken of in the expression, "ONE FAITH, ONE LORD, ONE BAPTISM" is the baptism of the Holy Spirit, then you are making both John and Christ to be untruthful in their statements. You may do as you like, but so long as I live I am going to believe them. This was the only baptism that the thief on the cross got. Of course we baptize with any mode a person wants; however, we prefer sprinkling or pouring, because we feel that water baptism is a mark to mark out the member from the non-member, etc.

It was twenty years after John was baptizing before a single book of the New Testament was written. What book did he have to get his mode of baptism from? He had the Old Testament. Neither profane nor sacred history tells us that he was instructed to change from the old method of baptizing to some other. His was the Old Testament mode. That mode was sprinkling. God said, "Then will I sprinkle clean water upon you and ye shall be clean, from all your filthiness and from all your idols will I cleanse you." Paul said, "Draw nigh with a pure heart and have your heart sprinkled from an evil conscience and your bodies washed (ceremonially cleansed) WITH pure water."

In I Cor. 10:12, Paul tells us that the Israelites were all baptized under a cloud in the sea to Moses. In Exodus, regarding the same event, we are told that the children of Israel walked on DRY land in the MIDST of the sea (not IN water, you see, although they were IN the sea like John was baptizing IN Jordan). In Psalms 77:17 we read where the cloud that they were under "POURED OUT WATER." They were baptized on dry ground and the water was poured upon them.

"Buried with Him by baptism" is thus spoken of by Clarke, one of the most generally accepted commentators: "It is probable that the apostle alludes to immersion here, but it is not certain. In the next verse, our being incorporated into Christ by baptism is also denoted by our being planted or rather grafted together in the likeness of His death: and Noah's Ark floating upon the water and sprinkled by the rain from heaven, is a figure corresponding to baptism, but neither of these gives us the same idea of the outward form as BURYING. The grand point is, that this baptism represents our death to sin, and our obligation to walk in newness of life; without which, of what use can it, or any other rite be?" This should be convincing at least to the point that no scholar believes in just one mode of water baptism.

"Straightway up out of the water" is a much used expression to prove immersion. Let's see the meaning of the expression. Straightway means immediately. The Greek preposition translated "out of," here according to Dr. M. W. Swarts, formerly professor of Greek at Millsaps College, means "out from" three hundred times in the New Testament and "out of" forty times. It is most likely from the contents that it means here "out from," making the passage to read: "And Jesus immediately went out from the water." This would be in absolute accord with the way that both John and Christ said that John baptized Christ.

The speaker Sunday night used Philip and the Eunuch as an example to prove that we must go "down into the water," stating that the Greek word "eis" in all Greek lexicons he had examined meant "IN" or "under." I happen to have a Greek lexicon which was my good old friend for six years in college and seminary while I studied Greek, and it disputes our good Baptist brother's statement. It says that "eis" means direction towards, motion to, in or into. So, you see, its first two meanings never get you into or in a thing. Then it follows that into does not always mean "in" or "under." This word never means "in" unless compounded with a verb, and it is not compounded here. Any of you may see for yourselves in your Greek Testaments.

Let's look at Philip and the Eunuch. "And they went down BOTH into the water, BOTH Philip and the Eunuch, and he baptized him." So, you see, INTO refers to the preacher, Philip, just as it does to the candidate; therefore, if "into" means "under," then the preacher must go under with the person he immerses. And we hear much from our good Baptist preachers about "Going all the way." So if this verse is to be used as proof of immersion, I want to see its advocates go all the way under with the candidate.

Paul was in jail one night and divinity unloosed him and the jailer sprang in and wanted to know what he could do to be saved, and Paul told him; and before daylight that jailer and his HOUSEHOLD were baptized. This meant his children and all. They were not carried out to be baptized, because next morning the officers sent word to let Paul and Silas go, but Paul refused to go, wanting those who had put him there to let him out.

The Greeks were referred to on Sunday night as patterns to follow in mode of baptism, as they were the fathers of "BAPTISMO," so I went up to see our Greeks at the Bon Ton Cafe, and lo, they told me that all Greeks were baptized in infancy. So, you see, if our good friend (and I must not let myself speak of him otherwise than friend) places Greeks up as authority, he will have to believe and practice infant baptism.

In the face of what I have given you to-night, all of which I wish the Baptist pastor would have come and heard, I hope that we may get on a higher plane and recognize the other fellow's views and not preach contrary to the other fellow's views, but try to have the community as one, where there is not denominational hatred, but love, peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost. We can not have love, peace, and joy if we criticize the other fellow's religion every time he comes to hear us preach. I do hope that some good will come from this service, although holding to my Methodist views that doctrinal sermons do not advance the Kingdom as do others, I fear that this sermon has not done the good that one on the "Nature of Christ" or "New Life" would have done.

The Home Circle

CATS, INDIANS, AND ENGLISHMEN.

When you read the name of this story, you don't know exactly what it is to be about, do you? So while you are still guessing, I'll tell you that it's about Billy Burns.

Billy Burns brought his report-card home from school one day and pulled it reluctantly out of its yellow envelope. "A—B, A—, C," read mother over his shoulder, and then she stopped. "Why, Billy?" she sighed, "D in history? I wonder what the matter is? Your other marks always make me feel proud till we get to history."

"I can't fasten things together," said Billy, a little frown between his brown eyes.

"Fasten things together?" Mother's voice was puzzled though interested.

"I can't remember when who did what," said Billy, and though mother smiled at his language, she understood perfectly.

"Maybe we can find a way to fasten things together," she said hopefully. "I want to run down cellar and change the furnace drafts, then we'll have luncheon," she said.

"Kitty down cellar?" Billy called after her. "If he is, I'm coming after him." Kitty was a new member of the family and as yet unnamed.

"He's asleep; let him alone," mother called softly back. "Asleep by the furnace in the nice box-bed you fixed for him."

"Why, mother," said Billy, round-eyed, "that's what we had in our history to learn for this afternoon."

"Billy!" said mother. "As if there were cats and furnaces in your history lesson!"

"Not furnaces," said Billy, laughing with her, "and not cats, but that's just what the Indians said when they found an Englishman asleep."

"Said what?" asked mother, completely at sea. "There weren't any furnaces when Indians were prowling after Englishmen. Billy, what are we both talking about?"

"Whenever the Indians came across an Englishman asleep in the woods they would say, 'He is an Englishman; he is asleep; let him alone.'"

"Oh!" said mother. "Now I see about the cats and furnaces. But what Indians said that, and when? I didn't remember Indians and Englishmen were so friendly in the early days."

"That's just the trouble," said Billy. "I can't remember what Indians, and when, and it was something about Friends—not friendly, the way you just said it."

"What's the difference? If they were friends, they were friendly."

"It was Friends, with a capital F right in the middle of the sentence. And I did study it, and I can't remember, and we have to know it this afternoon."

"Of course—Friends! I'm beginning to remember now myself," said mother. "Just you wait a minute, Billy Burns, and you'll take all the honors in history this afternoon." Mother ran upstairs to her own book-shelves and when back at the table she turned the pages of a worn brown book. "Here's the place," she triumphed, and read two paragraphs aloud to Billy, who, though he listened, shook his head doubtfully.

"Of course you'll remember," insisted mother. "I'm going to hang everything in these two paragraphs on separate little pegs inside your head, and when you get up to recite this afternoon you can take them down in order, just as if they were clothes hung in a row."

"Gray clothes," laughed Billy. "Quakers wore gray clothes, didn't they? Who are the Friends it talks about?"

"Why, Billy, the Friends were the Quakers. I wonder why the history doesn't say so more plainly."

"Then we'll name Kitty 'Quaker'!" said Billy. "'Cause he's my friend, and his coat is gray."

"Of course," agreed mother, instantly. "Now kitty has fastened Quakers and Friends together for us, and next he's going to fasten Indians and Englishmen together and the lesson is learned!"

"Can he?" Billy's interest didn't lag this time. "How?"

"Because the Quakers were peaceful and gentle and they made a treaty with the Indians, and because the Indians thought the treaty was a fair one they thought better of all Englishmen. So after that, when they found an Englishman asleep in the woods they didn't scalp him; they remembered the Quakers and left him unmolested."

"I can remember that," said Billy, "if I think about kitty."

"Exactly," said mother. "And you said in the beginning that you could remember what the treaty was about, so now all you have to remember is that the Indians made it at Burlington, in 1674—Burlington, New Jersey. Surely you can remember that?"

"No, I can't," said Billy, positively. "I don't know why, but I can't."

"Yes, you can. You're going to know all your history lesson this afternoon," said mother, just as positively. "And every day after this you're going to know your history lesson, because I'm going to help you. Scamper upstairs and get a red crayon and come with me. We've only five minutes, but you're going to remember, and next time we'll have less primitive methods. Quick! I'll be down cellar."

"He's asleep; let him alone," whispered mother, two minutes later.

"He's a Quaker," chuckled Billy.

"Now write Burlington, New Jersey, in big red letters on his box-house—that's it! Now crayon 1674—play it's his telephone number."

"Mother!"

"Anything to fasten it in your mind," mother whispered back, laughing. "We'll be more sensible next time."

That afternoon when the teacher asked the first history questions, Billy's hand shot up.

"Billy?" asked Miss Brown, pleased and surprised. "Can you tell us all about the treaty, Billy?"

Billy jumped to his feet and recited without a second's hesitation. And all the time he was talking, what do you suppose he saw? A little round fur-ball of a gray kitten asleep in a wooden box on one side of which was chalked in tall red letters, "Burlington, New Jersey, 1674."

"I hope the others know the lesson as well," said Miss Brown, approvingly, after he finished. After school she asked Billy to stay a minute, and when they were alone she said: "I've been troubled about your history, Billy, but today's lesson was perfect. What made such a difference?"

"My cat," said Billy, promptly.

"Billy! I'm not joking, den."

"No, Miss Brown, I'm not joking. It was my cat," and gravely he told the story of the lunch hour.

"Oh, I see," said Miss Brown. "Perhaps the cat has helped me, too. So you can't remember before when and where who did what?" She smiled in spite of herself. "And the cat fastened everything together? I'm going to see if I can't learn history from that cat."

"Mother said she was going to help me every day," said Billy, happily, at the same time pulling the signed report-card out of his pocket. "And she thinks there won't be any more D's. Mother's just as good as the cat," he added, his voice all praise. "Do you think 'Quaker' is a good name for him?"—Anne Blair, in The Christian Register.

THE ARAB'S BEST FRIEND.

Many Americans know just about three facts concerning the camel: He has a remarkable hump on his back; he is used as a beast of burden, and he can go without drinking longer than most animals.

To the Arab, the camel means far more; not only can he carry his master and most of his master's worldly goods, but he can supply, when necessary, nearly all the fundamental essentials of life.

The camel's flesh is decidedly edible. When young it tastes like veal, and the hump, Arabs say, has the flavor of beef. The milk is excellent and nutritious, though it supplies no butter.

Food and drink are worth much, but this wonderful beast goes farther. He supplies much of the natives' clothing. Every summer the long hair is shorn and woven into a variety of articles—chiefly clothing and tent coverings. It was in camel's-hair garments that John the Baptist appeared as a preacher. The thick hide of the camel makes good leather. Food, drink, shelter, clothing, draft service, docility, and reliability—surely this is a great deal from one animal. Our Dumb Animals.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate. The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after three or four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise, use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least an inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

Editorial

"THE REAL VICTORY."

Under the above caption, President Henry N. Snyder, of Wofford College, gives in the Southern Christian Advocate of June 23 such a clear analysis of the results of the Christian Education Movement that we cannot forbear giving it to our readers in full. It ought to inspire us to even greater zeal in realizing the financial objective of the Movement. His statement is as follows:

"The Christian Education Movement in the thought of those who had its program in charge was never anything else than a 'Movement'—a movement which had as its fundamental intention the enlightenment of the mind of the whole church as to the meaning of Christian education, conquering the convictions of the church as to imperative need of Christian education at this time and winning the church's whole-hearted, intelligent co-operation to apply, by approved methods, the principles of religious education as the means of increasing immeasurably the service of the church to the world of to-day and to-morrow.

"Never for one moment throughout the campaign did those to whom the General Conference had committed this great cause forget or lose sight of these high purposes. Over and over again, in speech and on printed page, they affirmed that the 'spiritual objectives' were the main things of the Movement, that if they failed to win the spiritual objectives and won the financial objectives, they were but leaders in a lost cause, that if they secured the money that was asked for and yet did not realize the spiritual objectives, it would be a victory they could ill afford to boast of.

"From this standpoint we can even now begin to count our gains and take the measure of our victory.

"1. Southern Methodism understands as it has never understood before what is meant by Christian education and the need of it in the life of the church and of the world. Our people, laymen and preachers, have been in a great school these recent months, and unless they are either very dull or very indifferent pupils, they will never forget the lessons they have learned. The life of the church and of the South can never be the same morally because of our new understanding of the meaning of Christian education, and only the long future can set the measure of our gains.

"2. We know now as we have not known before, that Christian character is not the product of a movement but the result of a process of training, and to secure this result we must bring to our aid by means of intelligently directed co-operation all the educational agencies and influences of life—the home, the Sunday school, young people's societies, the school, the college, and the university. That the Christian Education Movement has been able to set up thousands of new family altars in our Methodist homes, multiply to an unprecedented degree the number of daily Bible readers, throw a new light on the Sunday school and the Epworth League, to bring about the discovery and application of the best methods of religious training—represents an achievement of large and permanent foundation-building for the church of the future.

"3. The necessity for the finding of a leadership adequate in numbers and properly trained for all the activities of the church—ministerial and lay—if the church is to conserve its gains of the past and render a greater service in the future, has been profoundly impressed upon the mind and conscience of the whole church by the Christian Education Movement. The results are that all our institutions of learning stand pledged to departments of religious education and training and more than five thousand of our choicest young people have consecrated their lives to the service of the church and are ready to enter upon the necessary training. Many are saying, and rightly, that had the Christian Education Movement accomplished nothing else than this, it would have been worth all the effort and money spent to secure such results.

"4. Under the direction and influence of the Christian Education Movement certain great fundamentals of religious training have been taught and preached with a new emphasis and understanding. The meaning of prayer, the call to life-service, the doctrine of the stewardship of time, talents and money are matters that have to do with the development and practical application of the spiritual resources of our people. These—prayer, life-service, stewardship—are the forces in proportion as they are vital and intelligently directed, that will make us a conquering church and will finally build our institutions to the point where they will be the agencies of service they ought to be.

"5. Finally, not only must every thoughtful Methodist have come to a clearer understanding of the needs of our educational institutions and their place in the church and society, but also few Methodists can have escaped the invigorating influence of the spiritual appeals that have been made in these days of depression due to financial conditions. The Christian Education Movement has not shut its eyes to the hard, material facts of life, but has helped our people bear them better, and, in thousands of cases, to rise superior to them by calling into action the great spiritual motives of life—faith, loyalty, courage, consecration and a willingness to sacrifice. There is simply no standard of accounting by which to measure the worth of the Movement to our people by this bringing into gallant play in times like these such royal motives of our human nature. The times, instead of being inopportune, as many said, were tremendously opportune, because no other motives could have helped our people so much as those of faith, courage, loyalty, consecration, sacrifice, and we shall, on this account, be forever a greater church spiritually because the Christian Education Movement gave thousands of us the chance to conquer facts by mightier than facts.

"Therefore, whatever the attainment of the financial objective may turn out to be, the fact is that the Christian Education Movement has achieved a great victory in the matter of its spiritual objectives. We should never be the same church on account of this victory, but a greater and stronger church, and, indeed, in the end all the money, and more, that was asked for will be secured. And the time will come, as the large results of the movement begin to show themselves, when all who shared in it in any way, in the money they gave or in the co-operative support they so loyally furnished, will be glad and proud of their service as soldiers of the common good at a time when understanding and faith counted as they never counted before, and those who in any way stood aside, were cold and lukewarm, will wonder at their blindness in the presence of such a cause and feel a bit ashamed for letting 'conditions' sap their courage and take from them their faith when the call of the hour was in reality so imperative and progress of the future so deeply involved."

A LITTLE VISIT WITH ALABAMA METH- ODISTS.

An invitation from the authorities of the Alabama Conference Standard Training School to teach the course in Bible, gave us the delightful privilege of spending the second week in June in the beautiful and historic city of Montgomery, Ala., in association with as choice a group of people as could be found anywhere under the sun. The School was held at the Woman's College of Alabama, the institution over which Dr. M. W. Swartz, formerly of Millsaps College, presides so efficiently and which has had remarkable growth during his administration. The enrollment of the college was over three hundred last session, and more than two hundred applicants were turned away for lack of room. It will be of interest to our Mississippi readers especially to know that Professor C. A. Bowen, son of the late distinguished Rev. J. A. Bowen, of the North Mississippi Conference, is vice president of the institution and head of the Department of Bible and Religious Education, in which position he has done a remarkably effective work.

In the work of the Standard Training School we had the honor of being associated with Mr. C. M. Dannelly, the Alabama Conference Sunday School Field Secretary (than whom there is none better); Mr. Wm. L. Lancaster, Dean of the School, prominent in the business, the political, and the religious life of the State; Mr. M. W. Brabham, Superintendent of the Department of Rural Work of the General Sunday School Board; Rev. J. Calloway Robertson, pastor of Mt. Vernon M. E. Church, South, Danville, Va.; Professor C. A. Bowen; Miss Anna Marie Hansen, Winter Haven, Fla.; Miss Willie Allen, Atlanta, Ga.; Miss Nannie Baker, Mobile, Ala.; Miss Alle May Sessions, Superintendent of Teacher-Training in the Alabama Conference, and Miss Hazel Covington, Conference Elementary Superintendent. In addition to these, we heard with profit addresses by Dr. Guy E. Snively, president of Birmingham-Southern College, Dr. C. A. Rush, and Dr. E. B. Chappell. It was impossible but that we bring away a great deal more than we could possibly give in contact with such notable workers in the field of religious education.

More than one hundred students were enrolled in the School, choice representatives of the Sunday schools throughout the Conference. The attendance was not as large as was at first anticipated, but the fact that the educational campaign was in progress at the beginning made it impracticable for many of those who had signified their intention of being present to attend. The local attendance was cut down, also, by the fact that a great meeting, conducted by Bob Jones, was in progress in the city, and the organization of workers for the meeting included many of the most active Sunday school teachers and officials in the community. The School was an unqualified success, however, keen interest being manifested from the beginning to the very end.

It is our judgment that the value of such schools to the church at large cannot be overestimated. The time has passed, if it ever was, when we can hope to discharge our responsibility for the Christian training of our children and young people, to say nothing of the adult population of the community, by turning over to untrained teachers the delicate, difficult, and supremely important work of instruction in the fundamental principles of religious knowledge. We can continue to do some kind of work in some kind of way with untrained teachers; but we cannot do the right kind of work in the right kind of way with them. We are hoping and praying that these training schools in our own Conferences, enterprised, advocated, and conducted by our own faithful field secretaries, may soon come to be recognized by all our people as affording the best means at hand for furnishing skilled instructors in the Sunday school.

It was especially pleasant to us to meet, while

In Montgomery, Dr. H. S. Spragins, who has won a large place in the life of the city by his ministry at the great Court Street Church. He and his good wife brought us under lasting obligations by delightful social courtesies.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

There have been ninety-six additions to the membership of the First Methodist Church, Greenville, Miss., since December 1.

Rev. H. M. Ellis, Rev. A. M. Broadfoot, and Rev. V. G. Clifford remained over Sunday on the Coast following the adjournment of the Divinity School.

Rev. J. C. Price, the pastor, was assisted in a good meeting recently at Bernice, La., by Rev. J. Cude Rousseaux, our pastor at Spring Hill, La.

The Advocate office enjoyed a call from Mr. Z. Z. Linton, of Fernwood, Miss., on Friday of last week. Mr. Linton is one of the active laymen of the Mississippi Conference.

A good report comes to us of the work of the Winnfield circuit, Louisiana Conference, Rev. F. P. Moss, pastor. There is an active Sunday school at each of the five preaching places.

Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Buie, of Jackson, Miss., will leave in the near future for a visit to Europe. While abroad, they will attend the Ecumenical Conference, to which Mr. Buie is a delegate.

We have heard the singing of the quartet at the Seashore Divinity School highly complimented. The quartet was composed of Rev. J. E. Selfe, Rev. C. A. Massey, Rev. H. M. Andrews, and Rev. J. L. Evans.

Dr. S. A. Steel delivered his great lecture, "Methodist Pioneers," at Lake Charles, La., recently, at a meeting in honor of the one hundred members who have been received into the church at that place this year.

The committee to select the place of holding the next General Conference has decided upon Hot Springs, Ark. We do not know of a place in the whole church that can more efficiently take care of such a large gathering.

Dr. R. H. Wynn, presiding elder of the Shreveport District, Louisiana Conference, honored the Advocate office with a call on Friday of last week while passing through the city en route home from the Seashore Divinity School.

The Oxanna Methodist Church, of Anniston, Ala., of which Rev. A. H. Williams, formerly of the North Mississippi Conference, is pastor, raised its quota in the educational campaign in a comparatively short time.

A note from Rev. J. H. Hoffpaulr informs us that the work of the Branch charge, Louisiana Conference, is moving along very nicely. Twelve members have been received at the regular services on profession of faith since Conference.

Dr. J. M. Sullivan, of Millsaps College, Jackson, Miss., honored the Advocate office with a call while passing through the city on Saturday of last week. He reported that the outlook for attendance at Millsaps next year is very fine.

Press dispatches from Nashville, Tenn., on June 22, announced that the Book Committee had unanimously elected Rev. G. T. Rowe, D.D., editor of the North Carolina Christian Advocate, as Book Editor, to succeed the late Dr. F. M. Thomas.

Dr. J. D. Simpson, pastor of Woodlawn Church, Birmingham, Ala., died suddenly on June 18. Dr. Simpson was one of the most distinguished and useful members of the North Alabama Conference, having held many prominent positions in the church.

It has been announced that Dr. Luther Sexton, of New Orleans, has given $25,000 for the establishment of a Department of Commerce in Centenary College, Shreveport, La. Dr. Sexton is a distinguished citizen of this city and an official member of First Church.

Rev. H. Whitehead, of Birmingham, Ala., honored the Advocate office with a call one day last week. The editor greatly regrets being out at the time. Brother Whitehead was formerly a member of the Louisiana Conference, and he still has a warm place in the hearts of his brethren.

The Seashore Divinity School was unusually delightful and profitable this year, according to reports reaching us. The program was well carried out, and all who were in attendance were delighted with its various features. Ten ministers completed the work of the Fourth Year.

The Spring Hill Church, Shreveport District, Louisiana Conference, had secured its quota of $5000 in the Christian Education Movement by 10:30 a.m. on the opening day of the financial campaign. Rev. J. Cude Rousseaux is the pastor of this thoroughly active and aggressive church.

Rev. A. W. Turner, State Superintendent of the Louisiana Anti-Saloon League, requests every pastor of the State who can do so to preach on the subject of law enforcement on the first Sunday in July—July 3. He feels that this will help greatly to strengthen public officials in the efforts to enforce all laws.

We learn from the Commercial Appeal, of Memphis, Tenn., that Rev. C. M. Ray, of the Longview charge, North Mississippi Conference, and Miss Eva Mae Hammi were married on Monday morning, June 20. Rev. Olin Ray, brother of the groom, officiating. The Advocate extends hearty good wishes to the happy young couple.

Mrs. M. E. Thomason, of Pontotoc, Miss., celebrated her eightieth birthday on June 17, when a number of her friends and neighbors gathered at her home to rejoice with her. She is the oldest member in point of years of the church at Pontotoc, but she is always in her place at the Sunday and midweek services. Blessings upon her!

We learn with great sorrow of the death of Mrs. B. G. Slaughter, at Winchester, Tenn., on May 30. Mrs. Slaughter was the mother of Mrs. G. L. Harrell, wife of Professor G. L. Harrell, of Millsaps College. Mrs. Harrell was with her mother for about a week before the end came. The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to the bereaved loved ones.

Rev. J. B. Williams, of Many, La., writing under date of June 25, says: "We have just closed a fine meeting here, which has been going on for the last ten days, resulting in ten accessions to the church and a general quickening of the spiritual life of the church. Brother W. E. Thomas did the preaching and did it well. He certainly is fine help in a meeting."

First Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Lake Charles, La., with a quota of $16,500 in the educational campaign, raised $18,317. Lake Charles was perhaps as hard-hit as any city in the State by the financial crisis—but "Billy" Holmes is the pastor and he serves as loyal a people as can be found in the connection. The combination made success a certainty.

Mr. Stephen S. Thomas, Centenary Secretary-Treasurer of the Louisiana Conference, was summoned by a telegram on Saturday of last week to the bedside of his mother in Peebles, Ohio. No hope of her recovery was entertained. We are sure the many friends of Brother Thomas throughout Louisiana will remember him in their prayers in this time of sorrow.

At the third quarterly conference of the Standard and Olla charge, Louisiana Conference, Rev. H. B. Thomason, pastor, a fine report was made. Preacher and presiding elder are paid up to date, Sunday schools and Leagues are doing a fine work, and forty-six members have been received into the church since Conference. Rev. L. R. Sparks, of Covington, La., is assisting Brother Thomason in what promises to be a good meeting at Olla.

Rev. J. Cude Rousseaux, of Spring Hill, La., paid the Advocate office an appreciated call on Monday of this week. He was en route to Slidell, La., to receive the body of his brother, who died in service in France on September 28, 1918. The body was recently returned from France to rest in its native soil. The supreme consolation to the family of the deceased is not only the fact that he died in the service of his country, but that he died also in the triumphant faith of the Christian.

Parker Memorial Church, this city, gave a reception on Thursday evening of last week to the Methodist students attending the Tulane Summer School. Some unique features of entertainment were provided, and the affair was a very delightful and successful one. About one hundred of the students were in attendance. A roll call showed that many of them are from Mississippi. Under the leadership of Rev. C. D. Atkinson, Parker Memorial is in the forefront of every good move for the welfare of the community.

Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Willson, of Ruleville, Miss., although they have celebrated their fifty-second wedding anniversary, are both very active and interested in the work of the church. "Uncle Billy," as he is affectionately called, rides his big bay horse, "Old Fox," over a large plantation every day, and makes weekly visits to another place some distance away. He is in his place in the Sunday school every Sunday. He and his good wife have been reading the Advocate about sixty-five years.

Mr. Henry H. Ahrens, one of the secretaries of the Publicity Department of the Christian Education Commission, in charge of the secular press division, has been elected secretary of a secular news bureau which has recently been organized by various Boards of the church. Mr. Ahrens is a newspaper man of long experience and unusual ability. In his new position he will serve all the Boards of the church, and will furnish news to the daily papers of the country. He is a local preacher of the Louisiana Conference.

We understand that our new church at Winnfield, La., will be completed in a short time. The Board of Church Extension has made a loan that will assist materially in bringing the work to a successful conclusion. Notwithstanding a considerable increase in the budget for this year, the salaries of the pastor and the presiding elder have been paid in full to June 1, and the pledges are sufficient to cover all current expenses. The Sunday school has just about doubled in attendance within the past year. Winnfield is fast coming to be one of the best charges in the Conference. Rev. W. H. Jordan is the faithful pastor.

At the recent Annual Meeting of the Board of Education, Dr. Ed F. Cook was elected Associate Secretary of the Board. He will devote most of his time to conserving the interests of the Christian Education Movement. Professor W. E. Hogan was elected Treasurer of the Board, and Dr. P. L. Cobb and Dr. R. H. Bennett were re-elected Secretaries of the Department of Spiritual Resources, and of the Department Ministerial Supply and Training and Religious Education, respectively. Dr. Elmer T. Clark was also re-elected as Director of Publicity. The opinion was expressed by the Board that the full financial objective of $33,000,000 will be realized within the next year.

We take the following from the Laurel (Miss.) Leader of June 20: "West End Methodist Church was made glad last night when its pastor, Rev. A. Joe Beasley, announced that its educational quota had been pledged to a penny. The cultural program has been carried out by the church since last January. The every-member canvass, made by four teams, has waxed hot during the last three weeks. Team No. 4, Mrs. Frank Foley, captain, Misses Arline and Mattie Wansley, Mary Belle Walker, Eula Russum, and Messrs. Geo. F. Rice and Selby Dorman, won the honors when it was made known that this team had secured pledges for half the quota and would be entertained by the losing teams to-night on the church lawn." We learn from other sources that this church was the second in the Newton District to report its quota in full.

SHELBY RUDOLPH FOXWORTH, son of W. F. and Elizabeth Foxworth, was born January 16, 1903, and departed this life May 18, 1921. He joined the M. E. Church, South, at Foxworth in 1917, and greatly loved his church. He was never absent from preaching or Sunday school unless sick. He was as modest as a girl, yet possessed all those qualities that develop the highest type of true manhood. He was a noble and dutiful son and had bright prospects for the future. He was attending Millsaps College, where he was taken ill. He was brought to the Columbia Hospital, where all was done for him that human hands could do, but all was in vain. He was greatly loved by all the faculty of Millsaps College, and as a proof of this they sent one of their students, Brother C. W. Wesley, to represent them at his funeral with a message of sympathy from them to the family and loved ones; they also sent as a token of their love a beautiful wreath of flowers; this, with other floral offerings from his many friends, made a solid bank of flowers, one of the most beautiful the writer ever saw. His funeral was held in the M. E. Church, South, in Columbia, Miss., the following ministers officiating: Rev. W. W. Nelson, Rev. L. L. Roberts, Rev. W. W. Murray, Rev. C. W. Wesley, Rev. T. M. Lemley, pastor of the Presbyterian church, and the writer. His body was laid to rest in the Columbia cemetery to await the great judgment morn. To the grief-stricken family I would say: we know where to find Shelby, and while we can not understand now why God should pluck from us such a young noble life, yet sometime we shall see how all God's plans are right.

His former pastor,

R. H. BARR.

On the morning of April 16, 1921, the "lamp of life," went out, and the spirit of Mrs. E. A. TYNES went back to Him who gave it. When the news came that Grandma Tynes was dead a wave of sadness swept over us, and then the thought came, what a blessing she had been and how she had helped to make the world better. Early in life, she gave her heart to God, and ever since, by her noble Christian life, has been a "Light Bearer" for Jesus. She was a sufferer for four years. Her son, Dr. C. F. Tynes, carried her to Touro Infirmary (New Orleans) three times, hoping that she might be made well again. She bore her affliction with patient endurance, was perfectly resigned to God's will, and said she had nothing to fear. She lived with her eldest son, Mr. S. P. Tynes, at the "old home" near Monticello. How lonely and still the old home seems now, without mother! Her gentle voice and footstep will never be heard again. She spent her last days with her only daughter, Mrs. C. R. Ellzey, and all that loving hands could do, was done to alleviate her suffering. The funeral service was conducted by her pastor, Rev. H. E. Raley. From the Methodist church at Holmesville her precious body was carried to the cemetery on the hill and there placed beneath a bank of beautiful flowers to await the resurrection morn. She leaves to mourn their loss, three sons and one daughter: Mrs. C. R. Ellzey, of Summit; Mr. S. P. Tynes, of Monticello; E. F. Tynes, of Bogue Chitto, and Dr. C. F. Tynes, of Norfield, besides a number of grandchildren and great-grandchildren. May He who said, "My grace is sufficient for thee," comfort the bereaved ones, and some sweet day, gather them all "Home" in a glad reunion with mother, where partings come no more. One who loved her,

Mrs. W. W. FELDER.

Mrs. EFFIE WALKER PHILLIPS, wife of Mr. Walter S. Phillips, was born January 25, 1873, and entered the life beyond on June 8, 1921. A faithful Christian, a model wife, and loving mother, she leaves a vacant place in the home and in the hearts of her devoted husband and children. She is missed by a large group of friends, not only for the fairer graces of true womanliness which adorned her character, but also for her gentle and faithful ministries in the church and social circle. The law of kindness was on her lips, the love of God in her soul, and these found expression in full and free activities for the Master's kingdom. As leader of the music in the church, as an efficient and loved Sunday school teacher, a member of the W. M. S., and a cheerful, genial friend, her loss is keenly felt and the memory of her life work will linger through coming years. She had a love for the beautiful, the true and the good, and no doubt these spiritual elements of her being find their perfect expression in the City of God. Surrounded by a large concourse of sorrowing relatives and friends, after service in the little church she loved so well, she was laid to rest under a canopy of flowers woven by her Sunday school class, and numerous other floral offerings. The cross and pain of suffering she bore in her closing days is now a crown and joy, for surely He whom she served so well is faithful, just, and true.

S. J. D.

GARLAND GALITAN GOFF was born in Jackson County, Miss., near old Salem Camp Ground, June 18, 1854, and died May 17, 1921. He joined the church at Old Salem on the second Sunday in October, 1877. He was married to Susan Parker, Feb. 20, 1878; to this union were born seven children, two of whom died in childhood. Three daughters and two sons, their mother, and a number of grandchildren survive to mourn for him, but their loss is his gain; for while earth is poorer, we feel sure Heaven is richer for his going. Brother Goff was converted in 1878, was appointed Sunday school superintendent and steward for many years, becoming an exhorter, which office he filled with much credit until in recent years when his health failed him. He was a charge trustee and faithful in the great work of his Master to the end. He loved the church and her pastors; he had a secret grove to go to for prayer, and delighted in resorting there with his pastor for many years past to commune with his Lord and get strength for life's duties. His remains were laid to rest in the Wade cemetery at Wade, near his home and Caswell Springs church on the Escatawpa charge, after a sermon by his pastor, assisted by Rev. V. R. Landrum and Rev. F. L. Lingeran, attended by a large concourse of friends. A good man is at rest and will be sadly missed. May his God comfort and keep his loved ones and friends.

His pastor,

R. G. WILLIAMS.

RESOLUTIONS.

On May 23, 1921, Death's messenger claimed Mrs. Martha B. Catching—"Grandina" as she was generally known. "Grandina" professed religion and joined the Methodist Church in childhood, and her "lips and life expressed the Holy Gospel she professed." She lived to be almost ninety years old. She will be greatly missed in her home, in the church and in the community.

Because of these facts and realizing our loss, we desire to give expression to our grief and record our esteem and appreciation of our deceased friend, her good works and faithful service, and to extend our sympathy to her bereaved dear ones.

Therefore, be it resolved by the Georgetown Methodist Sunday school,

First—That we bow to the will of God and say, "He doeth all things well," and that we assure the family and friends of our sympathy and prayers for them in their great sorrow.

Second—That we express our tribute of appreciation of her good deeds, her Christian life, her untiring and efficient services in the Sunday school, and her association with us, which have been helpful and will be an influence for good in the coming years.

Third—That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, one to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication, and that a copy be spread upon the minutes of the Sunday school.

MEMORIAL SERVICE FOR DECEASED PREACHERS AT MAGNOLIA, MISS.

On Monday, May 30, under the auspices of the Woman's Missionary Society, a beautiful and appropriate service was held in the cemetery at Magnolia, Miss., in memory of ministers and wives and children of ministers who have been laid to rest in Magnolia cemetery.

The members of the Society met at the Methodist church, and from there proceeded to the cemetery, accompanied by the pastors of the different churches of the town.

After an appropriate program, flowers were strewn on the graves of those we had met to honor.

THE PREACHERS' ASSOCIATION.

Last summer at Lake Junaluska there was a meeting of the pastors attending the Teacher Training School of the General Sunday School Board; after some discussion it was thought best to form an association of the pastors attending this school and, as far as possible, all the pastors who come to Junaluska during the summer. The association was organized with the usual officers for such an organization. There were some things it was thought could be accomplished better by organized effort.

1st. That the pastors might all get acquainted and a better social life enjoyed, especially by those who come for the first time or were strangers on the grounds, a linking of the preacher-life closer together.

2nd. That through organized effort the work enterprised at Junaluska could the better be carried forward by organized effort than singly.

3rd. It was urged by those present that special effort be made to get a larger attendance of pastors at the Teacher Training School.

Thoughtful men never so definitely believe as now that the church, home and State of to-morrow will be determined by what is being taught in the schools of to-day. The church is coming to believe that if the church of the future is to be stable and efficient, we must provide efficient teachers for our church schools. As in every other movement of the church, the pastor is the key-man.

To call attention to the program for the Training School and the work that will be done at Junaluska should be sufficient to insure a large attendance of pastors; from the undergraduates to the oldest, pastors will find a helpful course. No pastor can attend this school without being convinced of the importance of the work and at least in a measure become interested in getting some of his workers to attend.

I would especially appeal to the younger pastors to attend. More and more are the demands being made upon the ministers and the demands will multiply and become more urgent. Hard work will be necessary upon the part of those who are to lead our Zion to-morrow and shape its work and determine its policies. Never were men offered such opportunities for great service; but they must qualify for this larger field of service.

It is hoped that a large number of pastors will be present at the opening of the school, July 13, and remain until its close.

It would be well for those who expect to attend, to make reservation at an early date; in most every Conference some one is looking out for reservations for that Conference, maybe the Sunday School Field Secretary. Dr. R. M. White, 1004 West Avenue, Richmond, Va., Secretary of the Association, will be glad to give any information to those desiring it.

Calomel salivates! It's mercury. Calomel acts like dynamite on a sluggish liver. When calomel comes into contact with your bile it crushes into it, causing cramping and nausea.

If you feel bilious, headachy, constipated and all knocked out, just go to your druggist and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tonic for a few cents which is a harmless vegetable substitute for dangerous calomel. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't start your liver and straighten you up better and quicker than nasty calomel and without making you sick, you just go back and get your money.

If you take calomel today you'll be sick and nauseated tomorrow; besides, it may salivate you, while if you take Dodson's Liver Tonic you will wake up feeling great, full of ambition and ready for work or play. It's harmless, pleasant and safe to give to children; they like it.

LESSON FOR JULY 3.

Lesson Topic: The Early Life of Saul.

Scripture Lesson: Acts 21:39; 22:3, 28; II Timothy 3:14-15; Deuteronomy 6:4-9.

Golden Text: "To-day if ye will hear his voice, harden not your hearts." Hebrews 3:7-8.

Home Readings: Monday, Saul Born in Tarsus, Acts 22:1-3, 27-28; Tuesday, Hebrew Parents' Love for Children, Judges 13:8-16; Wednesday, Samson as a Baby Boy, Judges 13:17-24; Thursday, A Hebrew Boy Dedicated to God, I Samuel 1:21-28; Friday, The Boy Jesus Visits the Temple, Luke 2:40-52; Saturday, A Youth of Faith and Courage, I Samuel 17:31-37; Sunday, The Lord Giveth Wisdom, Proverbs 2:1-10.

Teaching Points.

1. Paul was well-born—an asset for any child.
2. Paul was well educated—as all children should be.
3. Paul himself laid emphasis upon religious education, especially in his letter to Timothy.
4. Paul became probably the greatest man in human history; we cannot explain his greatness apart from the influences of his early life.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Last Sunday was spent on the Lauderdale charge. Brother Lane is in fine favor with his folks. They seem to be rallying from the depression. I was with him at Lockhart and Marion. Sabbath Observance, Social Activities, Cradle Rolls and Community Survey were the objects of attention and study. Two Cradle Rolls were promised. While both of them will be small, they may both do great work.

The Eucutta circuit is the first circuit to report a Sunday School Day offering from each Sunday school. The Sunday School Board appreciates the interest of the Eucutta circuit, and I trust that we may be able to serve them as faithfully as they have us.

Sunday School Day offerings are coming in right along. We trust that in next week's Advocate the July list from the treasurer can be published.

We are getting some fine reports from district officers.

We pray that each Sunday school superintendent and those interested in the Sunday school work will stand back of and support the district officers.

We have several sets of the American Home Series in the office and will

A SUCCESSFUL SUNDAY SCHOOL CONTEST.

The contest for members between the Methodist Sunday schools of De Ridder, La., and Texas Avenue, Shreveport, La., closed on June 12.

The contest began March 27, and continued for twelve weeks. Each school had an attendance of about 160 before the contest, but the first Sunday raised the attendance of De Ridder to 187, and of Texas Avenue to 195. The attendance continued to grow and at the close De Ridder had 278 and Texas Avenue 329. Counting the entire attendance for the twelve weeks, De Ridder had 2726 present and Texas Avenue 2796—an average of 227 for De Ridder, and an average of 233 for Texas Avenue. According to the last annual report of these churches, De Ridder had 227 church members and Texas Avenue had 242. De Ridder, therefore, averaged one hundred per cent of its church membership and Texas Avenue averaged 96 per cent of its membership.

Both pastors, Rev. C. E. Fike, of De Ridder, and Rev. R. S. Walton, of Texas Avenue Methodist church, Shreveport, report that their schools were greatly benefitted by the contest. OBSERVER.

FROM EAST END, MERIDIAN, MISS.

We have just closed one of the most gracious revivals that I have been privileged to be in. General Evangelist J. O. Hanes, and W. G. Waltermire, singer, were with us here in East End Church for 15 days, closing out Sunday night, June 19. They are truly workmen that needeth not be ashamed, and men that will do most excellent work anywhere. Our altars were filled time and time again with penitents seeking to draw nigh to God. The times of greatest power and blessings were family-night and the old-time love feast on Sunday afternoon, when many bore witness to the saving power of our Lord. I have received 39 by baptism, 25 by vows, and 10 by letter, or 74 in all. It has been twenty years since East End has had such a stirring among the dry bones, and we hope for yet greater things. One hundred and one at our prayer meeting on a hot and sultry June night, tells something of the interest.

The new church building grows apace and we hope to have the brick work done in the next 30 days. In the meantime we are using the lower story. It is roomy and commodious, so that we can easily care for 600 people in it. We have room to grow in and we are doing it.

JAMES L. SELLS, P. C.

A FINE MEETING AT OAK RIDGE, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: I began a meeting at Oak Ridge, Mer Rouge and Oak Ridge charge, on June 6, Rev. H. W. Cudd, of Tallulah, La., doing the preaching, and Brother Ed Leach directing the singing. We held three services a day. We had fine attendance at every service, and a fine spirit pervaded all the services. Cudd is a good gospel preacher; Leach is a fine organizer, choir director and personal worker. I have known him for 18 months, and find him a Christian gentleman. Any one wanting a singer will make no mistake in securing him. His address for the present is Mer Rouge, La.

As the result of our meeting, the church was strengthened, and there were 16 additions by vows and baptism, 14 being baptized. May the blessing of God be upon those who help it.

We have had 60 additions this year. Pray for us. All glory to God!

J. R. ROY, P. C.

FROM PONCHATOULA, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: We have not been making record breaking advances; however we are steadily moving forward.

Our little city is in the throes of a convulsive boom caused by two large lumber mills coming here this year. This of course is bringing in many new people and causing a great deal of building, moving and shifting from place to place. Naturally this all attracts attention and to some extent detracts from church activities.

By the Lord's help and the support of some of our members we are doing our utmost to take care of our Master's interests. We have just closed what we consider in many respects a successful fifteen days' revival. Brother McCain, of Hammond, did the preaching. Needless to say, it was well done. McCain is a chosen vessel unto the Lord.

Those who attended the services were greatly revived. Many were busy "here and there" and, like Thomas, missed the blessing of meeting with the Lord.

Thirteen new members were added to the church, six to be received at a later date.

Sorry we can't report "in full" for our Educational Drive. We are at least "marking time" in an effort to go "over the top."

I go this week to Walker, to help Brother Rutledge, for a few days.

Brother Carley, you are giving us a good paper. It should be in every Methodist home. Greetings to all the brethren. Pray for us.

Yours fraternally,

A. J. COBURN, P. C.

Summer Conference at Vicksburg for The Young People.

To the District Secretaries and Young People's Missionary Societies, I wish to bring this bit of good news: There will be a Summer Conference held at Gibson Memorial Church, Vicksburg, on July 26-29, for the purpose of creating more missionary zeal in the Young People and studying all phases of the work. Let us see which district can have the largest representation at this Conference. I would like

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE Grenada District Meeting.

The annual meeting of Grenada District was held in Holly Springs, May 24-25. There were a number of delegates and visitors present, the delegates bringing very encouraging reports from their auxiliaries. The work seems to be progressing along all lines of missionary endeavor, five new auxiliaries having been organized in the district, two adult, two young people's and one Junior. They are all busy, and sent good reports to the meeting.

Mrs. T. M. Clark, Conference corresponding secretary, was with us and gave such an interesting account of the Council meeting, with much information for our guidance during the year. Our Young People's Superintendent, Mrs. Joe Herndon, was present and gave an inspiring talk on the value and importance of young people's societies. Mrs. Herndon's heart is in this work and she is a great help and inspiration to the district secretaries.

Mrs. R. P. Nehlett, the enthusiastic superintendent of Juniors, presented their program in such an interesting and attractive way. There were some fine reports given by the Juniors and we were especially indebted to Mrs. Dean, of Water Valley, and her six Junior delegates for such an interesting and original report.

The Co-operative Home, its work and its needs, was interestingly presented by Mrs. Stephenson. Mrs. Woollard told of the good progress our mountain schools are making.

The ladies of Holly Springs gave the visitors such a hearty welcome that our stay among them was most pleasant indeed. The delegates from Coffeeville invited us cordially to come and meet with them in 1922.

Mrs. LUDIE STOKES,
District Secretary.

Greenwood District Meetings.

Tutwiler Auxiliary invited the district meeting to be there on June 2, and it was the best of its kind ever held in the district. The morning was given over to Juniors and 20 of them were present to assist in the special music and program that had been prepared by the leader, Mrs. R. P. Neblett, of Durant. Every phase of the work was taken up and the enthusiastic reports made glad the hearts of those who heard them.

The pastor, Rev. W. N. Dodds, and his wife, and Mrs. S. D. Hamilton, president of this splendid auxiliary, with her committee, made the 120 guests feel the welcome they gave them, and the presence of so many members of the local auxiliary throughout the day, added interest to the visitors.

At noon a bountiful luncheon was served in the Sunday school rooms, and the afternoon was given to reports from Adult organizations and addresses by the conference officers present. Minter City, a new auxiliary, had the honor of having more visitors present with seven of their members, while Ruleville was a close second, excepting the local church. Nearly every auxiliary of the district was represented. The district secretary reported five new organizations since she had been in charge.

The devotionals were very inspirational, being conducted by Mrs. J. H. Mitchell, of Greenwood, Mrs. W. V. Pittman and Mrs. G. C. Jones.

The next day was Young People's day at Drew. Their superintendent, Mrs. Joe Herndon, of Okolona, had arranged an interesting program, reports were given in the morning, and each told of best things they were doing in their meetings. Ruleville, Sidon, Itta Bena, Tutwiler, Sunflower, Drew, Greenwood and Inverness were represented, Itta Bena having every member of their organization present except one. They gave their songs, and the music of the day was an inspiration to those who heard it. At noon the local auxiliaries served lunch in the Sunday school rooms.

Mrs. Conger, president of the Conference, gave one of her splendid addresses and Mrs. W. V. Pittman told the Young People how they could enlarge their Social Service work. Mrs. Neal urged that more time be given Mission Study and the publicity of the work of the various activities of the church. Mrs. Neblett conducted the closing devotional, making it a consecration service for all present.

The pastor, Rev. W. N. Duncan, and his wife, with members of the local auxiliaries, made the day one of great pleasure to the visitors, this being the first time a whole day has been given to one of the Young People's rallies.

The presence and encouragement at these meetings of our presiding elder, Rev. S. L. Pope, is appreciated.

The next district meeting will be with Ruleville, the Young People's rally to be arranged later, by the superintendent and district secretary.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Baton Rouge District Meeting.

Dear Mrs. Snelling: As I have not seen a report of our district Conference, I can not resist writing just a little.

We met in session at Amite City, the parish site of Tangipahoa, on May 26. It was delightful to be there and enjoy the hospitality of the people of that city. The conference was not only highly entertained, but the attendance was proof of the interest now pervading the church.

The meeting was presided over by Mrs. R. E. Stearns. In summing up the work of the district, the secretary showed how the splendid forward movement of the missionary work had increased. An advance along all lines was seen in every auxiliary report.

The conference was distinguished by the presence of many gifted speakers. Mrs. Niebergall, the Conference President, gave an interesting and instructive talk on her trip to Richmond. Other themes of importance were, "Children's Work," by Mrs. Harper; "Social Service," by Mrs. C. C. Devall; "Unorganized Women," by Rev.

N. E. Joyner; "Christian Education," by Rev. A. S. Lutz. Rev. Alonzo Early and others gave inspiring talks.

The opening address by the District Secretary is worthy of honorable mention for the expressions and presentations of conditions and needs of the district.

The meeting was without a discordant note.

The Conference goes to Hammond next year. The prospect occasions pleasant anticipations.

Mrs. J. P. SKOLFIELD,
Corresponding Secretary, Baton Rouge Auxiliary.

THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION MOVEMENT IN THE GREENVILLE DISTRICT.

(We clip from the Clarksdale Daily Register of June 15, the following account of the Educational Campaign in the Greenville District. The record made is a notable one.—Editor.)

In the great Educational Movement now on in the M. E. Church, South, the Greenville District is responding most nobly. Out of a magnificent faith, consecration, and loyalty the people called Methodists of this district are giving out of their very living, and the Methodist preachers have given full proof of their ministry by their heroic spirit and courageous efforts. Truly they are God-called, God-sent heroes of the faith.

This has been probably the most remarkable campaign ever carried through in this great Delta country. Despite financial reverses and corresponding depression, what seemed at the opening of the campaign a Gibraltar of impossibility has opened wide a welcoming door of magnificent opportunity.

Subscriptions for the Greenville District at this time total $118,000, with more to come. The campaign has not yet closed. In the charges where the assigned quota has not been subscribed, preachers and committees are working earnestly and hard to gain for the church a complete success.

Seven charges of the district have subscribed their quotas in full. They are as follows:

Boyle, Rev. C. A. Northington, pastor; Clarksdale, Rev. E. Nash Broyles, pastor; Friars Point, Rev. C. P. Moss, pastor; Greenville, Rev. E. S. Lewis, pastor; Hollandale, Rev. J. A. George, pastor; Merigold and Alligator, Rev. L. A. McKeown, pastor; Shelby, Rev. J. M. Wyatt, pastor.

IN PATAGONIA.

"Many are the strange and interesting native tribes that are found in the Americas. Among the most interesting are the people of the ostrich, who inhabit an almost as yet unknown country, and in language, and character, and race, are altogether distinct from other Indians," says an article on "People of the Ostrich" in the January number of Boys' Life. "They live in the remote and almost legendary regions of the 'land of large-footed men,' a land, that like Chili, Peru, Mexico, and northwest South America, has its story of the existence of a hidden city among the unexplored wilds of their Cordilleras.

"The Tehuelches of Patagonia, that vast peninsular end of South America, are scattered across it, from the Straits of Magellan and the Rio Negro—a territory of over 1,000 miles in length and 300 at its narrowest. A brave, active, athletic people, wonderful horsemen, singularly expert with their weapons and implements, who lead a wandering life, and hunt the wild cattle, the guanacos—and ostriches. For Patagonia is a home of that splendid bird, which was there ages before men crossed its path in the faraway wilds of the interior. To the Tehuelches, this fine bird is as important in their existence as the guanaco, for they are a race of hunters, and grow but little food for themselves."

HOW WOMEN AVOID SURGICAL OPERATIONS

Some Are Extremely Necessary, Others May Not Be

Every Woman Should Give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a Trial First

Chicago, Ill.—"I was in bed with a female trouble and inflammation and had four doctors but none of them did me any good. They all said I would have to have an operation. A druggist's wife told me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I took 22 bottles, never missing a dose and at the end of that time I was perfectly well. I have never had occasion to take it again as I have been so well. I have a six room flat and do all my work. My two sisters are taking the Compound upon my recommendation and you may publish my letter. It is the gospel truth and I will write to any one who wants a personal letter."—Mrs. E. H. HAYDOCK, 6824 St. Lawrence Ave., Chicago, Ill.

A Vermont woman adds her testimony to the long line of those fortunate women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, after it had been decided an operation was necessary:

Burlington, Vt.—"I suffered with female trouble, and had a number of doctors who said that I would never be any better until I had an operation. I was so bad I could hardly walk across the floor and could not do a thing. My sister-in-law induced me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it certainly has helped me wonderfully. I keep house and do my work and have a small child. I have recommended Vegetable Compound to a number of my friends and you may publish my testimonial."—Mrs. H. R. SHARON, Apple Tree Point Farm, Burlington, Vt.

In hospitals are many women who are there for surgical operations, and there is nothing a woman dreads more than the thought of an operation, and the long weary months of recovery and restoration to strength if it is successful.

It is very true that female troubles may through neglect reach a stage where an operation is the only resource, but most of the commoner ailments of women are not the surgical ones; they are not caused by serious displacements, tumors or growths, although the symptoms may appear the same. When disturbing ailments first appear take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to relieve the present distress and prevent more serious troubles. In fact, many letters have been received from women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound after operations have been advised by attending physicians.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Private Text-Book upon "Ailments Peculiar to Women" will be sent to you free upon request. Write to The Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Massachusetts. This book contains valuable information.

Here it is. Those awful pains of rheumatism so common during the cold rainy weather are completely forgotten, and the rheumatism is expelled from your system by the very simple treatment of taking Renwar Salts which neutralizes the uric acid in the blood, and Renwar attacks the very cause of this malady and expels the uric acid from the system. Renwar is entirely dependable. It does not in any way injure the stomach or affect the heart. It is prescribed by the best physicians, and your money is refunded if Renwar fails to relieve you of rheumatism. Give Renwar a trial and you will never regret it. Mr. Benagh of the Nashville Railway and Light Company says, "Within two or three days after using Renwar my rheumatism disappeared." Price 50c. NEWS FROM LAKE JUNALUSKA.

The Southern Assembly at Lake Junaluska has opened already with a large number of cottagers and residents at the hotels. The grounds are becoming very popular, as evidenced by the fact that they are moving in earlier this year than usual, which promises well for an enlarged season.

The business office of the Assembly Grounds is just being completed. This beautiful building on the edge of the Lake adds greatly to the beauty and convenience of the grounds.

The Laymen's Week Committee is opening offices and headquarters at the Terrace Hotel under the direction of Rev. A. E. Clement, Nashville, Tenn., assisted by Miss Maude McCulloch, of Washington, D. C. Their plan contemplates enlargement of the laymen's interests during the week of August 8-13, at which time the leading laymen of the Southern Methodist Church will assemble. Their program embraces strong addresses on their activities in the local church, together with an Open Forum for questions and discussions. This promises to be one of the leading features of the summer's work.

The new bridge across the dam adds greatly to the convenience and beauty of the Lake.

The new bath house will offer inducements to the lovers of the water, as bathing will be greatly enhanced by the addition.

Already the golf links are being utilized, under the direction of a golf professional, Mr. R. Scalley, who is giving training to those who desire better knowledge of this exhilarating sport.

The Sunday school buildings are almost completed. The concrete sidewalk has been extended to the peninsula beyond. The laundry stands convenient for service. The cafeteria, erected by Mr. J. B. Ivey, is a new feature, and will greatly enhance their service to the Assembly. The two dormitories completed seem ample to accommodate the Sunday school workers. The Southern Assembly will furnish recreation and the greatly needed rest for the Sunday school forces, as well as afford them an opportunity for close study of the courses offered.

Your Greatest Problem—
That Boy of Yours.

What kind of a man will he be ten, twenty, thirty years from now? You know, every parent knows, that it depends entirely upon the training he is getting right now, his associations, his ideals, his inspirations.

Mr. Robert K. Morgan, Principal of the Morgan School, Petersburg, Tenn., has been training boys for twenty-five years. He wants your boy. He recognizes in him one of the men who may some day manage big affairs and he wants to train him for that end. His school has been built and equipped, and his instructors chosen with the first and only consideration of giving the boy the mental and physical training, the associations, with clean, high-minded men, the ideals of character, the inspirations to ambition, which the world expects. Robert K. Morgan is a Christian gentleman of strong, wholesome, inspiring personality, and his school is the material projection of that character. Write Mr. L. I. Mills, Secretary Morgan School, Petersburg, Tennessee, today, and let him send you a catalogue and tell you what this school can do for your boy.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

"I AIN'T BOTHERED NONE."

Years ago, we knew a player on a great football team who was quick to take advantage of every opportunity to conserve his strength during a game. When, after a scrimmage, he would be stretched out on the field apparently unconscious and his team mates would bend over him to learn the extent of his injuries, he would whisper to them, slangily but expressively, "Be non-scared—I ain't bothered none." Without raising the question of the ethics of his conduct, we cannot but commend his confidence in the security of his own position and his optimistic attitude toward the outcome of the game. The incident at least teaches us the much-needed lesson in these days that there is no occasion for our becoming unduly alarmed over what may seem to us to be determined assaults upon the faith delivered to the saints. We know of no surer word of Scripture than the comforting statement of Paul to Timothy, his son in the gospel, in connection with the teaching of some who had erred concerning the truth: "Nevertheless, the foundation of God standeth sure, having this seal, The Lord knoweth them that are his." We cannot, of course, look with complacency upon any deliberate effort of anybody to tear from their moorings those who have felt themselves safely anchored in the harbor of faith; neither can we think of it as any other than a tragedy when even one soul is made uncertain as to the fundamental verities by the teaching of confessedly reverent students of the divine revelation. But that the gospel of Jesus Christ will, or can ever, be invalidated by the mightiest efforts of even its most determined foes, we have not the slightest fear. If the Master himself declared that the gates of hell shall not prevail against his church, we may well believe that it is able to resist the assaults of puny men.

SLIGHTLY INCONSISTENT.

An amusing item is going the rounds of the press concerning a happening in the recent meeting of the American Federation of Labor in Denver, Colo. An effort to unseat all delegates who did not have a union label on all articles of wearing apparel was overwhelmingly defeated, one member declaring that if non-union garments were removed, there would not be enough barrels in Denver to clothe the delegates in decency. It strikes us as slightly inconsistent that the organization that insists so strenuously upon the union label for the public generally should even hesitate in demanding it of its own members. "Consistency, thou art a jewel!"

JUNE WEDDINGS.

June is proverbially the month in which young people are prone to join themselves together in holy wedlock. While we have seen no statistics concerning the number of marriages during the month just closed, we presume the record is as good as heretofore. The establishment of a new home is one of the most beautiful, as well as one of the most solemn things in the world. It is the beginning of an estate instituted of God in the time of man's innocency, and as it signifies to us the mystical union that exists between Christ and his church, it is peculiarly appropriate that it should not be enterprised or taken in hand unadvisedly, but reverently, discreetly, advisedly, and in the fear of God. That it is so undertaken we fear is not true in many cases; but surely no right-thinking young man or young woman can enter upon such a sacred relationship with any other than a serious realization of the momentous issues involved. Even the most flippant can scarcely be unaware of the religious significance of the event. The future of this nation and of all nations would be secure if, from the very beginning, all newly-established homes would become centers in which religious convictions would predominate and from which religious influences would emanate. If we could say but one word to all the brides and bridegrooms who are entering so happily and so hopefully upon their marital life now, it would be this: "Identify yourselves with the church in the community where you live, and give to the work of the church a proportionate part of your time, talents, and means." The church stands always for all that is best in every form and phase of life, and it is through identification with the church that we can best minister to our own deepest needs and to the needs of those whom we are under obligation to serve. And it is in this ministry that we find real and abiding happiness.

THE PRIZE FIGHT.

It is a matter of small moment that Dempsey knocked out Carpentier in the fourth round of their fight at Jersey City last Saturday. It is a serious thing, though, that enough people wanted to see the brutal exhibition to pay more than a million and a half dollars for the privilege, and that business was practically suspended throughout the country on Saturday while old and young, rich and poor, great and small talked about the probable outcome. We do not know to account for such widespread interest in a physical contest between two men except on the supposition that the love of a fight has not yet been eradicated from the blood of a people who, in their primitive days, made physical force largely the standard of right. We suppose we should not be especially concerned about the interest taken in this prize fight, though, so long as the great nations of earth undertake to settle their differences on the field of battle. Since Dempsey is reported to have received $300,000 and Carpentier $200,000 for the thirteen minutes and sixteen seconds they spent in the ring, we presume they counted it a profitable afternoon. If a preacher should receive one-tenth of the smaller amount for a week's fight against the forces of evil, there be those who would expatiate at length upon the commercialized instincts of the present-day ministry. It is the habit of a good many people to place the least value upon things that are worth most.

WE PROTEST.

We have only words of commendation when a great fraternal and benevolent organization undertakes to secure greatly needed material help for a most deserving and useful charitable institution. But when the means of securing that help is designated a "Hoo-Rah" and Sunday is chosen as one of the days upon which the entertainment is to be given, and the mayor of the city issues a proclamation in which he urges the people to contribute to the success of the "Hoo-Rah" on Sunday, as well as on Monday, we enter a protest in the name of the thousands of Protestant Christians in the city who cannot bring themselves to believe that God can be honored or humanity served by a "hoo-rah" program on the day that has been set aside from the very beginning of history as a day of quiet, rest, and worship. We are not fanatical on the subject of Sunday observance, and we do not believe that this age is called upon to follow the letter of the law of past ages; but we believe with all our heart in the fundamental principles of the spiritual life that Sunday protects, and we shall never cease to contend for that day's freedom from forms of activity some of which, to say the least, are not proper on any day. Since the Sabbath was made for man, man ought to use it as it was intended to be used.

HAVE FAITH.

It is a strange thing that so many Christians confess that their faith is weak. How can their faith be weak in view of what God has already done for them?

"MINE HIGH PLACES."

By Julia H. Thayer.

"He will make me to walk upon mine high places."—Hab. 3:19.

There are high places in the soul—

Thank God for that!—where we may be Beyond the bounds of earth's control
And in celestial company;

Where unto human nature weak

Love's supernatural powers are given;

Where we may even look and speak

As we shall look and speak in Heaven.

A TRIBUTE TO DR. FRANK M. THOMAS.

By Curtis B. Haley,

in July Methodist Quarterly Review.

On Monday, May 9, 1921, the spirit of Frank Morehead Thomas went out from its earthly tabernacle and passed into the home eternal to be forever with the Lord. How very much that spirit and that body had suffered during the past two years nobody here really knows, for Frank Thomas possessed a soul that was too great to dwell in conversation or in correspondence upon his infirmities, or to utter complaint about his own sufferings. His was always the spirit of hope.

It was during the early spring of 1920 that I first noticed what appeared to be a slight difference in the elasticity of his step, and also that in dictating his correspondence there was not that spontaneous directness of thought and expression of ideas that had hitherto been so striking a characteristic with him. Shortly thereafter it appeared that he was becoming more or less absent-minded; but as this has been a common trait with other great men and men of affairs with whom I have been associated, nothing especially was thought of that. However, late one evening in April or May, 1920, just before we parted for the night he confided to me: "The doctors say that my system is saturated with poison from my antrum, and I expect to go to a sanitarium for treatment."

He did go to a sanitarium in Louisville, and after spending some time there resting and taking treatments he appeared to be somewhat improved and expressed the hope that he would soon be able to do full work. And it may be said here with all truth that he literally yearned to be at work in his Father's vineyard—writing, preaching, speaking a word in season and out of season.

That the reader may fully understand all of the references that follow it seems fitting to say here that when Dr. Thomas was elected Book Editor and Editor of the Review he did not move his family to Nashville and take up his residence here, but rather made his home at Bowling Green, Ky., seventy-five miles north of here, where he was born, where he had spent the most of his life, and where his beloved mother still lives in age and feebleness extreme.

In the days of his prime he spent one or two days every week in the office at Nashville; and on these visits to the Publishing House it was his habit to come down on an early train, look over manuscripts that had been laid aside for his consideration, read personal and special letters that had accumulated on his desk, dictate replies thereto, receive callers, etc.; while at about five o'clock, after the whirl of the machinery on the lower floors of the Publishing House had ceased, he nearly always came to my office and spent an hour or so in free and easy conversation. It was on these rare occasions that I came to know him intimately, and to love him as a father and brother. For those were high times when we talked about the preachers, about people in the public eye, about things, about events great and small, about our work, about our families, about sin, about religion, about God!

In these vesper meetings, when formality was thrown to the winds, he was always the principal speaker. The part I played was usually to listen attentively, to ask questions or throw out suggestions, or to express approval or agreement; and sometimes—not very often—we disagreed on some point! But I think I may say with all frankness and honor and candor that whenever we did disagree we continued our discussion until we reached agreement or at least similar points of view—so open-minded were we with each other.

One evening as we rambled along in our conversation I told him that in a letter from my mother she remarked that she had confidently expected the last General Conference to elect him to the episcopacy. Without an instant's hesitation he replied facetiously and with a smile: "Ah, I thank the Lord he spared me that!"

Once when we two were all alone, at his suggestion, we got down on our knees and had a season of prayer, and he asked me, the humblest of laymen, to pray for him! Oh, the sacredness and the impressiveness and the solemnity of that wonderful hour I shall never forget!

There are many other personal reminiscences that I should like to relate, but this seems neither the time nor the place for them.

Be it said, however, that he was the soul of brotherly kindness; and how he did love the brethren! I have heard it said that there is not a young preacher in the Louisville Conference who has not been helped by him in one way or another—and all who have felt the power of his life in personal contact know how he yearned that our preachers should be fully equipped mentally and spiritually for service.

And he was the most appreciative man I ever knew. He never wrote me a letter that he did not express appreciation in some way. On June 2, 1920, just one year before his death, he wrote me from his bed, with a pencil on a piece of yellow paper, a letter in which he discussed various official items, and among other things said: "I have been running a slight temperature this week, but it seems to be coming back to normal. I regret to throw so much work on your already burdened shoulders; but if it is the Father's will that I should get my strength fully back, I will try to repay you. Ask my friends in the House to remember me in their prayers." On July 8 he wrote again: "My antrum trouble is much better, but I realize that I am still far from being myself. Remember me in your prayers." The very next day he wrote again: "It seems unnecessary to mention my illness in the Review. I would like to put in a note stating how heavily the church is indebted to my assistant for this number. I sincerely trust that you enjoyed your visit to your dear mother. I know you did, and I am sure that the aged saint was happy to have you with her."

From the letters quoted above it is apparent that more than a year ago he had some lingering doubt as to his ultimate recovery; and beginning about that time his trips to Nashville became less frequent. While on his last trip to the office, about the first of March, he remarked to me: "I believe that if I had moved to Nashville when I was first elected Book Editor, instead of trying to do my work at long distance from Bowling Green, and running around from there to conferences and all kinds of meetings, I would be a well man today." And who knows?

Early in March he went to Battle Creek for treatment, and while there he had his antrum opened. He was on the operating table for more than an hour, the surgeons found abscesses, and he was much weakened by this experience. After a few days' rest there following the operation, he returned to Bowling Green; but I am advised that he suffered constantly with headache and was unable to sleep. But so far as his letters were concerned his spirit was not broken, for in the very last letter that I received from him, under date of April 25, he said: "I returned home last week from Battle Creek with my antrum trouble much relieved, I think, by the rather severe operation. I was quite weak on my return and am still rather weak. If I can gain sufficient strength, I hope to get to Nashville the latter part of the week."

If perchance he came to Nashville on an afternoon or night train it was his custom to wire and ask me to have a room reserved for him at the hotel. With the closing words of his last letter on my mind, is it any wonder that, on the afternoon of May 9, when a messenger handed me a telegram, I remarked to my wife (who had stopped in to tell me of a wonderful spiritual missionary meeting that she had attended, and was just departing): "Wait a moment; I suppose this is from Dr. Thomas telling me that he will be down on the afternoon train. Let's ask him out to dinner?" But this expressed prophecy was in vain, for a moment later it was revealed that the message was not from him, but about him. It was from his brother, Mr. R. C. P. Thomas, and read: "My brother, Rev. F. M. Thomas, died this afternoon. Will advise you later about the funeral arrangements."

O the shock of it all, and the thoughts that surged through my very being! The news of the death of a blood relative could not have brought more sadness to me. My rare friend of lofty character, my friend who rendered such splendid service to the church, my friend who loved his fellow men, my friend who would not knowingly or willingly harm another, my friend who thought of the needs of others when his own suffering body was in travail—gone home! By the begetting of thy hand we shall follow some sweet day! We now better understand the emotions that must have flooded your pain-racked body when you preached your last sermon from Job xxiii: 3: "Oh that I knew where I might find him! that I might come even to his seat!" And can you not now say with even fuller understanding than when here among us in the flesh, "I know that my Redeemer liveth?"

Of the tragedy that closed his life I dare not speak except to say that it was as certainly the result of the disease from which he was suffering as if he had died in bed surrounded by his family and friends without any overt act on his part. Nor can I believe that God will hold this against him any more than if he had walked out of an open window in his sleep. And as we sometimes delight to welcome the unexpected guest, did not the angels in heaven so welcome him?

I thank God that I was privileged to know him as a personal friend. To have lost him makes life a good deal the lonelier and the poorer.

THE BOARD OF EDUCATION AND THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION COMMISSION.

The Christian Education Commission met in Nashville on Tuesday, June 21, for the purpose of receiving and surveying the report of the Director-General of the Christian Education Movement. On the following day the Board of Education held its annual meeting and in turn received and surveyed the report of the Commission. In view of the large program of our church in relation to Christian education and the great movement which is before Methodism, the meetings of the two bodies were of unusual interest.

The report of the Director-General set forth that about $18,000,000 has been raised for Christian education in the financial campaign. This means approximately half of the total objective. The fact that the goal was not reached was attributed to the severe financial situation of the country, which was described as being the worst of its kind in history. The Director-General reports that the amount pledged did not by any means represent the interest of Methodist people in the cause of Christian education, and that, therefore, the campaign would be continued until the meeting of the next General Conference, if necessary, in order that the full amount demanded by the needs of the various institutions may be secured.

To that end plans were made for continuing the financial aspects of the movement at a later date. A careful tabulation of charges which failed to reach their quota will be made, and all possible assistance will be given in enabling them to measure up to the duty before them.

The report of the Treasurer showed that the total expense of the Movement was $614,471.17, after all assets are deducted. This amount ran somewhat above the original estimate, the increase being caused by the raise in railroad and Pullman rates, the tremendous increase in the price of printing, the extension of the time of the Movement for two additional months, and the unfavorable financial situation which made it necessary to conduct the campaign with far greater intensity than had originally been planned.

Action was taken which merged the functions of the Commission with the Board of Education, which entered into a re-organization with a view of prosecuting its whole task. The Commission delegated all of its powers to its Campaign Committee, and this committee in close co-operation with the executive committee and the headquarters staff of the Board of Education will continue the work until the meeting of the next General Conference. The Board of Education assumed all of the outstanding obligations of the Commission, and took over its staff of employed officers and secretaries.

In the re-organization of the Board of Education, Dr. Ed. P. Cook, President of Scarritt Bible and Training School, was elected associate secretary. Dr. Cook will enter upon his new duties immediately and will have charge of the work of the Conference Educational Secretaries throughout the connection. Dr. Elmer T. Clark, the Publicity Director of the Christian Education Commission, was elected Editorial Secretary and will head up the department of publicity of the Board of Education. A department of Spiritual Resources, of which Dr. P. L. Cobb is secretary, will be maintained jointly by the Centenary Commission and the Board of Education. Dr. R. H. Bennett will continue as secretary of Life Service, while Prof. W. E. Hogan was elected treasurer, succeeding Mr. D. M. Smith, whose illness made his resignation necessary. This headquarters staff, under the presidency of Dr. Stonewall Anderson, the executive secretary of the Board, will prosecute the financial campaign to completion and have charge of the conservation program.

The Conference Educational Secretary will, in most cases, be the official collection agent in the Conferences, although a provision is made for employing a separate collection agent or treasurer where it may be necessary. All cash and pledge cards will be sent to the office of the Conference Educational Secretary, except the cards on which the gifts were directed to specific institutions. In which case they will be forwarded to the institutions named as beneficiaries.

There was a distinct note of hopefulness and encouragement in the meetings of both the Christian Education Commission and the Board of Education.

While there was disappointment that the full financial objective was not realized, there was no element of surprise in the situation. Far better than any others the leaders realized that they have been up against a proposition of unparalleled difficulty. "On account of the economic situation," declared the adopted report, "hundreds of churches that never knew failure have fallen below their quotas," and thousands of individuals in sympathy with the cause have made nominal contributions or none at all. These churches and individuals, with altered conditions, will yet do their part.

"We regard ourselves, therefore, under the highest obligations to the church and to our schools to continue the campaign until the General Conference for the purpose of raising the full $33,000,000, and we instruct the Campaign Committee to work out plans whereby at a later date, when conditions are improved, the churches whose quotas have not been raised in full shall be given another opportunity to subscribe."

CHINA FAMINE RELIEVED.

By Dr. W. W. Pinson.

A letter just received from the national headquarters of the China Famine Fund brings the cheering assurance that the tragic situation which has called forth such a quick and hearty response from the Christian public in America is near its end. The following paragraphs from this letter are self-explanatory:

"Happily, although unexpectedly, our work on behalf of the famine sufferers in China is about completed. From newspaper statements you doubtless have already learned of the favorable radical change in the situation in China, which cables just received from Peking report. These cables advise that recent contributions from the Chinese themselves have greatly exceeded the largest expectations; also that abundant rains have now fallen throughout the famine area and harvests are therefore assured where two weeks ago complete failure was threatened. The American Committee rejoices, therefore, that the task for which it was appointed and for which its State and local organizations were established, has been accomplished.

"It is suggested that committees close their work as quickly as possible, making prompt remittance of funds on hand to the National Treasurer. The National office will continue (on a minimum basis) for several weeks to come and will be prepared to receive belated remittances. Such funds as are received in excess of actual famine relief needs, including deferred remittances which may reach us throughout the summer, will be applied through other accredited agencies to famine prevention and other post-famine problems."

The national committee recognizes the temporary nature of the work it was called on to do and the permanence and importance of the work of the Foreign Mission Boards in relation to the whole question of famine prevention, caring for orphans and all the processes of reconstruction that will necessarily go on for some time in the stricken area.

Nothing could have more beautifully illustrated the altruistic spirit of our people than the promptness and liberality with which they responded to this call of a distant people. This act of relief constitutes another tie to bind the American people and the Chinese people in a bond of friendship. The relief furnished is all the more to be appreciated when the financial condition under which it was given is taken into account.

The part played by the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is cause for gratification and has brought the warmest recognition and congratulations from the national committee. Ours was the first Board to cable a gift of any consequence to the field. In the first several months, ours was the largest donation that had been received. Throughout the past six months, contributions have poured into our treasury at the rate of from $1,000 to $4,000 a day. This has come about without any great pressure. First the church at large was called upon through the press and through letters issued to many of our laymen and all of our preachers. This brought a response that was unparalleled in our church.

Later the Sunday schools were called upon for definite contribution and this brought a surprising result from every quarter of our church. We can safely say that the total which passed through our Treasurer's hands for this purpose will amount to nearly a quarter of a million dollars. The significance of this fact is that it is the noble impulse and spirit of our people which have been behind it. Our people have responded to the call of the famine sufferers in China on the globe. I am not sure that the spirit of Him who said: "A out of the least of these, my brethren, I shall into the heart of our people."

As an illustration of the way in which an extension of the helping hand of the church, the following letter received from Peking, this article is a good example:

"Shanghai, China, May 17, 1921

Dr. W. W. Pinson,

Board of Missions, M. E. Church, South,

Nashville, Tennessee, U. S. A.

My Dear Dr. Pinson:

It is with great pleasure that I read your letter of April 2. As a member I take pride in the affiliation of the church that has done so splendidly for the famine sufferers. As a Chinese citizen I wish to express to the Board of Missions my hearty gratitude for the church's most generous contributions, which gratitude is shared by all who are working for the relief of our fellow countrymen in distress.

With kind regards, I am,

Sincerely yours,

(Signed) C. C. NIEH.

Mr. Nieh is President of the Chinese General Chamber of Commerce.

TO THE PRESIDING ELDERS, PASTORS, AND CENTENARY TREASURERS, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

My Dear Co-workers: July is with us again, and the year 1921 is half gone already. The time has come when every one must "get busy." If we are to collect the Centenary pledges due, it will take a great deal of effort on the part of every one, but nothing worth while is ever attained without concentrated, earnest effort to bring it about.

We suggest that each Treasurer get a committee to help him, if he has not already done so, and see every Centenary subscriber in his church who has not paid his pledge. Do this before July 20, and send in a report of his collections to this office by July 24, or earlier if possible.

The pastors, too. We urge that they keep the Centenary and the necessity of paying all pledges as they become due, in the minds of the people of their churches. We urge that every one stress the importance of paying NOW and not waiting until later in the year, for not only is the money needed at this time, but if "put off" until later in the year, when other church activities are demanding attention it will be harder to collect the pledges.

Now, let's all work together and see if we cannot make July a most successful month, and climb higher than ever before in our percentage of pledges paid in this Conference. We can only do so by each and every one of us doing his best for the advancement of the Centenary in his church, charge, district, and Conference.

Any assistance we can render towards the "On-going of His Kingdom" through the Centenary, we will be very glad to give. Yours for service,

W. D. HAWKINS,

Conference Missionary Secretary,

Conference Centenary Treasurer

CARD OF THANKS.

We wish to try to express our deep appreciation to the many friends of W. L. Chester, and surrounding communities, who so kindly and faithfully gave aid to us during the illness of our loved one, Rev. J. C. McElroy; and for the kindness and sympathy shown during our late bereavement. We also wish to express our appreciation to Brother Stormont for his great kindness. God alone can reward such kindness as has been shown us. May God's richest blessing rest on each one.

CENTENARY COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT.

Well, Mr. Editor, the Commencement is over—all except the shouting over the honorary degrees which we were pleased to confer upon the brethren. Rev. Briscoe Carter and Rev. Chas. W. Webdell drew a D.D. each, and Col. T. Sambola Jones and Bishop W. F. McMurtry each landed an LL.D. We all enjoyed it with them. Dr. Webdell preached our Commencement sermon and Col. Jones delivered the Baccalaureate address. Dr. F. S. Parker preached before the literary societies.

We had three literary graduates receiving the A. B. degree, as follows:

Miss Warren Harlow, E. V. Duplantis, and Garland G. Smith. They looked wise and otherwise in their neat caps and gowns, and played their part well. There were thirteen graduates from the Academy, most of whom we hope to admit into the College in September.

One of the most enjoyable features of the Commencement was the picnic dinner on the campus graduation day. How you would have enjoyed being with us and partaking of the grand old barbecue and the high fellowship of the occasion!

The annual Board Meeting was one of the most enthusiastic and harmonious in all the history of the College. The Trustees are wide-awake and determined to make the institution equal to the best. I have seen many Trustee and Board Meetings, but I have never seen one where there was more of the wholesome and inspirational spirit of progress and constructive work than I saw in this meeting. Dr. Sexton, the newly elected president, was given an ovation when he outlined his policies and reported progress in raising the finances.

Encouraging reports come from all over the State; the financial situation is clearing up for Centenary; inquiries for the next session are pouring in, and we are all elated over the prospect.

SCHOOL FOR URBAN PASTORS AND LAY WORKERS.

This school was held at Conway, Arkansas, June 7-17, 1921. It was the first of its kind ever conducted under the auspices of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and was arranged for by the City Division of the Department of the Board of Missions.

The primary purpose of the school was to bring together a number of the pastors and lay workers in our city churches; have them carefully study the problems confronting the churches and allied organizations in the cities and the best methods of solving them.

There were fifty-one persons in regular attendance, representing seven States. Probably a like number from the School for Rural Pastors and Lay Workers visited the various classes.

It was a school in every sense of the word and courses were offered in Religious Education, Evangelism in City Churches, The Survey, Representative Successful City Churches, The Problems of the Modern City, and the Woman's Work in the City Churches. Classes were held each day of fifty minutes' duration, Sunday excepted, from 8 a.m. to 12-m. The faculty consisted of nine members, each having had large experience in the particular field concerning which he or she taught. The practical as well as the theoretical phases of the foregoing subjects were presented by them, the emphasis being on the former. In addition to the foregoing program, a forum was conducted from 12 to 1 p.m., by Dr. Worth M. Tippy, Executive Secretary of the Department of Church and Social Service, Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, on the Church and Social Service. The subject matter presented was intensely practical and of great profit to those attending.

Each evening a joint meeting was held for those attending the School for Rural Pastors and Lay Workers, which was in session at the same time. At these meetings addresses were delivered of interest to both groups, by such men as Bishop Edwin Hughes, Doctors Paul L. Elvagt, Alva M. Taylor, Bradford Knapp, J. H. Reynolds and Chas. C. Seelman.

Those in attendance showed great earnestness and enthusiasm for the work. They not only took the required courses and attended the regular class periods, but requested special ones which were arranged for. Something of the appreciation of the School and its work and the wishes of those who attended it may be gained from the following report:

Report of the Findings Committee.
Conway School for Urban Pastors and Lay Workers.

Whereas, there has been a growing consciousness of the need of a more vital relation of the church to the individual and to the community in order that the principles of Christianity might permeate and influence the whole social order; and whereas, a School for Urban Pastors and Lay Workers, where, under the tuition of expert workers in all the departments of church activity; and whereas, every one who has been in attendance upon this school has been profoundly impressed with the vision of the great task of the church and better fitted in every way to lead the forces of righteousness in a more efficient manner to the successful accomplishment of its great responsibility, each of us having seen the vision and received the inspiration so vitally necessary to arm us for the task; therefore, be it resolved:

First—That we extend to the Board of Missions our sincere and grateful appreciation for making possible this great opportunity of receiving the instruction that has been given in the school. The enthusiasm and earnestness that have marked the work of every one in attendance leads us to believe that the Board never expended a like sum of money to greater advantage and that will accrue in greater results to the church; that since the school meets such a vital need of the field, we earnestly urge that the Board provide a sufficient number of schools next year, so distributed as to location, that the largest possible number of our pastors and workers may avail themselves of the instruction given; the term of these schools to continue over one Sunday only, that the attendance may remain intact until the completion of the courses offered.

Second—Be it further recommended that a system of credits be co-ordinated with our colleges, universities and theological seminaries. If this be impossible, it is recommended that the courses be standardized so that the results may lead to the awarding of certificates.

Third—It is further recommended that the Board of Missions establish at Nashville a circulating library of books covering at least the fields of Social Service, Religious Education, and Evangelism.

Fourth—That so far as possible these schools may be held at the Eastern and Western Assemblies.

Fifth—That we extend to all the teachers in the school our sincere thanks for their painstaking and careful work. Our personal contact with these men has been of inestimable value to us. Lastly, to our own tireless and efficient secretaries, Dr. O. E. Goddard and Dr. A. C. Zumbunnen, we express our very high appreciation of their work. They are responsible for the very efficient instructors that we have had, and in every way have given themselves without reserve to make our work both pleasant and profitable.

Respectfully,

W. C. CHILDRESS.

For the Committee.

PROGRESS ON THE VICKSBURG DISTRICT.

Dear Dr. Carley: The work of the Vicksburg District has gone forward with steady and consistent progress all the year. Most of the time has been given to the Educational Campaign and the program has been followed with splendid results in awakening the people of the district to the importance of Christian education. I am sure that no other district had more aggressive leaders. Dr. Hunt as director, Brother Jones as presiding elder, Brothers Selby, Saunders, Dawson, and others as leaders of group movements gave themselves without reserve to the cause. There were no large gifts in the district, but it compares favorably with any other in the loyalty of its pastors, the thoroughness of the canvass and the number of small subscriptions.

Revivals have been held on the Rolling Fork, Mayersville, Oak Ridge, and other charges. Claude Jones and Marvin Miller are helping the pastor at Harrison this week. Rev. T. M. Ainsworth and his people are rejoicing in the dedication of their new church last Sunday by the presiding elder, a church begun this year, most of the money for which was raised during the pastorate of Rev. W. W. Hopper. Brother Ainsworth and his people are to be congratulated on this accomplishment.

The Port Gibson church not only raised its quota in the campaign, but is soon to have a $3000 organ installed. Brother Harmon is in high favor. Natchez, under the leadership of Brother Saunders, is soon to have a $7500 organ. Good for Jefferson Street!

Brother O'Neil, of Rolling Fork, has recently attended the Commencement at Emory University. His people at Cary are planning a new church.

The congregations at Crawford Street and Gibson Memorial have broken the records for attendance this year, and Vicksburg Methodism has become a more vital factor in the city than probably ever before. Both pastors are in high favor and both churches made highly creditable records in the Education Campaign. The Young People's Missionary Conference and the District Missionary meeting are to be held at Gibson Memorial, July 26-29.

The state of the work on the Holly Bluff, Anguilla, Silver City, Utica, Mayersville, Fayette, Washington, Nebo, Centerville, and Mt. Vernon charges is encouraging, and constructive progress is being made. M. L. McCormick from Millsaps College takes J. W. Bell's place at Roxie, the latter returning to North Mississippi. J. A. Sharp, also from Millsaps, takes Dr. Hunt's place at Rocky Springs. Wells, at Gloster, is in the midst of revival work on his own charge.

Revs. J. R. Jones, T. B. Cottrell, C. P. Jones, W. H. Saunders, C. Y. Higginbotham, T. M. Ainsworth, J. O. Ware, W. J. Dawson, and J. B. Cain attended the Seashore Divinity School from the district. Quite a strong delegation attended the League Conference at Hattiesburg. W. W. Bowie goes as one of the representatives from the League Conference to Lake Junaluska.

Sincerely,

J. B. CAIN, Reporter.

DEATH OF MR. GEORGE GOODALL.

It will be a matter of deep regret to the members of the Methodist churches in New Orleans to learn that Mr. George Goodall died recently at Guatemala. He came over from Yorkshire, England, about five years ago, as a member of the British Consulate staff in New Orleans. As a Methodist local preacher of great ability, he made himself useful among the different churches in the city. He was an M. A., of London University, and passed with honors in the English Civil Service examinations, hence his appointment as a vice consul. Those who attended the Annual Conference at Minden, La., will remember that he was introduced to the Conference. He was sent to H. M. Consulate at Panama, and was married there to an English lady who came out from the homeland for that purpose. He was then transferred to Guatemala. I do not know how long he was sick, but he died from heart failure. His wife and little baby have returned to England. He was a loyal, useful member of the Methodist Church, a truly Christian man. At Panama he edited a monthly local church paper, a copy of which he sent to me regularly. He also contributed to the Sunday School Times. I am sure the churches in New Orleans will share with me in mourning the loss of a good man.

"THE SPIRIT'S WITNESS."

By Rev. Hilary S. Westbrook.

After having taken a close survey of the Holy Scriptures, I have found no text that will excel the one which John Wesley used in preaching his two great sermons on the "Witness of the Spirit" and "The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God." Romans, 8:16. Hence, we see plainly that the Holy Spirit is essentially a witness in the work of salvation. It belongs to Him alone to bear witness of the pardon of sin and adoption into God's family. Without this Divine witness within, there can be no possible way of being assured of Divine favor. Devoid of His inward witness, there can be nothing but painful misgivings and harassing doubts as to one's acceptance with God. "John Wesley affirms most emphatically that we can and must have this witness of the Spirit, in order for us to be in favor with the lowly Nazarene." So we find it written in letters of gold, "He that believeth on the Son of God, hath the witness in himself." Mark, those words, for they are full of meaning. The point in question is, whether there can be any direct witness (testimony) of the Spirit other than that which arises from the consciousness of the fruit thereof. Wesley, I believe there is; because that is the plain, natural meaning of the text: "The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God." And "because we are sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of His Son into our hearts, crying, 'Abba Father.'" It is manifest, here are two witnesses mentioned, who together testify the self-same thing; the Spirit of God, and our own spirit.

One of the late bishops of London, in his sermon on this text, seems astonished that any one can doubt of this, which appears upon the very face of the text in hand. Now, "the testimony of our own spirit," says the bishop, "is one, which is the consciousness of our own sincerity;" or, to express the same thing a little more clearly, the consciousness of the fruit of the Spirit. When our spirit is conscious of this—of love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness—it easily infers from these premises that we are the children of God. Hence, it is true that the great man supposes the other witnesses to be "the consciousness of our own good works." This he affirms is the testimony of God's Spirit. But this is included in the testimony of our own spirit, etc. We can see that it is quite clear that not every one, then, has the privilege of this blessed witness. It belongs only to those who believe that Jesus is the Son of God. And even here we must make careful discriminations, for it is not every one that believes who receives this witness, since there are degrees in believing. It is not merely the one who mentally accepts the truth that Jesus Christ was Divine, the Son of God. Yea, one may believe this much and yet at the same time be a child of the Devil. Listen, what then? Simply this, that it is he who believes that Jesus is the Son of God, that he rest his soul's salvation entirely and alone upon the atoning merits of the Son of God. He trusts now in Jesus as his present Savior from sin, and looks not to his own righteousness to avail in his behalf, nor does he rely upon anything he does or can do to recommend him to God and secure Divine favor, but alone does he rest in and plead the all-sufficient merits of the Lord Jesus Christ. Thus believing, he receives pardon for all sins and is made a child of God by the justifying act of God, and he then and there receives this witnessing Spirit. Of course such believing is invariably preceded by a thorough and evangelical repentance, which involves a godly sorrow for sin and is accompanied by a thorough reformation of life.

But to what does the Spirit bear witness? This is an important question and needs to be well thought out in answering the same. It is not the witness that one has saving faith. Really one does not need the Holy Spirit to assure him either that he has faith or that his faith is genuine. His own consciousness will inform him of that fact as to whether or not he is resting upon something other than Jesus Christ, or if he is trusting fully in the merits of Christ Jesus. It is a witness not so much of faith, nor a witness to faith, but rather a witness the direct fruit of faith. We believe, then we receive the witness that we are born of God. It is the witness which gives assurance of what saving faith accomplishes for us at God's hand.

If it be further inquired, what does the Spirit bear witness, we answer that He witnesses within that one has been freely and fully forgiven of all sin, that God is pleased with him, that he is a child of God, and that Divine favor rests upon him—it is the assurance of a present salvation from sin, rather than a past salvation or a future salvation. For "He that believeth on the Son of God hath the witness in himself" as to his present relations to God, not to his past relations, nor so much his future relations. It is the Spirit's present witness to a present fact. It is the inward assurance divinely given to a present justification, an ever-blessed event transpiring in the mind and heart of God. Is this true? Can it be so that the penitent believes, resting entirely upon the merits of the Son of God for salvation, may so come into the favor of Almighty God, who was heretofore angry with him because of his transgressions, as to receive an inward witness that he is now accepted of God, and all the Divine wrath has passed away? Yes, it is verily true. Praise His name forever!

Thank God, what a blessed and high privilege, then, is this which belongs to all believers! Oh, how we should prize it, and how we should ever covet and cherish this inward Divine witness! Yes, how we should always guard against anything questionable or wrong, or which would in any wise grieve the Holy Spirit and rob us of this indwelling witness.

Do I at this juncture speak to any trembling, self-accusing soul who is devoid of such a witness in himself, who struggles against doubt and who is robbed of peace by his tormenting fears? Let me urge him to cast himself entirely and uncompromisingly upon Jesus Christ, the Son of God, and cry aloud to God in the name of Christ, for full pardon and the present witness that he is accepted by God as his own child. Rest not contented till the Holy Spirit bears inward testimony to sins forgiven and that you are adopted into the family of God. I am glad we can say, with the poet:

"How can a sinner know,
His sins on earth forgiven?
How can my gracious Savior show
My name inscribed in heaven?"

What we have felt and seen,
With confidence we tell,
And publish to the sons of men
The signs infallible."

APROPOS PROHIBITION.

By Herman J. Stich.

"The average man loves a scrap," says a great newspaper editor.

The editor is wrong.

Every man loves a scrap—average, below average, brilliant, dull, tall, small, pacifist, artisan, high-brow, low-brow, professional, non-professional; two kids mauling each other on the sidewalk immediately gather a motley mob.

From the best of us all through the ranks of the rest of us, we love a contest; our hearts thrill to a battle or set-to—we love to see and hear if not to participate.

It is the universal, elemental brute in us fighting for a way out.

That is why prohibition furnishes so much entertainment in opportunity for argument—and fun—the latter for the fellow who has "his," of course.

And what a battle royal the whole world would have enjoyed had Doctor Buckley and Doctor Ingersoll debated prohibition pros and cons! If the debate would have been anything like the letters they wrote each other, then we have indeed been cheated out of a few masterpieces of impassioned oratory.

This is a letter Doctor Ingersoll once wrote Doctor Buckley.

Dear Buckley: I am your master of the most wonderful whiskey that ever grew a skeleton from the feast or painted madness in the brain of man. It is the mingled soul of wheat and corn. In it you will find the sunshine and the shadows that chased each other over bloody fields, the breath of June, the carol of the lark, the dews of the night, the wealth of the summer and autumn's rich content, all golden with its innermost light. Drink it, and you will hear the voices of men and maidens singing the "Harvest Home," mingled with the laughter of children. Drink it and you will feel within your blood the stirred dawn, the dreamy, tawny dusk of perfect days. For 40 years this liquid joy has been confined within staves of oak, longing to touch the lips of man. Your friend,

ROBERT G.

And here is Doctor Buckley's reply:

Dear Bob: I return to you some of the most wonderful whiskey that ever brought a skeleton into the closet or painted scenes of lust and bloodshed in the brain of man. It is the ghost of wheat and corn, crazed by the loss of their natural bodies. In it you will find a transient sunshine chased by a shadow as cold as an Arctic midnight, in which the breath of June grows icy, and the carol of the lark gives place to the foreboding cry of the raven. Drink it and you shall have "woe," "sorrow," "habbllag" and "wounds without cause." Your eyes shall behold strange women, and your heart shall utter perverse things. Drink it and you shall hear the voice of demons, shrinking women wailing, and worse than orphaned children mourning the loss of a father who lives. Drink it deep and long, and serpents will hiss in your ears, coil themselves about your neck and seize you with their fangs. At last it "biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder." For 40 years this liquid death has been confined within staves of oak, harmless there as purest water. I send it to you that you may put an enemy into your mouth to steal away your brain, and yet I call myself, your friend,

BUCKLEY.

W. W. PINSON.

Nashville, Tenn.

IT IS INFECTIOUS.

By Archer Wallace.

Over twenty years ago a young Englishman who was looking forward to a career in the army was thrown from his horse so violently that for fourteen years he lay on his back in utter helplessness. He never, however, gave up the idea of being useful somewhere, and when one day an account of Robert Louis Stevenson's magnificent fight against disease fell into his hands he resolved that he, too, would be a writer. This man is Lieutenant Ollivant, whose book, "Owd Bob," has gone through several editions and whose constituency of readers is growing every day.

Had Ollivant not learned of Stevenson, his career no doubt would have been different. But the story of one man's splendid courage fired the soul of another sufferer, and so we have yet another illustration of the power of noble example. In face of difficulty and vexatious disappointment it is worth while to be brave and hopeful. If only for the sake of many others who find themselves in circumstances not unlike our own, cheerfulness is infectious, courage spreads along the lines, and the brave man is not only an asset to his nation, but a useful servant of God.—Exchange.

FROM THE PELICAN PINES.

By Rev. S. A. Steel, D.D.

The moonlight lay softly on the floor of the little cabin porch where Enoch and Malviny sat spooning, while the mocking-bird made music on the topmost twig of the big oak tree. Said Enoch: "Malviny, what would you rather be, honey, if you was not Malviny?" "What would I rather be, if I was not Malviny? I'd rather be an American Beauty rose!" "What would you rather be, Enoch?" "A octopus." "A octopus! What's dat, Enoch?" "Why a octopus is one of dese here fishes what has a hundred arms." "Well, land sakes, what for you want a hundred arms, Enoch?" "To put 'em around you, honey!" "Shuh, go way, Enoch; you don't want no hundred arms. You ain't usin' the two you got!"

The story brought down the house, for it illustrated a point Dr. Marsh, who had just preceded me, made in his address. He was on a train and overheard a young lady talking to an old woman. The young lady had just finished reading a book on India, and told the old lady that she longed to go as a missionary to the poor benighted heathen. She thought it would be glorious to give one's life to lift them up. Her fine idealism and noble Christian sentiments greatly pleased Dr. Marsh as he listened, and he said to himself: "There is a splendid young woman. She is the sort to help save the world." The train rushed through a mining town in Pennsylvania. The hills were covered with the humble homes of laboring people. High up on the mountainside there was a rude little public schoolhouse. As the young lady looked out of the window, she said: "My, what houses! And think of teaching school in that little house! Deliver me!" That "deliver me" punctured the bubble of Dr. Marsh's admiration. She could be enthusiastic about what she could not do, but begged to be delivered from what she might do. "Shuh, Enoch, you ain't usin' the two arms you have."

Two weeks in the heart of Birmingham, the great industrial center of the central South, with its sky-scrapers towering 25 stories above the ground, its great hotels, its wide streets, and magnificent homes on the mountain side! The first time I saw Birmingham I could have bought all the land I wanted for $5 an acre, now worth a thousand. I stayed at the Tutwiler Hotel, a two million dollar palace, but entirely too stylish for me. I love the simple life, and it is mere dream in a place like a first-class modern hotel. Give me the freedom of the Pines! My room was on the 12th floor, but the mercury hugged a hundred degrees, and no rain had fallen for 35 days. And yet the artistic circular of the Tutwiler said "the climate is adorable!" What a joke!

I was there to attend two Summer Schools of Theology. First came Dr. Goddard's school for the Negro preachers. I do not know when I have been to a meeting I enjoyed more. When I first received Dr. Goddard's invitation to be one of his instructors in that school, I said to Sister Steel, "That is one meeting I must attend." These Negro preachers of the Colored M. E. Church are our sort of Negroes, and retain the kindly feeling toward the white people that has always existed between Southern white people and the Negroes who have not come under Northern influence. I take no stock in the Yankee type of Negro; but such Negroes as I met in that Summer School I will go my length to aid. They were intelligent, polite, and of course, eloquent in speech. My general subject was Methodist doctrine and polity; but I told them Dr. Goddard had Dunkle there to teach them how to make a sermon, and had me to show them how to preach! Dunkle made "bringing on the rousements" the main thing in the sermon, and I brought on the "rousements." My, how they can sing and shout! No money the Southern Methodist Church spends is better spent than in helping these Negroes, nor can it be spent in a better way than that adopted by Dr. Goddard. God bless him in that sort of work. O no, we had no "inter-racial" discussion, thank the Lord! That sort of thing does more harm than good. The way to solve the race problem is to help the Negroes. We know them, and right-thinking Negroes know us, and there will never be any trouble between the sort of Negroes I met in that Summer School and the white people of the South.

The other school was for the preachers of the North Alabama Conference. It was well attended and was a fine occasion every way. Bishop Quayle, and Dr. Marsh, of Pittsburg, Pa., and Dr. H. C. Morrison, were the big guns of the occasion. I gave some of my messages on the Bible. I don't believe in the modern theory that the Bible is made up of mythological tales and ancient fables, and I say so. Doesn't the Psalmist say, "Let the redeemed of the Lord say so?" Well, I do; and every reference I made to Dr. Rice's recent book, and to the importance of keeping such German rationalism out of our institutions of learning, elicited loud applause. We have gone far enough in that direction; it is high time to "seek for the old paths" of Methodist belief. For my part, I am glad Dr. Rice has brought the question out into the open. So many of our preachers have imbibed the error of the rationalistic treatment of the Bible from going to Chicago, that we need an inspection, such as they give the cadets at Lexington, Va. The officer took each gun, and looked through the barrel! Chicago University turns out a quality of theological ammunition far inferior to the old-time Methodist thunder-and-lightning truth, that made the pulpit a power for righteousness. We had better be sure what sort of ammunition we are using, and whether our guns are kept in order. There is little use in giving our money to promote "Christian education" if we are going undermine faith in the Bible as the inspired Word of God by teaching that Genesis is a collection of folk lore and the solemn account of the fall of man a story told to explain "why snakes crawl!" If we can't whip that theology from the field, we had better shut up the shop, and go a fishing. That is what Peter proposed to do when they were disappointed in Jesus. And when the conscience of Southern Methodism gets aroused on the subject, there is no telling where the lightning will strike. They had better put up some rods on Emory University, too! The secret of the success of Methodism was in the fact that it revived apostolic faith, and we must not let that faith be lost, universities or no universities. But you can never harmonize Pentecost and Rationalism. They contradict each other, and the destructive Higher Criticism of the Bible given us in Dr. Rice's recent book is simply German Rationalism. Its tap root is the denial of the supernatural.

But call a spade a spade now and hear the rocks whiz by! Ask Sims! I am a descendant of an Ulster Protestant Irishman, and have little use for Sims on other grounds; but he came mighty near hitting the truth in his use of an epitaph Sister Steel does not allow me to write. I don't wear white shoes, or a wrist watch, or speak with my coat off; so I am not "modern." But Brother Goddard's darkies said I was "the expert" of his bunch! By the way, when you fellows put Unification through, I intend to join the Colored M. E. Church. I had rather gang with our true Southern Negroes than with Southern white folks that are willing to knuckle to the Northern side. Yet I have namesakes among the Yankees! Hurrah for those Yankees anyhow!

NOTES.

By Rev. E. N. Evans.

Jesus pardoned the thief on the cross, but let him die there in just payment of a violated law; but that same day He greeted him in Paradise as a pardoned sinner. He refused officially to hear or adjudicate the case of the woman charged with a capital violation of the law of Moses, but He forgave her sin and sent her away. He would not act as judge between the two brothers in dispute over an estate. As the materialized Spirit—God made manifest in the flesh—He lived in obedience to natural law; when hungry, He ate; when thirsty, He drank; when weary, He slept. (He never got sick because He knew and observed the laws of health.) He miraculously fed the hungry, but left them to get their next meal in the good old way. He healed the sick, and raised the dead, but these sickened again and died. He refused to violate the law of gravity by casting himself down from the pinnacle of the Temple. He died on the Roman cross. He rose again from the dead. He did not deal with crime; the courts of the land might do that. He forgave sin, but that did not release men from the legal penalty of violated law. To pay the penalty of violated law did not release from the guilt of sin.

Undoubtedly His great objective was to save men. These all being sinners, His first work was get them in condition to pardon, then forgive their sins and make them new men. New men would make a new earth, and a new social order. Great material prosperity, with men as criminals, will get us nowhere nor will it endure. Material wealth does not save men. Character makes civilization. Society is no infallible guardian against temptation to evil or guaranty of permanent happiness. A virtuous and chaste people alone may be happy. Character alone makes permanent civilization.

Science, in the conquest and utilization of the material, might give us the splendors of a heathenish civilization in whose midst men would lose themselves. The material at its best is only a means to a higher objective. It may not be despised, for it is a necessary means. "Your heavenly Father knoweth that you have need of all these things." Man is essentially an associated being and as such he has place in the social order or State. Relationship creates obligation, duty and responsibility. Violation of these is crime, and the accountability is to the courts of the land—the offender is a criminal. But man was made for a greater, higher, and nobler objective. He has a soul—the reflex of the Eternal Spirit—made in the image of God. Aside from his relation to the material world, with natural laws and the social order and its courts, he still is accountable to God direct for his moral conduct. This we call religion.

It was in this department, so to speak, that Jesus came to seek and save that which was lost. He claimed no office in Roman Government, nor membership in the Hebrew Tribunal. He adjudicated no legal matters, but He told them the moral rights and wrongs of their judgments. He dealt with all men as sinners needing pardon and a new birth. Not moral or social reform, but a new life. To regenerate—to make men anew—was his great objective. The possession and proper uses of great wealth and the ideal social order will come as the normal sequence when man has been set right with God.

But will all men be pardoned, made new and set right with God? Will science restore the earth to its paradisiacal state of glory? Will the social order dawn into the millennium? Will wars cease? Pestilence and famine end in all parts of the earth? I answer emphatically, NO. Not till He comes again. In this dispensation of His grace, He is seeking and saving men whose total is and shall be but a small per cent of all those who shall have lived upon the earth. The selection is not arbitrary, but necessarily confined to those who believe and trust Him. With these who trust and are saved—made new—He will populate the New Earth as the home of their resurrected bodies and the New Heaven shall be their perfected and ideal home of the soul. And they shall constitute a sinless citizenship. And this is God's GREAT OBJECTIVE from before the foundation of the world. Whatever has been revealed or taught, whatever has been done, this is the end or objective.

BETTY BLUE'S QUEER CALENDAR.

Mother made a calendar
For June, for Betty Blue.
Thirty little faces, one
For every day, she drew.
Sixty eyes and thirty funny
Noses like a dot;
But not a single mouth! Do you
Suppose that she forgot?

Strung upon a ribbon gay,
They really looked quite queer.
"You're to draw the mouths, my child,"
Her mother made it clear.
"Every day that you are pleasant,
Kindly, sweet, and good,
Their little corners shall turn up—
As proper corners should!"

"But days that you are naughty and
Are not a kindly girl,
The corners of the little lips
Must have a downward curl.
And when the month has quite gone by,
We'll count which side has won;
If Smiles, then a party! But If Frownies, there'll be none!"

Miss Betty, as she listened, made
Her mind up on the spot:
There should not be one ugly
Turned-down corner in the lot!
And sure enough, at counting time
('Twas Betty's birthday, too),
Thirty sunny faces smiled
At happy Betty Blue!

And so there was a party; oh,
'Twas such a grand affair!
Ice-cream and cake and candy, too,
A-plenty and to spare.
And thirty little girls were there,
One for each little smile;
While calendars like Betty Blue's
Are really quite the style!

A CHINESE HIAWATHA.

The hot sun beat into the schoolroom. From one corner came the low hum of the class in geography, from the other the droning of the children repeating the multiplication table. Through the window the teacher could see the orange groves stretching away under the quivering sunlight of the California sun. Out of the stillness came the pop of shotguns and the cries of the guardians of the rice below in the marshes.

"By the shores of Gitche Guml,
By the shining big sea water—"

—the class in literature was reciting now. The teacher moved the bottle of wilted flowers to one side and saw that Ah Hop was not studying. He was sitting still and wistfully gazing straight before him. The teacher knew what he was looking at. On a pedestal, above the zone of chalk dust, sat the plaster cast of Longfellow, the Children's Poet. Some teacher had left it long ago for an inspiration.

"Ah Hop," called the teacher.

He shuffled up, abashed, hands busy with his bolt.

"You've tried hard for the part," she said, pushing aside her book. "Why don't you want to be Hlawatha? What made you change your mind?"

He darted a swift look at her and then gazed down, silent.

They were giving a play made from the story of Hlawatha to raise money for the Junior Red Cross, whose acts of service for children friendless or in need had taken all the money out of their treasury. Of all the children in the school, Ah Hop had but one rival for the leading part. That was Ah Pau. They were both bright little Chinese boys and both good actors, and they both wanted to be Hlawatha. But they were the most listless in the schoolroom and the most mischievous on the school ground, so as a reward for good conduct the teacher had said the one who tried hardest to live the part of Hlawatha for a week could play it for one evening. Ah Hop tried much the hardest.

"I think the costume will fit," said the teacher. She had made it hoping that Ah Hop would be the one to wear it.

He made no answer, but his black eyes filled with tears, and he looked out of the sunlight window. Again through the silence came the crack of the guns and the long, shrill cries of the guardians of the rice.

"Hlawatha, him too good," he said at last.

"Why?" asked the teacher.

"He never hurt birds. I have to hurt birds so that the rice crop will not be eaten up. They tell me to shoot, and I shoot."

"Never mind, Ah Hop," said the teacher, "you didn't want to hurt them." She had not expected that he would take the part in the little play so seriously.

Next day his downcast face appeared at the teacher's desk. Ah Hop's eyes were sullen. His shirt was torn and black with mud. It was clear that he had been beaten by the rice field guards. His sentences were short and uncomfortable.

"No can be Hlawatha."

The teacher put the stopper in the ink bottle.

"Why not?"

"I swore."

"Oh, Ah Hop!"

She was very sorry for this little Chinese boy, who was trying to be good and to know how to become an American.

"Hlawatha never swore. The guardian of the rice told me to shoot the birds that were carrying away the grain. I told him it was wrong to kill blackbirds. He struck me. I swore at him."

The teacher suddenly had an inspiration. Anything was swearing with the foreign children.

"What did you say, Ah Hop?"

He turned and looked at the bust of Longfellow and sobbed, "I said, 'Beat it.'"

The teacher did not laugh. The earnestness of this one little Junior Red Cross member so seriously started on the way to becoming an American must not be made a joke. So she comforted him, and as he turned to go back to his seat he carried under his arm the Hlawatha costume.—Red Cross Bulletin.

THE RUG MAKER'S MISTAKE.

A friend of boys and girls and young men and women, who often came to him for advice about their life work, once said in answer to an inquirer:

"Beside my table lies a rug of intricate design. The Oriental who made it ruined the pattern one day, for some reason, and never afterward through all his weaving of the rug was he able to correct his mistake, which became more and more apparent as the rug became complete. In like fashion every failure to respond to present duty, however insignificant, leaves a flaw in life's pattern and texture that will disorder all that comes afterward, and that will appear even when the causes have been forgotten. The only safe rule in following duty is to put all of life into every act, for these are woven into the warp of the years make vocations. I am bound to invest my life in the vocation that will yield to God the largest return for what he has invested in me.—Exchange.

"TIME OUT."

Less Than That!

It took several hundred thousand years to make men out of monkeys. It sometimes takes five minutes to reverse the process. Columbia Missourian.

Not Cash.

"My time," said the magnate, "is worth $100 a minute."

"Well," answered his friend casually, "let's go out this afternoon and play $10,000 or $15,000 worth of golf."—Boston Transcript.

Very Strange.

An absent-minded man went into a store to buy a jar. He saw one that was turned upside down and cried:

"How absurd! The jar has no mouth."

Turning it over, he was once more astonished. "Why, the bottom's gone, too!" he exclaimed.—The Youth's Companion.

A Natural Mistake.

"Oh, mother!" exclaimed little Raymond upon his return from Sunday school, "the superintendent said something awful nice about me in his prayer this morning."

"That was splendid, Raymond. What did he say?"

"He said, 'O Lord, we thank Thee for food and Raymond.'"—Exchange.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after three or four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise, use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least an inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

Editorial

THE FOURTH OF JULY.

Patriotic Americans cannot fail to pause with each recurring anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence to thank God for the ideals that led to the establishment of this great nation, and for the men who gave their lives that those ideals might be realized; and to offer a prayer that the men and women of this day may use well the heritage they have received from their forefathers.

The celebration of that memorable day on last Monday, apart from the usual accompaniments of a holiday, had to do largely with the evaluation of the forces that have been operative in the life of America, and an estimate of the influences that are operative to-day with reference to future developments. It was not so much a glorification of the past as a serious study of our present national life and of the history that is in the making. While we realize that one hundred and forty-five years constitute but a moment in the life of a nation, we cannot fail to understand that they furnish a suitable background upon which to estimate the possibilities of the future. In that time we have emerged from a few struggling colonies into one of the greatest nations of the earth, both in material resources and in the influence we exert upon international affairs. More than ever it seems to be true that the United States occupies a providential position among the nations of the earth, and more than ever is it called upon to lead the way to the ultimate goals of civilization.

The fulfillment of our providential mission will depend upon the faithfulness of the individual citizen in these difficult times. The least we can afford to do is to re-dedicate ourselves to the service of God and our country, that all peoples may be blessed through us and our nation.

"THE NEGLECTED MAN OF METHODISM."

In the Advocate of April 7, there appeared an article by Dr. R. A. Meck under the above caption, which brought to the attention of the church a situation which ought not to exist; but since it does exist, it ought to be corrected as speedily as possible. The situation referred to is found in the fact that a great many of the preachers who serve our rural charges are receiving salaries that are utterly inadequate for the support of themselves and families.

There may have been a time when the question of the support of the ministry was to be considered, in the light of meager resources on the part of the people whom they served and in the light of the heroic spirit which made good men willing to sac-rific material comforts for the sake of the good they might do; but that time has passed. We do not believe there is less of the heroic spirit on the part of the men who are called to preach the gospel, but we are convinced that conditions no longer exist that warrant the assessment of an amount as salary that is known from the beginning to be altogether insufficient for the needs of a decent living. In the few cases where the charge itself is actually unable to provide a living salary, the boards of missions take cognizance of that fact, or they should do so, and the charge is placed on a missionary basis and the preacher is given some sort of assurance that he will not have to suffer overmuch.

We are thoroughly convinced that the time has come for the church to assure every preacher who is assigned to a pastoral charge that he will receive an adequate support, either through the salary assessed and paid by the charge itself, or through a sufficient appropriation by the board of missions, or through some other definite arrangement. In nearly all the organized forms of industry, there is a recognized minimum below which wages cannot fall—that wage at least must be paid or the industry will come to a standstill. It strikes us as a manifestly unjust thing for the church to appoint a man to a work from which it is known to begin with that he will not receive salary enough to live on decently. We have no sort of sympathy with the idea that preachers should form a union and refuse to work for less than a specified minimum wage; neither have we any feeling that there is a "revelation from the Lord" that prosperous people have a right to the ministry of men whom they are not willing to support at least in comfort.

The multiplying of preaching places where at best only a few people can be brought together and where they could almost as easily attend religious services at another point, is an unnecessary burden upon the polity of the church which does it, and an unprofitable expenditure of energy on the part of the men who have to take care of these appointments. With the coming of good roads throughout the country, and the multiplication of forms of easy and quick transportation, it ought to be possible for the church to begin to practice a policy of consolidation that would result in the development of strong pastoral charges in the rural sections without any corresponding loss in the number of people reached.

This plan, however, does not make any provision for the needs of the men who are now actually suffering for some of the smallest comforts of life as they undertake loyalty and heroically to carry on the work to which they were appointed. It would be a very Christian thing for some of our strong city churches and prosperous individual members of the church to get into communication with the presiding elders of the various districts and propose to supplement the salaries of some of these faithful men who are barely able to exist upon what they have received thus far. We dare say every presiding elder could find immediate use for any such funds that might come into his hands.

TOO MUCH IS ENOUGH.

It is a pity that the daily press feels that it is necessary to give its readers the details of crimes and social scandals to a nauseating degree. We sympathize fully with the brilliant editor of the Texas Christian Advocate, Dr. A. J. Weeks, as he gives expression to his feelings in the following words:

"For days and days now a long-suffering public has been treated by the daily papers with all the salacious details of three current major scandals either one of which is enough to make a decent man reach for the deodorant. In each case the principals are prominent in what is considered the exclusive social circle in this democratic country—that circle to which admission is gained not by character nor intellectuality nor decent conduct, but by sordid dollars. These unprincipled principals are kept on the front page, their pictures are flaunted in the face of respectability, and all of the details of their degeneracy printed in plain type. Why is it necessary to turn the Associated Press news distributing agency and the daily papers of America into sewers and conveyors of filth? It can not possibly serve any good purpose, but on the contrary it can not fail to do unmeasured harm. There are tales of drunkenness and prodigality and domestic infidelity. Homes of elegance are turned into seething brotchels and the doors thrown open so the whole Nation can look upon their infamy and uncleanness. Clad in attractive finery and tinted with costly cosmetics these moral lepers parade their foulness before a blushing public and in a measure poison the whole social atmosphere.

"To the uninformed these reports might convey the impression that they represent American life, and hence we express the hope that the papers publishing them do not circulate beyond our national borders. It would humiliate us fearfully to know that they were read in Turkey or Africa, to say nothing of more advanced countries.

"When we read about the doings of the very rich—not all but many of them—their low standards in morals and their social indecency, we find it easy to thank God that we were born and reared in poverty. That our forbears were horny-handed men who tilled the soil and patient women who knew no luxury but modesty and virtue. We would rather have grown up as we did among the soughing pines, unused to any 'white lights' brighter than a pine knot fire, than to have been fed costly viands out of silver dishes with silver spoons and to have developed into a lounge lizard with a gourd for a head and the moral character of a coyote for a possession.

"Thank God, the real American home life is still virtuous. That is the strength of the country too. It is in the name of the home life of this Nation that we protest against the distribution through the public press of all this unmentionable uncleanness that obtains in the circle composed of the vicious who happen to be rich enough to disregard all the obligations of decency."

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. R. H. Clegg is in the midst of a splendid meeting at Raleigh, Miss., in which he is being assisted by Rev. J. M. Smith. The attendance is growing with each service, and interest is steadily increasing.

"The News Letter," a weekly paper published in the interest of St. Mark's Hall and edited by Miss Lyda Belden, claims to be the smallest newspaper in the South. Its eight pages, however, are full of interesting items of news.

Dr. C. M. Bishop, president of Southwestern University, Georgetown, Texas, tendered his resignation at the recent commencement, to take effect a year hence. It is understood that he expects to re-enter the pastorate.

In reply to a letter from one of his constituents requesting him to support the supplemental prohibition bill, Senator E. S. Broussard, of Louisiana, replied that he did not favor restrictions and could not support the bill.

The fourteenth annual convention of the National Association of Organists will meet in Philadelphia, Pa., July 26-29. This is the organization to which a great many church organists throughout the country belong.

Rev. W. B. Hogg, of Little Rock, Ark., will assist in a simultaneous evangelistic campaign in Lake Charles, La., during the first two weeks of October. All the churches of the city—white and black—will co-operate in the campaign.

Announcement has been made that the publication of the Southern Methodist Handbook will be resumed next year. This will be good news to all those who like to have full and accurate information concerning our church easily accessible.

Dr. Felix R. Hill, Jr., well-known in Mississippi and Louisiana, was appointed a delegate to the Ecumenical Conference, but his heavy duties in connection with the presidency of Westmoorland College, San Antonio, Texas, will make it impracticable for him to attend.

Our church at Greenwood, Miss., Rev. V. C. Curtis, pastor, on a quota of $18,000 for the Christian Education Movement, pledged $20,500—a magnificent showing.

Rev. W. E. Thomas, president of the Louisiana Conference Epworth League Board, is attending the League meeting at Lake Junaluska, N. C., as a representative of the Conference Board.

Professor Thomas Carter, of Vanderbilt University, spent a day or two in this city last week. His recent volume on the life of St. Paul has been very highly commended by those who have read it.

Rev. F. B. Hill, our pastor at Jackson, La., preached on a recent Sunday at Hammond, La., for the pastor, Rev. Leon I. McCain. Brother McCain was conducting a revival meeting at Zachary, La.

We learn with sorrow of the death of Miss Skipwith, in Baton Rouge, La., the latter part of last week. Miss Skipwith was a sister of Mrs. R. H. Harper, wife of the pastor of First Church, this city. The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to the sorrowing family.

The work on the Mayhew and Sessums charge, North Mississippi Conference, is moving along nicely. The pastor, Rev. Seamon Rhea, began his revival meetings on the first Sunday in July, assisted by Rev. G. A. Baker, of Myrtle, Miss.

Rev. J. B. Grambling, Field Secretary for the Louisiana State Epworth League, after attending and assisting in the Epworth League Assembly at Abingdon, Va., is now at Lake Junaluska, N. C., attending the League Conference at that place.

Mrs. W. E. Boggs, widow of the late Rev. W. E. Boggs, D.D., was married to Dr. E. H. Stevenson, of Fort Smith, Ark., at the home of her son in New Orleans, on June 29, Rev. R. H. Harper officiating. Dr. and Mrs. Stevenson will make their home at Fort Smith.

The meeting to which we recently referred as being held at Keatchie, La., in which the pastor, Rev. S. J. Davies, was assisted by Rev. Leland Clegg, was at Keithville instead of Keatchie. There were five additions to the church on profession of faith, and a general spiritual uplift to the church.

Rev. C. M. Crossley recently assisted Rev. W. A. Terry in a successful meeting at South McComb, Miss. There were fourteen additions to the church. Rev. J. T. Lewis was with Brother Terry last week in what promised to be a fine meeting at East McComb, the results of which we have not learned.

Miss Emma D. Cushman, formerly of Scarritt Bible and Training School, has been appointed one of a committee of three by the League of Nations to investigate the war-time deportation of Christian women and children from Turkey. Miss Cushman rendered notable service to the Allied Powers in the Near East during the war.

One of the attractions of Lake Junaluska, N. C., this year will be a Bible and Evangelistic School, August 14-21, at which many of our pastors and official evangelists are expected to be present. Many of the problems confronting the church in its evangelistic work will be discussed.

Rev. Frank B. Hill, our pastor at Jackson, La., has been appointed Protestant chaplain for the State Institution for the Insane located at that place. He is anxious to be of as much service as possible, and he will be glad to receive letters from those who have friends or relatives in the institution.

Just before going to press we received the sad news of the death of Mrs. Joe Skipper, wife of Brother Joe Skipper, of DeKalb, Miss., on Thursday, June 30. Mrs. Skipper was the sister of Rev. J. M. Morse, of the Mississippi Conference. We extend sincere sympathy to those who have been bereaved by the passing of this saintly woman.

We had the pleasure last Sunday of meeting Miss Cecile Ramsey, of Durant, Miss., who is in New Orleans attending the Tulane Summer School. Miss Ramsey is the daughter and sister of Methodist preachers, and, of course, is very greatly interested in the work of the church. She was kind enough to express her appreciation of the Conference organ.

Chaplain A. Floyd Vaughan, now stationed at Camp Grant, Chicago, Ill., as chaplain of the 53rd Infantry, U. S. A., has been transferred to Fort Sam Houston, San Antonio, Texas, and will reach his new post about July 10. Chaplain Vaughan has made a fine record in the Army and is very popular with the enlisted men and officers. He is a member of the Louisiana Conference.

We learn from the Midland Methodist that the Board of Missions has bought the Doctors' Building in Nashville, Tenn., at a cost of $350,000, and will move the entire force of the Board into it within a few months. Two more stories will be added immediately, at a cost of $250,000. It is estimated that the rentals from the first three stories will pay for the property within a few years.

We have received the distressing news that the infant daughter of Rev. W. C. Hunt, pastor of the Arkabutla circuit, North Mississippi Conference, died on the night of June 27. Brother Hunt was on a visit to his father's family near Sturgis, Miss., when the little one was stricken with illness, and it was there that her death took place. She was his only child. Our deepest sympathy goes out to our bereaved brother.

Rev. J. M. Boykin, of Bossier City, La., writes that he is in the midst of one of the best revival meetings he has ever attended. The meeting is being held in a tent, with Rev. R. A. Bozeman doing the preaching. The meeting will continue through July 10, and possibly longer. Brother Boykin will begin a meeting at Lake End on July 17, with Dr. R. H. Wynn doing the preaching, and one at Powhatan on July 25, with Rev. J. L. Evans doing the preaching.

Rev. A. Inman Townsley, pastor of Alamo Heights Church, San Antonio, Texas, formerly of the Louisiana Conference, recently held a successful revival at Brooks Memorial Church, Kelly Field, San Antonio. There were many conversions among the aviators in training there, and two young men acknowledged a call to preach. Several sons of ministers are among the most successful aviators, sons of the late Bishop J. H. McCoy and of Dr. J. T. Curry being high officers at the Field.

We learn with great sorrow of the death of Rev. J. C. McElroy, of the North Mississippi Conference, at his home in Welr, Miss., on June 20. Brother McElroy had been in bad health for a long time, becoming seriously ill in 1920 while serving the Chester charge. He was admitted to the Conference in 1907, and had served faithfully as a minister of the Gospel. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. W. L. Stornment. We extend sincere sympathy to the widow and three children, and pray Heaven's blessings upon them in this hour of sorrow. We hope to have a suitable memoir for publication in due time.

THE SUMMER SCHOOL FOR RURAL PASTORS AT CONWAY, ARK.

The Summer School for Rural Pastors held at Conway, Arkansas, June 7-17, was by far the greatest help that any of us who attended have ever received. I heard men of long experience in the pastorate—some of them having served twenty-five years—say that if they had had such an opportunity in their early ministry their work would have been revolutionized. One man from Texas said that he thought, before he went to Conway, he was doing all that could be done, but he hadn't been there long before he realized that he had been playing at the job. The unanimous opinion was, and is, that this movement for the uplift of the country is the greatest of to-day.

The instructors were all specialists in their line. Dr. Goddard, from our Home Board of Missions, gave a course in Rural Evangelism that was very helpful. Men left his classes with a new vision of their work and a tighter clasp on the things of God. He was followed by Mrs. McCoy, who gave lectures on woman's work in the rural field. That, too, was good. Mrs. Downs was to have given the course, but was not able to be present. Dr. Edwin L. Earp, Professor of Rural Sociology, Drew Theological Seminary, and Dr. Vogt, Superintendent of Rural Work, both of the M. E. Church, gave courses on their work which could not be excelled. They gave us new ideas of what to do and how to do it. They placed it on a level where any of us could grasp it.

Dr. Morse's course on the Social Message of the Rural Church was of the same high class. His lectures put new life into the work and new songs on our lips as we returned to our home work.

Dr. Homer Ebricht, of Baker University, was there also, with his course on the Epworth League. Many said that his course was the best they had, but we felt that way nearly every time we left any class room. His demonstrations of recreation were well worth the trip. He taught many a circuit rider to play again. He is one man who has taught Greek for twelve years and still has plenty of vim and pep. Though a man of about forty years, he was the youngest in the crowd, and knows more games than we could ever think of.

There were other men who gave fine lectures, such as Dr. Taylor, of the Federal Council, Dr. Seneker, and Brother Baker, Sunday school specialists; Dr. Knapp, Dean of the College of Agriculture of Arkansas, and many others whom I could name, but the lack of space forbids.

There was one man who said that he was the only one on the program who was not a specialist in rural work. Be that as it may, he certainly is a specialist in the art of preaching, as all who heard him will vouch for. I speak of Bishop Edwin H. Hughes, of the M. E. Church. He delivered five sermons, any one of which was worth a trip across the States. They were, without an exception, the best I ever heard, and practically every man voiced the same sentiment.

Men were there from eight different States, one traveling 750 miles, coming from Western Oklahoma. Fifteen Conferences were represented. Many were there as a result of the liberality of their people; others were sent by Conferences and Boards; some came at a great sacrifice to themselves. We were all well repaid, glad of the opportunity, and are hoping to meet there again next year.

One of the best features of the school was the sweet fellowship existing among the brethren. We were all country preachers or laymen—the instructors and even the Bishop had been—and a finer body of men never met together. Great help came to us from the association with the brethren from other Conferences. We trust this shall always be the case. In that way we learned of the men and the work in other places and were inspired to greater efforts by a knowledge of their achievements. We heard that some few stayed away because of the fear that their presiding elders would brand them as countrymen, but before we closed men in the Urban School, which was in session at Central College, were wishing that they were country preachers also. We are country preachers and we have no apology to make for it.

Dr. R. L. Russell and Rev. Robt. H. Ruff were there on the job, in an administrative, an advisory, and a brotherly way. They deserve much credit for their enthusiasm and their persistency in carrying out their plans against much opposition. May they be spared to see many years of usefulness in the work. May we have more such schools from year to year and may they be the means of bringing the rural work out of the rut and placing it on the pinnacle it rightly deserves. Is my prayer.

MRS. SUSAN FRANKLIN (nee Conerly) was born March 2, 1841, in Mississippi. She joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, when a child and ever afterwards lived that model life that is typical of a true Christian. She was true to her church and believed in all the doctrines as taught in Methodism. She was uncompromising with sin in every form and believed that in order to be a true Christian one had to live a consecrated life. While she never made any great demonstration of religion, she lived the life that proved her to be a woman of piety. She often made the remark to her husband that she never did a willful wrong in all her life. In the year of 1858 she was married to G. W. House. To this union two daughters were born, Mrs. Wayne German, of Peason, La., and Mrs. H. S. Beckcom, of Hornbeck, La. Her husband died in 1863. On July 6, 1865, she was married to Rev. John Franklin. To this union nine children were born, five of whom preceded her to the grave, and on March 15, 1921, she died in her home at Anacoco, La. The writer knew Sister Franklin by her devotion to her family and the community in which she lived. The sick and the well, the happy or sad ones, were always glad to see Aunt Sue coming. She was loyal to all who knew her.

BLMYER CHURCH BELLS

Bring people to church. Their clear, beautiful, sustained, far-reaching tones are a power for good. Your church should have one. Bells guaranteed, inexpensive. Art catalog & buying plans free. The Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Dept. E-4, Cincinnati, O.

Funeral services were held in the church and interment was made in Holly Grove cemetery. Rev. S. S. Holladay, a former pastor, in charge. The church was decorated with flowers, from the gate to the walk, and the aisles were strewn with flowers. There were five hundred or more people present to try to repay with love and sympathy what she had done for them while here. This godly woman who wrought so nobly as a wife, mother, and a servant of Christ, has gone to receive a rich reward on high. "The narrow stream is crossed, burdens laid aside, psalms of victory she waves, and a crown of glory she wears."

L. P. MORELAND, Pastor.
C. C. GREY, Assistant.

Died, at Ft. Jesup, La., Sister CAROLINE FRANCES HAWKINS. She was born, October 30, 1838, and departed this life May 30, 1921. Sister Hawkins was one of the oldest women in Sabine Parish. She joined the M. E. Church, South, in early life and lived a consistent member until death. Several sons, one daughter, and a host of friends are left to mourn her departure. She lived a consecrated life. She was a pillar in the church. She never failed even in old age, to support the church, and her seat was never vacant unless providentially kept away. She was always cheerful and always looked on the bright side of life. Her children—most of them if not all of them—are members of the church. But we mourn not as those who have no hope. The children all knew that mother's prayers went up for them every day, for her love for them was indeed a true mother's love. May God bless those who are left behind, and may they emulate her example, and may each one say, deep down in his heart, that since separation is our lot, meeting is our hope. As a neighbor, she was charitable. She was never known to speak evil of any one, but was always ready to make excuses for the mistakes and faults of others. The church will miss her. The writer was called to attend the funeral, and after the service which was held at her house her body was laid to rest in the old family cemetery at Ft. Jesup. The grave was covered with flowers, and the soul was safe in the arms of him who taught us to say, "Thy will be done."

S. S. HOLLADAY.

JOHN M. ALEXANDER was called to his long reward on December 4, 1920, just two or three days after the writer came to his new work. Mr. Alexander had for some time been a sufferer from Bright's disease. Notwithstanding his long illness, the end was a shock to his many friends and loved ones. The funeral services were held by the writer, assisted by Rev. W. H. Mounser, pastor of the Methodist church, Lexington, Miss., in the presence of a host of friends who had known him long. A great profusion of the most beautiful flowers covered the casket and mound. Mr. Alexander was of Canadian birth, but came to the United States in early manhood, and traveled extensively in the States. He had been a resident of Mississippi for thirty years, practicing his profession of pharmacy. He is survived by a wife (nee Miss Lizzie DeLoach); a son, Prof. G. W. Alexander, in service of the U. S. Department of Agriculture at Natchez, Miss., and a daughter, Miss Maude Alexander, student at I. C. Columbus, Miss. He was a loyal and faithful member of the Methodist church at Tchula, Miss., and is greatly missed from his faithfulness in loyal duty here. He was affectionate and loyal in his family ties, and a friend to everybody.

His pastor,

H. N. McKIBBEN.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, It has pleased the Divine Master to remove from our midst our dearly beloved friend and co-worker, MRS. LENA BATES; and

Whereas, her death has brought sorrow upon our community upon our church, upon this society, and caused a vacant chair which can never be filled,

Therefore be it resolved, That we, as members of the Missionary Society of the Methodist Church, Tunica, Miss., record our gratitude to the great Giver of all good for a member so useful, so worthy and so earnest in our cause.

Resolved, That while we deplore her departure, we are cheered in the thought that she is with the just made perfect, and that the sweet memory of her Christian life will yield an influence that is never dying.

Resolved, That we spread upon the minutes of this society a copy of these resolutions and have another copy sent to the members of the family who were so blessed by her Christian life through these years. May it be a beacon light to point them to that home above.

Signed by: Mrs. M. A. Wadley, Mrs. Gerald Burrows, Mrs. J. R. Coker, Committee.

How Coca-Cola Resembles Tea

If you could take about one-third of a glass of tea, add two-thirds glass of carbonated water, then remove the tea flavor and add a little lemon juice, phosphoric acid, sugar, caramel and certain flavors in the correct proportion, you would have an almost perfect glass of Coca-Cola.

In fact, Coca-Cola may be fairly described as "a carbonated, flavored counterpart of tea, of approximately one-third the stimulating strength of the average cup of tea."

The following analyses, made and confirmed by the leading chemists throughout America, show the comparative stimulating strength of tea and Coca-Cola stated in terms of the quantity of caffeine contained in each:

Black tea —1 cupful.....	1.54 gr.
(hot) (5 fl. oz.)
Green tea —1 glassful.....	2.02 gr.
(cold) (8 fl. oz., exclusive of ice)
Coca-Cola —1 drink, 8 fl. oz.61 gr.
(prepared with 1 fl. oz. of syrup)

Of all the plants which Nature has provided for man's use and enjoyment, none surpasses tea in its refreshing, wholesome and helpful qualities. This explains its almost universal popularity.

The Coca-Cola Company has issued a booklet giving detailed analysis of its recipe. A copy will be mailed free on request to anyone who is interested. Address:

A NOTE FROM AZTEC, NEW MEXICO.

Dear Brother Carley: I have been thinking for some time that I would write you a few lines from this western country. We are here (wife and I) visiting our daughter, Mrs. H. E. Bibb, who came here last year for her health. She has lung trouble. She is doing nicely now. This is a great climate for any one that has weak lungs. We have warm days and cool nights. We have to sleep under one or more quilts every night. It matters not what direction the wind is from during the day, it shifts to the north at night. You can step out and see snow on the mountains at any hour. The thermometer registered 42 this morning, also the same yesterday. We have a great many good people here. They are very kind to us.

AN OPEN LETTER TO WOMEN

Mrs. Little Tells How She Suffered and How Finally Cured

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I was not able to do my housework and had to lie down most of the time and felt bad in my left side. My monthly periods were irregular, sometimes five or seven months apart and when they did appear would last for two weeks and were very painful. I was sick for about a year and a half and doctored but without any improvement.

A neighbor recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to me, and the second day after I started taking it I began to feel better and I kept on taking it for seven months. Now I keep house and perform all my household duties. You can use these facts as you please and I will recommend Vegetable Compound to everyone who suffers as I did."—Mrs. J. S. LITTLE, 3455 Livingston St., Philadelphia, Pa.

How much harder the daily tasks of a woman become when she suffers from such distressing symptoms and weakness as did Mrs. Little. No woman should allow herself to get into such a condition because such troubles may be speedily overcome by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which for more than forty years has been restoring American women to health.

comes to me regularly every week. May God continue to assist you in guiding your pen in the spiritual interest of your patronizing Conferences.

We all love Bishop Murrah, who will preside over the Denver Conference, which will meet at Walsenburg, Colo., August 18. We are planning to go. Tell my brethren of the North Mississippi Conference that I am down at hard work for my Master. I sometimes fill the pulpit for Rev. John Cox, who serves the Durango District as presiding elder and also this place as pastor.

Now a few words to my younger brethren of the Conference: Remember that I am praying to the great God of the Heaven that you all may continue to grow strong spiritually every day that you live. Boys, I will soon be 66 years old. I have had a great deal of trouble in life, but my God has sustained me all of these years. I am still bright in the faith, and expect to acquire more knowledge of my Master every day that I live.

I am yours in Christ,

B. S. ELLIOTT.

CHINESE ON THE PHONOGRAPH.

How to pronounce Chinese is a difficult enough problem for Americans. But the Chinese themselves are having trouble in finding enough qualified Chinese teachers who can enunciate the symbols of the new Phonetic Script, now being taught by order of the Ministry of Education. So an enterprising book company has begun the manufacture of a set of phonograph records containing six double-sided discs for twelve lessons.

"We are greatly interested in the spread of the Phonetic Script in China," said Dr. W. I. Haven, General Secretary of the American Bible Society, "because it means an unprecedented demand for Bibles in that great country. Already the calls are more than we can respond to. The Phonetic Script will provide several millions of new readers for Bibles and other literature during the next five years."

Sunday School

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES

Friday through Monday was spent on the New Augusta charge. This was a very profitable trip. The school at New Augusta is doing good work. The school at Beaumont is very small, but there seems to be much interest. They agreed to put on campaigns for Sabbath Observance, Evangelism and for the Play-Life of the children.

If you have not observed Sunday School Day, please do so at your earliest convenience. If you have observed it, please let us hear from you.

The schools that have observed the Day are as follows:

Brookhaven District—Norfield, $9.79; Brookhaven, $12.80; Crystal Springs, $15.93; Sandy Hook, $8.65; Hazlehurst, $16.32; Centenary, McComb, $35.56; Pleasant Grove, $5; Tilton, $2; Bethel, $5.50; Osyka, $3.15. Total, $114.60.

Hattiesburg District—Ellisville, $8.25; Eucutta, $6.44; Good Water, $8.25; Boyles Chapel, $5.17; New Hope, $5.88; Broad Street, $8; Purvis, $13.44; Sandford, $5; Mt. Olive, $5.25. Total, $65.68.

Jackson District—Brandon, $15; Pelahatchie, $7.30; Edwards, $12.85; Andrews Chapel, $8.20; Braxton, $5; Galloway Memorial, $74; Rankin Street, $3.20; Madison, $12; Mendenhall, $8; Sharon, $10; Yazoo City, $38.75; Ridgeland, $3.65. Total, $197.95.

Meridian District—Daleville, $4.12; Pleasant Ridge, $3; Enterprise, $5; Stonewall, $7.54; DeSoto charge, $15.40; Lauderdale, $8.50; Pachuta, $9.75; Scooba, $5.50; Wahalak, $2; Meridian, Central, $40.88; Meridian, East End, $15; Shubuta, $7.78. Total, $120.35.

Vicksburg District—Fayette, $18.10; Gloster, $14; Liberty, $9.30; Holly Bluff, $9.40; Natchez, $25; Nebo, $11.20; Oak Ridge, $11; Rolling Fork, $11.40; Carpenter, $6.15; Vicksburg, Crawford Street, $20; Woodville, $12.50. Total, $148.05.

Newton District—Forest, $16; Morton, $8.12; Laurel, First Church, $25; Laurel, Kingston, $8; Philadelphia, $12; Rose Hill, $3; Hopewell, $2.83; Finkbine Camps, $15; Johns, $10.80; Shiloh, $12.54; Sebastapol, $4. Total, $117.29.

Pray for the work and the workers. God bless you. Yours in Him,
JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Miss Lynda Ramey, Oxford, Miss., Conference Elementary Supt.

The Conference Training School of the North Mississippi Conference was in session from June 20 to noon, June 25. The charter members were so glad to welcome each other and every one present was glad to welcome every other one. Think what we will have in the way of a Training School when each one comes in next year bringing those others who will feel the influence and see the fruits!

Out of the 130 persons registered, there were 87 who received certificates of credit, and a promise from several others to take the examination soon after going home.

The instructors were of the best, and fortunate is the Sunday school that had a representative there to get some of what was there for all. Is this a plea so long before another session? It is that. Every Sunday school can begin now and have some one or, better, several, ready to go to Grenada next year. One Sunday school had ten members there, paying the expenses of every one of them. Many paid their own expenses and I am sure will not hesitate to do it again because the returns from such an investment cannot be estimated.

The Beginner's course was given by Miss Hazel Covington, of the North Alabama Conference. Her pupils were as ardent as the real Beginners.

The course on the Primary Pupil was given by Miss Annie Marle Hansen, from Nashville. As expressed by one of her own pupils, she was another milepost in their life.

The course for the Juniors was given by Miss Mary Alice Jones, of Nashville. Miss Jones says she has never seen quite such a thirst for knowledge. All will agree she was amply able to take care of the situation.

These three who were in our State for the first time, said they had never seen a better spirit manifest, such earnestness in work and such spontaneous play. They seemed glad they came and we were doubly so.

Mr. French, who had the Intermediate-Senior work, has been with us before and by common consent 'tis hoped 'twill always be so. You ask somebody that was there.

Mrs. J. M. Wyatt, Adult Work; Rev. J. E. Stephens, The Pupil; Dr. A. W. Milden, Teacher's Life of Christ; Rev. E. S. Lewis, Bible and Missions, each gave these respective courses with many loyal followers. We are the proud possessors of such splendid talent belonging to our own North Mississippi Conference.

By no means have all the delights and benefits been touched upon, but some of it is left for you to ask about of those who were in attendance.

In no way could there have been more genuine hospitality than that tendered by Dr. J. R. Countiss and family in conjunction with the corps of Grenada College helpers and the cordial people of Grenada.

Thinking a minute. To whom do we owe more than to our beloved brother, R. H. B. Gladney?

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The first Standard Training School in Louisiana Methodism has come and gone and was a very successful school. The student body was not as large as we had planned for, but financial conditions made it impossible for some to attend, even after enrolling. We had 25 in the school and 21 certificates of credit were issued.

The school finally offered three courses of study, viz.: Primary Methods; Miss Caroline Hess; Intermediate-Senior and Young People Methods, Harry Denman; Life of Paul, Dr. Thomas Carter.

It had been thought best by the Central Office to offer fewer courses in schools just beginning, rather than have so many courses and smaller classes. Miss Hess gave a good course and pleased her class and the management. Mr. Denman, who is in charge of Young People's work in First Church, Birmingham, was a very popular instructor. His course was thorough and we believe he has given such help that many will make the course a reality in their home school at once. The course in Bible, Life of Paul, under Dr. Carter, was attended by all the student body. Personally I believe it one of the best Bible courses I ever attended. The preachers of the Louisiana Conference had better have walked to Mansfield and cooked their meals on the campus and slept on the ground, than have missed them. Rev. J. L. Greenway, assistant to the pastor in Ruston, is the only preacher besides myself who heard them. Dr. Carter is a master of the subject and has a popular style of teaching. We want him next year, as also our other two instructors.

The rest of the Conference year will be given to field work and it will not be possible to make many new dates, as practically all the time is taken now. Nevertheless, write me your needs. Miss Hess has time to give you; write her. ALONZO EARLY,
Sunday School Field Secretary.

REV. R. P. GOAR IMPROVING IN HEALTH.

The Rev. R. P. Goar, of Pittshoro, Miss., who is a superannuated minister of the Gospel, and who has been preaching for 50 years, has been in wretched health since the 15th of October, 1920, and has been seriously ill since March 1, 1921. He is thought to be a little better and is hoped that he will be able to be up within a few weeks.

Brother Goar has had active work in the North Mississippi Conference for more than 36 years. He has been an active member of the Masonic Lodge for 50 years, and at this time is a Past Master. Brother Goar has many friends hereabout and in fact all over the North Mississippi Conference.

He has been confined to his bed for four months, and at times it was thought that he could not live, but at this time he is thought to be better, and his friends hope he will soon be able to sit up. His wife has had splendid health, and has patiently administered to his every want and need.

Whereas it was brought to our attention that there are those teaching in some of our higher institutions of learning in our great country who deny the existence of Jehovah—God—the immortality of the soul, and the divinity of Jesus Christ; and

Whereas we have information that leads us to believe that such is even the case within our own State,

Therefore be it resolved, That the chairman of the Board of Trustees be memorialized to investigate the condition referred to, that he satisfy himself as to whether there be any man or woman now serving in any State institution of learning who denies or doubts the existence of a living, personal God, the immortality of the soul, and the divinity of Jesus Christ; and if he find such to be the case, that you cause such person to be removed instantaneously.

Be it further resolved, That the chairman of the Board of Trustees be further memorialized to make it his personal business to see that during his tenure of office no man or woman be allowed to become a member of the faculty of any State Institution unless such man or woman is a believer in the Christian religion.

Be it further resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the Christian Advocate, The Baptist Record, and the Commercial Appeal requesting these publications to publish them.

FROM TCHULA, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: I have not given any news from our Tchula charge this year, so I just thought that I would send you a line that the brethren might know something of what we are doing. The people received us very cordially when we came and have been very thoughtful of us all the time.

Our Sunday school has grown almost one hundred per cent this year, the first time in my ministry that I have been able to have a Sunday school equal the enrollment of the church doing splendid work.

Fitzgerald and Clarke School FOR BOYS

Accredited by all colleges. Mountain climate. Modern equipment. Patronized by the best people of the South. Limited enrollment. Apply early for reservation. For catalog, Address W. L. Clarke, Principal, Box A, Tullahoma, Tenn.

For the best Positions in the South and West write The Yates-Fisher Teachers' Agency, Nashville, Tenn.

The Missionary Society is well organized, Senior, Young People, and Juniors; their work is very commendable.

Our meeting began May 15. Rev. W. A. Willson, of New Albany, Miss., Conference evangelist, did the preaching and did it well. He is witty, zealous, earnest, and full of faith. He did much good here; during his meeting nineteen joined the Methodist Church, four pledged to join the Baptist Church and did, and one pledged to join the Presbyterian Church. We have received a total of 43 into the church this year and we are very confident that there are others yet to come.

We failed to raise our quota for the Educational Movement, but the cause has been well propagated, and as soon as the very keen sense of the financial depression is felt no more I am sure that the quota can be raised; in fact, the official board have signed a resolution to that end.

Yours in His name,

H. N. McKIBBEN.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Good news—Listen!
What?—Summer Conference for Young People's Missionary Society.
Where?—Vicksburg, Gibson Memorial Church.

When?—July 26-29.

Are you coming? See that every Young People's Missionary Society is represented there, and if you have no Young People's Missionary Society in your church, see that you have a delegate to this conference. I am urging every district secretary and every superintendent of Young People to be with us. Mark the above date on your calendar and have your pastor to announce it from the pulpit and urge the Young People to attend. Mrs. J. W. Perry, our Council Superintendent of Young People, will be with us to bring inspiration to us all. Our own Conference President, Mrs. B. W. Lewis, and other workers, will be in attendance. I am expecting you to meet me there; watch the Advocate and you will see a tentative program of the work we expect to do soon.

Mrs. J. M. SMITH,

Conf. Supt. of Young People's Work.

THE CRACK O' DOOM FOR NASTY CALOMEL

Folks Abandoning Old Drug for "Dodson's Liver Tone,"
Here in South.

Ugh! Calomel makes you sick. It's horrible! Take a dose of the dangerous drug tonight and tomorrow you lose a day.

Calomel is mercury! When it comes into contact with sour bile, it crashes into it, breaking it up. Then is when you feel that awful nausea and cramping. If you are sluggish, if liver is torpid and bowels constipated or you have headache, dizziness, coated tongue, if breath is bad or stomach sour, just try a spoonful of harmless Dodson's Liver Tone tonight.

Here's my guarantee—Go to any drug store and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone for a few cents. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't straighten you right up and make you feel fine and vigorous, go back to the store and get your money. Dodson's Liver Tone is destroyin' the sale of calomel because it can not salivate or make you sick.

of Water Valley, North Mississippi Conference, gave the following toast at the recent district meeting at Holly Springs, their superintendent and six of the members being present:

"Here's to Water Valley
Our own beloved town,
Where the best folks on earth live,
And love and peace abound;
Here's to our many churches
The Methodist first of all;
They are all good, we grant you,
But ours takes you back when you fall;
Here's to the Juniors
All over the land;
They like to work, they never shirk,
They're a happy, jolly band.

"The pansy is our emblem
And our watchword is 'grow';
Blue and white are our colors,
'Purity, Fidelity and Service' our motto.
Here's to Holly Springs, a place
We all like to come,
And the Grenada District, it's all right;
We tell you, they make things hum."

New Auxiliaries.

Aberdeen reports the following: Houlika and Tocopola Adult, Woodland, Calhoun City and Tocopola Juniors, and Verona, Tranquil and Tupelo, Young People.

Schlater, Courtland, Benoit and Pickens have re-organized, and Shuqualak will be organized soon.

The district meetings held throughout the Conference during the past few weeks have been better attended than ever before, the weather being ideal for trips in cars. Each hostess auxiliary has entertained royally, and the district secretaries have had programs that have made all glad they were there. North Mississippi is proud of her record of the first two quarters, but we have a task before us if we reach the financial goal as well as goal of idealism set by the workers.
Mrs. A. A. NEAL.

DEFINITE PLANNING.

As we stand in full view of the third quarter, it is well for us to take note of its possibilities and plan definitely for the accomplishment of those ends to which we are eagerly looking forward at the beginning.

At the Conference in Okolona, the third quarter was set as Organization Quarter. There are three phases of the missionary work that should receive special emphasis during this quarter—organization of new societies, conservation of weak societies, and improvement of good societies.

At the district meeting of the Grenada District, a plan was suggested by Mrs. Stokes that will work well in all districts. Mrs. Stokes appointed survey committees for the different parts of the district. These committees are to make a close survey of the territory adjacent to them to determine where missionary societies might be organized. Doubtless they will learn much more about the territory than simply that Grenada District has 98 separate congregations and 25 missionary societies. During July these committees will make a close survey; during August committees will go into unorganized territory and organize and instruct as to the successful carrying on of the new societies; during September the committees will do follow up work with the new organizations and stand at all times as "Big Sister" to them, that they may always feel they have some one they can call on for help.

Special attention will be given to weak societies that they may be nurtured. It is easy to organize anything anywhere; the great thing is to keep alive and at work the organizations that are formed. This phase of the work should claim our best effort.

The improvement of societies that are already good should also claim our best effort. Begin just now with the movement to bring up the societies in every part that is lacking. We have been prone to wait for the fourth quarter to take stock of our progress and then make one grand rush to be ready for the close of the fiscal year. Attention just now during the summer months will result in success and ward off the anxiety that makes the final months of the year so very hard.

Examine the Standard of Excellence for the Honor roll and see if your society is meeting the requirement. If not, begin now and put it on the Honor Roll.

Corresponding Secretary.

IMPORTANCE OF INSURING OUR CHURCH PROPERTIES.

While alive to all the spiritual interests of the church, we should be none the less attentive to all of its material interests. Neglect of one jeopardizes the other.

We are glad to know that our people are coming to realize more and more fully that it is just as much the duty of members to see that their churches and parsonages are insured as it is to build them and at the smallest cost possible with safety.

When looking after this important matter of insurance, choose your fire insurance company with regard to its record in past conflagrations and present loss paying ability. It would be well before ordering insurance elsewhere to investigate the plan of the National Mutual Church Insurance Company of Chicago, Ill., which is now in its twenty-third year and has policies outstanding to the amount of over fifty-four million dollars. These policies are issued upon terms that are much more advantageous than those issued by the stock companies. This company is rock-ribbed-safe as the safest. Premiums are paid in easy annual installments and policy holders are protected by the same cash reserve that the law requires of the stock companies. It is under the supervision of the State of Illinois. Its San Francisco conflagration losses were paid before any other company and without discount.

It has paid out over one and one-half million dollars for losses during its twenty-three years' history and has saved its more than twenty thousand policy holders approximately a similar amount in premiums.

FROM LAKE ARTHUR, LA.

Everything is moving along real well. We were unable to raise our quota in the Christian Education Campaign, but we did real well, all things considered.

The writer preached the Commencement sermon for the High School here, by special request. We have a very fine High School, and one of the best buildings in the State. There were seven to graduate this year.

Rev. C. A. Battle, our beloved and efficient P. E., held our third quarterly conference recently, and preached two good sermons. The annual camp meeting will open here next Friday night, July 17, and continue until July 10.

We are preparing for our protracted meeting to be held here in September by Rev. Dan Kelley. Conditions are such that we will not be able to build a new church for some years; hence we are going to repair the present church, and paint the parsonage. The work is advancing gradually, I think—no great upheavals. Pray for us.

Fraternally,

S. D. HOWARD.

A GOOD MEETING AT OLLA, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: My presiding elder, Brother Doss, has already made a short report of the Standard and Olla charge, and while I do not wish to have too much to say regarding our work here, I beg for space to say a few words regarding the meeting. Brother Doss mentioned as having begun with Rev. Lee R. Sparks assisting. The meeting at Olla closed Wednesday night, June 29.

The results were nine accessions to the church by baptism and vows. There were also several conversions and reclamations, and the church was greatly revived. The total accessions at Olla this year have been twenty, more than doubling the membership of the church. There have been in all 51 accessions for the charge.

Now, a word about Brother Sparks: He is fine help in a meeting. His methods are sensible, and the work accomplished is genuine. Sparks is a man of strong personality and good educational attainments. He also has a noble Christian spirit. Although Olla is a weak point financially, we had no trouble in raising above $120 for him.

I hope to have a much better report at Conference. Yours sincerely,

H. B. THOMASON.

FROM MATHERVILLE, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: We have just closed a great meeting in our new church at Langsdale. The meeting was, indeed, a great success. Brother T. J. Norsworthy, of Meridian, did the preaching for us, and the Lord graciously blessed every service. Souls were born into the kingdom of God.

and believers built up in the most holy faith. Brother Norsworthy is a great preacher, and brotherly spirit.

We are very thankful for our new church at Langsdale, the painting of which will soon be under way. We have the paint paid for and all is ready for putting it on next week. Brethren, pray for us. Sincerely,

D. P. YEAGER.

FROM CAMPTI, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: You may say to the former Campti preachers that Campti is "sorter" getting religious these days. Brother F. E. Few, of Madisonville, Texas, has been with us here in a meeting for the past eight days, having closed last night. Of course it is not easy sometimes properly to estimate the result of a meeting; but among some of the results of the meeting just closed is that the people have gotten to praying. The Christian people seemed to have awakened to the sense of their responsibility as well as their privilege in bringing the lost to God through prayer and personal work.

One of the things which we feel contributed very largely to the success of the meeting is that Campti has as pastor of the Baptist church one who knows how to get in harness and work, not to get people to join the church, but to get them saved, regardless of whatever church they may join. The co-operation of Brother Westbury, the Baptist pastor, was all that we could have asked, from first to last, and so it only remains to be said, "Like leader, like people;" his people were with us heart and soul. There were nine received into the church on profession, some reclaimed and the church strengthened in faith.

We have three meetings yet to hold on our work, and ask the prayers of the brethren for the salvation of the lost and the building up of believers in the faith.

Our educational drive here has been concluded and, to express it as another one has, "with a modest subscription." J. C. JACKSON, P. C.

RESOLUTIONS OF APPRECIATION.

Be it resolved by the Pelahatchie Sunday school:

1. That in the moving away of Mr. and Mrs. Sanders the church suffers an irreparable loss, in every department of its work.
2. That they were loyal and faithful since they have been in our midst in every phase of Christian work.
3. That we commend them to the congregation that they shall join.
4. That the prayers and good wishes of this church follow them, praying that they may continue in usefulness in the Master's vineyard.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

ONE THING LACKING.

In a recent newspaper article on "How To Build Character," the writer, a distinguished professor in a well-known State university, seemed to think of character only in terms of financial honesty. After analyzing the influences that produce the youthful "dead beat," he proceeded to lay down a series of suggestions looking toward the elimination of this undesirable product of society, every one of which has to do with the proper use of money. The suggestions he gives are good ones, so far as they go, but they fail lamentably in going to the root of the evil. If the moral sanctions be removed from life, no controlling force is left except that of self-interest; and self-interest cannot produce a character the essential quality of which is altruism. It is well enough to lay stress upon the utilitarian aspects of life, but our children and young people need more than anything else definite training in the principles of righteousness as those principles were enunciated by Jesus Christ. When parents begin to realize their responsibility with reference to the religious nurture of their children, and when we develop our Sunday schools to the point where they can fully supplement the efforts of earnest parents, we shall be in a fair way to raise up a generation of men and women who will practice the moral virtues because of an irresistible divine compulsion. The most beautiful system of ethics ever devised will fail unless it is strengthened by the inspiring power of a great idea and the uplifting power of a great ideal.

THE ANSWER IS EASY.

A daily newspaper paragrapher propounded this the other day as if it were a poser: "If it is true, as the Andersons, the Bryans, and the Wheelers tell us, that the country wants prohibition, why does the Government have to spend millions of dollars every year to pay an army of spies, called enforcement agents, and why is it that the country is getting wetter all the time?" The answer is easy. In the first place, the country is not getting wetter all the time. If the country is wetter under prohibition than it was before prohibition, even a fool of the nth degree would know that those who profit by the sale of liquor would be strongly in favor of such "prohibition." In the second place, the Government has to spend a great deal of money to enforce the prohibition laws because so many people who are supposed to be reputable citizens, by their attitude if not by their words and acts encourage their violation by those who are always willing to take a chance to make money dishonestly and illegally. If there is not a definitely organized propaganda to bring the prohibition laws into disrepute, there are many indications that point in that direction. If all the secular newspapers of the country, the so-called "moulders of public opinion," would stand vigorously for law enforcement instead of condoning, as many of them do, its violation, there would be an immediate and noticeable improvement in conditions. It is needless to remark that calling the enforcement officers "spies" is simply a puerile attempt to bring their work into disrepute.

THE LYNCHING RECORD.

The Department of Records and Research of Tuskegee Institute has just issued its report of lynchings for the first six months of 1921. The following figures are given: Within the first six months of 1921, there were 36 lynchings; this is 24 more than the number, 12, for the first six months of 1920, and 7 more than the number, 29, for the first six months of 1919; of those lynched, 2 were whites and 34 were Negroes, two of the latter being women; eleven of those put to death were charged with the crime of rape. The States in which the lynchings occurred and the number in each State, are as follows: Alabama, 1; Arkansas, 4; Florida, 4; Georgia, 9; Kentucky, 1; Louisiana, 2; Mississippi, 10; Missouri, 1; North Carolina, 2; South Carolina, 1; Tennessee, 1. This record is one that cannot fail to bring shame to every citizen who is concerned for the majesty of the law and the preservation of the liberties of the individual. The growth of the mob spirit means an increasing strain upon the fabric of civilization. All law-abiding citizens must continue vigorously the fight against mob violence until this reproach is removed from us. In spite of the unfavorable record for the first six months of this year, we believe there is a steadily-growing sentiment against mob law, and we confidently expect the time to come soon when the courts will be allowed to perform their functions in practically all cases, the exceptions being due to those irrepressible outbreaks which are responsible for crimes of many other kinds.

THE FOLLY OF GROWING OLD.

We never thought much of the poet's invitation to "grow old along with me." We have no desire to grow old, and no intention of doing so. The passing years may bring gray hairs if any be left—and decrepitude of body, but they ought to have no power over the mind and spirit; and, after all, it is the mental and spiritual attitude which determines whether a man is young or old. Ripeness of experience and maturity of judgment ought to be the accompaniments of continued habitation in these earthly territories, along with sweetness of spirit and a peaceful expectancy for all of one's kind, but they do not come with age. He stays forever young who welcomes each new day because it brings new hopes, new aspirations, new opportunities, new privileges, who keeps his mind open for the reception of new truth, without surrendering convictions that have been thoroughly tested and tried; who believes that the best is yet to come; that the Golden Age is not in the past, but in the untold future; who increasingly lays hold of God through reverent study and understanding of the revelation of himself to men; who thinks of death simply as an event in life that marks the transition from one estate to another more beautiful and more complete. It is a wonderful achievement to stay young, even though we do linger the allotted three score years and ten upon the earth.

WHERE THE EMPHASIS BELONGS.

We have supported enthusiastically and loyally every forward movement the church has undertaken since we have been old enough to know what church loyalty means, and we never expect to do otherwise; but, we have never supposed that the mere raising of money for any cause is the primary function of the church. The church needs money because in fulfilling its spiritual mission forms of work develop that need and must have substantial support; but when we make the securing of this money the chief end of our activities, we have fallen into the ludicrous and tragic error of "putting the cart before the horse." The emphasis of the gospel is upon the transformed life—and other things are incidental to that. We have done well in raising our millions of dollars; now let us add to that achievement the infinitely larger one of some millions of souls brought into the Kingdom of God.

THE DIFFERENCE.

John D. Rockefeller, said to be the richest man in the world, was eighty-two years old on July 8. According to a news item, he spent the day in the usual way, playing his customary game of golf in the morning. There was this difference, however: an employe held an umbrella over him as he made the round of the links to protect him from the intense heat. We suppose this is one of the great compensations of great wealth.

DIFFERENT VIEW POINTS.

Some murmur if their sky is clear,
And wholly bright to view,
If only one small speck of dark appear

THE MODERN MINISTER.

By George Summey, D.D.

(A paper read before the New Orleans Ministerial Union, and published by its request.)

Note carefully, please, that the subject is not "The Model Minister," but "The Modern Minister." These two may be as far apart as the poles. Further note that it is not this paper's purpose to express opinions. It designs simply to draw pictures from life. The writer shares in any indictment that the picture may imply. He does not hold himself guiltless, by any means.

But let us to the theme. The Modern Minister usually makes short work of preliminaries or prefaces. He indulges only in a sentential "foreword," and never in an elaborate "introduction." We shall do well to imitate him in this.

And first—The Modern Minister is a young man. That may as well be settled at once. More than the members of any other profession, when he passes forty he must expect to be Oslerized. He must enter the ministry with more than a merely tacit understanding and expectation that his normal life there will be limited, that a "dead line" is fixed and sure, that a schoolroom, an insurance or real estate office, a book agency, or idleness will be his field of work for a large part of his mature life. Church committees hunting for suitable men for vacancies pause at that line, and rarely go beyond it in their recommendations. In churches which make appointments under episcopal authority and in which the man who is assigned has to go there, willing or not, and the field has to take him, acceptable or not, the Oslerism is practiced in mutterings and grumblings, about as hard to bear as being actually driven out of his calling. Here, doubtless, may be found one potent cause, if you will pardon an opinion, for the disinclination on the part of forward-looking young men towards entering the ministry. They look ahead, and act on the sight that is revealed to them. Here is food for thought to those who bewail the paucity of ministerial recruits in all the churches, and who sometimes even think that it is a low grade of men found willing to undertake the ministry. Vigorous young men draw back from a calling which insures, in the average, the end of their work just at the stage where they will be best able to do it effectively, when their minds will be ablest and clearest, their training most perfected, their thoughts maturest, their judgments wisest, their experience ripest. Other professions act differently.

Second—The Modern Minister is an all-around man. He is expected to be and to do anything. He has to meet that demand. He is a good mixer, a sociable fellow, a ready talker, a remarkably careful and complimentary listener—this is highly important—tactful in approach, venturing few opinions either social, civic, industrial, ecclesiastical, or doctrinal, lest he step on somebody's toes, thoroughly abreast of all that is going on around him and over the world, a very close reader of the papers and magazines, familiar with all the movements of the day, scrupulously unidentified with parties and yet expected to exploit their tenets or efforts or purposes, and prepared at all times to expect denunciation for either warm approval or espousal of a party and its cause or silence concerning it. He is much called on as a "leader," and is often called in a complimentary way "the key man," but his leadership is not that of acknowledged power, scholarship, eminence in character, great wisdom, experience, or thought-making, but that of expression, in voicing rather than shaping the feelings and convictions and aspirations of the crowd that is supposed to follow him. He is somewhat a "ring-leader," in a good sense of that word, not a masterful moulder. His nearest approach to the idea of leadership is that he is simply "primus inter pares," if that much! Breadth of view rather than depth of conviction, vagueness for vigor and virtue are his need.

Third—The Modern Minister is rarely a student. He has not the time needful for this. He has too many "jobs" to do, too many outside businesses to attend to, too much attention to pay to all the affairs of the church. He can hardly devote himself to careful research and analysis. If his thoughts run at all towards a philosophy, he is a pragmatist, an estimator of principles by their results, and in action and methods an opportunist. Both pragmatism and opportunism, which are close of kin, are death to profound thinking and deep philosophical study and insight. In the very nature of the case, he cannot be a student. He has not the leisure. The outside activities of his life inhibit great thoughts and close reflection. His motives may be of the highest, but he cannot rise to them; for Fourth—The Modern Minister is primarily an actor, not a thinker. Doing is his business. He must be a "promoter." And if his ideas, when he has time to gather a few, do not tend towards tangible shape, measurable and ponderable results, woe to him! He must be in a hospitable attitude towards and use what Bishop Candler calls "a multiplied number of parasitic organizations which are sapping the church's freedom and sucking its funds, parasitic organizations which emphasize their interdenominational character, and prate much about what they call, with misleading pretence of charity and broadmindedness, Christian unity." The first thing a church committee hunting for a minister does is to look at the record of the work of the "inquiree," and to ask, "Does he do things?" Time was when the first question asked about a minister was, "Is he a spiritually minded man?" but of the Modern Minister it is, "Is he a good executor, has he administrative ability, is he an organizer?" This is because of the supposed needs of the congregations. They want things done. They expect the minister to do them. They look for organization. They expect him to organize them. They look for results in church growth from methods and organizations, and he must show them. The Modern Minister must meet that demand, or he is professionally doomed! He is the church's factotum; its setter-up of machinery; its leader in social service; its hustler for pennies; its official advice receiver for the myriad recommendations of methods devised and offered; its organ of communication with a thousand applicants for its influences, money, co-operation; its raiser of special collections almost imperatively demanded of it; its agent for boosting outside organizations; its advertiser; its answerer of innumerable and irrelevant questionnaires from every conceivable and inconceivable source; its setter and observer and holder of special days for everything on earth; its helper of endless business enterprises; its partner of every energetic book-agent and newspaper circulator; its dispenser of lists of members for the exploitation of other people's business or schemes; its assorter of the wealth, ability, or willing spirit of its members for the use of benevolent work, philanthropy, or church building; its standardizer; its driver of drives and mover of movements; its manager of pageants and plays and days; its employment bureau for the unemployed; its refuge for the tramp; its patient bearer of every ill to which the flesh is heir; in short, the church's combination organizer and drill-sergeant, cash register and adding machine! Is it any wonder that

Fifth—The Modern Minister is not a scholar? How can he be, when he has neither the opportunity nor the time? Profound reading and thinking and investigation are impossible to him. He must know just enough to be a respectable administrator, as the dentist must know just enough of anatomy, physiology, and practical chemistry to see their bearing on his trade of building up the teeth and keeping them in good repair. His sermons are hurriedly put together, and are meant just for the occasion. They are seldom masterpieces. They are as a rule mediocre. Thorough preparation is out of the question. He has not time. Neither has he the needful apparatus. It is pitiful to see the libraries of most of the specimens of the Modern Minister. The collection is usually small and cheap. It is mainly of homiletic materials and works on "How to Do It." It consists largely of "canned goods," and "predigested food," and these lacking the protecting care by law that protects us from grocers' imposition. The old masters in religious and theological thought are conspicuous by their absence. The splendid literature of other days is utterly unfamiliar. The great Puritan literature, for instance, profound, far-reaching, masterful, thought-provoking, stimulating, disciplinary to the mind, even if heavy, is an unknown quantity. The modern lawyer, with nothing but his set of the Encyclopedia of American Law on his shelves, is his counterpart; and that Encyclopedia makes no great lawyers. You ministers who are gathered here to-day in such large numbers, and who are freer than most of your profession from the limitations of the Modern Minister, are challenged to tell, each of you, of half a dozen downright good books, solid books, that, with all the demands upon you, you have had time to read in the past half dozen months! And so the Modern Minister is seldom a great preacher. Unless he is a genius in felicity of utterance and has a marvelous readiness of rhetorical invention, with a great accumulation of material and knowledge before he entered the Modern Ministry, he cannot hold his own as a preacher. And even with these gifts, he must soon play out if he is not wisely and diligently filling up by long periods of study, prayer, and thought. Taking out at the bung and filling at the spigot soon exhausts the barrel!

Sixth—The Modern Minister is a novelty-seeker, an experimenter, and a competitor. He tries to adapt himself to the supposed desires of the people. He seeks to fill his pews with hearers. He must needs be inventive, try new things, outstrip others if he can. He spends much time in working out striking novelties of sermons, exercises, services, entertainments, methods of work. Look, for instance, at the list of topics for Sunday services in the dailies of some of our cities, if you would see the Modern Minister's line of pulpit business. Its reading is horribly depressing to one who loves the kingdom of our Lord. If color can mantle the cheeks of the disembodied, how the shades of Phillips Brooks, John A. Broadus, B. M. Palmer, Bishop Pierce, Bishop Otterbein, and others, must blush when they see what we often see; and with them a host of others, unknown but great as preachers of God's Word in our various conferences, associations, conventions, and assemblies! It would be interesting just at this point, to hear the testimony of those who know, and who are here now, how far, the liturgical churches and those that hold with conviction as well as with tenacity to a "historic ministry," and "apostolic succession," or, as the recent Lambeth Conference euphemized it, a "definite ministry," are free from these conditions. Have they any advantage over others? Laying larger stress upon other functions, are they more free from the afflictions of this type of modernism?

Seventh—The Modern Minister imports into his work the methods of the world. He becomes a machinist rather than a herald. Thus, worldliness rather than other-worldliness characterizes his way. He forgets that men and women are worn out by the daily grind of life and on Sunday want something to rest them, to lift them away from earth, to set before them the joys of another life. There's no need to ask why so many churches are empty. It is because they are not better feeding places. People, like animals, flock to places where they know they will find food in plenty. "And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me." The Bible is an old book, but it is never stale. The more it is used, the more it is liked. The more closely it is preached, the better will it attract. The Modern Minister may tickle the fancy and catch the gaping crowd, but it is never for long. He is a flitting creature. Can you point to a single pronounced specimen of him that has ever been anything but a passing show?

Eighth—The Modern Minister's chief concern is about methods, and movements, and surveys, and drives, and challenges, and arithmetic, and geography, and the like. Preaching becomes to him a lost art. There are fewer great preachers to-day than there have ever been. Nay, one forceful writer has lately stirred the whole preacher community by claiming and arguing, in the Atlantic Monthly, that preaching as such should go by the board! So Mr. Spargo. And it is noteworthy that in the recent Lambeth Conference it was a living question as to whether the church should not entirely surrender the preaching function! "Rightly dividing the word," "Preach to it the preaching that I bid thee," "By the foolishness of preaching," have become obsolete expressions, relics of a past age. The mistake has been made to believe that the minister can get his best results by organizations and mechanical means and novelties. It has been forgotten that well-fed sheep are the most easily led! Henry Ward Beecher said, in a lecture to Yale students: "The business of the preacher is not to grind a church. It is not to turn a wheel. It is not to cuff about the contrivances of theology. It is a living work. You are to be man-builders!"

Ninth—The Modern Minister dabbles in politics. He cannot withstand the temptation. And he never does it to the good of himself or of the side he takes. Somehow he has to do it. In line with his fundamental idea of timeliness, modernness, up-to-dateness. He does not stop to think that he never from the pulpit advocates one side or the other of a political or party contest or legislative project that he does not actually hurt the cause he espouses, hurt himself, and hurt the church. And this for a very simple reason. Multitudes of men, and especially those of the rank and file of voters, are against the church, and out of their antipathy and antagonism, of course through misunderstanding, they will array themselves against a cause simply because they think that the church has espoused it or that it is ecclesiastically advocated. Even good causes, involving vital moral principles and problems, are often injured in this way. The old Jewish prophet, taking sides and denouncing men's acts from his throne of authority, furnishes no parallel here. He was an officer, and in a government that was a theocracy.

Tenth—The Modern Minister, in short, seeks to work a revolution in the fundamental character and mission of the ministry. He changes the minister from an ambassador to an administrator, from a messenger to an executor, from an official herald to a jack-of-all-trades, a church factotum, a man with a program and a task rather than a man sent of God with a proclamation and a message. He loses his head, in the wire entanglements of his machinery, and forgets the simple and sublime authority of the ambassador or messenger which alone spells ultimate success in God's work. And he reverses the great purpose and end of the divine organization, the church, God's one organization for spiritual work. He turns this end from witness to service. He places exaggerated emphasis upon doing and serving. He almost turns religion into a system of works, and makes the church's great aim philanthropy rather than the propagation of the gospel. He talks much of men being "saved to serve," of the divine mission of the church as primarily an institution for mankind's betterment, as a social agency, as an eleemosynary organization, founded for the improvement of human conditions, civic, social, industrial, and religious alike. Oftentimes he comes very near saying outright, "Get the money, and the kingdom will be sure to come," and the man to get the money is the minister! He would make of the church of Christ a vast soup kitchen, or club house, or lectureship platform, with a gospel attachment very graciously permitted if one insists on having it!

Men are not saved to serve. They are saved to witness for Christ. They will assuredly serve, if they are truly saved. But the primary end is not the service. Service may be a form of witness, but the witness is the genus and the service a mere species, a mere incident to the greater. There is no warrant for that popular phrase, "sacrificial service," except as it is applied solely to the Lord Jesus Christ.

Is the picture overdrawn? And how does it look in the light of such divine injunctions as "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth;" "Every scribe which is instructed unto the kingdom of heaven is like unto a man that is an householder, which bringeth forth out of his treasure things new and old;" "Search the Scriptures;" "Prove all things, hold fast to that which is good;" "Preach the Word," and especially this, "No man that warreth entangleth himself with the affairs of this life," and many other like directions to the preacher of the unsearchable riches of Christ?

TRAINING SCHOOL AT GRENADA COLLEGE.

The training school recently conducted at Grenada College for our Sunday school workers was pronounced by those competent to judge as a great success. We had 150 present first and last—that many who really attended some of the classes. Eighty-seven certificates were issued. We had as fine a student body as was ever assembled in North Mississippi. A great crowd of high school and college girls, a magnificent group of mature women who are leaders in their churches, several district secretaries in the Missionary Society, and a number of preachers were in attendance. Greenwood District had only one present for the entire session, Chrisman Galeoran. If any of the Greenwood District people read this notice, I want them to understand that they had one good representative but only one. Our good women responded magnificently, the preachers did fairly well, barely so, but the men—well, we must give them another chance.

All honor to R. H. B. Gladney! He pulls like an ox and stays sweet meantime. He is specially fond of marshmallows.

Brother and Sister Countiss and the other college people responded graciously to every call made upon their time and patience.

The courses taught by Mrs. J. M. Wyatt, Rev. J. E. Stephens, and Dr. A. W. Milden were very popular. One of the most delightful classes was taught by the writer. Mr. E. E. French, Miss Jones and Miss Hansen, from Nashville and Miss Covington from Montgomery gave exceptional service.

The Sunday school is calling for trained leaders. This Grenada school brings the very best opportunity for training to our very door. Next year we hope to increase the attendance and have a better school even than we had this year.

We are planning for two district schools, one at Sardis and the other at Corinth. Eventually we expect to have one in each district. Only two reasons lie between us and a school in each district. We are not doing enough to raise the money. I am sure that if we were, we could make it. I am sure that if we were, we could make it. I am sure that if we were, we could make it.

JACKSON DISTRICT NOTES.

Brother J. E. Williams, of Hattiesburg, has just finished a meeting at Rankin Street, Jackson, for Brother F. A. Applewhite. It was a good meeting. Twelve members were added to the church roll.

Rev. C. H. Ellis is helping Brother Massy in a meeting this week at New Prospect, on the Fanin circuit.

Dr. Rolfe Hunt is helping his splendid son, Irner, in a meeting at Sharon. Sharon is the oldest settlement within the bounds of the Jackson District.

The president of the Men's Bible Class of Capitol Street, announces an average attendance of eighty-eight for the quarter. He sets as his goal for this quarter, one hundred. He challenges any other class in the Conference for average attendance for the quarter. One of the pleasing features of this class is that a very large percentage attend the church services.

Every charge in the district has increased in interest and attendance for the Sunday school during the quarter with the exception of one.

Up to the opening of the revival season six hundred additions had been reported to the presiding elder. Our presiding elder has set as the goal for the district for the year two thousand additions to the church membership.

The district has named as his goal for the year twenty-five Life Volunteers. Nearly twice this number have already signed Life Service Cards, and yet reports have not been received from all charges.

Many other matters of interest over the district will have to be held up until my next report.

Sincerely,
H. F. TOLLE.

MRS. ROOD PASSES ON.

Many of the older humane workers in this country will recall Mrs. Ella Irene Rood, who died recently in Chicago at the age of 78. Mrs. Rood for twenty-five years was engaged in organizing and revivifying humane societies, especially in the South and West, and was active in securing humane education laws in several States. She was prominently identified with the Anti-Burial Society, and had held high positions in several national ornithological organizations. Our Lamb Animals.

GOOD FOR EVERY DISTRICT.

(This "open letter" by Rev. Jas. H. Felts, presiding elder of the Greenville District, North Mississippi Conference, to his own people, is so suggestive that we take the liberty of passing it along.—Editor.)

To the People Called Methodist, Greenville District:

Greetings:

Are You An Asset or a Liability?

Culture represents the kind of contact had with the Master Spirits of the world. Christ is the greatest of these. Having known HIM, do you listen to the "call of the wild?"

It is Easier to Preach Than to Practice.

I would not have you spiritual epileptics, my brethren, but sane, sound, cheery, optimistic supporters of the church of your choice. I am not envious of the lean nits that feed on the jazz of modern times. God pity them! They waste their substance. They spend their money for that which is not bread. "They sow much, bring in little; eat, but have not enough; drink, but are not filled with drink; clothe, but none is warm; earn wages to put into bags with holes."

The Church is Entitled to Your Generous and Unselfish Support.

It is the one institution that reaches from the dedication of children to God in holy baptism to immortality that robs the grave of its terror. Do you love your home? She fights for the purity of that institution. Are you a patriot? All our greater laws and institutions came out of her loins. Do you believe in the protection of society? Mr. Babson, the great statistician, says: "I do, however, insist that the safety of our sons and daughters, as they go out on the streets this very night, is due to the influence of the preachers rather than to the influence of the policemen and the law makers."

"Man Lives Not by Bread Alone."

In preserving the church we are paying for the best insurance property and society can buy; we are policing our country without even a show of force. The best money any man spends is that which is invested in manhood and womanhood.

"Love Rules His Kingdom Without a Sword."

Your pastor is the leader in your church. Let him be embarrassed and harassed by the living question and he is almost hopelessly crippled in his work. Let him TURN ASIDE EVEN PARTIALLY and he is handicapped in his efforts.

Your Presiding Elder unhesitatingly asks that YOU help meet the financial needs of the third quarter, the lean quarter, WITH A LIVING FAITH. Meet your stewards MORE THAN HALF WAY. Shame the laggards among them, if such there be, by proffering them "your quarterage" without being solicited.

"God's Worst is Better Than The Devil's Best."

Life's real battles are not fought in the trenches, but in the HEARTS and HOMES of our people. Poverty is not an excuse but a CHALLENGE.

"He That Does What He Can Does What He Ought."

Poverty is not glorious—men are often found who are glorious in poverty. Wealth is not glorious—occasionally a man is found who is glorious in wealth. You will find the good spirit in your heart—DON'T ALLOW BAD JUDGMENT TO ROB YOU OF IT. God can use a mighty poor man, making him rich in every good word and work. GIVE GOD A CHANCE.

"Learn The Luxury of Doing Good."
